A matinée in aid of the widow and children of the late W. H. Ramsdale, formerly treasurer of the Theatre Royal, Newcastle, will be given on Thursday next. In addition to the favourite artists and pantomime numbers from Aladdin, artists from the Tyne, Empire, Pavilian, and Palace Theatres will appear.

Miss Irene Vanbrugh, Miss Gertrude Elliott, Miss Estelle Stead, Miss Edith Craig, and Miss Stella Campbell were among the actresses present at a meeting of the Actresses' Franchise League at Dover-street studios on the 5th inst.

Miss Rose Moncrieff had an unfortunate fall on the ice last week, and has had to have her arm in splints. Consequently she has been unable to act her part in The Bells of Old York, but hopes to reappear on Monday.

Messrs. Jay and Mann have secured from Mr. Frank Curzon the small town rights of An Englishman's Home, and are sending out an immediate tour of this sensational patriotic play. Everything will be done exactly as at Wyndham's Theatre.

Miss Helena Millais, who has made a great success as Kate Cregeen in Pete, has been the recipient of some beautiful flowers during the week at Brixton Theatre, where Pete is playing to crowded houses.

An amateur performance in aid of the National Service League, of which Field-Marshal Earl Roberts is President, will be given under distinguished patronage at the Ritz Hotel, Piccadilly, on Saturday afternoon next. Included in the programme will be a new sketch, in two acts, entitled Lady Arabella's Fortune. The entertainment will be under the direction of Mr. John Donald.

Mr. Arthur Vezin (son of the veteran actor, Mr. Hermann Vezin, who has just celebrated his eightieth birthday) is at present playing round London with Mr. George Alexander's Builder of Bridges company.

A "Country Fair," on behalf of Our Dumb Friends' League, is again being organised by Mr. Arthur J. Coke, and will take place on June 25 and 26, at the Botanical Gardens, Regent's Park. An influential list of patronesses and stall-holders has been secured. The beautiful gardens are to be planned out with booths, stalls, &c., and the fair-grounds with bands, swings, roundabouts, cocoanut and bottle shies, "Aunt Sallies," shooting gallery, &c., on an elaborate scale.

The Straits Settlements Times, after giving a descriptive account of the New Victoria Theatre, which has been opened at Singapore—it is a handsome building holding 649—says: "The stage equipment has been in the hands of Mr. Peter Davey, of the Royal County Theatre, Kingston-on-Thames, who employed Mr. Leolyn Hart, Mr. Hemsley, and other scenic artists to prepare the scenery. The whole of the fitting up of the stage has been in the capable charge of Mr. Worsfold, who was sent out by Mr. Davey to see the job through, and this very important part of the work has been most thoroughly done. Messrs. Dean and Co., of Birmingham, designed and made the handsome proscenium curtains."

The annual meeting of Warden, Limited, took place in Belfast on Friday, the 5th inst. Mr. S. C. Allen (chairman), who presided, in moving the adoption of the directors' report and statement of accounts, said he thought that on the whole the result of the year's working might be considered satisfactory. In his opinion the prospects before the company were never brighter than they were to-day. They had completed a working arrangement with their friends the proprietors of the Royal Hippodrome, by which the opposition that had hitherto existed between the Hippodrome and the Palace had been done away with, so that their former rivals were now their allies, and their interests, instead of clashing, had become identical.

The changing back of the Palace from a variety house to a theatre would, they believed, prove a popular one, and would enable them to provide their patrons with theatrical fare of the best description. It was their intention to work in conjunction as far as possible with the Theatre Royal, Dublin; and as that company had also acquired the Dublin Gaiety, the position all round was very much strengthened as far as bookings were concerned. The Theatre Royal, as they were aware, was now being run as a drama house at popular prices. Mr. Warden seconded the resolution, which was carried.

Mr. Lewis Waller will be associated with Miss Maxine Elliott in the new production which will follow The Three Musketeers at the Lyric, when that popular revival shall have run its course. The new piece bears the attractive title of None But the Brave, and is the work of Miss Constance Fletcher, who has adapted it from Balzac's short story, "La Duchesse de Langeais." The heroine of the piece is endowed with greater virtues than in Balzac's story, thus being made to appear more worthy of the devotion of the intrepid General, and it is by this means that a happy ending is secured.

At the London Sessions Court on Wednesday, before Mr. Wallace, K.C., and a jury, Frederick John Morgan, otherwise Norman Craig, was indicted for having obtained 16s. from Miss Ida Mary Steele, and £1 from William Standley, and for attempting to obtain £2 from Victor Hugo Crisfield, in each case by offering them engagements on the stage. The jury found the prisoner guilty. Mr. Wallace stated that he could not treat the prisoner as a first offender, but, having regard to his age, justice would be met by sentencing him to six months' imprisonment in the second division.

"An Englishman's Home" will make its first appearance outside the West End at the Kennington Theatre next week. The tour will be given a "send-off" on Monday night by a distinguished assembly, which will include the Mayors of Lambeth and Southwark, Colonel Villiers, V.D., A.D.C. to the King, Colonel commanding 21st County of London Battalion, Lieutenant-Colonel Whitehead and officers of his regiment, and Colonel Lucas.

Mr. Basil Dean will play Eustace Jackson in The Return of the Prodigal, the part originally created in town by Mr. A. E. Matthews, during the forthcoming revival of Mr. Hankin's comedy at the Gaiety Theatre, Manchester.

Mr. Wentworth Croke has definitely engaged Miss Kittee Rayburn for his pantomime of Aladdin at the Lyric Opera House, Hammersmith, next Christmas. Miss Rayburn's great hit in the recent pantomime at that house will be well remembered.

Mr. Croke, who has secured the provincial rights of Samson, will, by arrangement with Mr. Charles Frohman and Mr. Arthur Bourchier, send out a strong company with this great success in the autumn. The piece will be toured on the same scale of completeness that characterises all Mr. Croke's productions.

A new opera has been added to the list of works to be given at Covent Garden during the coming "Grand" season. It is entitled La Habanera, and was produced at the Paris Opera Comique in February. Both words and music are written by a young composer named Raoul Laparra.

Mr. Frank B. O'Neill, Mr. Martin Harvey's energetic business-manager, has been winning of late quite a number of prizes and commendations for his dogs, which are of the old English sheep-dog variety. Only the other day in town one of his canines carried off a testimony to its qualities, and Mr. O'Neill's interest in his hobby is such that his dogs may be expected to figure in future consistently in the prize-winning records.

Mme. Helen Townshend's efforts as a teacher of singing and voice production have had many gratifying results among her pupils. Among those who have profited by her tuition are Miss Marie Dainton, Miss Sybil Arundale, Miss Ruth Lincoln, Miss Daisy Jerome, Miss Hanid Alexander, Miss Maie Ash, and Miss Gipsy Woolf. Mme. Townshend is now forming classes for the study of breathing and voice production.

Mr. Robert White, jun., has been engaged by Mr. Charles Hawtrey for his forthcoming season at the Royalty Theatre, to play the leading part in George Paston's clever curtain-raiser Feed the Brute.

We regret to announce the death of Mr. Charles M. Bestic, who for some months past has been running the Flower Girl company on tour. Mr. Bestic died on Sunday at his residence, 1, Sydney-street, Stockwell. He had won the esteem of all his company, by whom his loss is deeply regretted.

A Midsummer Fête will be held at Olympia on June 23, and two following days, in aid of the Hospital for Sick Children, Great Ormond-street, W.C., of which her Majesty the Queen is patroness. The fête is under the patronage of the Prince and Princess of Wales, and other celebrities. The stage will be worthily represented, and among those who will preside over stalls will be Miss Lily Elsie, Miss Marie Tempest, Miss Evelyn Millard, and Miss Irene Vanbrugh.

Great enthusiasm was displayed on Saturday evening last at the Elephant and Castle Theatre, on the conclusion of the run of Mr. Barnard's first pantomime there. The stage was literally covered with bouquets. "Auld Lang Syne" was heartily sung by the artists hand in hand with the occupants of the stage boxes, who, in turn, grasped those of the patrons in the stalls. Mr. W. Stephenson, the popular chef d'orchestre, was presented with a handsome marble timepiece by the members of The Babes in the Wood company.

At the time that Garrick performed in Goodman's Fields, the stage rose so rapidly from the pit, that it was very difficult to walk on. Unfortunately it was the practice of all ghosts to appear in a suit of real armour. The dress for this august personage had one night (in honour of Mr. Garrick's Hamlet) been borrowed from the tower, and was somewhat stiff; the moment, therefore, the ghost of the King of Denmark was put up from the trap-door, unable to keep his balance, he rolled down to the lamps, where he lay "confined in lasting fires," till a wag in the pit drew the attention of the other performers by crying out, "the ghost will be burned!"

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

"In Again!"

"THERE are many stories of the late George Weir," says the Yorkshire Evening Post, "but one which he was very fond of relating must suffice. Performing in his earliest days in a tent in Gloucestershire, he so excited the admiration of a young friend in the audience that the exclamations of the latter became a serious nuisance, and he was finally turned out. Towards the end of the play, when Mr. Weir was in the midst of a magnificent soliloquy, and the place was wrapped in stillness, a gratified voice came from the back of the tent—'Garge, I be in again!'"

Clerical Dramatists.

MRS. DEARMER, the authoress of Nan Pilgrim, recently produced at the Court Theatre, is a clergyman's wife. There are among the Anglican clergy several successful dramatists. Among them is the Rev. Freeman Wills, vicar of St. Agatha's, Finsbury—brother and biographer of the late W. G. Wills—who wrote The Only Way in collaboration with Canon Langbridge. Another clerical playwright is the Rev. Forbes Phillips, the unconventional vicar of Gorleston. Mrs. Dearmer is the wife of the Rev. Percy Dearmer, the Christian-Socialist leader, and has written several novels.

The Law and the Censorship.

"IT is natural," says the Law Journal, "that in a country where complete liberty of the Press and of speech has been long established there should be dissatisfaction with what seems the arbitrary discretion of an official not responsible to Parliament to qualify the freedom of the stage, and in its operation, as well as its origin, the censorship of plays appears to be an obsolete and unreasonable survival. The censorship is actually exercised by an examiner of plays appointed by the Lord Chamberlain and paid out of the Civil List. But public control over the office is very indirect and very weak, and it may be questioned whether it would not be better either to attach the censorship to the Home Office, so as to make a Cabinet Minister responsible for its proper working, or to abolish the position altogether and leave it to the general licensing authority to refuse a licence to a theatre which has produced an objectionable piece. It is to be remembered also that when a play is blasphemous, seditious, or indecent the persons concerned in its representation are indictable at common law, and the executive could set the police in motion on a proper occasion."

He Would Not Prophesy.

THE Daily News tells the following story:—"When are you going to pay me for those wigs you had from me two years ago?" asked an anxious stage costumier of one of his customers who was deferring a settlement of account. "Laddie," replied the man of tragedy, "I'm an actor, not a prophet."

Kate Vaughan's Grave.

"DURING the recent hurricane and floods that have swept over the Rand," writes a correspondent, "great havoc occurred in the local cemetery. In many cases graves had sunk in some feet, and in all directions large monuments were either down or leaning over, temporarily propped up by stout poles; but I noticed that the grave of poor Kate Vaughan and the memorial stone thereon had withstood the terrific storms, and had not suffered in any way, but remained in good order and neatly kept."

The Actor's Longevity.

"MR. CLARK BELL, ex-president of the New York Medico-Legal Society, is," says Sports of the Times, "collecting data concerning longevity, and especially the ability of the aged for useful work. He could find no more fruitful field than in the departments of various sports and of the stage. Women of the stage are middle-aged at eighty. Mrs. Barney Williams is alive and well; so is Betty Rigl, although The Black Crook, of which she was the star danseuse, is forgotten; so are Mrs. John Wood, Mrs. Lester Wallack, Mrs. Annie Yeamans, Helen Tracy, Rose Coghlan, Lotta Crabtree, and a bevy of the beauties whom we used to worship and whose memories we still cherish."

State-aided Theatres.

"THE crisis of the Paris Opéra," says the Standard, "opens the whole question of State aid to the lyric and dramatic arts. In Paris the State owns, and practically controls, four theatres—the Opéra and the Opéra Comique, the Comédie Française, and the Théâtre de l'Odéon. Of these the Opéra Comique—which has one of the ablest theatre managers at its head—has generally paid its way during the last ten or fifteen years; that is to say, the annual subvention has more than equalled the deficit on the working capital. The same is the case with the Comédie Française. A theatre which can mount four or five of the best fifty plays within a week, and which counts in its company half a dozen of the greatest actors in France, could never lose very much money. But the Odéon and the Opéra find the State subvention not sufficient to make good the deficit."

Complete Candour.

THE following episode really happened some fifty years ago:—The walls of a country town were liberally placarded with flaming posters announcing that on a certain evening the eminent tragedian, Mr. Blankford, would give a Shakespearean reading at the local Assembly Rooms. The advertisement drew together a crowded and eager audience. After a tedious wait a personage appeared on the platform, bowing low to the packed "house." He was of diminutive stature, had jet-black curly locks, a prononcé aquiline nose, and was altogether as unlike the great tragedian in appearance as could well be imagined. "Who can he be?" was the whisper that went round. He proceeded to arrange the book on the reading-desk. Perhaps, after all, he was only an attendant! But no; for he again bowed, and with a most unmistakably Jewish accent, he commenced to read the work announced. A yell of disapprobation rang through the place. "No! No!" "Off! Off!" But still he kept on reading. The audience was now thoroughly enraged. "Swindle! Swindle!" they shouted. The Israelitish individual closed his book, and once more bowing lowly, addressed them thus:—"Ladith and Gentlemen, the remark does your intelligence credit. You're right, s'help me! It ith a thwindle!" And he skipped very hastily by the back exit. A general rush was made to the pay-boxes, but the money-takers had departed also!

Was it an Accident?

AN actor correspondent sends us the following; he actually witnessed the incident:—In Westbourne-grove the other day, a cyclist, who had just escaped death in collision with a motor-car by adroitly rolling between the legs of two horses drawing a mineral-water van, stood on the pavement, apparently lost for the moment in contemplation. His one unbunged eye was alternately surveying his mangled hand, his mud-begrimed clothes, and his brand new machine, now tangled scrap tenaciously clinging to the motor wheels. A benevolent but vacant-looking old gentleman, who had witnessed it all, placing himself in front of the forlorn roadster, kept persistently putting to him the sympathetic question—"Was it an accident?" Presently, the cyclist realising the situation, fixed his remaining eye upon the old man's face, and then, setting his teeth, said, with all the emphasis at his command—"No, you fool! I did it for pleasure!"

There is nothing but praise to be given to Mr. John Galsworthy's play Strife, which was produced at the Duke of York's Theatre on Tuesday afternoon. A subject which is often dealt with in a mistaken and superficial way is treated with knowledge and judgment; the characters are life-like and impressive; and the climax is achieved inevitably and without effort. The pathos of some of the situations is calculated to wring the heart, if it be made of penetrable stuff, and the dialogue is uniformly strong, terse, and eloquent.

The position of affairs at the Trenartha Tinplate Works, "on the border of England and Wales," is this:—The men have struck work for an advance of wages, a step which has not been entirely approved of by their Union. John Anthony, the chairman of the company, is an obstinate old man, who is determined not to yield in the smallest degree to the demands of the men, although the company is losing thousands by the strike. On the other side, David Roberts, one of the workmen who has been paid a paltry sum for a clever invention which has brought in large sums to the company, urges his comrades to hold out to the last gasp. In the first act he comes, at the head of a deputation, to a board meeting which has been held in the dining-room of the house of Francis Underwood, John Anthony's son-in-law. The directors are inclined to compromise; but John Anthony will not hear of it, and overrules them all by his age and influence. Henry Trench, the secretary of the company, tells the old man that the directors are planning to throw him over; but Anthony only calls for a whisky and soda, and drinks it stolidly as the act-drop descends.

In the second act we are shown the effect of the strike on the families of the workmen. Roberts's wife is dying of starvation; but when Mrs. Underwood calls at the cottage and tries to argue with her, the poor woman is desperately loyal to her husband and his opinions. Madge Thomas, the daughter of a religious old miner named Henry Thomas, is angry at the suffering she sees, and, by appealing to her sweetheart's affection for her, she induces him to desert his leader, Roberts, and to advocate the termination of the strike. The second scene of this act shows a crowd of workmen assembled outside the Works, to hear speeches from their orators. Simon Harness, a Trades Union official, counsels a compromise, and says the Union will not support the men if they do not take this advice. The apostate sweetheart "follows on the same side," and the religious workman appeals to the Welshmen in the name of "Chapel." But all the impression thus made is destroyed when Roberts gets on the platform. By a burning speech, he inflames the passions of the men to the highest pitch; but, at the very climax of his eloquence, Madge rushes in and cries, "Your wife's dead!" Roberts collapses and goes out, and, in his absence, a compromise is agreed upon.

In the last act, the directors show signs that they, too, have "had enough of it." The death of Annie Roberts is announced, and has an influence on the board, who at last pluck up courage to depose John Anthony, and do so by a unanimous vote. The old man is as obstinate as ever, and makes an eloquent speech in his defence; but he has to yield. Roberts, who is under the impression that the men were still staunch to him, arrives full of fight, and is astounded to hear of the compromise. "They've done us both, Mr. Anthony!" he cries, and the old tyrant bows to his opponent before staggering out, a beaten man. The secretary remarks that the terms arrived at are exactly those originally proposed by Harness in a spirit of compromise, to which the latter answers, "That's just the fun of the game!"

In a very long cast, there was not a single part that was not played in the most earnest and artistic manner. Mr. Norman McKinnel was magnificently immovable as John Anthony, his slow, deliberate delivery, and his grand gloomy facial play making the old Chairman a very impressive and authoritative study. There was dogged tyranny in every glance and movement of Anthony, and his physical ponderosity added to the effect of the impersonation. Mr. J. Fisher White as David Roberts realised admirably the fiery energy of the Welsh nature. His make-up was especially good, and the touch of Welsh character which he introduced did not in the least diminish the pathos and power of his performance as the finely-fanatical friend of labour. Miss Mary Barton was natural and expressive as the slowly-dying Annie Roberts, and Miss Lillah McCarthy sustained the brief part of Madge Thomas with great passion and intensity. Mr. Owen Roughwood was excellent as the religious old workman, and Miss Ellen O'Malley acted with tact and feeling as the well-meaning Enid Underwood. The remaining characters, though actually subordinate, had a valuable share in the success. Each of the directors had a distinct individuality, Mr. C. M. Hallard as the good-hearted Edgar Anthony, Mr. Dennis Eadie and Mr. C. V. France as other varieties of the genus, and Mr. Luigi Lablache as a fat and feeble-minded gourmand being entirely effective and artistic. Mr. O. P. Heggie gave a neat sketch of the submissive secretary, Mr. A. S. Homewood was efficient as the manager, and Mr. Edmund Gwenn made the little part of Frost prominent by his delicate skill, Mr. George Ingleton realising admirably the sharp common-sense and resolute character of Simon Harness. The other rôles all had conscientious and careful exponents, and the success of the play, which was produced by Mr. Granville Barker, was never in doubt. It was listened to with breathless interest, and the applause at its close was warmly enthusiastic.

MR. HERMANN VEZIN.

Mr. Hermann Vezin, the famous actor, celebrated his eightieth birthday on the 2nd inst. Mr. Vezin made his first appearance on the stage at York in 1850. It is now fifty-eight years since he first played Shylock, and fifty-six years since his first appearance as Othello, but he is still full of energy and power. Mr. Vezin has been simply inundated with congratulatory letters and telegrams.

A high ideal of human affection is aimed at by the authoress of the above play, to the second performance of which the public were admitted at the Court Theatre on Monday. The theories enunciated are not quite clear and still less convincing, and the final descent of the curtain leaves the situation without a real solution. Mrs. Dearmer is a well-known authoress, and the pen of a gifted writer is often to be traced in the dialogue, which, however, is not always of the kind that would interest the ordinary theatregoer. The piece might be described as a conflict between the religion of love and the love of religion. The Rev. John Pilgrim, an Anglican clergyman labouring in a poor district of South London, loves his wife "to the peril of his soul," while Nan Pilgrim claims that her affection is still more ardent, though it is not equal to the trial of assisting her husband cheerfully in his work. Pilgrim is in indifferent health, and Nan, who had been an art student, decides to accept the invitation of Roger Wentworth, an artist, to sit to him for a picture of Alcestis at a salary which will enable her to provide nourishment for her husband. While therefore Nan is supposed to be district-visiting she is in reality in Wentworth's studio at the West-end. The picture is all but completed when Pilgrim learns that one of his sick parishioners, in whose condition Nan had reported that there was no change, had died the day previous to her supposed visit, and his suspicions are strengthened by a letter he receives from two members of a "sewing party" revealing Nan's whereabouts. Meanwhile Roger Wentworth, who has long cherished a love for Nan, declares his passion, to the horror of the young wife and his own subsequent remorse. Roger has only just bidden her good-bye when Pilgrim, who has found his way to the studio, enters, and, thinking his worst fears realised, denounces his wife as a liar and a wanton. A fever follows, and for two days Pilgrim lies ill, refusing to see his wife. He evidently listens, however, to the counsels of Father Peter, a High Church clergyman of an advanced type, and eventually Pilgrim is led, in a dying condition, into the parish-room, where he repudiates the calumnies of his wife's detractors, and eventually passes into eternity, whither Nan's love will accompany him. The ending strikes one as inconclusive, and there appears to be a necessity for another act in order to tell of Roger Wentworth's return from Paris, and his reception by Nan, who at least thinks highly of him.

The play was again distinguished by the excellence of the cast. Miss Lilian Braithwaite had an exacting task in the portrayal of the title-rôle, and proved fairly equal to it, acting with vivacity and charm. The pathetic phases of the part were touchingly portrayed, but in the more impassioned moments greater power seemed to be requisite. The talents of Mr. Ben Webster were only partially employed, the opportunities given to the clever actor being scant. The aspirations of Roger Wentworth were not always easy to follow, but in their delivery the actor's elocution was, as usual, delightful. Mr. Arthur Holmes-Gore hardly succeeded in making of the Rev. John Pilgrim the noble figure the authoress evidently intended him to be, and there was a kind of martyr aspect surrounding the clergyman which grew a little monotonous. His assumption, however, of the broken voice of the consumptive clergyman was strikingly realistic. The Rev. Peter Britton was played with quiet force and dignity by Mr. William Haviland, who made of the character a most estimable cleric, despite the fact that "Father Peter," as he was known, was called upon to go out in cassock and biretta to the nearest dairy for a jug of milk. A performance rich in humour was given by Mr. Edward Sass, who depicted a vulgar debt-collector with many touches of originality, his make-up and delivery being equally unique. Julie Westmacott, who is in love with Roger Wentworth, was not material to the story, but was welcome by reason of the artistic performance given by Miss Ada Webster, who made the spitefulness of the young society lady quite fascinating. Miss Evelyn Weeden represented with refinement the rôle of Selina West, a mutual friend, who is chiefly responsible for the imprudent step taken by Nan. Much fun arose out of the efforts of Miss Agnes Thomas, whose grimness of face and acidity of voice as a mischief-making member of the sewing party, were irresistibly droll; and Mrs. Stamp, her companion in scandal-mongering, was portrayed with similar comic effect by Miss Marie Hudspeth. Miss Elsie Chester appeared to full advantage as the aristocratic dame Lady Westmacott; and Miss Marion McCarthy's rendering of the good-natured Miss Gillespie was notable for its excellent enunciation. A quaintly droll "slavey" was furnished by Miss Esme Hubbard. The play, which was produced by Mr. Arthur Holmes-Gore, was cordially received by a crowded and friendly house, the authoress being twice called at the close.

"THE GARDEN OF THE GODS."

A New and Original One-Act Musical Play, by Ivan Pat Gore and Charles H. Williams, with Music by Hamilton Weller, Produced at the Pier Pavilion, Eastbourne, on Monday, March 8.

Venus ..... MISS AGNES MAUDE
Psyche ..... MISS PAULINE EMERIC
Mars ..... MR. T. DENNIS
Adonis Prettycut ..... MR. GEORGE LESTOCQ

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

In the garden of an old Roman villa stands a group of marble statuary representing Venus, Psyche, and Mars. Into this garden at midnight wanders a modern young man, Mr. Adonis Prettycut, of Clerkenwell, E.C. He sits on a seat close by, and after contemplating the marble figures, falls into a sweet slumber. The figures become animated, and in their curiosity awaken the sleeping Prettycut. Venus addresses the little man as Bacchus, and draws the attention of Mars to his old friend, but the god fails to recognise Bacchus in the shrunken and diminutive figure, who admits that he is Adonis. Venus at once claims her long-lost husband, and also introduces her later partner Mars. The goddess of beauty has now two husbands, Mars and Prettycut, and a combat is to decide which one is to remain. Mars is about to slay Prettycut when the dawn appears. The figures are again turned to stone, and the little Londoner is left to complete his open-air slumber in peace.

Mr. George Lestocq was very happy in his work as Prettycut, and his natural acting and clever dancing are to be much commended; Mr. T. Dennis as Mars sang excellently and acted similarly; Miss Agnes Maude, possessed of a fine voice, proved a most acceptable Venus, and her singing with Mr. Dennis of the duet, "My love for thee," gained much and well-deserved applause; Miss Pauline Emeric, too, added greatly to the success as a pretty Psyche, singing her song "True love" with taste and feeling.

PARIS, THURSDAY, March 11.—This work is an adaptation of the novel of M. Eugène Demolder. It is a fine piece of work, though not a great play, and it is probable that most people would derive more pleasure from the book than from following the stage development of the story. Kobus, the young lover—one can hardly call him the hero, because he is overshadowed by another character—is an early seventeenth-century Dutch miller's son with a passion for art. Greatly to the sorrow of his father and his pretty cousin Lisbeth, to whom he is affianced, he goes off to study art, his "emerald road" to fame. He falls under the spell of Siska, a fiery, unprincipled woman, who acts as a model. Dirk, a middle-aged roystering student, a failure not because he loves art less, but because he loves the "bottle" more, warns Kobus of his danger, but in vain. Kobus elopes to Amsterdam with Siska, and Dirk goes with him. After a brief idyll Kobus is rudely awakened to the fact that he has a rich rival. They come face to face, and Kobus uses his knife with fatal effect. This revives Siska's waning passion for Kobus, and she takes refuge with him in a smugglers' camp, but promptly falls in love with the outlaws' leader, and dismisses Kobus. In the fight that ensues Dirk is wounded by a bullet intended for Kobus. The two make their way to the mill, tracked by the agents of the law. Dirk takes the death of Kobus's rival upon his own shoulders, and expires, leaving the young artist to repentance and domestic bliss with Lisbeth. And Rembrandt? He is one of the personages, but he has nothing whatever to do with the action, and appears to be introduced solely to intensify the artistic atmosphere. M. Décori was really great in the rôle of Dirk; M. Gauthier made the most of the weak character of Kobus; and the other rôles were also remarkably well sustained.

"COCHON D'ENFANT!"

Vaudeville, in Three Acts, by MM. André de Lorde and Raphael, Produced at Cluny's on March 5.

La tante Hudson ..... MME. EMMA BONNET
Mme. Boulard ..... MME. FRANCK-MEL
Yvonne ..... MLLE. BENDA
Cécilia ..... MLLE. DERMENVILLE
Henriette Planel ..... MLLE. VILLEROY
La Dompteuse ..... MME. SARLIER
Marius ..... M. DELPHIN
Léon Planel ..... M. CORADIN
Paul Lormoy ..... M. SAULIEU
M. Edmond ..... M. PAUL PERRET
Julot ..... M. KOVAL

M. André de Lorde's name is so intimately connected with blood-curdling Grand-Guignol dramas that we waited, trembling, for the curtain to rise on Cochon d'Enfant! We were mistaken. M. de Lorde had a collaborator, Mr. Raphael, a talented young Englishman well known in the theatrical world here, who, fortunately, has not yet cultivated a taste for the horrible. MM. de Lorde and Raphael's collaboration has proved eminently successful, inasmuch as their joint efforts have resulted in the production of a vaudeville that kept the little Cluny theatre in constant laughter. The work certainly seems booked for a long run. The principal character therein is Marius, impersonated by Delphin, the famous dwarf, well known to the frequenters of the Montmartre cabarets. Like all farces of the kind, there is but little plot, but it abounds in shriekingly funny situations. Léon Planel, a dentist, and Henriette, his wife, have an aunt, Mrs. Hudson, residing in America, who will only leave them her fortune if they have a child. Aunt Hudson suddenly arrives in Paris, and the distracted Planels must at once find a four-year old boy whom they can palm off as their own. Paul Lormoy, an enterprising journalist, comes to their assistance, and lays his hand on a dwarf, whom the delighted aunt cuddles and kisses to her heart's delight. But, alas, Marius—the adopted baby—is thirty-five years old. He is by profession a lion-tamer, and is married to a big strapping woman. Complications, of course, arise. Marius, of a fiery temperament, has evil intentions on the virtue of Aunt Hudson, a lady also of an inflammable nature. And the arrival upon the scene of Julot, Marius's son, a long, lanky hobbledehoy, threatens to lead to disastrous results. But, as in all good vaudevilles, everything comes right in the end. The cast is exceptionally good. Besides M. Delphin, who acted his part to perfection, we had Mme. Bonnet, an amusing Aunt Hudson; Mme. Franck-Mel, always diverting; M. Coradin, full of "go"; M. Koval—who speaks English like an Englishman—inimitable in the rôle of Julot; and the sprightly actresses Mmes. Dermenville, Villeroy, and Sarlier.

The Odéon has given us Beethoven, a work that reflects the greatest credit on the author, M. René Fauchois, wherein the young poet shows us the great composer's intense moral sufferings. The girl he loves jilts him to marry a rich rival; the nephew he befriends is a scamp; and he has to struggle with poverty because the great art patrons pay him only in promises. Then a fearful calamity befalls him. He becomes deaf, and his sole consolation is to be able to leave to the world his nine symphonies. M Fauchois has beautifully depicted Beethoven's giant figure, and M. Desjardins' impersonation of the great master was truly admirable.

Solange, the three-act lyric comedy by MM. Aderer and Salvayre, brought out at the Opéra-Comique, is a pleasantly-told story set to pleasant music, and therefore bids fair to find favour with the frequenters of this popular house. The action is laid in 1794. The Marquis de Beaucigny, whose life is threatened by the Revolutionists, leaves his château to seek shelter in Germany. His daughter Solange, not warned in time of her father's flight, is arrested by a band of "sans-culottes," and is on the point of being taken to jail—the anti-chamber of the guillotine—when Frédéric Bernier, a young officer, declares that he is prepared to make her his wife. Amid the cheers of the rabble she is married to him on the spot. But the moment they are alone, Bernier generously tears up the marriage contract, informing the bewildered girl that he took that step only to save her life. In the ensuing tableau six years are supposed to have elapsed, and the scene is laid in Worms, where many nobles are still waiting to be allowed to return to France. Among them are the Marquis de Beaucigny and his daughter. They are penniless. The Marquis's sister and Solange have opened a millinery shop; the Marquis teaches French, whilst his nephew gives dancing lessons. Frédéric Bernier suddenly makes his appearance. He has become general, and when Solange beholds the handsome youth who behaved so heroically, she realises the fact that she has never ceased to love him. Bernier has also lost his heart to her, but the Marquis would never have dreamt of consenting to his daughter being the wife of a son of the Revolution, had not Bernier succeeded in saving the old nobleman from the clutches of Bonaparte's police, who accused him of conspiring against the First Consul's life. Solange therefore becomes Mme. Bernier for good, and everything ends happily.

"THE HEART OF THE CITY."

A Play, in One Act, by Michael Morton and Julian Wellesley, Produced at the Theatre Royal, Birmingham, on Monday, March 8.

Edward Kennion .....Mr. Walter Gay
Harry Curtis .....Mr. Ernest Graham
Martin .....Mr. Fred W. Permain
Margaret Lester ....Miss Florence LeClercq
Miss Ladd .....Miss Evelyn Martheze

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Produced in front of An Englishman's Home, this little play proved very interesting. The leading characters are Edward Kennion, a middle-aged clerk, who has bought the business of a respectable solicitor named Curtis; the latter's son, a waster and a wanderer; and Margaret Lester, with whom Kennion is in love. The wastrel calls on Kennion to obtain a situation, and tells him that a girl he (Curtis) left behind in England, and whom he released from her promise to marry him, has written him from time to time, her last letter containing an announcement of her engagement to a highly prosperous City man, to whom she intends to be a good and a true wife. This letter the wastrel reads aloud to Kennion, who is struck by the name "Margo." Curtis wants Kennion's help so that he may renew his suit to the girl, for whom he feels all his old passion revive as he sees the prize slipping from his hands. "Read for yourself," he says; and Kennion, listlessly picking up the letter, starts to find that it is his own Margaret's handwriting. The truth comes out, and Curtis exclaims, "You know her! She cannot give her love, because she's given it to me. That's where we poor devils score." The magnanimously-minded Kennion, despite his own heartache, declares he will put Curtis in a position to renew his suit, and leaves him for a moment to put that project into execution, when Margaret re-enters the room, and starts violently at the unexpected sight of Curtis. "What brings you here?" she exclaims, with not too much welcome in her voice, and he tells her, bursting into a tirade against his benefactor, saying that the business was his father's and ought to be his. She demands to know what Curtis has told Kennion, and Curtis tells her, without shame. "What!" she exclaims, "you dared to show my letter to gain a place!" He clasps her fiercely in his arms, and kisses her. Throwing him from her, she rings the bell. "What does that mean?" says he. "It means that you have missed your chance," she answers; and to Martin, who has just entered, she says, "Show this gentleman into another room."

The little play was very cordially received by the audience. Martin was played by Mr. Fred W. Permain with gusto; Mr. Walter Gay was the soul of good nature and forbearance as Kennion; Mr. Ernest Graham as the conscienceless wastrel Curtis played extremely well, bringing out the ungrateful and ignoble qualities of the character with many a good stroke; Miss Florence Le Clercq admirably depicted the sweet and grateful character of Margaret Lester; and Miss Evelyn Martheze was efficient and satisfactory as Miss Ladd, the typist.

THE GRAND, CLAPHAM.

One of the greatest certainties in this world of uncertainties is that the patrons of this pretty and comfortable house will always find a good two hours' entertainment at either of the two performances provided by the energetic and enterprising management. Mr. Harry Wentworth is this week giving the Battersea folk an exceptionally strong and varied programme. The premier attraction is undoubtedly Fred Karno's talented troupe in their latest sketch entitled The Yap Yaps, which went with a swing from beginning to end, and was received with the heartiest laughter throughout. In the last act the well-known boxers Alf Read and Young Josephs gave a smart exhibition of the noble art, which was much to the taste of the audience. A highly diverting bout of burlesque boxing in a fight to a finish between the Hon. Charlie Chinn (Mr. Gus Le Clerq) and Ben Burley, alias "Big Ben," the bruiser (Mr. James Prior) brought the generally well-acted sketch to an uproariously merry conclusion.

Another amusing turn was a duologue entertainment called "Do you want to buy any coke?" given by Howard and St. Clair, which went well. Miss Connie Leon's singing and dancing were much appreciated, her second contribution re "The Pretty French Bonnet," accompanied by a clever dance in sabots, being especially good. Miss Lucy Coventry, another comedienne, first gave in a pleasant way "No one ever sends a letter to me," followed by a well-executed step-dance. Then she treated her auditors to a lively song in praise of "Gay Paree," introducing a wonderful high-kicking dance, which received the enthusiastic applause it so richly deserved. Kelly and Agnes are appearing here this week with much success. The former gives a clever sand dance and some well-executed tumbling; his antics throughout are exceedingly droll. The lady has comparatively little to do, but that little she does well, singing tunefully and dancing gracefully.

That ever-welcome master of mimicry Leo Tell gave his entertaining performance, his imitations of musical instruments and animals being wonderfully realistic. Worthy of special mention is his imitation of the saxhorn and cornet, reminiscent of the once popular Hoffman's organophonic band, and of the horse. Others in the bill were Mr. Herbert Clifton, with an extravagant "take off" of the hat and Directoire gown as the "Merry Widow"; and Dave Samuels, Hebrew comedain, who introduced some funny patter with a verse of "Put me among the girls," and executed a whimsical dance. A word of praise is deserved by the band, which besides the well-played introductory overture, tunefully accompanies the turns.

Mr. C. W. Ramsay's fifth annual benefit at the Alexandra, Sheffield, last week, was again made the occasion of showing in a practical fashion the estimation which he has won as manager of the theatre. The special performance was under the patronage of the Lord Mayor, the Master Cutler, the Rt. Hon. C. B. Stuart Wortley, K.C., M.P., Mr. Samuel Roberts, M.P., and other local notables. The house was packed to the doors.

Two acts of Her Marriage Vow were played, and many "extra turns" appeared, including Cliffe Dixo (from the Empire), Mr. Curley Jackson, Mr. Laurie Clare, the Pipers of the Sheffield Caledonian Society, Mr. Harry Middleton, Shakespearean reciter; Mr. H. Scarah, humorist; Marsello, juggler; and many others. Mr. Ramsay delivered his annual address with characteristic modesty, and received a large number of valuable presents, including gifts from Mr. W. D. Forsdike, the Alexandra Co., Ltd., the band, the stage staff, local tradesmen, the "gallery boys," and the staff in front.

For the first time since her advent as a music hall artist, Miss Winifred Hare will have an assistant when she opens a long metropolitan engagement at the London Pavilion next Monday. This will be Miss Dolly Raynor, who played Polly Perkins to Miss Hare's Robinson Crusoe in pantomime at Dublin this year. A new number, entitled "Come o'er the Border whistling Roderick Dhu," in a special setting, will be presented by Miss Hare, and whistling will be interpolated by Miss Raynor.

New Pieces Produced at the Provincial Theatres. See The Era Annual, 1909.

MASONS AT WORK.

Although the Green Room Lodge has been established for nearly six years, it held the first emergency meeting at the Imperial Restaurant, on Friday the 5th inst., when the Master, Mr. E. H. Bull, was well supported by his officers as follows: Messrs. Akerman May, Immediate Past Master; Charles Macdona, Senior Warden; E. Vivian Reynolds, Inner Guard, acting as Junior Warden; Charles Cruikshanks, P.A.G.Std.B., Secretary; J. H. Ryley, Senior Deacon; Frank Vernon, First Steward, acting as Junior Deacon; W. Lestocq, assisted by A. E. George, Director of Ceremonies; Sydney Lawrence, acting as Inner Guard; Edward Jones, Organist; J. Cooke Beresford, Fourth Steward; Chas. Patrick, Tyler; and the Rev. W. P. Besley, Chaplain. The Grand Lodge officers in attendance were Messrs. Harry Nicholls, P.G. Std.Br., and Charles Cruikshanks, P.A.G.Std.Br.

The visitors included Mr. George Highland, a Steward of the Drury Lane Lodge; Mr. Tom de B. Holmes, a Past Master of the Lodge of Asaph; and Mr. Herbert Brook, a Past Master of the Robert Burns Lodge.

There were also present Messrs. Henry Ainley, John Cabourn, Frank Harding, Walter Maxwell, Julian Royce, and Spencer Trevor.

Apologies and regrets from absent members were received from Messrs. Fred Terry, J. D. Beveridge, P.M., L.R., H. Nye Chart, P.M., Gerald Maxwell, P.M., Lionel Rignold, P.M., Blake Adams (Junior Deacon), Fred Annerley (Second Steward), Louis Calvert, Leslie Carter, Ernest H. Paterson, Thalberg Corbett, Wilfred Draycott, Dermot Fitzgibbon, Richard Green, Lytton Grey, Lyn Harding, Robert Loraine, J. W. Macdonald, Percy Nash, Fred W. Permain, Albert E. Raynor, and Herbert Shelley.

The principal business of the meeting was the reception into the order of two candidates, Messrs. Hubert Harben and Alfred Brydone, and the performance of the ceremony of initiation was impressively carried out by the Master, with the assistance of his officers, the interest in the rite being considerably increased by the masterly delivery of the ancient charge by Mr. Harry Nicholls, the father of the Lodge and First Master, and the lecture on the first tracing-board given by Mr. George Highland with scholarly precision and dramatic effect. Mr. Highland was cordially thanked for the intellectual treat he had afforded the brethren, and it was unanimously agreed that a record be entered on the minutes.

It was agreed nem. con. that the number of meetings of the Lodge should be increased by two, to be held on the first Friday in January and February.

A lengthy discussion arose upon the consideration of a question affecting the welfare of the Lodge and the comfort of its members, and many expressions of opinion were forthcoming. Ultimately it was agreed that the matter should stand over until the next meeting; in the meantime, Messrs. Harry Nicholls, E. H. Bull, Charles Cruikshanks, and Henry Ainley were appointed to act as a committee to deal with certain details and report results.

The labours of the day being ended, the brethren adjourned to dinner, and, at the instance of the Master, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured, and the brethren separated at an early hour, well satisfied with the results of their first emergency meeting.

The next meeting will be held on Friday, the 2nd prox. It will be the thirtieth regular meeting.

MASONIC NOTES.

The Logic and Genesius Clubs of instruction have long been considered sister clubs, and for many years it has been usual once during the session for the members of the one to visit the other for the purpose of giving an exhibition of the progress made by the junior members. One of these most pleasant functions was held on Sunday last, when the elder of the two clubs paid their annual visit to the Genesius, and presented a team composed of Messrs. Geo. A. Highland as Worshipful Master, W. Chichele Nourse as Senior Warden, A. Tanner Cooper as Junior Warden, Robert Manuel, L.R., as Preceptor, W. Hotten George, L.R., as Treasurer, J. J. Thomas, P.G.St.B., as Treasurer Charities Association, J. Percy Fitzgerald, P.G.St.B., as Secretary, Frank Vernon as Senior Deacon, J. F. Blaze as Junior Deacon, J. H. Ryley as Inner Guard, Harry Nicholls, P.G.St.B., as Director of Ceremonies, C. F. Frood as Organist, Shad Frost as Candidate, and W. Yeo as Tyler.

The work consisted of the first ceremony, together with the charge and lecture on the tracing board, and was performed in a manner that elicited the greatest enthusiasm from the very large gathering present. At the conclusion Mr. J. W. Mathews, as Preceptor of the Genesius Club, thanked the members of the Logic Club for their attendance and spoke of the work done, paying great compliments to Mr. Robt. Manuel, L.R., as Preceptor.

This week Miss Lena Stanton and Mr. Harry Joseph's company is presenting Robinson Crusoe at the Grand, Mansfield, Miss Stanton playing Principal Boy with much grace and vigour, and scoring a decided hit. Mr. Sid Dean as the Dame is clever, and his songs and patter are very funny; Miss Marie Gerard is both charming and vivacious; Mr. Melville Page as a Wicked Pirate is a success; his "Excelsior" medley is smart. Miss Gertie Lovedale as Crusoe's Sweetheart is "chic"; Mr. Vic Verney shows wonderful whistling powers; and the cast includes Little Keeno, boy comedian, whose songs and mimicry are received with uproarious applause. Others worthy of mention are Miss Gracie Wilson, who charmingly renders the "White Heather" song, and the Leglere Troupe of acrobats, who do some clever feats. The Allambra Girls are very entertaining.

"Dick Whittington and His Cat," at the Theatre Royal, Birmingham, came to an end on Saturday, after a run of ten weeks. During the evening all the principals were the recipients of bouquets, baskets of flowers, and boxes of bonbons. Especially favoured were Miss Sybil Arundale (Dick Whittington), Miss Aimee Grey (Alice), Miss Ethel Negretti (Princess Rosydawn), and Miss Violet Baynton (Spirit of the Chimes). Other presentations were made to Mr. Tom Foy (Idle Jack), Wee Wallace Lupino, Mme. Ross, Mr. Harry C. Lupino (King Rat), Mr. Fred Whittaker (the Cat), Miss Ada Whittaker, and Miss Clara Reid.

The final scene was a picturesque spectacle. Immediately before the footlights the principals appeared behind floral barriers composed of the bouquets showered upon them, together with the gentlemen primarily responsible for the production of the pantomime—Messrs. Philip Rodway, Guy Jones, Herbert Cottesmore, St. John Hammond, Fred Cecil, and Douglas Buchanan. All were the recipients of gifts subscribed for by members of the company. Mr. George Robey also received a very hearty welcome from both stage and audience on coming before the footlights. Mr. Philip Rodway brought the evening to a close with a few remarks, in which testimony was paid to the hearty manner in which every member of the company had supported the producers.

A performer once told Garrick "that he often had the honour of playing in the same scene with him." "With me?" said Garrick, in some surprise; "I really don't recollect it. Pray, what particular part was it?" "The Cock in Hamlet, sir."

AMERICAN AMUSEMENTS.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

NEW YORK, March 3.—Miss Grace George has scored an emphatic success at the Hackett Theatre in a comedy of modern life called A Woman's Way, by Thompson Buchanan, a new writer, who seems to have hit the mark the very first time. The piece is bright and witty, and would easily succeed on its merits, but assurance was made doubly sure when Miss George undertook to play the heroine. Her impersonations have a distinct charm of their own, for she appreciates the true spirit of comedy, and handles her situations with a lightness of touch that preserves all their humorous value. Once again we have the ménage à trois; but this time the woman's way is somewhat different, for the old triangle of domestic intrigue becomes a joke instead of a tragedy. The three angles are Howard Stanton, his wife Marion, and the other woman. Stanton and his wife are already estranged when the former takes a trip in a motor-car with Mrs. Blakemore, a fascinating widow, and meets with an accident, full particulars of which, with details added by imaginative reporters, receive due publicity in the daily papers. The efforts of the newspapers to obtain the name of "the woman in the case" are depicted in two scenes, which the audience found especially diverting. Mrs. Stanton is to apply for a divorce immediately, according to these enterprising journals; but, as a matter of fact, Mrs. Stanton intends to do nothing of the kind. Her husband is a light-hearted young man, who does not know whether he is in love with the widow or not, and frankly admits as much to his wife. Mrs. Stanton is a woman of discernment and much common sense, with ideas of her own on the divorce question and the treatment of erring husbands. She declares that if Mrs. Blakemore wants her husband "she will have to earn him." Then she proceeds to make a test. She invites the widow to a dinner-party, and the list of guests includes Mrs. Stanton's young married brother, her brother-in-law, and a former suitor, who is now a platonic friend, each guest being accompanied by his wife. Mrs. Stanton counts on certain disclosures being made that will cure her husband of his infatuation for Mrs. Blakemore, and her plan works splendidly. The widow has certainly had a list of admirers. The men protest in vain that her presence is most embarrassing, all of them having been involved at one time or another, and it gradually dawns on Stanton that he has made a fool of himself. Mrs. Blakemore sees that the wife has been one too many for her, and retires with as good a grace as the circumstances permit. Stanton, of course, recognises the superiority of his wife, and as she is willing to forgive, there is a prospect of their former happiness being restored to them.

Miss Grace George is ably supported by Mr. Frank Worthing, Mr. Reginald Carrington, Miss Dorothy Tennant, Mr. Robert Warwick, and Mr. Henry Miller, jun.

Abraham Lincoln is cleverly portrayed by Mr. Benjamin Chapin in a four-act play called Honest Abe, which has just concluded a brief but very successful run at the Hackett Theatre, under the management of Mr. William A. Brady. This attraction possesses a timely interest, the one-hundredth anniversary of Lincoln's birth having been recently celebrated. The audience saw the great President as he is popularly known—lank, awkward, quaint, humorous, and kind-hearted. Other historical characters of the Civil War period were also represented.

Miss Carlotta Nillson is appearing at Maxine Elliott's Theatre in a three-act play entitled This Woman and This Man, by Avery Hopwood. Norris Townsend, who has ruined a young governess named Thekla Mueller, hurries back from Europe on receipt of a message informing him of her condition, and is confronted by his father, who has guessed the truth. The elder Townsend is inclined to view the matter rather lightly so long as he is not inconvenienced personally, and advises his son to arrange the affair as best he can. They decide to send the girl away and have the child adopted. The son submits this plan to the governess, a determined young person, who sends for a minister and a witness, locks the door, and declares that neither she nor her betrayer shall leave the room alive unless he consents to marry her at once. When she produces a revolver the young man gives his promise, and the curtain falls. In the second act, six years later, Thekla is a country school teacher, and her child, little David, is a bright and precocious youngster. During her absence from the room, the child's father turns up, and is immediately attracted to his offspring, whom he has not previously seen, Thekla having left her unwilling husband immediately after their marriage. His request to be allowed to see the child occasionally being refused, he stands on his legal rights as a father, and announces his intention of taking the boy away with him. The mother opposes him for a day or two, and then gives in. In the third act little David is discovered in a nursery fit for a prince, where Thekla and her husband learn that they love each other after undressing the youngster and putting him prettily to bed.

Miss Nillson's Thekla was an earnest and sympathetic portrayal, and her performance was warmly applauded. Master John Tansey, a clever child, distinguished himself as the precocious David. Mr. Howard Kyle was very amusing in a "hayseed" rôle; and Miss Eva Vincent played a small part well. Critical approval of the play has been withheld, but it seems likely to win a fair share of popular approval.

THE TERRITORIAL QUESTION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—Mr. Ommanney describes my letter as pessimistic. This, I think, is hardly fair. The fault, if fault there be, lies in his own exuberant optimism. He does not attempt to explain away the difficulties I mentioned, but merely brushes them aside, saying, with sublime faith, that everything will be provided for. The natural inference is that there is something in my objections after all. If Mr. Ommanney has already prepared the way and made all straight, I am sure no one will be more pleased than I am; but I suggest to him that it would be better, surely, to let all who, like myself, are really interested in the scheme know, through the pages of your invaluable paper, exactly how these matters are to be arranged, and what, in vulgar parlance, they would be "letting themselves in for." This would undoubtedly stimulate recruiting, and I for one, could I see my way, would willingly come forward and do as Mr. Ommanney so cordially invites.—Yours faithfully, W. HENRY HARGREAVES (The Bondman Company).

His Majesty's Theatre, Aberdeen, March 8.

The Rifle Brigade Veterans' Association will hold their annual dinner in London on April 22. All particulars can be obtained from Colonel G. Thesiger, Royal Hospital, Dublin.

An interesting race was decided at the roller skating rink in Oxford-road, Manchester, on the 5th inst., thanks to the courtesy of the manager, Mr. Allert, between the members of Mr. Joe Peterman's Pawnbroker sketch company. A good race ended in the victory of Mr. E. Sefton, who beat the second (Mr. Victor Knight) by a quarter of a lap, with H. P. Owen as runner-up. The time taken, viz., 5min. 12sec., was exceptionally good, considering that all competitors were amateurs. Mr. Leonard Maxwell (stage-manager for Mr. Peterman) officiated as judge and starter.

SHAKESPEARE'S PORTRAITS.

Aubrey reported that Shakespeare was "a handsome, well-shap't man," says Mr. Sidney Lee, in his "Life of William Shakespeare," but no portrait exists which can be said with absolute certainty to have been executed during his lifetime, although one has recently been discovered with a good claim to that distinction. Only two of the extant portraits are positively known to have been produced within a short period after his death. These are the bust in Stratford Church and the frontispiece to the folio of 1623. Each is an inartistic attempt at a posthumous likeness. There is considerable discrepancy between the two; their main points of resemblance are the baldness on the top of the head and the fulness of the hair about the ears. The bust was by Gerard Johnson or Janssen, who was a Dutch stonemason or tomb-maker settled in Southwark. It was set up in the church before 1623, and is a rudely carved specimen of mortuary sculpture. There are marks about the forehead and ears which suggest that the face was fashioned from a death-mask, but the workmanship is at all points clumsy. The round face and eyes present a heavy, unintellectual expression. The bust was originally coloured, but in 1793 Malone caused it to be whitewashed. In 1861 the whitewash was removed, and the colours, as far as traceable, restored. The eyes are light hazel, the hair and beard auburn. There have been numberless reproductions, both engraved and photographic. It was first engraved—very imperfectly—for Rowe's edition in 1709; then by Vertue for Pope's edition of 1725; and by Gravelot for Hanmer's edition in 1744. A good engraving by William Ward appeared in 1816. A phototype and a chromo-phototype, issued by the New Shakspere Society, are the best reproductions for the purposes of study. The pretentious painting known as the "Stratford" portrait, and presented in 1867 by W. O. Hunt, town clerk of Stratford, to the Birthplace Museum, where it is very prominently displayed, was probably painted from the bust late in the eighteenth century; it lacks either historic or artistic interest.

The engraved portrait—nearly a half-length—which was printed on the title-page of the folio of 1623, was by Martin Droeshout. On the opposite page lines by Ben Jonson congratulate "the graver" on having satisfactorily "hit" the poet's "face." Jonson's testimony does no credit to his artistic discernment; the expression of countenance, which is very crudely rendered, is neither distinctive nor lifelike. The face is long and the forehead high; the top of the head is bald, but the hair falls in abundance over the ears. There is a scanty moustache, and a thin tuft is under the lower lip. A stiff and wide collar, projecting horizontally, conceals the neck. The coat is closely buttoned and elaborately bordered, especially at the shoulders. The dimensions of the head and face are disproportionately large as compared with those of the body. In the unique proof copy which belonged to Halliwell-Phillipps (now with his collection in America) the tone is clearer than in the ordinary copies, and the shadows are less darkened by cross-hatching and coarse dotting. The engraver, Martin Droeshout, belonged to a Flemish family of painters and engravers long settled in London, where he was born in 1601. He was thus fifteen years old at the time of Shakespeare's death in 1616, and it is consequently improbable that he had any personal knowledge of the dramatist. The engraving was doubtless produced by Droeshout very shortly before the publication of the First Folio in 1623, when he had completed his twenty-second year. It thus belongs to the outset of the engraver's professional career, in which he never achieved extended practice or reputation. A copy of the Droeshout engraving, by William Marshall, was prefixed to Shakespeare's "Poems," in 1640, and William Faithorne made another copy for the frontispiece of the edition of "The Rape of Lucrece," published in 1655.

There is little doubt that young Droeshout in fashioning his engraving worked from a painting, and there is a likelihood that the original picture from which the youthful engraver worked has lately come to light. As recently as 1892, Mr. Edgar Flower, of Stratford-on-Avon, discovered in the possession of Mr. H. C. Clements, a private gentleman with artistic tastes, residing at Peckham Rye, a portrait alleged to represent Shakespeare. The picture, which was faded and somewhat worm-eaten, dated beyond all doubt from the early years of the seventeenth century. It was painted on a panel formed of two planks of old elm, and in the upper left-hand corner was the inscription "Willm. Shakespeare, 1609." Mr. Clements purchased the portrait of an obscure dealer about 1840, and knew nothing of its history, beyond what he set down on a slip of paper when he acquired it. The note that he then wrote and pasted on the box in which he preserved the picture, ran as follows: "The original portrait of Shakespeare, from which the now famous Droeshout engraving was taken and inserted in the first collected edition of his works, published in 1623, being seven years after his death. The picture was painted nine [verè seven] years before his death, and consequently sixteen [verè fourteen] years before it was published. . . . The picture was publicly exhibited in London seventy years ago, and many thousands went to see it." In all its details and in its comparative dimensions, especially in the disproportion between the size of the head and that of the body, this picture is identical with the Droeshout engraving. Though coarsely and stiffly drawn, the face is far more skilfully presented than in the engraving, and the expression of countenance betrays some artistic sentiment which is absent from the print. Connoisseurs, including Mr. Sidney Colvin of the British Museum, and Mr. Lionel Cust, have almost unreservedly pronounced the picture to be anterior in date to the engraving, and they have reached the conclusion that in all probability Martin Droeshout directly based his work upon the painting. Influences of an early seventeenth-century Flemish school are plainly discernible in the picture, and it is just possible that it is the production of an uncle of the young engraver Martin Droeshout, who bore the same name as his nephew, and was naturalised in this country on January 25, 1608, when he was described as a "painter of Brabant." Although the history of the portrait rests on critical conjecture and on no external contemporary evidence, there seems good ground for regarding it as a portrait of Shakespeare painted in his lifetime—in the forty-fifth years of his age. No other pictorial representation of the poet has equally serious claims to be treated as contemporary with himself, and it therefore presents features of unique interest. On the death of its owner, Mr. Clements, in 1895, the painting was purchased by Mrs. Charles Flower, and was presented to the Memorial Picture Gallery at Stratford, where it now hangs. No attempt at restoration has been made. It is sometimes referred to as the "Flower portrait."

Of the same type as the Droeshout engraving, although less closely resembling it than the picture just described, is the "Ely House" portrait (now the property of the Birthplace Trustees at Stratford), which formerly belonged to Thomas Turton, Bishop of Ely, and it is inscribed "Æ. 39 x. 1603." This painting is of high artistic value. The features are of a far more attractive and intellectual cast than in either the Droeshout painting or engraving, and the many differences in detail raise doubts as to whether the person represented can have been intended for Shakespeare. Experts are of opinion that the picture was painted early in the seventeenth century.

Early in Charles II.'s reign Lord Chancellor Clarendon added a portrait of Shakespeare to his great gallery in his house in St. James's. Mention is made of it in a letter from the diarist John Evelyn to his friend Samuel Pepys in 1689, but Clarendon's collection was dispersed at the end of the seventeenth century.

SCENA.—Sorry we have no information. Try the various film firms advertising in our columns.

H. CLEMENTS.—We have no record of the date of the gentleman's birth. We should say he is about 65.

W. B.—Why not put the question to Mr. Arthur Collins, who has "placed" a special version, and is quite aware of the relative importance of the parts?

HORACE W. C. (Newcastle-on-Tyne).—We have no information on the subject. Why not put your questions direct? Possibly the local licensing authority could let you know. See notice above.

CHAS. J. BENNETT.—We have endeavoured to secure a copy of the play, but we are told it is not printed. You might send your requirements to the Rev. Freeman Wills (brother of the deceased author), 43 and 44, Sun-street, Finsbury-square, E.C.

G. W. (Buckingham).—We do not understand what you mean by "part right." There is no need to register the copyright, but before proceedings can be taken to protect those rights the purchaser should put himself on the register. We do not think there will be any difficulty in getting the performing right registered, whether the song has been performed or not.

ARTHUR BATEMAN.—Trilby, adapted from Du Maurier's novel of the same name, was produced by Mr. Beerbohm Tree at Manchester in September, 1895, and later at the Haymarket on Oct. 30 of the same year. Miss Dorothea Baird did not make her first appearance on the professional stage as the artist's model; but it was her first London appearance when she supported Mr. Tree at the Haymarket.

SYBIL B. (Sycamores).—The theatrical bookings of Liverpool are best known to the Liverpool theatrical lessees and proprietors, of whom you should inquire concerning "the leading plays and principals for this year." Miss Ellaline Terriss and Miss Lily Elsie are each doing so well—the one as the "Dashing Little Duke" and the other as the "Merry Widow"—that it is unlikely that they will be seen in Liverpool. The future engagements of both ladies depend on contingencies. You might write to Mr. J. A. Malone at Daly's Theatre concerning Miss Elsie, and to Mr. W. Lestocq, Mr. Charles Frohman's manager, at the Hicks Theatre, concerning Miss Terriss. See notice above.

PONTICYMMER.—In your first question you carefully omit the date to which it refers; and, incidentally, we may mention that pantomime is spelt with two m's, not two n's. (2) The Country Girl was produced at Daly's, Jan. 18, 1902. You do not mention the parts played by Mr. Frank Danby, Mr. W. J. Manning, or Mr. Herbert Clayton; but, assuming that they were Barry, Quinton Raikes, and Geoffrey Challoner, those characters were assigned in the original production to Mr. Huntley Wright (Barry), Mr. Rutland Barrington (Quinton Raikes), and Mr. Hayden Coffin (Geoffrey Challoner). (3) Sophie, Miss Ethel Irving; Princess, Miss Maggie May; Marjory Joy, Miss Lilian Eldee; and Sir Douglas Verity, Mr. Frederick Kaye. (4) Lady Patricia Vane, Miss Isabel Jay; Peggy Sabine, Miss Gracie Leigh; Angy Loftus, Miss Doris Stocker; Bobby Warren, Mr. Henry J. Ford

SHERIDAN was so much offended at being excluded from any concern in the rebuilding of Drury-lane Theatre after the fire, that he made a resolution never to enter it; from which he did not deviate till a few months before his death. When Kean, however, came out, and his talents became the universal topic of conversation and admiration, Mr. S. was impressed with an eager curiosity to see him; yet, faithful to his resolution, he could not be prevailed on to witness his dramatic exertions; he would see Kean, but not Richard, Shylock, Othello. One day when Kean was to perform, he was invited first to dine with Sheridan and an intimate friend of his, deeply concerned in the theatre, at a neighbouring tavern. They sat for two hours, when Mr. Kean was obliged to leave the party, and attend to his professional duty; but such was the interest excited in Sheridan's mind by this new dramatic meteor, that during the whole time he stayed his attention was entirely riveted upon him; he studied his every look, his every word, his every gesture, nor did he drink even a single glass of wine. "Mr. Kean (said Sheridan's friend in relating the anecdote) may boast of what no other man ever could do, of having even charmed Sheridan's attention away from his bottle." When Kean was gone, Sheridan said— "What salary do you give that man?"—"Fifteen pounds a week" was the reply.—"'Tis a shame (he said); he ought at least to have double that sum; take my word, you have got a treasure, he will be the salvation and support of the theatre." Sheridan at length could no longer resist the attraction of Kean's talents, but did go to the theatre to see his performance of the above character (Overreach), of which he thought so highly, that he said—"There is mind indeed! Those are talents that can never fail, but must be more and more admired the more they are known."

KEAN AND THE CRITIC.

From a strange perversion of taste, Guernsey audiences in 1809 not only did not admire, but actually despised Kean's talent. One of their critics was even impudent and ignorant enough to fulminate his decrees against him in print; it is a curious document, when coupled with the present high reputation of the modern Roscius, and ought to be recorded. It was as follows:—

"Last night a young man, whose name the bills said was Kean, made his first appearance in Hamlet, and truly his performance of that character made us wish that we had been indulged with the country system of excluding it, and playing all the other characters. This person had, we understand, a high character in several parts of England, and his vanity has repeatedly prompted him to endeavour to procure an engagement at one of the theatres in the Metropolis. The difficulties he has met with have, however, proved insurmountable, and the theatres of Drury Lane and Covent Garden have spared themselves the disgrace to which they would be subject by countenancing such impudence and incompetency. Even his performance of the inferior characters of the drama would be objectionable, if there was nothing to render him ridiculous but one of the vilest figures that has been seen either on or off the stage; and if his mind was half so well qualified for the conception of Richard the Third, which he is shortly to appear in, as his person is suited to the deformities with which the tyrant is said to have been distinguished from his brothers, his success would be most unequivocal. As to his Hamlet, it was one of the most terrible misrepresentations to which Shakespeare has ever been subject. Without grace or dignity he comes forward; he shows an unconsciousness that any body is before him, and is often so forgetful of the respect due to an audience, that he turns his back upon them in some of those scenes where contemplation is to be indulged, as if for the purpose of shewing his abstractedness from all ordinary objects! His voice is harsh and monotonous; but, as it is deep, answers well enough the idea he entertains of impressing terror by a tone which seems to proceed from a charnel-house."

THE Prince and Princess of Wales and suite visited the Gaiety Theatre on Thursday and witnessed the performance of Our Miss Gibbs.

MR. LOUIS J. SEYMOUR, a talented young comedian, is being rapidly fixed up by Messrs. R. Warner's Agency. He has three years' solid bookings.

AT the Empire Palace, Barnsley, an excellent bill is provided this week. A better all-round programme would be difficult to find. Miss Lillie Soutter tops the bill, and gives a fine show. Her songs are good and her mannerisms funny. The Great Ruhart is extremely funny; the Cavallottis give a musical act of the first order: their playing is excellent. Stewart and Morgan, vocalists of no mean order, are doing well, too; Celest does a good act on the slack wire; the Bros. Passmore are smart comedians and extremely good dancers; Les Henris, a gymnastic act; Lauri Brothers, acrobats; and the Palascope fill up the bill.

THE ERA

SATURDAY, MARCH 13, 1909.

A DEAN ON THE DRAMA.

A dean is defined in the dictionary as "an ecclesiastical officer or dignitary attached to a cathedral." There were four kinds of deans: the dean who has a chapter, the dean who has no chapter but a cure of souls, and a "peculiar"; a dean with a donative deanery, but no cure of souls; and a rural dean, who has no judicial power in himself, but only acts by the direction of the bishop or of the archdeacon. A certain natural self-esteem has always been attributed to the office. COWPER wrote:

Pride may be pampered while the flesh grows lean;
Humility may clothe an English dean.

For nearly thirty years the Very Rev. ARTHUR PERCEVAL PUREY-CUST has held the Deanery of York. Whether he owed this extremely comfortable position to his eloquence, his industry, or to his being chaplain to the Archbishop of Canterbury is not known to us; but he seems to have had a remarkably pleasant time at York, having, in spite of his duties, been a voluminous writer on archæology and a well-known reader of papers at Church Congresses. We imagine Dr. PUREY-CUST as one of those fine, picturesque, and dignified ecclesiastics whom the late ANTHONY TROLLOPE used to depict so graphically in his novels. It is a pleasure to think of these grand old English gentlemen, pillars of the Church of England, Justices of the Peace, and very often excellent judges of wine; and is distressing to find one of them "giving himself away" so completely as did the Rev. Dr. PUREY-CUST at the annual meeting of the York Penitentiary for Girls the other day. Speaking from the chair, the Dean said:

One heard a great deal of the power and influence of the stage. Personally, he could not say that it was a great agency on the side of morality at the present time. Sometimes people asked him, "Why do you never go to the theatre? The actors and actresses are quite as good as other people." He replied that he had no doubt of it; he had known several of them, and he believed they were excellent, but it was not the actors and actresses he found fault with. It was the plays which they performed. When he read reports of plays, and considered what the plot was, he was very sorry that those who were respectable people should be required, by the duties of their calling, to represent parts which must be so absolutely alien to what they held and appreciated themselves. The stage had been a great power for good, and had very often brought home very striking facts to people who would not listen to any other form of teaching, but if the plays of the present day were what they were reported to be in the papers which he read, he must say that he thought the theatre was rather a handmaid to that which was immoral than a leader and prophet of that which was pure and good.

The first thing to be observed respecting the above remarks is that much depends on the papers which the Dean of York "takes in." Possibly he may have perused journals which gave garbled accounts of the contemporary drama. If that is so, we can only advise him to read his Era, where he will always find clear and accurate descriptions. But, really, the Dean's attack on the morals of the drama is most inopportunely made. There have been times when we have been troubled by indefensible adaptations from the French, plays with "frisky" husbands and dubious wives, and all the usual peculiarities of a Palais Royal farce. But, just now, the boards are not only free from inducements to vice; they positively teem with incitements to virtue. Where are these "immoral" plays? At the Duke of York's, where Mr. CHARLES FROHMAN has made such a success with Mr. J. M. BARRIE'S work, so limpidly fresh and pure, and where the sufferings of the poor are so poignantly presented by Mr. JOHN GALSWORTHY; at the Lyric, where the awful fate of Miladi is a standing lesson to intrigantes; at the Lyceum, where to-night we are to have the unimpeachable play of Hamlet; at His Majesty's, where the awful curse of the father nightly falls on the naughty dancing-girl; at the Haymarket, where "GOLDIE'S" pleasant and harmless humour charms us; at the Playhouse, with its naval heroism; or, to make an end, at any of the leading London theatres? Mr. FORBES ROBERTSON, as was only to be expected, was "down on" the Dean at once. It was hard, indeed, after having produced with so much success a play like The Passing of the Third Floor Back, which may almost be called religious in character, to read the Dean's reprehensive remarks on the drama.

Dr. PUREY-CUST, being promptly "tackled" by a representative of a Yorkshire paper, attempted, very naturally, to "hedge." He had not said that all plays were bad. Mr. and Mrs. CHARLES KEAN, whom he knew personally, did a great deal to elevate the moral tone of the stage. He liked going to the play immensely, and would like to go now, only he was an old man, and never went out at night. These statements which we have italicised suggest a course which we believe would be equally agreeable to the London managers and the Dean of York. In the seclusion of his comfortable deanery he evidently knows nothing of what is being done in London. He never goes out at night; but there is no reason that he should not attend matinées. Let the London managers invite the Dean up to town and give him a round of morning performances. He seems a genial, hospitable old fellow; he says of the actors and actresses whom he has known that they were "very good specimens"; and we have no doubt that he is a very good specimen of a Dean—as Deans go—for he once entertained Sir SQUIRE BANCROFT and Lady BANCROFT at his house. At the conclusion of his metropolitan experiences, a little dinner could be given in his honour, and he could then make his recantation. Until this pleasant conversion be brought about, we can only suggest that the doors of the Deanery be closed upon him that he attack the drama only in his own house.

THE SYSTEM OF BOOKING.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—I think the whole system of dramatic bookings and touring ought to be altered. Now that railway companies, insurance companies, and kinematograph producers are making working arrangements, it is high time theatrical managers did the same thing. By this means all the following grievances could be avoided, such as companies making jumps of 150 miles, being out for a week, all night travelling, great waste of printing, artists not being capable, guaranteeing fares and printing, a company cancelling dates, bad shows, bad scenery, and the thousand and one inconveniences that arise at present.

The following is my plan: Firstly, to call a meeting of all the managers of drama houses. Say, for argument's sake, fifty-two theatre managers make a working arrangement between themselves. They, the fifty-two managers, would appoint a working committee of four or five gentlemen who understand the profession thoroughly, this committee to have offices in London. They to produce fifty-two dramas, the money for which would have to be found by a limited company financed by the fifty-two managers. Each company would follow the other in strict rotation, thereby minimising the railway journey to a few miles. Each local manager to buy his own printing from the London office, to pay the salaries of the company for the week, also pay their fares to the next town, as well as pay for getting the scenery in and out. Each local manager to pay the London office £1 per week for management expenses, as well as pay a fifty-second part of the cost of the production of the drama he has at his theatre for that week. By that means, the production debt would be wiped out at the end of the year. Each artist would be perfectly satisfied to accept two-thirds of his present salary, as he would be sure of a certain income for the fifty-two weeks; there would be no such thing as being out for a week; his salary would be secure whether good or bad business was done. He need not be afraid of being stranded, and would save all-night travelling, the longest journey being but a few miles. Let us see what the local manager would gain. (1) He would be sure of getting a first-class show, as if any production proved a failure the company could soon be rehearsed to play something different. (2) Nor would a company turn up with two or three cloths and a chamber that has seen better days. (3) An artist knowing that he had a permanent berth would put his whole interest in the profession. (4) By paying for his own printing the local manager would get his own men to see that none was wasted. All lithos after being collected in could be sent to the London office, who would credit the local manager with their value. The London office buying a quantity of printing would be in a position to sell at less than the present prices. If any drama house would like to have an occasional musical comedy, or any other attraction, he would simply write to the London office that he would like to fill in the drama of a certain date in some theatre which does not belong to the fifty-two in the working arrangement, the company costing the local manager so little that he could afford to take a smaller percentage than any manager touring in the ordinary course.

Now, what would the company cost the local manager?—

11 artists, at 27s. 6d. average	15	2	6
£1 extra for one of the actors, who would also manage the company	1	0	0
Average share of cost of production	2	0	0
Cost of London office	1	0	0
Average railway fares	0	15	0
Scenery getting out	0	15	0

Printing to add.

If this could be worked it would be a boon and blessing to everybody. I should be pleased to hear from any local manager on the subject. Apologising for taking up so much of your valuable space—Yours faithfully, S. GOODMAN.

WHEN Garrick was a boy, on his dining at Dr. Warburton's table with his father, he was asked to take a glass of wine; which, as he was not used to it at his own house, he declined, and said he would rather have a glass of beer. "No, no, young gentleman," cried the doctor; "take your wine: people who drink beer, generally think beer."

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Servia wishes to annex Golzburg, and sends an envoy in the person of Baron Breslaw to explain her demands to the Grand Duchess Marie, the governing power at the moment. To effect his nefarious ends Baron Breslaw places Von Nestolde, General of the Golzburg army, under a financial obligation, and, under threat of exposure, demands his help. To further advance his ends Breslaw compromises the General's wife, Camille, and adroitly throws the blame on to one Captain Max, the next in command to Nestolde, and a special favourite with the Grand Duchess. In a moment of righteous indignation at Breslaw's treatment of an outcast woman, who it subsequently transpires was Breslaw's mistress, Captain Max becomes involved in a duel with him, duelling having been just previously interdicted by the Grand Duchess. The cause being just, however, Max meets the Baron, and is only prevented from being killed by the timely arrival of the Duchess, Breslaw having cunningly, with the forced aid of Von Nestolde, palmed off an unloaded pistol upon the Captain. As the result of her new edict, the Grand Duchess has no option but to order Max's arrest, thereby unconsciously furthering the Servian's schemes. Max out of the way, and the General still more deeply involved, Breslaw declares a hurried ultimatum, which, to spare her people, the Grand Duchess is about to accept. The scene of Max's incarceration, however, adjoins the room where the conference is being held, and is accessible thereto by means of a screw panel. This the Captain finds by accident, and, overhearing the Servian's demands, makes his appearance in time to prevent the signing of the treaty. A pretty love scene ensues between the Duchess and Captain Max, at the end of which Max is rehabilitated and rushes off to seek the protection of Austria, the Duchess's dead brother having at one time saved the Austrian Minister's life. Thus baulked, Breslaw enlists the aid of ruffians, and himself, accompanied by the General's wife, gives chase. Max is thrown, and seeks shelter in an old inn at Solnay. The Grand Duchess, instinctively fearing Breslaw's treachery, follows as well, only to be entrapped by Breslaw's bravos. The Captain also is for a moment outwitted, and while he is bound to a chair and the Grand Duchess is a captive in a room above Breslaw fires the inn and leaves them to their fate. A shot during the melée, however, has cut the Captain's bonds, and amid a smother of smoke and flame he escapes, and effects the rescue of the Duchess. The Duchess returns to Gotzburg while Max proceeds on his mission, followed by Breslaw and the General's wife, Camille.

To their great chagrin Max surmounts all further obstacles and reaches Austria. In a few hours he has attained his end, and is on his return journey towards the frozen forest of Althea. A terrific blizzard is raging, and the road becomes almost impassable. In a wayside hut, where he is compelled to put up for the sake of his horse before entering the depths of the forest, he again encounters the General's wife, now more than ever the dupe and accomplice of Breslaw. By subterfuge, she replaces the vital despatches with blank paper, but in a moment of nervous terror betrays her association with Breslaw. To safeguard himself the Captain insists upon her returning with him. In the meantime, Breslaw has baited the Captain's sleigh, in the hope that a ravenous pack of wolves reported to be out will attack and despatch him. And here comes in the element of sensationalism. One sees the snow-bent firs flying past as the horse-drawn sleigh dashes frantically on its perilous way. Through a screen of driving snow one sees the ravening wolves coming nearer—ever nearer—their howls echoing among the trees. They gain upon the frenzied horse; they are at its heels! A woman's shrieks commingle with their bloodcurdling howls as one, more daring than the rest, leaps through the gloom. Bang, bang, bang from the Captain's pistol, and three writhing bodies drop and are left behind. Pistol exhausted, sword flashes in the moonlight, and in a few maddening seconds safety is assured.

Back in Gotzburg, the Grand Duchess, her General, and the Servian envoy are anxiously awaiting Max's return. The Baron hears of Max's escape, and, on the horns of his dilemma, develops his final scheme. He places a bomb in the archway to the market square, which the Captain must traverse, and awaits events; but the bomb is rendered non-effective, and Max returns, wounded, but safe. His denunciation of the Baron is corroborated by the General's wife. The Baron is dismissed from office, and, in a rush for liberty, he explodes his own bomb, thus justly meeting the fate he had prepared for Max. Grateful for his release, the General forgives his wife, and the Grand Duchess, sincerely loving the gallant Captain, besides appreciating him as the saviour of her people, takes him for her consort.

The drama, from the pen of Ward Bailey, is a stirring piece of work, especially in the Sleigh scene, where the American blood mare Dakota Daisy is introduced. There are some very effective stage scenes, the uniforms and general effects being exceptionally good, and the piece is admirably staged. Chief honours are to be accorded to Mr. Mathew H. Glenville in the leading rôle of Captain Max; Miss Hettie Zillwood creates a marked impression as the Duchess; Mr. J. Sutton Pateman is an ideal General; and Mr. Albert Guyon a stage villain of truculence and force. There is plenty of comedy in the piece, and this is admirably brought out by Mr. Fred Osmond as Karl, Mr. Charles A. Gallier as Sergeant Offenbach, Miss Alice Buckland as Nita, and Miss Mabel Veriton as Otille Schwartz. Miss Lillian Malvern as Esther is commendable, and Miss Margaret R. Frame as Camille gives a clever performance.

THE CASE OF C. E. STEVENS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—An earnest appeal is made on behalf of the wife and family of Charles E. Stevens, who for the last five years has been incapacitated from following his profession through a severe attack of neuritis in the legs. He has exhausted all his little savings in keeping his home together, and is now an in-patient of St. Bartholomew's Hospital. He has been a well-known comedian for the last thirty-five years, and was foremost in every good and charitable work. Being a personal friend of thirty years, knowing his sad plight, I can assure you his case is one deserving of every sympathy.

Mr. F. H. Pedgrift, of The Era, has kindly consented to receive any contributions.—Yours faithfully, ARTHUR WILLIAMS.

Green Room Club, W.C., March 6.

THE CURTAIN-RAISERS.

The Amateur dramatic society known as The Curtain Raisers, which seems to be composed of people whose ideas as to acting are, to say the least, imperfect, and whose judgment in the selection of plays for production is even worse. We paid a visit to the Rehearsal Theatre in Maiden-lane on Thursday evening, with the object of witnessing four new one-act plays. The first bore the title of

"MY LADY'S GLOVE."

A Comedy in One Act by Neilson Morris.

Sir Malcolm Dudley .....MR. H. CLIFTON DALE
Benjamin .....MR. FRANK W. RUSSELL
Evelyn, Duchess of Westonhaugh MISS MAISIE CARLTON
Lady Betty Waring ..MISS MAUDE O'SULLIVAN

The scene is in the hall of Sir Malcolm Dudley's house at midnight, the period is that of George the Third, the producer of the play was said to be a Mr. H. Clifton Dale, the wigs were made by Fox, costumes by the Artists' Supply, and the furniture by Elms Lester. It is important to mention these facts, because they form the sum total of what we know about the play, for it was not produced on the evening of our visit, and no member of the society could give a coherent account of the plot. An apology was offered for the non-production, but it was whispered that the real reason of the absence of the item from the entertainment was that the comedy had been acted so badly on the previous night that the author refused to permit the celebrated Curtain-Raisers to cast further aspersions on his play by their unintelligent performance of it. We are scarcely surprised, and, indeed, for our own part, we would prefer that the child of our brain were still-born than live miserably.

The second piece was

"BERTHA BRENT."

A Play in One Act by Leslie Thomas.

Philip Lasmere, M.P. MR. GERALD DIXON-SPAIN
Frederick Charles .....MR. LESLIE THOMAS
Rhoda Medway .....MISS D. MEASE-SMYTH
Alice Lingard .....MISS NINA HAZEL
Mrs. Wilton .....MISS MARIE W. GOLDIE

Here our wondering eyes caught sight of some of the most curious characters of the human species. All the five people in the playlet are absurd creations. We will tell the story briefly. Mrs. Wilton lets lodgings at Brixton, and her son lives with her under the assumed name of Frederick Charles, his mother thinking that it would be better for his future welfare and for the furtherance of his none too clear ambitions if it be not known that she "takes lodgers in." Staying with Mrs. Wilton is Rhoda Medway, who seems to have run away from home in order to satisfy her craving for the life of an actress. Her uncle, Philip Lasmere, M.P.—we trust, for the fair fame of the Mother of Parliaments, that easily-beguiled constituents may never return a member whose conversation is so silly, and whose attitudes and manners are so ridiculous as the Philip Lasmere represented on Thursday night—is seeking to take her back, and duly arrives at Mrs. Wilton's. That lady's story of her life—she had been an actress under the name of Bertha Brent, and had "come down"—has a salutary effect upon the mind of Rhoda Medway, who relinquishes her intentions as to a theatrical career.

The other new piece was

"THE CATASTROPHE."

A Play in One Act by Hubert C. Ferraby.

John Holden .....MR. ALEX. MACLEAN
Harold Barnes .....MR. RICHARD DESBOROUGH
Marks .....MR. FRANK JONES
Mrs. Montagu .....MISS HELENE MILLER
Ethel Holden .....MISS ETHEL TAAFFE

Briefly, John Holden is a drunkard, and his wife leads a most unhappy life. She has an admirer in Harold Barnes, and they are discussing affairs in her drawing-room when John Holden enters with a demi-mondaine. Barnes renders Holden unconscious, and by the aid of his knowledge of the past life of the woman, Mrs. Montagu, succeeds in getting rid of her. When Holden recovers Barnes denounces him in unmeasured language, Mrs. Holden comes in and relates how she had intended to shoot herself, tells her husband that that is what he ought to have done, and a little later Holden does go out and commit suicide.

REOPENING OF THE ALEXANDRA.

The Alexandra Theatre, Stoke Newington, which for a little over two years has been given over to variety entertainments, was on Monday last re-opened as a theatre, under the management of Moss' Empires, Ltd., and the Hackney and Shepherd's Bush Empire Palaces, Ltd. Many well-known residents of the locality were to be seen among the audience on the opening night, and satisfaction was freely expressed on all sides at the theatre having reverted to its former condition, good wishes for its future success being general. The piece selected for the inauguration of the season was Mrs. Henry de la Pasture's comedy, Peter's Mother, presented by Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison's company, with Mrs. Cecil Raleigh in the title-rôle. Considerable care has evidently been exercised in the selection of the cast, so admirably does the personality of each actor or actress fit the character he or she is called upon to portray. To Mrs. Cecil Raleigh the part of Lady Mary Crewys presents no difficulties. Her tender and womanly portrayal is of immense value to the production, and wins sympathetic appreciation from her audience. Mr. Townsend Whitling, on whom also fall the duties of stage-manager, deserves all praise for his strong and convincing performance of the death-stricken Sir Timothy Crewys, which although only seen in the first act, is nevertheless not the least memorable performance in the play. The part of the selfish, yet in the main good-hearted, Peter is by no means an easy one to handle, but it would be difficult to improve upon Mr. Vivian Gilbert's interpretation of it. The widowed and spinster sisters of Sir Timothy, Lady Belstone and Miss G. Crewys, are two admirably drawn characters, the peculiarities of each being skilfully brought out by Miss Mary Griffiths and Miss Josephine Rae respectively, who contribute not a little to the lighter periods of the play. Mr. Drew Macintosh gives a clear, incisive, and telling rendering of John Crewys, Q.C., and characteristic studies of Canon Birch and Dr. Blundell come from Messrs. Walter Russell and Edward Jephson. The part of Sarah is not one of many opportunities, but of those it possesses Miss Hilda Sims makes the most; and Miss Annie Stalman is quite equal to all demands made upon her as Mrs. Hewell. The farce Turtle Doves is played as a curtain-raiser, and makes a bright and pleasing prelude to the longer play. The musical direction is in the able hands of Mr. Amos Parker, and the fact that Mr. T. J. Robinson is to be seen at his old post of acting-manager is sufficient guarantee that all that is possible for the convenience and comfort of the patrons of the Alexandra Theatre will be done.

WE have received from Mr. John Long a novel in one volume called "The Fault," by C. T. Podmore, a well-known Manchester journalist. Those who like a thrilling and interesting story, full of incident and well told, will enjoy Mr. Podmore's novel immensely. Though it cannot be called a tale of the drama, it deals incidentally with the travelling theatre of a Mr. Dorraby, which is most graphically described. "The Fault" is an excellent book to buy for a long railway journey in the provinces.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

BERLIN, THURSDAY, March 11.—A new play by Herr Hauptmann is always an event of great importance in our theatrical world. It is the "thing" to be present on the first night, and the tickets for Griselda were snapped up long before, the dealers, who had taken care to provide themselves with some in time, making as much as 40 per cent. and over. That the audience included many of our leading luminaries of the dramatic and artistic world is a matter of course, and socially eminent persons were present in great numbers. The Austrian and Würtemberg Ambassadors represented the corps diplomatique. It may at once be stated that the play does not stand comparison with the best works of Hauptmann, while it is better than one or two of his later pieces. The fable of the patient Grisel is improved upon by the author to some extent, but all his talent cannot make his heroine either convincing or appealing. This Griselda is the very robust daughter of the peasant Helmbrecht; she is a distant kinswoman of Shakespeare's pretty shrew, and when the mighty lord of the country, Count Ulrich, sees her in the wood, her brusque denial of his overtures rouses all the passion in him. He is unused to opposition; it is something as fascinating as it is strange, and when the virago dashes a pan of water over him Ulrich's delight knows no bounds; he seizes her in his arms, carries her to the cottage, measures his strength with hers, and comes off victorious. It becomes now desirable for Markgraf Ulrich to marry, but he will have none of the doll-like ladies of the Court; his thoughts go out to the peasant maid whom he conquered; her very roughness appeals to him, for she can stand a thrashing, if he should be so inclined. So Ulrich woos Griselda, and she, attracted by the thought of being the Markgrafin, yields. She has not such a bad time at Court as one would have supposed, but the Count now develops such passionate love for and jealousy of his wife that he has her child taken from her at birth, fearing she will love it more than him. When Griselda very naturally asks for her baby this astonishing husband is so wounded that he goes off to the mountains to live a life of solitude for a time. Griselda, too, has undergone a change; she has become a gentle, loving woman, but she makes up her mind to leave her erring husband all the same. She returns to her native haunts, and vows she will only enter the castle again as a serving-maid to scour the stairs. And thus it comes about that in this lowly position the Markgraf and his Markgrafin meet again. Their mutual love breaks down all barriers, and they fall into each other's arms. The child is there, too, and we are quite ready to believe all will now progress smoothly in the Markgraf's family. The new play is considered weak on the whole by the majority of our critics, the sudden complete change in the two leading characters being justly pronounced unnatural. It is hardly necessary to remark upon the beauty of many of the passages, the author being Hauptmann; and the interpretation of the piece was above all praise. Fräulein Lehmann and Herr Bassermann were conspicuous in a magnificent cast, and the enthusiastic applause was easily understood. Herr Hauptmann was called before the curtain many times in response to general acclamations, but the sound of hisses mingled freely with the applause, and I do not think Griselda will enjoy a very long lease of life.

THE Ibsen Cycle at the Lessing came to an end last week with the fine play Wenn wir Toten erwachen, pronounced by Ibsen himself as his epilogue. It was faultlessly interpreted, the cast being much the same as at its first production. Fräulein Triesch's (Mrs. Frederic Lamond) rendering of the part of Irene is one of the best pieces of acting on record; Herr Bassermann's rendering of Rubek is no less excellent; while Fräulein Wuest as Maja and Herr Marr as the "Bear-slayer" completed the quartette. The audience remained to a man, applauding at the close of the performance, the stamping of the students and cries of "Bravo!" making a deafening noise. Finally Dr. Brahm appeared on the stage to receive such a storm of cheers as must have done any manager's heart good. He thanked the house in a short speech, and declared that though it was the first time the great author's works had been done in the form of a cycle, it would not be the last—a covert promise which resulted in renewed cheering.

HERR VON WILDENBRUCH'S historical tragedy Die Carolinger has been revived at the Schiller Theatre with a good deal of success. It is admirably acted, and will certainly run some little time.

AMONGST the plays acquired by Mme. Meta Illing for the English Theatre in Germany are Shaw's Candida, R. C. Carton's Mr. Hopkinson, and Sutro's The Fascinating Mr. Vanderveldt.

THE closing night of Cinderella at the Grand, Glasgow, last Saturday, was marked by the greatest enthusiasm, and such a lavish expenditure as was indicated by the gifts, floral and otherwise, proved the success the pantomime has been. Miss Queenie Finnis, Miss Violet Halls, Miss Nellie Cozens, Miss Nellie Wigley, and Miss Kate Walbran were almost overwhelmed by the bouquets, baskets, and sprays of flowers handed up to them, and, in addition, boxes of bon-bons, golliwog and other dolls, veils, shoulder shawls, and numerous other gifts kept the conductor busy all the evening.

MR. GEORGE FRENCH (the Baron) received several presents, and the Baroness (Mr. Tom W. Conway) was handed up a bottle of that popular Scotch medicine, "Johnnie Dewar," tastefully decorated with bows of pink ribbon. Mr. Whit Cunliffe was awarded a walking-stick, several dolls, and other tokens, and to the twelve chorus ladies who assist him in his catchy choruses, Mr. Cunliffe gave handsome floral sprays and other tangible marks of his appreciation. Mr. Barry Lupino and his wife (Miss May Gordon) were frequently included in the proofs of the audience's esteem, as was also Miss Olive Tempest, the Fairy Godmother.

THE members of the company, in addition, made very handsome presents to Mr. Christie Grant (manager at the Grand), Mr. Harry Henderson (conductor), Mr. Stanley Rogers (author of the pantomime), Mr. Frank Withers (acting-manager for Messrs. Buchanan and Stevens), Mr. Augustus Hammond (stage-manager), Mr. C. H. Baker (assistant stage-manager), and Miss Jackson (wardrobe mistress), these gifts consisting of such substantial and useful articles as a dressing-case, writing-cabinet, gold-mounted umbrella, silver flask, &c.

MR. R. C. BUCHANAN announces the removal of his offices to No. 6, John-street, Adelphi, London, W.C., and that on Wednesday next all communications should be addressed to him there.

VARIETY GOSSIP.

Mr. Walter de Frece, managing-director of the De Frece Circuit, whose combination for booking purposes with Moss Empires and the Stoll companies we announced last week, sails for America per s.s. Celtic from Liverpool on March 26, and will visit all the principal towns.

The latest De Frece enterprise is the Hippodrome, Southend-on-Sea, which is announced to open on August Bank Holiday. During Mr. Walter de Frece's absence his brother, Mr. J. de Frece, will attend to all business matters at the firm's new offices, Cranbourn Mansions, Cranbourn-street, W.C.

Miss Vesta Tilley is resting at Brighton, where she is recovering from a sharp attack of influenza. She opens next Monday at the Shepherd's Bush Empire, her farewell engagement before sailing for her six weeks' engagement in New York.

George Ali, the famous animal actor, whose enormous success as "Mouser," the cat in the Drury Lane pantomime, has been favourably noticed by the Press of both hemispheres, will shortly head a company in vaudeville to play Buster Brown's dog Tige, his original creation.

Mr. Bransby Williams, who has just completed his pantomime engagement at the Prince's, Bristol, has been released by Mr. Stoll, in order that he may appear on Monday at the opening of the new theatre—the King's, Dundee. Mr. Williams, after Dundee, will recommence the Moss' tour with his Dickens and Shakespearean répertoires.

Miss Vesta Victoria, who has been such a big attraction at the London Pavilion for the past few weeks, is compelled to absent herself from London for one week owing to her engagement in Edinburgh, and she will return, therefore, to the Piccadilly Circus house on March 22.

On Tuesday evening a party of American visitors at the Pavilion were particularly enthusiastic at the completion of each song, and at the finish of the humorous number "Now I have to call him father" paid Miss Victoria a great compliment by passing across the footlights a bouquet of English roses.

On her return Miss Victoria will give some new numbers, one in particular—"His Lordship"—being a humorous study of the difficulties experienced in "society" by a coster girl who has married an aristocrat.

Mr. Seymour Hicks, announced in our columns to do two sketches at each performance at the London Coliseum, is only giving Papa's Wife, with Miss Zena Dare in the part originally played by Miss Ellaline Terriss. He will present Scrooge in a fortnight's time.

Like most light comedians, Mr. Hicks has a decided love for tragedy, and will produce later an English version of Les Nuits du Hampton Club, founded on Robert Louis Stevenson's story of the Suicides' Club, and produced at the Shaftesbury a year ago during the season of the Grand Guignol company.

The Islington Hippodrome, formerly known as Collins's, closed its doors suddenly on Monday evening. The public-house attached to the hall is, however, keeping open. The hall is one of what used to be known as the L.C.C. halls. A receiver has been appointed.

Just as the prosperity of a jest lies in the ear of him who hears it, so the humour of it depends upon the point of view of the hero or the heroine in it. For instance, there's the canny man, mentioned by Harry Lauder, whose neighbour met him flitting. He had wife and children and household furniture piled on the top of a waggon; and he was solemnly driving his one horse along the street. "So you're flittin'," says the neighbour. "I am," was the reply. "I want to be near my work." "And where's yer job?" "I haven't got one yet!"

In dealing with current topics of the day in a revue, French authors seem to be more fortunate in Paris than they are in London, as M. Victor de Cottens discovered at the Coliseum. On this side of the Channel the revue has never quite taken firm root; but another effort to acclimatise it is, however, shortly to be made at the Empire, by Mr. George Grossmith, jun., who will not be committing his "first offence," his good-natured satire having already won favour at the house named, in Oh! Indeed! which contained skits on Brewster's Millions and Diana of Dobson's, and was produced in March last year, being played by Arthur Playfair, Farren Soutar, Sybil Arundale, and Valli Valli.

For the purposes of the annual dinner of the Royal Automobile Club next Thursday, at which the Prince of Wales will be the principal guest, the whole of Covent Garden Opera House is to be converted into a dining-room. For the concert to follow the dinner Miss Maud Allan will occupy the first place on the programme, and she will be followed by another Palace Theatre favourite, Miss Margaret Cooper. The Tivoli will lend Mr. Harry Lauder, Mr. Wilkie Bard, from Old Drury, will sing "Sea shells," and Little Tich will also contribute.

In the King's Bench Division, before Mr. Justice Hamilton, on Saturday, in the action of Allan and another v. the Birmingham Hippodrome, Limited, and another, Mr. Gilbert Beyfus moved for judgment for the plaintiffs, Miss Maud Allan and the Palace Theatre. An injunction was obtained in December, 1908. Mr. Justice Hamilton made the injunction perpetual, with costs.

Mr. Laurence Irving and Miss Mabel Hackney, who are no strangers to New York, made their début there on Monday in vaudeville at the New York Music Hall. They presented The King and the Vagabond, a playlet adapted by Mr. Irving from Théodore de Banville's Gringoire, and produced last year at the Coliseum. It was accepted with enthusiasm. Here, as elsewhere, the audience demanded a speech, and Mr. Laurence Irving responded ably.

The success of The Midnight London Express again proves the truth of the assertion that managers will always find an opening for the right stuff. This sketch was produced on Feb. 1 at the Surrey, and has gone right on since, and is well booked into 1910. Next week it goes to the Olympia, Shoreditch. Mr. Walter Gibbons evidently knows a good thing when he sees it. The last scene alone would make the fortune of any sketch, episode, or drama.

The Tivoli audience on Monday evening showed its appreciation in the most whole-hearted fashion of Mr. Harry Lauder, and when the Scotch comedian and Mr. Joseph Wilson, the manager, came on the stage the loudest applause was mingled with cries of "Speech, speech." Mr. Wilson, in the name of the directors of the Tivoli, presented the singer with a large wreath composed of laurels and white heather. Mr. Lauder, in reply, said he was glad to be home again, though he had made many very dear friends in America. Had he never gone away he would not have experienced the great joy of this welcome home.

Mr. Vivian Evans has been appointed to succeed Mr. Frank Weston as resident-manager of the Empire Palace, Wolverhampton.

Mr. Alfred Moul's recent application to the Bristol Licensing Justices for a music licence for the Tivoli, Broadmead, Bristol (at which it is proposed to run a kinematograph entertainment), was adjourned.

The 11th inst. being the third anniversary of the opening of the Hippodrome, Colchester, Mr. Ben de Frece presented a number of local artists, and also an augmented orchestra.

Morley, which is about five miles from Leeds, is to have a music hall, which will be probably known as the New Pavilion. The plans have been passed.

It is to be a two-tier house built on thoroughly modern lines, and will seat 1,500. The site is in Queen-street. The promoters are Mr. W. J. Attack, of the Marina Theatre, Ramsgate, Mr. George Barry, the Excelsior Picture Co., and Mr. William Lund, managing partner of the Deetrich Agency, 31, Islington, Liverpool. The opening may be in September.

Messrs. Sherwood have given to the Corporation a portion of the land at the back of their site for the new music hall in Wakefield, and have arranged to widen Phœnix-street, which is at the side of the site, thus making a thoroughfare from Kirkgate to Hardy Croft.

Mr. Frank Weston, who for the last three years has been resident-manager under the De Frece management, first at the Hippodrome and then at the Empire Palace, Wolverhampton, and has left to take up a similar position at the Hippodrome, Birkenhead, was accorded a farewell benefit matinée on Saturday last.

During his stay in Wolverhampton Mr. Weston has made himself very popular with all classes, a fact which was amply demonstrated by a crowded house. No fewer than some thirty turns by artists who came from Walsall, Birmingham, Manchester, and even Glasgow, were rattled through without the slightest hitch, thanks to Mr. Robert Watt, who, on this occasion, undertook the stage-management.

In the course of the afternoon Mr. Weston was presented with a purse of gold publicly subscribed, and he also received from the staff of the hall a travelling-clock for himself and a silver rose-bowl for Mrs. Weston, who unfortunately could not be present. Mr. Gerald Spencer came across from the Royal to look after the front of the house, and also gave an excellent recitation.

Prior to his departure from Wolverhampton, Mr. Weston was the recipient from the officers and men of the Wolverhampton Police Force of a handsome cigarette-case suitably inscribed, as a mark of appreciation of the esteem in which he was held by that body of men.

The King's Theatre and Hippodrome, Dundee, will be opened on Monday, the opening ceremony by the Right Hon. Lady Dunedin of Stenton being at twelve noon. The lessees are the United County Theatres, Ltd. Mr. Alfred Moul, the managing director, has our heartiest congratulations on the completion of a magnificent house. Mr. C. W. Young is the local manager.

We regret to record the death of Mr. Frank Eastwood, the conductor of the Empire Theatre of Varieties, Rochdale, which took place at his residence on Sunday morning. Mr. Eastwood was a clever violinist, and obtained the appointment of conductor soon after the Empire was opened, four and a half years ago. The funeral took place on Wednesday afternoon, the cortège being headed by members of the Theatre Royal, Empire, and Hippodrome orchestras. Mr. Eastwood was only thirty-four years old, and leaves a widow and three children.

A complimentary benefit to Mr. H. F. Miller, who for five years has been the popular manager of the Stoke Hippodrome, was given on Thursday evening, March 4, and at both the seven and nine o'clock performances there were "bumper" houses.

During an interval the proprietor of the Hippodrome (Mr. T. Allan Edwardes) presented to Mrs. Miller a bouquet and gold watch from the orchestra and staff; then to Mr. and Mrs. Miller a coal scuttle and accessories, a silver-plated cruet and glass shade, and a Wedgwood biscuit jar and two vases from the orchestra and staff; then to Mr. Miller a case of pipes "with good wishes" from the members of the company engaged, and a cheque for £10 10s. from himself. Mr. Miller, in returning thanks, said he hoped he might live many years in the Potteries to serve the people, whom he had found to be good and true friends.

Under a winding-up order under the Companies Acts, made on Jan. 26 last against the Maidstone Palace of Varieties (Limited), meetings of the creditors and shareholders were now held before Mr. H. E. Burgess, Assistant Receiver, at the Board of Trade offices, Lincoln's Inn. The company was registered on Sept. 24, 1907, with a nominal capital of £7,000, its objects being to acquire land at Maidstone and to construct and carry on a theatre there.

The Official Receiver reported that the failure of the company appeared to be due to onerous contracts having been taken over from the vendor syndicate, and to bad management. The responsibility of the directors in taking over contracts and engagements without previously ascertaining their nature and extent was under consideration.

The statement of affairs disclosed liabilities amounting to £9,236, of which £6,080 are expected to rank, with no available assets, the whole of the amount (£2,085) being covered by debenture bonds. The total deficiency as regards shareholders is returned at £9,955. The theatre was opened on March 23, 1908, but did not pay its expenses. In an action commenced by the first debenture holders the Court, on Sept. 30, 1908, appointed a receiver, and he has since arranged a sale of the theatre for the sum of £3,500. The shareholders left the liquidation in the Official Receiver's hands, the creditors' meeting being adjourned.

Mr. Victor Ellis, who is appearing at the Royal Hippodrome, Eastbourne, this week, accomplished what must be regarded as a very smart feat. Miss Hemsley and Mr. Ambrose were billed to appear in a comedy motor-car act, but Mr. Ambrose, meeting with an accident, was unable to reach the Hippodrome for the evening performances. Mr. Victor Ellis, after giving his clever dancing turn, mentioned to Miss Helmsley that as an interested spectator he had once or twice seen her motor-car act, and offered to go on in the place of Mr. Ambrose. Rehearsals were at once commenced, and with such effect that Mr. Ellis and Miss Helmsley appeared at the second house, and gave a performance of the motor-car act which evoked general satisfaction.

Following her most successful engagement at the Oxford, My Fancy is giving a selection from her delightful sand-dances at the Tivoli this week.

The annual general meeting of the Terriers' Association will be held on Sunday, May 2, at six o'clock at the Three Stags, Kennington.

Mr. Gus Elen will be running down to Brighton for a few days on his car to get rid of the remains of his recent attack of influenza. He goes to the Coliseum on the 22nd.

Mr. Archie Howells, musical-director of the Hippodrome, Crouch End, has been away this last few weeks with a serious attack of influenza, but hopes to be back, as well as ever, at business again on Monday.

Mr. R. A. Roberts, the well-known protean actor, is returning to London to-day after his triumphant tour of South Africa. In his new production, in three scenes, Cruel Coppinger, which is now complete, Mr. Roberts plays no fewer than twenty distinct characters.

Miss Gipsy Woolf has returned to good old London after a Continental tour with her musical scena, The Mermaids of Margate, which has scored a most gratifying success, which was repeated when she opened at the Shepherd's Bush Empire on Monday.

"Invasion; or, Wake Up England," is in active rehearsal, and will be produced on Monday, March 29, at the Canterbury. Mr. John L. Shine has secured an excellent company for his latest piece, and promises a production that will "wake up" England literally. We wish him every success.

Miss Topsy Sinden finished her engagement at the Prince's, Bristol, on Saturday amid a positive shower of flowers. The "Bristolians" gave her a flattering send-off, with bouquets, baskets, and sprays of flowers, a floral harp and an anchor, each as high as herself, and a huge frame of white flowers with "Topsy" in red right across. The harp was yellow with violet strings, and the anchor white with a crimson rope of flowers round it.

The popular lady could not lift the harp or anchor herself, so Mr. Bransby Williams assisted her. While she was giving another encore he pretended to play the harp, and the audience simply cheered. Miss Sinden took all the flowers to the Children's Hospital on the Sunday morning, and the kiddies were delighted. She is now taking a short rest.

The usual monthly meeting of the Music Hall Sick Fund was held on Wednesday at the Crown Hotel, Charing Cross-road, when there were present:—Messrs. W. Brisco (in the chair), Pat Carey, T. Carney, J. B. Brydge, and R. T. Baines, secretary. The nomination of a new member was approved, and after the transaction of other business of a formal character, the meeting closed with a vote of thanks to the chairman.

Mr. Ivan Berlyn next week presents at the Canterbury Life and Love, an Anglo-Russian episode that was originally produced last year at the Palace, Stoke Newington. Amongst other things, the playlet deals with inter-marriage with aliens. Mr. Berlyn as Karl Veronski will be supported by Messrs. Cecil Clayton, Howard Brenan, H. Strathmore, and Misses Helen Child and Adah Barton.

The holding capacity of Stanley Hall, Junction-road, Kentish Town, N., it is expected, will be taxed to the utmost on Tuesday evening next, when Little Thomas, the veteran corner man of the Mohawk and Moore and Burgess Minstrels, celebrates the anniversaries of his seventieth birthday and his golden wedding by a grand Bohemian concert. Many of his old confrères in the celebrated troupe will support him.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Finden produced a new sketch from the pen of E. C. Matthews, entitled A Tale of Geraniums, at the Granville, Walham Green, on Monday. Smartly played by these popular people, it was well received at each performance. It is full of comedy lines, and has the distinct advantage of being comfortably played in ten minutes, which in these days of hurricane programmes is a factor to be considered.

A member of Zeynard's Liliputians, Arthur Huhle, a German, aged twenty, who stands but about 2½ft. in height, met with a sad accident on Friday, the 5th inst., while rehearsing at the Leeds Empire. While riding a bare-backed pony he fell to the ground, and the animal, lashing out with its hind legs, kicked him and broke his leg in two places. He is now lying at the Leeds Infirmary.

As a memento of her late husband, Mrs. Frank Heath has presented Mr. Pat Carey, who succeeded Mr. Heath as hon. treasurer of the Music Hall Sick Fund, with a valuable walking-stick. The handle is of horn, with a silver mount, and the stick was presented to Mr. Heath by the Two Macs in 1887. Mrs. Heath has also made a presentation to Mr. R. T. Baines, secretary of the Fund, of a handsome walking-stick with a solid silver handle, being the design of a fox's head, which belonged to her late husband.

Mr. Benj. Woodger, secretary of the Music Hall Home, desires to thank Messrs. H. and M. Rayne, Waterloo-road, for cheque received of £5; Captain Fred Slingsby, Manchester, 15s. 6d.; Police Matinée, Hippodrome, Brighton, £2 10s.; Douglas Stuart, London, 5s. 3d.; Mrs. O'Brien, Rule's, Malden-lane, £1 1s. 10d.; Harry Slingsby, Empire Theatre, Hull, 12s. 3d.; and Frank Weston, Empire Palace Co., Wolverhampton, 12s. 6d. The next committee meeting will be held at the Empire, Camberwell, on Thursday next at 12 noon.

The latest addition to the ranks of the Terriers is Mr. William Hearne (of Cummin and Seaham), the initiation ceremony having been performed last Sunday by Terrier G. P. R. Burgess, P.W.T. A most enjoyable concert followed, the success of which was contributed to by the following artists:—Misses Florence Raynor, Nellie Denver, Vi Kohler, Master Jack Marks, Mr. Leslie Buxton, and Terriers J. Chas. Moore, E. D'Almaine, Bert Marsden, Barney Hyams, W. L. Murray, Tom Packer, Charles Stevens, and Charles Cornish.

On behalf of the Committee of the Music Hall Ladies' Guild, 61, New Oxford-street, W.C., Miss Melinda May (secretary) begs most gratefully to thank Mr. Harry Lauder for his generous gift of a guinea (through Mrs. Bradgate); Miss Maude Mortimer, for kindly collecting 10s.; Miss Amy Elvira (collecting), 3s.; Mrs. Ginnett, 10s. (through Miss Albert); Mme. Haydee (collecting), 5s.; Miss Louie Davis (collecting), 5s.; Mr. Paul Martinette, helping to conduct the band at the Rats' ball, 15s.; Miss Williams, parcel of clothing (through Miss Albert); the V.A.B.F. for helping us to bury the baby of one of our pensioners; Miss Lottie Albert, for letter that allows Miss Lington to remain at the National Sanatorium, Bournemouth, for another two months by the hon. physician's orders. Will her friends please note that any further contributions will be gratefully received if posted direct to the Guild?

The Press Association says Mr. Mark Melford, the well-known music hall artist, who was reported some weeks ago to be missing, has been found by his friends to be at Nottingham.

All true and loyal Irishmen, and Irishwomen too, should rally at the Coliseum on Wednesday next (St. Patrick's Day), when the festival is to be celebrated by the singing of ballads and the playing of national airs. Miss Evie Greene, Mr. Seymour Hicks, Mr. Leo Stormont, and others will contribute. St. Patrick's Schools are sending a draft of 300 little scholars to the matinée.

Mr. Eric Williams is repeating his recital in aid of the Veterans' Relief Fund, of which His Majesty the King is patron, at the Crystal Palace on Saturday afternoon, March 27.

On this occasion Mr. Eric Williams will present an entirely new and original patriotic sketch expressly written for him by Mr. H. Chance-Newton entitled An Old Warrior's Warning, in which he will sustain the principal character. A novel and interesting feature of the demonstration will be the attendance of about a thousand Baden Powell Scouts, under the command of Capt. J. Boyes.

Mr. H. Saxe Wyndham, the secretary of the Guildhall School of Music, who has had a good deal of experience with the Crystal Palace in connection with various musical features, suggests that there should be a Crystal Palace pageant for the coming summer. When the warm weather returns he has no doubt the pageant spirit will revive, and if the Palace authorities would take up the pageant idea he is sure it would be a striking success.

Bernard Mervyn and Co. are reviving their dramatic sketch 'Twixt Dusk and Dawn, and are giving a capital representation of this excellent production at the Bedford, where it is meeting with the greatest success. Mr. Mervyn gives a powerful portrayal of the Baron Murtoni, and Miss Doyle as the Countess Delia plays with great dramatic force. The sketch is handsomely staged.

Mr. Frank Stanmore's latest musical comedy production, The Gay Deceivers, which has made a hit at the Canterbury, includes a chorus of considerable personal attractions, and among the principals are Miss Maisie Ellinger, Mr. Stanmore, Mr. Douglas Phillips, Miss Pauline Primm, and Mr. Vincent Erne, who recently scored such a success at the Adelphi in Mr. Dan Rolyat's part. The entire production has been rehearsed and stage-managed by Mr. H. Buckstone Clair, and will be seen at the Holborn Empire on Monday.

At the invitation of the directors (Messrs. H. Boyd and Fred Higham), the children (some 900 in number) of the members of the Old Town Winkle Club were entertained at the Hastings Hippodrome on the 6th. The entertainment was excellent. Besides the artists engaged extra turns were given by Master Vernon Stanborough, a clever little comedian, Messrs. Stanborough, Hugh, and company, in a funny sketch, also Manager Walter Norman, who gave a character song entitled "Wicked Mary." Mr. H. Boyd, on behalf of the directors, responded in a very neat speech to Mr. J. Webb's vote of thanks.

Mr. Gus Elen expresses his opinion on the future of the Crystal Palace as follows:—"The Crystal Palace would still do well if it had some attractions out of the beaten track to offer, such as: Flights (daily) in the aeroplane; battle scenes, performed by cleverly-trained boys (in the open)—Lucknow, Waterloo, &c.; balloon ascents (daily); real fishing, shooting, racing, boxing, skating contests (for prizes); together with cheap and good luncheons, teas, &c. Nothing but the best of everything should be engaged, and the Crystal Palace might then become another Coney Island at night."

Miss Pollie Emery and Mr. J. H. Clyndes, supported by a strong company, will appear at the Oxford on Monday for twelve nights in Augustus M. Moore's sketch The Price of a Girl, recently produced in the suburbs.

Since Mr. Neil Kenyon produced The Stationmaster o' Dunrobin at Manchester three weeks ago, he has been inundated with inquiries for time from managers and agents all over the country. His re-appearance in London shortly will see him in his newest of the kailyard cameos. The Stationmaster is to be followed by the third of the series, Ye Landlord of Ye Auld Dunrobin Arms, by W. Buchanan Taylor, who also wrote The Stationmaster. He has also in preparation a fourth study, The Knife-grinder o' Dunrobin, the character in this being a quaint centenarian, whose knowledge of "steely humanity" is as extensive as it is profound.

Mr. Kenyon, as is pretty well known in the profession, is a wonderful "study." When he first took the "Barrow" song to the Ardwick Empire, Manchester, the author of it came to his room one evening and suggested some new patter, remarking that it could be studied during the week-end, and introduced on the following Monday. "Would you like to hear it to-night?" asked Mr. Kenyon. "Rather," replied the writer; "but, of course——" "Then don't talk or move while I'm making up," said Mr. Kenyon. When he went on to the stage—less than an hour later—the new patter, consisting of some 300 words, was spoken word perfect.

It is told of Mr. Neil Kenyon that, when stage-managing a piece called Honour Thy Father for Mr. T. Morton Powell, he found himself in a serious predicament owing to the sudden indisposition of the juvenile lead. As the curtain went up no one had been found to fill the part. The situation had become desperate, when Mr. Kenyon volunteered, though he had never seen the part in script. From hearing the part spoken, however, he had retained a perfect mental impression of it, and he went through the piece from start to finish without making a solitary mistake.

A few years since, when engaged by Mr. Robert Courtneidge to play Widow Twankey in Aladdin at the Theatre Royal, Newcastle, Mr. Kenyon surprised everybody by turning up at the first rehearsal without the book. Asked what he had done with it, he replied that he didn't need it. Mr. Courtneidge was somewhat incredulous at first, particularly as Mr. Kenyon was finding great difficulty in mastering a quite simple song. But events proved that when he said he did not need the book he was not exaggerating his powers. He admits he is not a singer. This gift of committing parts to memory is inherited from both his father and grandfather. The latter once recited the whole of the New Testament from memory.

At the Empire, Newcastle-on-Tyne, on Thursday, a charity matinée was given in aid of the sufferers by the West Stanley colliery disaster. The matinée, under the distinguished patronage of the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor, the Sheriff, &c. proved a most decided success. A splendid programme was presented, and artists from the Tyne, Royal, Empire, Pavilion, and Palace theatres contributed. These included such well-known names as Miss Ada Reeve, Miss Fanny Fields, Miss Alice Pierce, Miss Violet Lloyd, Harry Tate, Louis Bradfield, Malcolm Scott, and a host of other prominent artists.

Mr. Douglas Stuart, secretary of the M.H.A.R.A., has received the honour of an invitation from the chairman (Mr. A. H. Hoyle, of the South Western Railway) to be present at the fifth annual dinner of the Railway Passenger Canvassers to be held at the Criterion to-day.

The Executive Committee of the Music Hall Artists' Railway Association has been compelled to expel two tronpes and suspend another from the benefits of the Association owing to serious misconduct against the railway companies, who placed the matter in the hands of the committee instead of, as they could have done, acting themselves in the matter. Performers who are guilty of acts that are likely to jeopardise the friendly relations with the railway companies seem to entirely forget that they are not only lowering the status of their profession, but are endangering a generous and valuable concession.

At the 598th meeting of the M.H.A.R.A. held on Wednesday Lieut. Albini was in the chair, and Wm. Welsh, Ben Obo, Jim Obo, W. H. Atlas, Ryder Slone, J. M. Northern, T. C. Callaghan, Harry Blake, and F. W. Millis were also present. The weekly statement showed an increase of fifty members, and cash receipts of £54 10s. 6d.

The branch offices of the Music Hall Artists' Railway Association in Manchester have now been open for just twelve months, and Mr. Fred Slingsby the energetic and excellent agent for the M.H.A.R.A. in that town, reports:—Number of artists registered, 8,141; artists on vouchers, 6,872; artists who did not obtain concession, 1,269; artists' vouchers, Dublin and Cork, 30; letters and postcards received from members, 1,016; telegrams, 76; money received for new members and renewals, £106 8s.

The Herne Bay Urban District Council invite tenders for open-air entertainments during the coming season. Copies of the conditions to be observed and forms may be obtained from Mr. Joseph Jubb, Clerk to the Council, to whom tenders should be delivered not later than March 24, at the Town Hall, Herne Bay.

The Corporation of Swansea invite tenders from persons desiring to rent that portion of the Swansea sands lying between the Slipway at St. Helens and the Vivian's Stream. Further particulars may be obtained from Mr. Marcus Hoskins, F.S.I., Borough Estate Agent, Coleridge House, Swansea. Sealed tenders are to be sent to John Thomas, Town Clerk, Guildhall, Swansea.

Miss Nance Elder is experiencing most agreeable proofs of her popularity and genuine success on tour, her value in the scheme of amusement having been recognised by several managers giving her a more important position on their programmes. At one house she held the stage for twelve minutes.

The charitable work conducted by "Uncle John's" many nephews and nieces of the Birmingham Weekly Post Busy Bee Society received very substantial and encouraging support on Saturday last from a matinée entertainment given in aid of the fund at the Grand Theatre, by the kind permission of Moss Empires, Ltd. Mr. E. Foster, the manager of the popular house of entertainment, generously undertook the whole management, and the house was literally packed from floor to roof.

With George Robey to head the bill, with Miss Sybil Arundale, of the Theatre Royal pantomime, and such artists from that theatre and the Prince of Wales' pantomime as the Stockham Grecian Ladies' Orchestra, Austin Boyd and Trixie Gilfain, La Danseuse, and many others, it will be seen there was no lack of variety and quality in the entertainment.

During the proceedings Mr. Foster announced from the stage that, after meeting a few trifling expenses, he believed there would be about £90 to hand over to the Uncle John Fund. Mr. C. A. Cornish, the editor of the Weekly Post, on behalf of his juvenile readers, congratulated Mr. Foster upon the brilliant success which had attended the generous whole-hearted effort made in the cause of charity.

Dr. Walford Bodie has been creating quite a furore this week at the New Cross Empire, where he has been playing twice nightly to packed houses. He has been duplicating the feats of Charles Quill, of New York, which were so graphically described in the Daily Telegraph. Dr. Bodie, by allowing himself to be strapped nightly in the electric death-chair, similar to the one used in Sing Sing Prison, New York, has demonstrated in his own person that electricity does not always kill. Dr. Bodie applied a piece of carbon to his mouth, held between his teeth, and supplied a perfect arc light. His marvellous cures of the paralysed still astound his audiences nightly. He has now fully recovered from his accident, and is as daring as ever.

Among Mrs. E. Hunt's ladies' orchestras are the Highlanders, under the management of G. E. Hunt, who are now in the third year of Continental tour without a break. They include eight charming young ladies and one to two gentlemen. Owing to the heavy tax now on orchestras in Sweden, Mrs. Hunt feels disinclined to sign further contracts there at present, and could accept immediate good offers in Britain from Easter till end of September or October.

Mr. Randolph King produced a new act on Monday evening at the Hippodrome, Eastbourne. An elaborate scene represents the workshop of an old alchemist pursuing his researches in order to discover the elixir of life. Mr. King, by rapid changes, impersonates five different characters—a professor, his workman, his son, a detective, and young ventriloquist—in a distinct and interesting manner. He also uses his ventriloquial powers to materially assist in the plot of his little drama Mystery No. 1, as well as in special work with the figures. On Monday, in response to hearty recalls, he was compelled to make a speech, in which he thanked his audience for the manner in which they had received his newest efforts.

A smoking concert in aid of St. Saviour's Hospital for Ladies of Limited Means in Osnaburgh-street, was given at the International Hall of the Café Monico on Thursday evening. Mr. Herbert Johnston occupied the chair, Mr. E. H. Leversage was the vice-chairman, and Mr. Fred Ginnett, Miss Ettie Albert, Miss Melinda May, Miss Belle Elmore, and Miss Viola Thompson were active in the programme department. Amongst those who contributed to a varied programme were Miss Lottie Albert, who was warmly received; Master Adolphus Rochester, solo pianist; Messrs. Claude Stuart and Guy Stavordale, in a banjo duet; Miss Winifred Bedward, with a pleasing song; Mr. Charles Cornish, with a quaint Nigger ditty; Mr. Ernest Delmaine, with a well-rendered ballad; Mr. Edwin Fels and Signor Abata, with a mandoline duet; Miss Dolly Castles, with a "charming" selection; Miss Essie Cregen, the "Welsh nightingale," who warbled well; Miss Gladys Nelson, a clever juvenile, who won an enthusiastic encore by her mimicry of well-known music hall artists; Mr. Eric Snowden, with some clever impersonations of characters from Dickens's works; and many others. Miss Florence Melville and Miss Kathleen Lozer were the accompanists.

SONGS, WRITERS, AND SINGERS

NOTWITHSTANDING a bad cold, Mr. Dan Crawley has at the Euston been evoking roars of laughter with Messrs. Francis and Day's "We've all been doing a bit" and his "Mother-in-law" number. Both are from the practised pen of T. W. Connor.

A SONG that is rapidly gaining in popularity, and which is published by Messrs. Francis and Day, is "Mandy Lane," written and composed by William J. McKenna.

THE printers have been kept exceptionally busy in supplying Messrs. Francis and Day's orchestral department with band parts of Archibald Joyce's "Vision of Salome" waltz, of "Rainbow" intermezzo, by Paul Wenrich (founded on the popular song so charmingly sung by Miss Madge Temple), and also of a beautiful new intermezzo by Herbert E. Haines, entitled "Cinderella"; and yesterday (Friday) witnessed the dispatch by post of the sets of orchestrations of the same to nearly every musical-director throughout these islands. Any chefs d'orchestre who may have been overlooked are invited to communicate with Mr. Leonard Bellamy, manager of the firm's orchestral department.

TO-DAY (Saturday) at their private ground at Golder's Green, the Arpeggio Football Club (Messrs. Francis and Day) are matched against a club organised by Messrs. Scott, a business neighbour in the wholesale basket line. The Arpeggio's team is composed as follows:—William Francis (captain), W. Kirby, T. Templar, E. Morley, J. Bewell, F. Abbott, E. Briebach, F. Osborne, W. Ward, C. Lucas and R. Thornton with H. Simpson and John Abbott as first reserves.

FRANCES HANLON has sung "Are you sincere?" with great success for the last three months at such towns as Belfast, Dublin, Hull, Birkenhead, &c.

MISS MINNIE MACK, who is this week at the Palace, Hull, has secured a fine chorus song, entitled "Don't forget the Marble Arch," by E. W. Rogers. Mr. Gus Harris, who was the instigator of the number, has also the right to sing the ditty.

MR. TOM WICK is the author of the new song, entitled "The agitator," sung by Mr. Ernest Shand. He also wrote that fine comedian's two last big successes, "The last pub" and "The bachelors."

THE American House of Representatives has passed a bill amending the present copyright law under which it has been competent for anyone to filch a copyright musical work and adapt it to the piano-player or the talking machine without let or hindrance. Now all that is changed, and a royalty must be paid to the composer or published for any work so adapted for mechanical reproduction.

MR. FRANK H. CRIMP, now playing the Bandmaster in Miss Hook of Holland, is also a successful song writer. Two numbers from his pen, "A passing cloud" and "While I serve the King," have become popular, and he has just written another stirring song on the topic of the moment, entitled "The Territorial Boys," which is being sung by Miss Dorma Morgan, who is making an enormous success with it.

A SUMMER book containing fifty assorted comic songs has just been issued by the Von Tilzer Co., comprising the latest successes of Sam Mayo, Harry Ford, Wilkie Bard, Harry Champion, Bernard Russell, George Formby, Fred Earle, T. E. Dunville, Whit Cunliffe, Arthur Lennard, and others. The publishers will send a copy to any artist enclosing programme and one shilling, which covers postage. To pierrots requiring a large répertoire for the coming season the book should be invaluable.

THE Von Tilzer Co. have just accepted for publication a Territorial song written and composed by Lawrence Barclay entitled "Territorials" ("Your country's proud of you"), which Mr. Hal Forde is singing with great success. The same publishers have in press Mr. Bernard Russell's successful song, "Hold out your hand," written by Worton David and composed by R. L. Nevett.

FRANK HARWOOD has found a winner in his new song "Put me a girl inside," with which he scored heavily both at the Canterbury and Brixton last week. This song is one of Von Tilzer's Sixpenny "Pops."

So great has been the demand for permission to sing the National Publishing Co.'s song "When the leaves are tinged with gold" that arrangements have been made with J. F. Lambe and Fred Elton—the author and composer—to make it a "free" song. Applications for singing permits should be made to the firm in writing.

HETTY KING'S PRESENTATION.

Boy Blue has had a wonderfully successful run at the Prince of Wales' Theatre, Birmingham, but on no evening has the performance been more successful than last Tuesday night, when it was set apart for the benefit of Boy Blue himself, otherwise Miss Hetty King. Naturally Miss Hetty King came in for enthusiastic plaudits on every appearance. She was at her best, which is saying a good deal, and in nothing was she more successful than in the rendering of her famous sailor ditty "I am going away," while "Hang out the front door key" was trebly encored.

Apart from the members of the company, entertainment was provided by the Bros. Griffiths, from the Grand Theatre; Miss Harriett Vernon, from the Gaiety; Lupino Lane and Wee Wallace Lupino, from the Theatre Royal pantomime; and the Molasses, from the Alexandra Theatre. A remarkable success, too, was achieved by little Mona Cutler, the pupil of Miss Rose Tyrrell (ballet mistress), whose dancing displayed wonderful ability and reflected great credit upon the teacher. As a matter of fact, it was little Miss Cutler's first appearance on the stage. A great deal of amusement was caused by Jay Laurier's burlesque "impersonations" of famous people. This fresh turn was as novel as it was entertaining, while Mr. G. H. Elliott's coon song "Idaho" appealed immensely to the audience.

During the evening Miss Hetty King was the recipient of a handsome case containing sets of cutlery and other most useful and valuable household articles. The presentation was made by Mr. Jay Laurier, who explained that the gift came from the boys and girls of the pantomime, and he had never had greater pleasure in making a presentation which was so thoroughly deserved. Miss King, who was much affected, warmly thanked the donors and said she regretted that the pantomime season was so nearly at an end—a season which to her had been one of the happiest she had ever spent. She also expressed heartfelt thanks to Mr. J. T. Graham for his kindness and the audiences for their consideration. Among the many presents the "Owl" fruit basket, presented by Mr. E. C. Parsons, evoked much admiration.

A REUTER cable despatch from Melbourne on Tuesday says that Hackenschmidt and Frank Gotch have accepted the terms offered by a Melbourne syndicate, and will wrestle for the world's championship during the Melbourne Cup week in November.

LONDON VARIETY THEATRES.

THE EMPIRE.

The joys of winter in Holland are reflected in the spectacle of that name which is one of the chief attractions of the current programme at the Empire. It is a vivacious crowd that careers round in the picturesque costumes of the land of dykes and dams, and the sparkle and gaiety of the scene become infectious. Of course the skaters are on rollers, and champion form is shown by one remarkable performer, whose evolutions are distinguished by grace and skill. One little fellow, who is extracted from a huge snowball, also shows fair promise of emulating the elder skater by the variety, rapidity, and spontaneity of his movements and figures. Of course there is the comic old couple, whose falls evoke laughter, and the whole thing forms an exhilarating interlude in the very excellent programme.

The latest addition to the scheme of amusement presented by the popular Mr. H. J. Hitchins is Mr. Morris Cronin, the expert Indian club manipulator, who is a favourite on either side of the "pond." Mr. Cronin when we first made his acquaintance was a single performer at another house in the near neighbourhood, and even at that time he was responsible for remarkable developments. He now brings with him a small company—known, by the way, as his "merry men"—and a fit-up that imparts an air of mystery to the show and also assists in the fun. Mysterious mechanical figures and electrical devices have their share in the laughter-raising, and the imperturbable coolness of Cronin himself as he does the most ingenious tricks with consummate ease and a complete command of poise and balance contrasts in the drollest manner possible with the continuous promenading of a couple of footmen, who run in and out with trays and catch, in seemingly the most promiscuous manner, clubs thrown at them by the chief personage in the show, every minute of which is interesting. It is wound up by a bewildering display with illuminated clubs on a darkened stage. Ingenious and clever to the last degree is Morris Cronin's entertainment.

A Blank Cheque still retains its place on the programme. In consequence of the engagement of Miss Evelyn D'Alroy by Mr. Lewis Waller, the part of Mrs. Mahoney is filled by Miss Hilda Anthony—and very well filled, too. Mr. Charles V. France is a vivacious and pathetic Mahoney. Sentimental singing is a feature of the bill. Miss Olga Tremelli is heard to advantage in an operatic air and in Tosti's favourite "Goodbye," and Signor Barbalonga gives forcible effect to the Toreador song from Carmen and to "Il Balen" from Il Trovatore. The latter sings dramatically, but his style leaves something to desire in the way of delicacy.

A Day in Paris still pursues its merry course, and in this connection we may record the rapid advance made by Mlle. Lydia Kyasht in public favour. There never was any question of her great ability as a dancer and mime; the difficulty with her was to follow the popular Adelina Genée. That she has justified her selection by the Empire directors is amply proved by her conspicuous success in her solos, especially in her Russian dances, which are full of dramatic significance. The Apache dance is encored nightly, and Mr. Fred Farren and Miss Beatrice Collier are the recipients of many compliments. Mme. Zanfretta is also pleasantly conspicuous. The final scene is a gorgeous feast of colour, and the whole is a very enjoyable spectacle with all the necessary Gallic gaiety imported into it. The Mozzettos and the Marnos are also in the list of artists.

THE COLISEUM.

Mr. Seymour Hicks came to the Coliseum on Monday, and brought with him Miss Zena Dare, who owes much of her success to natural charm, and not a little to the camera. The two presented in the most delightful way possible the comedietta Papa's Wife, which was originally produced at the Lyric on Jan. 26, 1895, the authors being Mr. F. C. Philips and Mr. Seymour Hicks, and the music from the pen of Miss Ellaline Terriss. The plot is very simple. Mr. Seymour Hicks represents a young man who mistakes his stepmother's daughter for that lady herself; and the slight complications arising are, of course, smoothed out by a prospect of matrimony, and, incidentally, at the Coliseum, with song and dance. There are eight pretty girls—élégantes every one of them—to give a background to a song daintily expressed by Miss Zena Dare, and then there is Mr. Seymour Hicks, who is never more gay or blithe than when he is himself, as he unquestionably is at the Coliseum. Our grandfathers used to talk a great deal about "Bravo, Hicks!" The phrase may still be preserved with a different meaning; for large audiences at St. Martin's-lane's sumptuous palace have been giving utterance to it in order to express their opinion of an actor of irresponsible gaiety, whose irrepressible spirits carry him shoulder high to success. Mr. Hicks is responsible for a cursory imitation of a popular music hall comedian. "Why are you hesitating?" asks Miss Dare. "I'm not hesitating; I'm Harry Tating." Then he gives some excellent miming, and the whole entertainment is just of that lively, joyous, and up-to-date nature that appeals to variety audiences. Of course there is a burlesque of the Apache dance at the Empire. The more serious work promised on behalf of Mr. Hicks was not forthcoming on Monday, and his Ebenezer Scrooge has yet to win favour on the variety stage.

Miss Evie Greene, who returns to Mr. Stoll's beautiful house after a short absence, sings with excellent taste, and also displays her comedy gifts in a recitation that may be entitled "But I daresn't." Les Fleury, the Parisian duo, are new to the Coliseum, and repeat the success they gained at the Palace in types that are to be found in la ville lumière. Their turn is particularly bright and interesting. Miss Lily Flexmore evokes enthusiasm by her remarkable dancing; and in Fred Barnes is to be found a true American humorist with plenty of funny songs and patter.

Miss Elise Craven, quite the smallest variety star in London at the present time, delights her audiences as "Queen" of the fairies, a pretty little sketch which we have already noticed; and Ethel Beach, Madelaine de Nocé, vocalist; Herman Melot, conjurer; and the Lumars are other attractions in the strong programme presented under the direction of Mr. Dundas Slater, the popular manager here.

THE METROPOLITAN.

The crowded state of the cheaper parts of the auditorium at the fine house in the Edgware-road at the first house on Monday proves that the boon of an early entertainment is much appreciated by the toilers of Paddington, who have been welcoming the one and only Marie Lloyd with enthusiastic acclaim during the week. The Met. is a favourite house with the queen of comediennes, and one can always rely on hearing her at her best when she is giving her comedy sketches there. The latest of her droll characters is the old maid, who avers that she "lives in hopes if she dies in despair." There is much cleverness in the dress and make-up, and the gross exaggeration and ugliness so often thought necessary are entirely absent. The muff, certainly, has had its day, and there is a decidedly second-hand look about the hat—with its immense bird surmounting it—the jacket and the dress; but there is no lack of gentility in the faded garments, and though pathos hovers very near, the sketch of spinsterhood is played in the key of comedy, with the result that uproarious laughter greets every amusing line and bit of patter. Marie reaches a higher plane of genuine comedy in this number than in her final, "I can't make my eyes be good," a pendant to "Wink the other eye," her great success of years ago. She is gowned prettily in pink.

An interesting turn is presented by the Welsh Miners, who very appropriately introduce a number that refers to the recent colliery disaster at West Stanley, Durham. Copies of this have been sold in the hall in aid of the fund being raised for the widows and children of the victims. The miners appear in their workaday clothes, carrying lamps, and the stage is set very appropriately. They are heard to advantage in Gounod's Soldiers' Chorus from Faust, and in some favourite glees. A capital entertainment is contributed by the Gems, a troupe consisting of two ladies and four gentlemen, one of the latter being the accompanist. They are particularly vivacious in their motor number, and display the essential quality of humour in the trio, "The housemaid and the cook." Their final item, entitled "Good-night," is harmoniously sung, and brings them much applause. Mr. Cyrus Dare is quite successful, too, in his mimicry of little children, but emphasises their precocity rather than their innocence. Especially is this the case in his concluding business, in which an imitation is given of a little girl nursing her dolly. Miss May Moore Duprez, the jolly Dutch girl, sings as blithely and dances as spiritedly as ever. Her patter, too, is very amusing, and she is wearing most unmistakably. Mr. Tom Dunlin, who has been appearing during the week in place of Mr. Harry Conlin, with more experience should do well, especially when he tones down his methods, and gets better songs. Baker and De Sales, who appear early in the evening, show versatility in their entertainment called "Much Ado About Nothing," which we may explain has nothing whatever to do with Shakespeare's comedy. Mr. George Collins, comedian, opens the programme, to which Miss Anita Ediss, in songs and dances, also contributes. A much-appreciated feature of the bill is Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope, which is both comical and topical in its moving pictures. We were sorry to hear of Mr. Jack Edgar's illness. During his absence the duties of management in front are ably and courteously undertaken by Mr. W. Leslie Gooch.

NEW CROSS EMPIRE.

Dr. Walford Bodie is here this week and, as usual, is drawing great business. Dr. Bodie's turn is novel and interesting, and evokes enthusiastic applause, especially when a child of four years, who has been placed on the stage with one leg quite useless, is, by electric treatment, enabled to walk away without assistance. Dr. Bodie also introduces an exact reproduction of the American death-chair and the Cage of Death. The Doctor invites seven men from the audience to ascend to the stage, and treats them to electric shocks. His movements are followed with attentive eyes, and the turn is warmly applauded.

Mr. Ernest Shand is a great favourite here, and nightly meets with most flattering receptions. He sings in his own quaint style his favourite number "The last pub." He is also heard to advantage in "In other lands," which is the medium for some very smart patter. The Martineks with their entertainment "the rag doll" make a hit, and are warmly applauded at the conclusion of their novel and clever turn. Miss Kate Traill with songs at the piano is paying a welcome return visit. Miss Traill is a charming singer and brilliant pianist, and her contributions are decidedly successful. Miss Belle Davis, assisted by her clever piccaninnies, appears with success in an entertainment entitled Southern Pastimes, consisting of song, dance, and acrobatic feats. Miss Jeannie Mackay—billed as the Lavender Girl—sings pleasingly of "When you have got your harvest home." Carl and Carr present a clever drawing-room interlude, in which one of them appears in female dress. They indulge in a droll burlesque love scene, and later, both in male dress, sing well and introduce some clever and original patter. Tom E. Hughes justifies his description on the programme—a comedian with a real sense of humour—by singing acceptably his well-written song entitled "Leicester Square." The Mayvilles (Harry and Elsie) are responsible for a novel and pleasing entertainment on a prettily-set miniature stage, their contributions including "In the twilight," "A Jewish love song," a Scotch song and dance, and another, entitled "The Mayvilles"; and the judiciously varied bill concludes with American Bioscope pictures, among which is a story entitled The Fisherman's Fiancée. The excellent orchestra, under the able direction of Mr. Forbes Russell, play the overture to Pique Dame, by Suppé. Mr. H. Percy Parry has now taken up the position of assistant acting-manager to his popular chief, Mr. Ernest Bridgen.

THE COUNTY, KINGSTON.

Once again the cosy little theatre on the banks of the Thames has changed the character of its bill of fare to meet the wishes of its numerous patrons, a return being made from drama, comedy, and so forth to a programme of varieties, which was so much appreciated by a large section of the community when the experiment was first made last year. Mr. Peter Davey, the managing-director, in making the change, wisely decided upon the two-houses-a-night plan, and this has been found to work satisfactorily to all concerned. The programme this week is a thoroughly up-to-date one, and on Monday night was received with unmistakable favour by crowded audiences.

Will Euston opens the bill with one of his clever delineations of coster characters, and he also introduces a ditty, "The Coster's Serenade," in which he shows superior vocal powers of the Tyrolean order. The gymnastic and acrobatic performances of the two young ladies known as the Lutinas are a favourite item, both showing rare skill and agility. Their Spanish dances are also much appreciated. Eugene and Willie, the musical acrobats, are received with open arms by those who witnessed their clever performance on the occasion of a former visit to Kingston, and the Sisters Morgan, duettists and dancers, also succeed in winning much favour. Mr. W. Permane's educated Siberian bears are remarkably docile, and are allowed to roam about the stage held only by a thin chain. The tricks they perform are an eye-opener to Kingston audiences, particularly those of the largest of the animals, who has been trained to counterfeit illness and to indicate in a loud basso-profundo voice that what he would like to cure him is "a drop o' rum." Bruin also rides on a horse's back and jumps through a paper-covered hoop.

Sylvene, the equilibrist, shows remarkable cleverness and strength on his hands, and finishes his performance by lifting a lady on a bicycle by his teeth whilst his body is inverted on the palms of his hands. He is assisted by Mlle. Florence. Not the least interesting feature of the programme are the tricks of Wishart, the well-known illusionist. His escape from a giant bottle securely padlocked, and which had been minutely examined by independent witnesses, was exceedingly clever, and when he subsequently escaped from the bottle and was found in a double box, locked and corded, the audience and witnesses on the stage were quite mystified. In addition to these interesting turns, there are also shown some excellent films by the Graphic Cinematograph Company.

THE ELLIOTT-SAVONAS AT THE HACKNEY EMPIRE.

These clever and well-known entertainers are at the top of the bill this week in their famous musical act. Their reappearance in London has special interest, because they are taking advantage of the circumstance to utilise for the first time new and very elaborate scenic effects. Mr. Charles Woods, the well-known scenic artist, who has painted the new setting, is to be congratulated on the very gorgeous scene which he has designed. The scene is a full palace set, very elaborate in its decorative scheme, and a brilliant lighting arrangement assists in making the whole as beautiful a stage picture as could be imagined, the semi-military costumes which the troupe wear being also very attractive. From the purely musical point of view, there can be no doubt but that their act is unique, each member of the troupe being so accomplished a musician. On the evening of our visit the selections performed included Mascagni's Intermezzo, a pot-pourri of popular airs, and concluded with the "William Tell" overture, in the latter items novel storm and lightning effects being introduced. So loud and sustained was the applause, that although the last turn on, they had to concede an encore. They can claim with some confidence that no similar act has so magnificent a staging, or secures such remarkable musical performances.

PERFORMERS' CHILDREN IN PANTOMIME.

Hereditary talent has been to the fore this week at Balham, where the local Assembly Rooms were devoted on Wednesday and Thursday to the performance of a pantomime by the children of artists whose names are famous in variety annals. The pantomime, the book and incidental music of which were by A. Le Clerq, was entitled

"RED RIDING HOOD."

Mortals.

Prince Eric .....Miss Cissie Le Clerq
Ruby .....Miss May Leno
Widow Horner .....Master Ernest Leno
Jimmie Green .....Master Arthur Le Clerq
Johnnie Stout .....Master Bert Leno
Squire Stoneybroke .....Master Syd. Jackson
Peter Simon .....Master Dick King
Tommy Smith .....Master Guy Parker
Little Red Riding Hood ..Miss Lillie Leonard

Immortals.

Fairy Dewdrop .....Miss Marjorie Bowyer
Demon .....Master Guy Parker
Wolf .....Master Dick King

Many of the elements of pantomime were found in the production, for which the scenic resources of the Assembly Rooms had been fully taxed. The sets successively shown represented the Village of Ware, where a demoniacal plot against the heroine was laid, and all the characters introduced; Widow Horner's Schoolroom, where fun of a familiar character was made; Blackberry Brake, where the traditional meeting between the Wolf and Red Riding Hood took place; Widow Horner's Cottage, where the Wolf met his doom; and the Palace, where all the characters reappear in costumes elegant or grotesque as the case demanded.

Excellent promise was shown by the youthful members of Leno and Le Clerq's company, who in many cases gave evidence of following closely in the footsteps of their talented parents, a remarkable feature of the performance being the finished manner in which the dancing and business was accomplished. An almost perfect principal boy was found in Miss Cissie Le Clerq, the daughter of the popular comedian, Geo. Le Clerq. Handsome, gay, and debonair, she acquitted herself in admirable style, speaking and singing as if to the manner born. Her song of "Sue" was rendered additionally attractive by a whistling chorus at the wings, and "I want you to see my girl," embellished by a neat dance, was loudly encored. Miss Le Clerq has evidently formed her style on the best models, and is full of resource; but she might be advised to guard against a tendency to staginess. Another revelation of ability was furnished by Miss Lillie Leonard, the daughter of Bob and Jennie Leonard, who played Red Riding Hood with grace, skill, and confidence. The little maiden has a sweet and penetrating voice, and rendered a difficult French ballad in cultivated style. Her comedy gifts were made apparent when she sang the song of a demure Quakeress who "never does such things," but indulges in incautious moments in a lively pas seul. Her dancing is of the excellence that might be expected from the child of such expert exponents of the art, and Mr. Leonard watched with pardonable pride from the auditorium the artistic efforts of his offspring.

The Leno Family was represented by three members, one of whom was Miss May Leno, who played principal girl with charm and freshness, and sang "Antonio" with much excellence. She shared also in the success of "A Tiny Seed of Love," sung in association with Miss Le Clerq. Two sons of the lamented comedian, Ernest and Bert Leno, played comedy parts, the former quaintly made up as the Widow and the latter contributing to the fun as Johnnie Stout. Much laughter was aroused by the efforts of Arthur Le Clerq, who clearly has a career as a comedian before him. His eccentricities as Jimmy Green were very droll, and his singing of "A. B. C." won a warm recall. Miss Marjorie Bowyer also gained distinction as a comely Fairy Dewdrop, and had an enthusiastic encore for her tuneful ballad rendered with much taste and refinement. Guy Parker and Dick King deserve praise for dramatic acting as the Demon and the Wolf respectively. The dresses were elegant and tasteful, that of the Prince, who wore in the last scene a pale blue satin suit, being quite a triumph. The only accompaniments were furnished by a pianoforte, at which Mr. Jack Fenn did loyal service.

Miss Lola Lee tops the bill at the Hippodrome, Lowestoft, this week. Her sensational Eastern dances have aroused the wildest enthusiasm nightly.

Great Scott, the ladder king, laments the sudden death of his father, who passed away on Sunday at his home in Walcot-square, Kennington. The sorrowing widow and family have been the recipients of much sympathy.

A petition has been presented to the Plymouth and East Stonehouse County Court by the United County Theatres (Limited) for the winding up of the Royal and Grand Theatres (Limited). The petition is directed to be heard before the Court sitting at the Western Law Courts, Plymouth, on Wednesday next.

During the final scene of the last performance of Aladdin at the Prince's Theatre, Bristol, on Saturday, the usual call was made for Mr. Chute, who duly appeared and bowed his acknowledgments. He was, however, present at considerable inconvenience, having but recently recovered from a severe indisposition. Mr. Chute was very warmly greeted, but his customary and much-looked-forward-to speech had to be made by a deputy, Mr. Bransby Williams, who stated that Mr. Chute much regretted that he did not feel equal to the effort of making a speech—in fact, he was present in opposition to his doctor's wishes; but he—Mr. Williams—was deputed by Mr. Chute to express his best thanks for the generous and well-sustained patronage which had made the pantomime a more than average success, and he wished to congratulate the members of the company on the hearty appreciation one and all had won from the Bristol public. Mr. Bransby Williams concluded his speech amid much applause. The floral display at the conclusion of the pantomime was very imposing, and, as usual, "Auld Lang Syne" was the finale.

A grand charity concert in aid of the Dundee Town Council and Citizens' Committee for Relief of Distress Fund was given last Sunday evening in the Palace Theatre, Dundee, kindly lent for the occasion by the United County Theatres, Ltd. There was a large audience in spite of the inclement weather. By permission of the Moody-Manners Opera Co., Ltd., Miss Kate Anderson, Miss Olive Westwood, Mr. Seth Hughes, and Mr. Lewys James appeared, and delighted the audience with their charming singing. Mr. Louis Karpe, manager of Her Majesty's Theatre, than whom there is no harder worker in the cause of charity, recited "The Ballad of Splendid Silence" and "Fra Giacomo" in impressive and telling fashion. The Palace orchestra, under the direction of Mr. George Mundell, played Beethoven's "Promethus" overture, an arrangement of Rachmaninoff's well-known Piano Prelude in C sharp minor, and Gwylim Crowe's "Io Triomphe" march very brightly. Mr. A. K. Maxwell provided admirable pianoforte accompaniments to the vocal part of the programme, and Mr. S. M'Intosh, manager of the Palace, made a courteous and attentive honorary manager.

"THE SAILOR'S LASS."

A Dramatic Sketch, in One Scene, Produced at Sadler's Wells, on Monday, March 8.

Hal Summers .....Mr. Herbert Pearson
Austen Harford .....Mr. Frank Vernon
Simon Sleeks .....Mr. Maurice Drew
Zachariah Lee .....Mr. Charles L. Ludlow
Nancy .....Miss Helena Walbran

Hal Summers, the sailor, has been so long away from England that his sweetheart, Nancy, has wondered what has become of him, for he has not even written. Still in her village home at Redcliffe she waits and hopes. Her old uncle, Zachariah Lee, a fisherman, who has brought her up from childhood, is now in financial difficulties, and it seems that his cottage must be sold up. The wealthy Austen Harford offers to pay off all charges and to make the aged fisherman comfortable for the rest of his life. But Harford stipulates that this generosity must be consequent upon his being permitted to lead the pretty Nancy to the altar. The girl, in order to be of assistance to her uncle, promises to marry Harford, and almost immediately after she has agreed to do this Hal Summers returns home. His long absence has been due to the fact that he was shipwrecked. And now it looks as if he is to be deprived of his fiancée. However, fortunately for our hero and heroine, an ex-convict, Simon Sleeks, finds his way to the village and denounces Harford as an accomplice in fraudulent transactions which got Sleeks five years' penal servitude. The ex-convict also furnishes information as to a will which proves Nancy's right to a fortune. The little piece is well acted by the members of the cast, Miss Helena Walbran giving an engaging portraiture as Nancy, Mr. Charles L. Ludlow furnishing a suitable character-study as the aged Zachariah Lee, and Messrs. Frank Vernon, Herbert Pearson, and Maurice Drew appearing to advantage in their individual rôles.

Messrs. Chapman and Hall, in a fortnight's time, will publish Mr. Bransby Williams' book, "An Actor's Story," which will contain thirty-two pages of illustrations.

For motoring without having an identification plate on the front of his car Phil Ray, the comedian, was ordered to pay the costs of the summons at Kingston on Thursday.

The advertisement referred to in the paragraph in our last week's issue descriptive of a hoax played on Miss Kitty Colyer appeared in a Lancashire paper, and not in the Bath Herald.

Miss Ellaline Terriss, accompanied by friends, made a visit of inspection to a number of her soup-kitchens in the West End on Thursday afternoon. Nearly 7,000 poor children are being fed at the ten centres.

"THE BANDIT'S BLUNDER."

On Monday, March 8, at the West London Theatre, Production of a New and Original Burlesque Sketch, Written by Ward Bailey.

Beppo Nicolini .....Mr. Harry Ewins
Dianella .....Mr. James Ewins
Timothy Edwin Crumpet
Mr. George Robertson
Matteo .....Miss Agnes Ewins
Bianca .....Miss Dorothy Ewins
Gendarme .....Mr. B. Crosby

The scene of this bustling little sketch is the exterior of the Silver Star Inn, amongst the mountains of Calabria, and during its short run of twenty minutes the fun is indeed fast and furious. After an extremely neat and tricky acrobatic dance by Matteo and Bianca, Beppo and Dianella make their entrance, having in custody poor Timothy Edwin Crumpet, whom they have seized, under the impression that he is a rich English lord, whose ransom they consider to be worth quite thirty thousand pounds. In spite of Timothy's indignant denials, they refuse to believe his assertion that he is only a humble whisky traveller for the well-known "Volcano" brand. However, the "fiery" nature of his samples, which he forces upon Beppo, in a particularly lavish and generous style, have such a drowsy effect on the brigand that Crumpet sees an easy way of seeking safety in flight, which is only frustrated by the entrance of a gendarme, who has come to arrest Beppo for past offences. A particularly interesting chase then ensues, through windows and doors and over the housetops, in which some very clever work is done by the Ewins family, all the members of which are such old popular Marylebone favourites. An important feature of this bright little sketch is the fact of the ladies of the troupe also taking the leaps, which they do in a most skilful and accomplished way. The West Londoners received this amusing item with every sign of encouragement and approval, and it should be sure of a hearty welcome everywhere.

Tariff reform as applied to the variety profession is not necessarily an unmixed blessing. Recently a law was passed in Stockholm enacting that all foreign performers appearing in Sweden should pay a tax on their salaries. Apart from the fact that this impost was not altogether flattering to the native talent, since a protective duty frequently implies inferior home produce, the new measure has proved itself a double-edged sword indeed. Directors and managers of variety halls, and notably of the ever-increasing kinematograph shows, which held some enlivening fillip between films, have been obliged to themselves pay this tax on the salaries of their foreign artists, owing to a determined stand made by the latter, and the budget, being a non-elastic, rigid quantity, the indigenous talent suffers pro rata.

GUILDHALL SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

On Thursday evening, Friday evening, and Saturday afternoon, March 4, 5, and 6, the operatic students of the Guildhall School of Music gave excellent performances of Hérold's opera, Le Pré aux Clercs, and Dr. Cummings deserves the thanks of the musical public for having in the past few years given revivals of works now seldom heard, such as Barnett's Mountain Sylph, Auber's Fra Diavolo, Hérold's Zampa, Gluck's Iphigenia in Tauris, and Hérold's opera Le Pré aux Clercs, which, although far from being a masterpiece, contains lively and tuneful music, and is in all respects well adapted to a students' performance. Ferdinand Hérold, who was born in 1791 at Paris, was the composer of numerous operas, all of which, with the exception of Zampa and Le Pré aux Clercs, are forgotten. The latter opera was originally produced at the Opéra Comique, Paris, in December, 1832, two months before the death of its composer, and has not been heard in London since the performance given in Italian at Covent Garden in June, 1880. The scene of the opera is laid in France during the reign of Henry III. Marguerite, Queen of Navarre, is kept in Paris by her brother, the King of France, as a hostage of peace. Isabelle, a beautiful young Countess of Béarnaise, is with her. Comminge, Colonel of the King's Light Horse, and a noted duellist, also a great favourite of the King, attracted by Isabelle's charms, aspires to her hand, and as in those days they managed these things in a very high-handed fashion, with little regard to the lady's feeling on the matter, the King grants his request to marry the beautiful countess. But Isabelle is already engaged to Mergy, a young Béarnaise gentleman, sent as Envoy by Henry of Navarre to arrange for his Queen's recall. The first act takes place at Nicette's Inn at Etampes, which is en fête for Nicette's marriage with Girot, proprietor of the Pré aux Clercs, a famous pleasure garden at Paris. Mergy arrives on his way to Paris, when Cantarelli, Superintendent of Fêtes at the King of France's Court, comes in and tells Mergy his errand to Paris is hopeless, and that Isabelle will soon be given in marriage to Comminge. The Queen Marguerite and Isabelle shortly after enter, and Isabelle is in despair when she hears the news. The second act opens in a room in the Palace of the Louvre, Paris. Marguerite and Isabelle seek Cantarelli's aid in a plot to defeat the King of France's proposal to marry Isabelle to Comminge, and Cantarelli tries to make him believe that Marguerite herself is in love with Mergy. At the masquerade ball Mergy appears, saying the King has sent for Isabelle and himself, and he intends to fly with her. In this scene Comminge is challenged to fight by Mergy, and they arrange the duel for the next day at the Pré aux Clercs. The scene of the last act is the Pré aux Clercs, Paris. The wedding of Girot and Nicette takes place, and Mergy and Isabelle are also married at the same time. Comminge arrives, is told of the plot, and is afterwards killed in his duel with Mergy. Isabelle and Mergy leave with a passport obtained from the King by Cantarelli. In the performance on Friday evening Miss Lilian Allen appeared as Marguerite with considerable success; while the music of Isabelle was cleverly sung by Miss Ethel Elmes, the young vocalist being particularly happy in the melodious and florid aria which occurs at the commencement of the second act. Miss Pansy Hooper made an attractive and vivacious Nicette; while the part of Mergy was ably sung and acted by Mr. Alfred Steed. Mr. Eldon Dacre made an excellent Cantarelli. The trio between the Queen, Isabelle, and Cantarelli went remarkably well. Mr. Arthur Gourlay can be heartily commended for the acting and singing in the small part of Girot, host of the Pré aux Clercs; and Mr. Carl True, Mr. Robert Fletcher, and Mr. Hatton-Sinclair were effective in the characters of Subaltern of the King's Light Horse, Chief Archer, and Officer of the Court of France. The costumes of the soldiers, archers, masquers, and the principal characters were picturesque and striking; while the scenery of Mr. W. T. Hemsley answered all demands. There were some pretty dances arranged by Mr. B. Soutten (stage-manager), and the small, but excellent, orchestra, was skilfully conducted by Mr. Richard H. Walthew. The costumes were kindly lent by the Royal Opera Syndicate, Covent Garden.

An interesting concert was given by the students on Wednesday evening, and two organ solos included in the programme, Mr. Kenneth Brown being very successful in the fine Prelude and Fugue in G major (Bach) and Miss Harriet Cartwright, A.G.S.M., F.R.C.O., giving a finished performance of Smart's Chorale with Variations. Miss Lilian Giles sang "O Divine Redeemer"; and four accomplished pupils of Mme. Fiammetta Waldahoff (Miss Hunt, Mrs. Hart, Miss Whitehead, mandolinists, and Miss Birch, mandola), with Miss Amy Parsons at the pianoforte, played "Pour toi" (Hucke) and a pretty gavotte by Morley entitled "Rose Leaves." Elgar's song "Like to the damask rose" was ably sung by Miss Daisy Bevis; while Mr. F. Coxall's excellent bass voice was heard in "She alone charmeth my sadness," from Gounod's Irene. A little more dramatic effect was perhaps required, but Mr. Coxall's voice will repay cultivation. Miss Edith Harnden, A.G.S.M., gave a cleverly-executed harp solo, "Prière" (Hasselmans), and had a special recall; and a welcome feature in the programme was the duet "Venezia" (Lucantoni) sung by Miss Frances Hall and Mr. Arthur Morse, pupils of Mr. Wallace Wells, who did their professor great credit, and such evidently was the opinion of the audience when they gave two hearty recalls. Miss Lilian Nicholson, heard in piano solos, "Sérénade" (Bredo Lasson) and Rubinstein's "Kamennoi-Ostrow," besides being a clever executant displayed considerable expression in her playing. "The Toreador Song" from Carmen was well sung by Mr. A. B. Steel; and Master Jack Francis in his violoncello solos "Wiegenlied" and Dunckler's "Tarantella" received warm applause. The concert concluded with the Waltz Song from German's Tom Jones, brightly sung by Miss Dorothy Davis. Miss Jenny Hyman was the accompanist.

Mr. Arthur Roberts has placed all his business in the hands of Mr. Stanley C. May, of Richard Warner's agency.

Kyoto, Japanese contortionist, was enjoying himself at Bridlington last week shooting and fishing, and was not at North Shields as stated by our correspondent.

The latest quotations for music hall shares are as follow:—Alhambra, 1½; Canterbury, ⅜; Electric Theatres, 21s. 6d.; Empire, 15s. paid, 1⅞; ditto, 10s. paid, 1⅜; London Pavilion Ord., 3⅜; ditto, Pref., 5; Metropolitan, ⅜; Moss Empire, 5½; ditto 5 per cent. Pref., 4½; Oxford, 6⅜; Palace, 19s. 6d.; Tivoli, 6½; Var. Cons. Theatres, 9-16.

The strong variety programme at the Lyceum, Stafford, is headed by Dinah Morris and company in the musical comedy, A Yankee Girl in Dahomey; Bert Wilson, a clever juggler; and Kitty Merton, a smart dancer. The Lynches, in illustrated songs, Lockhart's famous elephants, Captain Frank Taylor's marvellous baboons, and new pictures by the Empire Bioscope are other attractions.

Another well-selected combination of variety artists is engaged at the Hippodrome, Stalybridge, amongst them being Will Bowman, comedian and dancer; Mlle. Angeline, the female Cinquevalli; the Taffies, a Welsh comedy duo; Frances Hanlon, soubrette; Lily Turner, vocalist; Two Errolls, comedy acrobats; the Diacoffs, trick cyclists; Brady and Johnson company in a new sketch; and the New York Nippers.

RINKING GOSSIP.

FIVE new skating rinks are being built in Birmingham and district. All of them will be with open doors and in full swing before Easter. One will be owned and run by Rinking, Ltd., of Earl's Court, London.

THE cry is still they come! News of rinks building or about to be opened arrives almost by every post. At Peterborough, for instance, Fred Karno is greatly interested in the new rink adjacent to the Hippodrome. The Mumbles Pier management has laid down a new rink at the rear of the hotel. The roller-skating craze has reached Llanelly, and the Parish Hall now resounds with the roar of wheels. In about a week's time the Marathon Rink, with a skating area of 20,000ft., will be open. Blackburn, Bolton, and Dudley, too, are down badly with the "fever," and almost as these lines get into print will each possess an élite rink.

THE largest rink south of the Thames is to be found at Catford. It has a skating area of 10,500 sq. ft., and was opened on Boxing Day last. A speed club has just been formed, and among its members some of the most expert skaters in this country are to be found.

"YOU'VE got to tumble—whether you like it or not!" Thus one of the finest roller-skating teachers of to-day. The expert then went on to tell the writer: "You can't dodge the payment of the penalty, so minimise it. Don't struggle when you are about to fall and know it can't be avoided—just fall! Let all your muscles go slack, and go to the floor as readily as you can contrive. Get your balance first, and then walk—for roller-skating is just walking with the minimum of effort and a previously unimagined degree of speed and grace."

EVERY day this week Professor Monohan, the Irish roller-skating champion, has been giving exhibitions at the Cliftonville Rink, Belfast. His engagement has been most popular.

IN Dundee one young gentleman frequenter of the local rink at least has a grievance. There may be others. He writes: "I should like to call the attention of gentlemen skaters to the attitude taken up by certain young ladies . . . I was much surprised on asking a lady on Saturday to become my partner to receive the reply, 'Certainly not; I do not know you.' This opens up the problem: Must I bring my own partner, or must I skate alone?"

THE only rinking act to be found on the London variety stage is that at the Empire, Leicester-square.—The only roller figure-skating club in existence is to be found at Brighton.—The only place in which it is thought exorbitant for a charge of 6d. to be made for skaters and use of floor is at Norwich.—The only ladies' "two-step" competition on rollers that has yet been held took place in Dublin last week.

HARLEY DAVIDSON, the famous roller-skating champion of America, has had a professional career extending over twenty years. He has won some remarkable trophies, including thirty-one gold medals and a challenge cup. With this cup he likewise annexed 3,000 dollars and two more medals. Davidson's time for a mile on a level track is 2min. 37 3-5sec.

A PNEUMATIC-TYRED roller skate has been put upon the market.

CINDERELLAS, carnivals, championships, and contests of all kinds are in great demand throughout the country. At Ventnor a mile race for the Isle of Wight Championship Cup resulted in Mr. Bradfield, of Ryde, securing the honour in the creditable time of 4min. 52 1-5sec. Hockey and push-ball on skates "goes great" at Sunderland. They prefer fancy dress skating carnivals to anything else in Portsmouth, and in Dublin the forthcoming events strongly feature "contests for couples."

EVENING dress is insisted on at the Glasgow rink during Carnival. At the same time the management hints that "ladies may find it inconvenient to wear long trains." March 19 is the date for the next Cinderella.

BRADFORD follows Glasgow's lead in the evening dress idea. Just one deviation will be made from this rule—on March 25, when all skaters must appear in rustic costume if they would take part in the "barnyard" festival. The entire Waltz Dream company went rinking at the Manningham-lane Skateries last week. Leeds rinkers like masked carnivals.

MRS. BEN ISAACS, who won the first prize at a fancy-dress skating carnival held at Portsmouth, must have looked quite a formidable young lady when in costume. We are informed that "her dress represented 'Our Navy.' On her head she balanced a battleship, lit up with electric globes. Around the fringe of her white satin skirt were hand-painted battleships, cruisers, and submarines, whilst the bodice was ornamented with the epaulettes, &c., of a flag officer. The Board of Guardians acted as scrutineers, and Mrs. Ben Isaacs was awarded an upright piano, valued at 37 guineas, having received 331 votes."

RINKING, LTD., undoubtedly leads the way in opening new "skateries." No fewer than eight owned by this company will be opened during the next week. These are situate in Bath, Bristol, Cheetham, Coventry, Birmingham, Lincoln, Sheffield, and Reading. Rinking, Ltd., also control rinks at Leicester, Nottingham, Manchester, Pendleton, and Mountain Ash.

NEXT Friday Mr. A. E. Court, the popular manager at the Earl's Court Rinkeries, will take a well-deserved benefit. Tickets for the event will be one shilling, and should be secured without delay as many novelties will be in the programme, which lasts from 7 p.m. until midnight. The special events will be fancy and trick skating by J. Davidson; the Empress Cup for an open-to-all one mile race will be competed for; a one mile professional race between past and present champions; and pushball and obstacle races on skates will be included.

THE rinking fever, it seems, has reached Johannesburg. In a number of the Transvaal Critic just to hand a writer, poking fun at local rinkers, says: "I am bound to confess that many of the Jo'burg rinkists wear a very distressed and even agonised look when skimming the asphalted surface. But what matters so long as they are happy and perspiring! Ye gods! Rinking in 120deg. in the shade!"

THEY go in for originality as well as variety in Manxland. Last week Buxton's gave a fancy dress skating carnival. One gentleman came as a snowball, being wrapped cosily around in cotton wool. The antithesis of this was a young fellow, who was permitted to skate in a lady's bathing costume. An attractive young lady posed as a love-letter, "but," our correspondent adds, "seemed as sad as though she had just received a letter breaking off the match."

THE Snow Family of expert skaters, with their rinking act, are causing something of a sensation in every town visited, halls being packed nightly to see them.

CHAT WITH MISS GIPSY WOOLF.

Miss Gipsy Woolf, the talented daughter of Mr. Jack Woolf, of Wonderland, returned a few days ago from her Continental tour, which she seems to have found most enjoyable. "I have been away," she tells us, "seven months—nearly each month in a different country. I commenced the performances at Amsterdam at the Circus Carre, Mr. Van Haarleem's place, where I produced The Mermaid of Margate in German, and also sang some coon numbers. Our little piece, in which, of course, I was assisted by the troupe of girls known as the Six Sunbeams, proved greatly to the liking of the audiences, although I had had some fear as to the result of our presenting the scena in German. However, we are going back there next autumn."

From Amsterdam Miss Woolf and her little company proceeded to Berlin, where they appeared at the Apollo Theatre, doing exactly the same show as at the former place. Then they visited Prague, where there was trouble and fighting between the Austrian and the German students. "We had rehearsed our show in German," continued Miss Woolf, "and just about half an hour before we were going on the stage someone told me that it would be wiser not to speak in German; in fact, I was warned that there would be a riot if that language were spoken on the stage; so at the last moment I decided to perform The Mermaid of Margate in English, and it went very well. We remained in Prague for fifteen days. On the concluding night of our engagement there we went to the station after the show, travelled all night and all the next day, and arrived at half-past nine on the following morning at Lemberg in Poland, where we appeared in the evening with our English entertainment.

"We visited Buda Pesth, where we opened at a new theatre called the Parisiana. There we gave a number of coon songs, including "The pier parade" and "Carolina," and performed the cake-walk and other dances. The Buda Pesth theatre had a dancing in addition to its other licence, and this meant that dancing was permitted in the front of the house after the show. And in consequence of this dancing licence the theatre was not permitted to use a drop curtain, so that when an artist completed his or her act the stage was left in full view of the audience until the next comer appeared before the footlights. The performances started at ten o'clock and went on until half-past twelve, and after that a winter garden entertainment was held, which included singing and dancing. On the Saturday night a masked ball was given. On the homeward journey we were stopped at Berlin by the police, some message having been sent to them from Breslau; but after explanations as to who we were and the nature of our business were furnished they apologised and interfered no further with our movements.

"I ought to tell you that theatrical life in Germany is very different from what it is in this country. Attached to many of the theatres are restaurants, where the artists can have their meals pleasantly in each other's company. The theatres in Germany are infinitely more beautiful than those in England, both from the point of view of architecture and interior appointments. There is no such system as two shows a night, but, on the other hand, we had to perform twice on Sunday."

Miss Woolf takes with her a charming younger sister, Dorothy, who has appeared as second girl in pantomime at Edinburgh, Dundee, and Glasgow, and who is of considerable assistance in The Mermaid of Margate. Miss Woolf and her company have now entered on the Stoll tour.

TURNER'S Motor Manufacturing Co. write that for some time past they have had a completely equipped works for the manufacture of roller skates, and that they are the only British firm turning out at the present time improved ball-bearing skates. All others are American made.

MR. AUGUSTE VAN BIENE is contributing a very amusing article to next week's Birmingham Mercury on "How I Caught Rinking Fever." We are permitted to make a brief extract from a rough proof, which, briefly summarised, is to the effect that the famous 'cellist's niece, aged fifteen, caught the "fever" first. "She is a darling little chatterbox at all times," says her uncle; "but when she had learned skating, general conversation at home was simply impossible. It was skating, skating, skating, morning, noon, and night."

THEN Mr. Van Biene tells us how he good-humouredly bantered the young lady; but, like most maidens of fifteen, she resented keenly anything she idolised—if only for the time being—being made fun of. So one evening, grasping a niece's privilege of being almost impertinent to a loving uncle, the young lady hotly replied to her tormentor, "Anyhow, skating is quite beyond you!" Then she scornfully added: "You haven't even pluck enough to put one skate on!" That little word "one" gave Mr. Van Biene an idea to play a joke on his favourite niece.

He accordingly made a wager of a silk cravat to one dozen of No. 5½'s that he would go round the rink three times on one skate without falling. In the greatest excitement uncle and niece set out, and uncle won the wager. Mr. Van Biene concludes, "And I insisted on Amelie paying me, too, to cure her of being impudent. But the worst has to be told. I liked the exercise so much that I stayed on the rink hour after hour, and one night the time flew by so quickly and so pleasantly that I nearly missed my turn at the New Cross Empire."

INVENTIONS.

[The particulars furnished below of recent applications for patents are taken from the official records. Correspondence is invited with our readers on all matters relating to new ideas and inventions, with a view to affording them advice and assistance. Letters should be addressed to the Manager, Inventions Department, "The Era," 5, Tavistock-street, Strand, London.]

Inventors and others who have no business representative are invited to communicate with the Manager of the Inventions Dept. as above.

ABRIDGMENTS OF SPECIFICATIONS.

21,417.—Roundabouts. Beech, A. C., of Newcastle, Staffordshire.

Cars (f) are suspended from fixed crank-axles (d) attached to beams (c) supported by a rotating spindle (b). The wheel is rotated by the occupants of one car pulling upon a rope (g) on a crank (e) nearer the axle (b), and those in the other car pulling upon a rope (*g*1) on a crank (*e*1) farther from the axle (b).

21,648.—Railways for recreation. Riehl, H. E., of Brooklyn, New York, U.S.A.

A rotating car runs down an inclined sinuous track, ending in a helix, which passes through a tunnel. The car (Fig. 4) is pivoted at F3 to a trolley running on rails (R), and is provided with pins (F4), which engage with springs (J) at the side of the track, so as to rotate the car. Guards (L) serve to check the car in case it leaves the track. The track (Fig. 2) has (S) curves from C to C1, and then winds down through a tunnel (I) to a platform (E). The car is returned up an ascent (G) provided with a travelling-chain.

TO STAGE MACHINISTS AND ELECTRICIANS.—The Manager will be pleased to receive particulars of any new stage appliances or ideas for same for illustration in this column

ROLLER skating continues to be the craze at Belfast. In addition to the spacious rink at Cliftonville, which has been so phenomenally successful, another rink will shortly be opened at Exhibition Hall, Botanic Gardens. A staff of men are now engaged making the necessary alterations and laying down specially selected maple flooring. Mr. J. Macartney is the proprietor of this latest venture, which is situated in the centre of one of the most aristocratic suburbs of the northern capital.

NEIL KENYON'S LATEST "KAILYARD CAMEO."

"THE STATIONMASTER O' DUNROBIN."

Neil Kenyon produced the second of what he describes as his "Kailyard Cameos" at the Manchester Hippodrome, on Monday evening. It is called "The Stationmaster o' Dunrobin." By a curious coincidence he received a telegram, just as he was about to make his first appearance in the new study, asking him to appear at the opening of a new Dundee theatre early next month, and to meet the Duchess of Sutherland. The duchess is the owner of Dunrobin. "The Stationmaster" had a very successful send-off, and Mr. Kenyon conveyed very completely the quaint characteristics of the little out-of-the-world man who is first angry because a train has stopped at and passed through his station without his knowledge, and afterwards genially reminiscent about the years he has spent in his job. The setting and lighting of the scene is such as is seldom seen on the music-hall stage. "The Stationmaster" promises to rival "the postie" in point of popularity.—Manchester Daily Dispatch.

THE HIPPODROME.

Mr. Neil Kenyon, whom one may almost term the really Scottish comedian, is bringing his quaint old village of Dunrobin, and its folk still further into our ken; and this time there is a distinct suggestion of means of access to the place for admiring Southerners who may have a fancy to go and see things for themselves. For he plumps us right into Dunrobin railway station, with its lines, crossing, platform, signal and all. It is a wee bit disquieting to find that Dunrobin has a railway station. One had almost planted it in the midst of inaccessible hills, which no Scottish railway company could hope to penetrate and yet see a dividend But though Dunrobin has a railway station there is one fact that is reassuring; the stationmaster is a "character," quite worthy of Dunrobin. The solitary porter, too, is a "character"—in fact, he reads Shakespeare—with a brave Dunrobin accent. Between the two one is assured that the railway has not really done much damage to the place. Perhaps it is because trains are few. Missed the train, ha' ye? Ah, weel, the next 'll be o' Tuesday." Mr. Kenyon as stationmaster is almost as happy as he is as postman, but there is little doubt the railway has had some Southernising influence. In his duties, of course, he would be more liable than the postman would be to pick up ideas of humour less characteristically Dunrobinish. That trip to "Glasgy" did him no good, we think. We liked Dunrobin station as evening came. The setting of the sun, the lighting of the solitary signal's lamp, and then just the quietness of the hills made a "curtain" singularly impressive.—Manchester Guardian.

It would be difficult to do sufficient justice to the fine character creation of Kenyon's entitled "the Scottish postman." In some respects it is worthy of Barrie, but in essentials it is Kenyon all through, and apart from the pawky humour, which is the distinguishing feature of the delineation of what is doubtless a type of rural Scotland, there are introduced elements of pathos no less appellant and interesting. Then his stationmaster study of Dunrobin is a fine bit of work, and all the essentials of a capital study are present in the scena. It would seem as if Lauder having captured the United States, it had been left to Kenyon to exploit home territory. His pithy stories, quaint but quiet witticisms, and fine dressing of the part—to use a familiar phrase—all unite to make his business interesting, and the cordiality of his reception last evening was in every way deserved.—Belfast News Letter.

Both performances at the Hippodrome were patronised by exceptionally good houses last evening, and the items on the programme were of an unusually acceptable character. A leading place is taken by Neil Kenyon, who has delighted large audiences in this city again and again, and made hosts of friends. Needless to say he is as entertaining as ever in the rôle which he has made his own, and some of his latest successes are likely to rival old favourites. In "The Scottish Postman" and "The Dunrobin Stationmaster" he made a great hit last night. He is certain to be a big attraction during the week.—Northern Whig.

Some artists adopted a style of their own, and among these the foremost is undoubtedly Neil Kenyon. His idea of the Scotch comedian was original, and therefore successful, not that originality alone will bring one to the top of the bill, but when it is combined with real talent and intelligence the result is certain to be a sesame to the account books of music-hall owners and proprietors. In addition to his inimitable postman sketch, Neil Kenyon introduced something new in the form of a station scena, excellently staged and full of the details that one is inclined to look for. It is full of humour, of course, and concludes in the way that one is accustomed to expect in Neil Kenyon's work.—Irish News.

Kenyon is a Scotchman, but in no way does his "business" resemble that of Lauder. He strikes out on altogether original lines as the J. M. Barrie of the vaudeville stage, and just as the latter discovered Drumtochty, so Kenyon has revealed the hamlet Dunrobin—the little one-horse village in Scotland's rural wilds with its characters. A year ago he introduced us to the village postman, but now he adds to his gallery an even more delightful portraiture, that of the Dunrobin village stationmaster. It is a type true to life, the garrulous "always overworked" official whose duty is to see two trains in and out daily; and when the curtain goes down with the lighting of the signal lamps and the deserted railway platform, it goes down on the most artistic little idyll on the vaudeville stage to-day.—Nomad.

SLOT MACHINES AND GAMING.

INTERESTING CASES AT GLOUCESTER. NOMINAL PENALTY INFLICTED

At Gloucester Police Court on Friday, March 5, William S. Roberts, described as of 32, Barton-street, Gloucester, appeared at the City Petty Sessions, before Messrs. A. Slater, F. H. Bretherton, and E. Lea, to answer an adjourned summons taken out under the Gaming Acts, charging him with unlawfully keeping a room at 32, Barton-street for the purposes of unlawful gaming. The case had been adjourned from the previous week at the suggestion of the magistrates after the production of the machines in Court, in order that the police might carefully consider whether or not to proceed with the case.

Mr. A. Lionel Lane, solicitor, of Gloucester, appeared again for the defendant.

Inspector Dennis stated that on Feb. 16 he visited the rooms at 32, Barton-street occupied by the defendant, and found there a number of slot machines, including machines called the "Eureka" and "Looping the Loop."

He counted forty boys in the shop, and there were many more he did not count playing with the machines. In the case of the "Eureka" the player put a halfpenny into the slot and pulled a lever, which caused three balls to be delivered to him to play.

The game was then to get one of the balls into a cup at the top of the machine, when the player's own halfpenny was returned to him.

If the player was successful more than once with the three balls he still only received his own halfpenny back.

If the balls did not go into the cup at the top of the machine they might go into another cup, when the balls were returned to play again. In the alternative the balls were not returned.

In the case of "Looping the Loop" machine, the halfpenny was spun round by means of a lever, and might go into one of five slots. If it went into the centre one the halfpenny was lost; if into either of the two slots adjoining the centre the halfpenny was returned to the player; and if into the end slots (two) it was returned to the lever to play again. In the case of both machines the player might lose his halfpenny after having had his amusement, or if successful in playing he could go away with his own halfpenny, there being no other reward of any sort. He (the Inspector) saw some boys successful—that was, get their halfpenny back—and some lose.

He tried himself, and was successful and unsuccessful in turn.

The Deputy Chief Constable: Did you win more times than you lost?—No, sir.

By Mr. Slater: He only got his own halfpenny back in any case. He did not get any more.

Mr. Lane: He can get the ball returned again and again to be replayed?

Inspecor Dennis: That is so.

Witness repeated that all he could get beyond that was his own halfpenny back.

Mr. Lane: Mr. Roberts keeps his place open for amusement? He is a caterer for public amusement?—Yes, sir.

He has penny-in-slot phonographs, picture galleries, electric machines, and a host of others?—Yes, sir.

Mr. Lane then produced a slot machine known as the "Crack Shot," and explained the working of it, shewing that the principle was identical, and that if successful the player only got his own halfpenny back.

The Inspector admitted that he had no objection to that machine, as in his opinion it required a certain amount of skill. Otherwise the principle was the same.

Mr. Lane submitted that there was no case against his client for keeping a gaming house. He had slot machines of many kinds there for amusement purposes only, including machines for showing views, shooting machines, phonographs, machines of moving figures, and many more, including the "Crack Shot." Mr. Roberts had been all over the country with these machines, in many places where he had been visited by the police, and this was the first time that any "coin returned" machine had ever been alleged to be a gaming machine. It was well known that the cheque-returning machine, giving value in money or money's worth in excess of the original stake in case of success had been held to be illegal, but he contended that the machines which were the subject of this prosecution were based on entirely different principles and were lawful. He quoted and relied on the case of Jenks v. Turpin, and maintained that in order to convict the Bench must be satisfied that Mr. Roberts' premises were a public nuisance for which he could be indicted, and also that the games played there were harmful and demoralising, those being the two salient points laid down by Mr. Justice Hawkins in his judgment in the case quoted. There had, he said, been no evidence submitted by the prosecution to support either contention. Mr. Lane also quoted a decision of Mr. Bros at Clerkenwell Police Court in September, 1902, when it was held that the "Crack Shot" was a lawful game, and submitted that the present machines being based on exactly the same principle were also lawful.

The Bench retired, and after about ten minutes' consideration the Chairman said they felt bound to convict, but as the defendant had been put to a considerable expense they would make the penalty only a nominal one of 5s. and costs. As Mr. Lane knew, the full penalty was £500.

Mr. Lane: Quite so; we appreciate your consideration.

Shows Snowed Up at Dudley.

P. COLLINS'S colossal aggregation of fairground novelties has suffered the full severity of the recent inclement weather. The route would have taken them this week to Quarry Bank, Wales, but the downfall of snow was so great at the White Nobs fairground, Dudley, at the week-end that to get away was absolutely impossible. They will, however, be at Cradley Heath for this week-end.

One result of the big concerns being snowed up at Dudley was that only some few small concerns, stalls, houp-la frames, and minor novelties, were on the wakes ground at Quarry Bank. The absence of the big attractions and the weather combined made it extremely precarious for the showpeople.

Yet Another Show Snowed Up.

MESSRS. ANDERTON AND ROWLAND'S concern was snowed up for eight days on the roadside journeying from Chippenham to Shepton Mallet.

THE ROYAL CONCERT HALL, HASTINGS, is now run as the American Roller Skating Palace, as from March 2. A fine new flooring of rock maple has been laid, and the hall, draped in scarlet with blue and white reliefs, has a pretty effect. A military band plays three times daily under the direction of Mr. Moore.

THE Central Hall, Catford, was opened on Boxing Day last. It has recently been considerably enlarged, is now fully equipped with large refreshment buffet, cloak rooms, &c., its length being 185ft. by 60ft. wide. Mr. F. T. Studd holds his first carnival on the 19th inst.

THE season of rinking at Olympia ended on Saturday night. Over three-quarters of a million people have attended the rink during the season, and the following statistics speak for themselves:—Skaters each day, 7,000; spectators each day, 2,000; weekly average attendance, 54,000; gross receipts per week, £3,500; skates hired each day (pairs), 5,000; season ticket-holders (a day), 1,000.

THE SHOWMAN WORLD.

The Attack on Brecon Pleasure Fair.

It will be remembered that a most serious attack was made upon the Brecon pleasure fairs in the autumn of last year by a small section of the people of the town. For a number of years past the Brecon Corporation has recognised the growing importance of the pleasure fairs, and in order to encourage the best concerns to attend the fair has, on its own authority, extended the fair from a two-days to a five-days' fixture. The enemies of the fair, in addition to a strongly-worded petition against its continuance, threatened to seek an injunction to restrain the Corporation from carrying on the fair more than the old time-limit of two days.

In connection with this attack on the people's pleasure fair, certain baseless allegations were made with regard to the sanitary and health conditions of the show vans as a danger to public health. The Showmen's Guild immediately took up the challenge, and the Guild chaplain wrote a strongly-worded defence of the home life of travelling showpeople, and demonstrated once again (and for the one-thousandth time) that show vans were just as much under the control of the health authority as any other dwellings.

Interesting Correspondence with the Corporation.

A most courteous reply was received from the Town Clerk (Mr. Hyatt Williams), protesting that the Corporation did not identify itself with the crusade of the narrow-minded minority opposed to the fair, neither did it agree with the allegations as to the health conditions of the show vans. The Town Clerk also asked the Guild to co-operate with the Corporation in meeting the threat of the objectors to the fair by the counter-move of applying to the Home Secretary to extend the legal days of the fair from two to five. This, of course, the Guild executive readily promised to do. The matter was under consideration at King's Lynn when the organising chaplain consulted with Messrs. Henry and John Studt, the principal showmen attending the fair.

The extremely valuable information the Guild organiser then obtained has been since fully utilised, as the Guild Petition (which we give this week) fully shows.

The Guild Supports the Corporation.

Furnished with the necessary local information and the full strength of the Welsh showmen's case for the extension of the fair days, the Guild executive, as in duty bound, waited for the Brecon authorities to approach the Home Office. The action taken by the Corporation is indicated in the following letter:—

"Town Clerk's Office, Brecon,
"March 4, 1909.

"Dear Sir,—I attended at the House of Commons last Wednesday week, and presented to the Under-Secretary of State to the Home Department the petition from my Council asking for an extension of the days for the holding of the May and November fairs.

"If your Guild are going to do anything in this matter, I think it should be done now at once.—Yours truly, "G. Hyatt Williams,
"Town Clerk.

"Rev. T. Horne, care of The Era,
"5, Tavistock-street."

Immediately on the receipt of the above communication, the Guild chaplain addressed the following Petition in support of the Corporation's application to the Home Office:—

"March 5, 1909.

"To the Right Honourable H. J. Gladstone, Secretary of State for the Home Department.

Re BRECON PLEASURE FAIRS.

"Sir,—The Corporation of Brecon has asked this society to support their Petition, for the recognition by you of the five-days' term of the pleasure fairs which the Corporation has granted to the amusement caterers frequenting this fair.

"It has been a matter of great satisfaction to our Welsh members that the Corporation, during the past few years, has recognised the growing importance of the fair and the useful purpose it supplied in providing wholesome open-air amusements for the workers in a rapidly-increasing industrial district, and has extended the legal days of the fair to the more reasonable period of five days.

"In supporting the application of the Corporation, we wish to point out that the most modern shows are now of such a character, and require so large a working staff and so expensive an equipment, that the possibility of only two days' business would make it practically unprofitable for the better-class shows and roundabouts to attend the fair.

"We also wish to point out that in a centre like Brecon a two-days' duration of the fair does not allow the adjoining villages to take advantage of its occurrence.

"It is the principal aim of this society to uplift the business and enterprise of the fairground, and also to encourage and foster the better class of itinerant entertainments, in order to secure the betterment of the popular amusements of the people.

"We have reason to believe that the Petition of a minority of the inhabitants to compel the Corporation to adhere strictly to the old-time two-day limit of the fair has behind it the ulterior purpose of killing the fair, by cutting it down to such unprofitable proportions (under modern conditions) as shall gradually secure their purpose.

"We venture most respectfully to ask you to consider favourably in the interests of the workers who find so much acceptable relaxation at our pleasure fairs, by acceding to the wishes of the Corporation. To trust the Borough Council as voicing their known wishes of the inhabitant to decide the length of time that the pleasure fair should last.

"Signed on behalf of the executive committee of the Showmen's Guild of Great Britain—
"T. Horne,
"Chaplain and Organiser."

The following reply has been received from the Home Office:—

"Home Office.
"March 6, 1909.

"BRECON PLEASURE FAIRS.

"Sir,—I am directed by the Secretary of State for the Home Department to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 5th inst., and to say that the same shall receive due attention.—I am, Sir, your obedient Servant, "C. E. Troup.

"The Hon. Chaplain and Organiser Showmen's Guild."

It is extremely gratifying to the Guild executive to find itself in a position (and this, happily, is not now a rare event) of helping Corporations to improve the status of their fairs, and to assist in the betterment and uplifting of the pleasure fairs of the people.

The Fight for Mitcham Fair.

Immediately after the Mitcham parish meeting held on Nov. 13 last year, in order to protest against the giving of £400 towards the purchase of the Fair Right, the Guild executive thought it wise to again approach the Conservators, and to place certain proposals before them. Amongst other things suggested, the Guild definitely undertook to co-operate with the Conservators in obtaining the sanction of the Home Secretary for the removal of the fair from its old site to a more commodious position on Mitcham Common. The Three Kings Common site and other two sites on the Croydon road, and a little further away from the heart of the village, were suggested. The Guild undertook that, given the necessary guarantees as to the security of tenure, that it would provide the money for making the new fairground suitable for its annual purpose of holding the fair, and also suitable as a recreation ground for the people at all other times. Realising that the question of the purchase of the Fair Rights was still an open one, as evidenced by the adverse criticisms upon the transaction by both the Conservators at a recent meeting, and the ratepayers at the parish meeting, the Guild informed the Conservators that, as an alternative scheme, it was prepared to purchase the Fair Rights back again, and so clear away what seemed to be a growing difficulty.

The Answer of the Conservators.

"4, High-street, Croydon,
"March 4, 1909.

"MITCHAM FAIR.

"Dear Sir,—Your letter of Dec. 7, 1908, was laid before the Conservators at their meeting last night, and I was instructed to reply that they could not entertain your proposal.—Yours faithfully, "John M. Newnham,
"Clerk.

"Rev. T. Horne, the Showmen's Guild, care of The Era, 5, Tavistock-street, Strand, W.C."

The Discussion of the Guild Proposals.

The Mitcham Advertiser, in its report of the meeting of the Mitcham Common Conservators, gives an interesting account of the discussion which arose when the Guild proposals, as summarised above, were read by the Clerk, Mr. J. M. Newnham. The members of the Board present were Mr. H. Mallaby Deeley, J.P. (in the chair), Alderman N. Page, J. G. Allen, Councillor A. A. Johnston, and Messrs. J. T. Williams, Willcocks, Dale, A. Mizen, and A. E. Cubison.

When the Clerk had finished reading the letter from the Showmen's Guild, Alderman Allen observed, "We cannot accede to a request like that. We have no power." Mr. Willcocks said he hoped he was going to draw the badger, and to put an end to this question once and for all. It was well known that an overwhelming majority of the people of Mitcham wer in favour of the Fair, and none of those opposed to it could get a hearing at a public meeting on the subject. He instanced this by the parish meeting recently held. They had no right to ride roughshod over the inhabitants. He moved that no further steps be taken to abolish Mitcham Fair until a poll of the parish had been taken on the question "Are you in favour of the retention of Mitcham Fair?" Mr. Williams seconded.

The chairman pointed out that if the resolution was carried no good would come of it. They had purchased the franchise, but they were in no better position with regard to the Fair, either for or against, than Mr. Bailey was before he sold the rights. He was of opinion that the money spent was absolutely wasted. He also mentioned that the gentlemen who purchased the franchise as trustees for the Conservators had not handed over the rights yet.

Mr. Cubison said he would like to point out that they could not take a poll of the parish on the question.

The chairman said they could not go on in that position. They said they were owners of the franchise, and sometimes the trustees said they were the owners. If the trustees would not assign the rights to the Board they would have to apply to the High Court for a declaration of trust.

Mr. Mizen said he pointed out to the Clerk that some of the money was subscribed by private gentlemen on the understanding that the Conservators would do all in their power to abolish the Fair.

Mr. Willcocks' resolution was then put, and the voting was even, Messrs. Willcocks and Williams in favour and Messrs. Dale and Mizen against, the others present not voting. The resolution, therefore, fell through.

Mr. Willcocks then moved that the Clerk be instructed to write to the trustees of the franchise asking them if they were prepared to assign the rights to the Conservators. This was seconded and carried.

There was no other business before the meeting.

The Forward Move of the Question.

Despite the official answer of the Clerk to Mr. Horne's letter, there can be no doubt, from the discussion we have summarised above, that public opinion in favour of retaining the Fair has its champions on the Mitcham Board of Conservators. It is all to the good that the subject has become so important that it is discussed with reporters present, and that the views of the members of the Board, for and against, are chronicled for the people of Mitcham to see. We are within twelve months of the next election of the Parish Council, and the people of Mitcham will have an opportunity then (if a poll of the ratepayers be not taken in the meanwhile) to record their opinions at the ballot-box. We have no doubt that those members of the Council who have used their powers to over-ride the expressed will of the people with regard to the people's Fair will then discover that in this matter (as in all other matters of vital interest to their constituents) they are not the people's masters, but sent to the Parish Council to represent the people, and not to use their power, as trustees for the people, to further their own peculiar ideas and prejudices. We welcome the forward movement on the Board of Conservators, and we congratulate the chairman on his outspoken endeavour to bring the Board, over which he so ably presides, into a just and lawful position with regard to this extremely important question.

We await with interest the developments of the fight for Mitcham Fair. We, on our part, make no concealment that our object to-day is exactly the same as at the beginning of the dispute: we want to secure to the people of Mitcham for ever the last of the yet remaining charter fairs of suburban London, and so to improve that Fair that it may be a perpetual source of innocent amusement, not only to the people of Mitcham, but to the great mass of human life that is spreading out so rapidly that in a very few years Mitcham will be as much part and parcel of London as any of the other centres of life on the southern side of the Thames.

Guild subscription for 1909: J. Batty, 5s.

The London Committee of the Showmen's Guild.

An urgent call is being sent out by the Guild Executive this week to the members of the London Divisional Committee of the Showmen's Guild. The ex-officio members include Alf. Ball, T. E. Read, F. Turner, James Manders, Wm. Taylor, H. Thurston, and F. H. Pedgrift. The ordinary members are W. Biddall, George Beach, Wm. Beach, R. Clasper, S. Forrest, H. Forrest, F. Gray, J. Hastings, T. Knighton, G. Saunders, W. Le Neve, S. Mayne, C. Thurston, and W. Wilson. They are requested to meet the Organising Chaplain at The Era offices, 5, Tavistock-street, Strand, W.C., at half-past three o'clock in the afternoon of Wednesday next, March 17. Business of extreme importance with regard to Mitcham Fair, Bedford Fair, and proposals against vandwellers in the County of Surrey will be considered, and resolutions submitted upon these questions. See official advertisement in our columns this week.

News from the West.

W. C. and S. Hancock continue their successful season at Mutton Cove, Devonport. Mr. J. Brewer is at the Winter Gardens, Plymouth; John Jones is running a successful boxing and wrestling exhibition at Bristol; Misses Fanny and Agnes Jones have had a most successful engagement at the Palace, Bristol; Miss Sophie Jones has returned from a second engagement at Aberavon with an enhanced reputation. The people gave her the title "The Pride of Aberavon," and would hardly let her go. John Jones will take the road this spring with a much improved variety exhibition.

Gipsy Crusade in the County of Surrey.

The Executive of the Showmen's Guild, in the interests of its metropolitan members, is carefully watching the movement to stamp out gipsies in the county of Surrey. Repeatedly the work of the Guild has been hindered by the perverse inability of a certain class of people to differentiate between shown van life and gipsy van life. The most obvious example of this type of mind is shown us in the vague wording of the Movable Dwellings Bill introduced into the House of Lords by Lord Clifford of Chudleigh. One result (and as regards the showmen a beneficial one) has been the making it clear to the landowners who wish to secure repressive legislation against gipsy life that they must make it clear in their proposals that their aim is to penalise the gipsies, not because they are vandwellers, but simply and only because the continuance on common lands of large bodies of itinerant campers and squatters is alien to the growing demands of local government and municipal control in matters of health and sanitation.

Landowners' Act to Suppress Gipsies.

The following circular has been sent round to the principal landowners in the county of Surrey:

"In view of the fact that existing legislation does not enable residents in the county of Surrey to cope satisfactorily with the nuisance caused by the encampment of gipsies on lands within the county, a meeting of those interested in the question was held on the 18th inst. (February) to discuss the possibility of adopting a scheme to abate it.

"It was decided thereat that an association should be formed consisting of lords of manors, owners, and occupiers of lands, shootings, and houses in the county of Surrey, for the purpose of preventing gipsies encamping on lands within the district inhabited by the members and causing annoyance and injury to the residents; that all lords of manors and owners and occupiers of land, shootings, and houses within the petty sessional divisions of Guildford and Dorking be admitted as members of the association.

"Mr. Jocelyn Bray, of Coast House, Dorking, and I were appointed joint honorary secretaries.

"It was decided further that in the event of other districts adjoining these petty sessional divisions being willing to co-operate in this scheme, we should be glad to learn the opinions of the residents therein with a view to the area of operations being extended.

"Should the gipsies be a source of annoyance to you and the objects of the association be regarded by you with favour, I shall be very glad to receive any communication or suggestion, at Clandon Park, Guildford."

The circular is sent out by Lord Cranley, son of the Earl of Onslow, and it has most influential support.

The Guild's Vigilance to Safeguard Show Van Life.

Without complicating the issues by an expression of opinion on the problem of gipsy life under modern conditions of local government, it will be necessary for the Executive of the Showmen's Guild to take all precautionary measures when the proposed Landowners' Bill is being considered that it is distinctly and clearly set out that the measure does not apply to travelling showpeople following the fairs in the pursuit of their lawful calling.

With regard to the county of Middlesex, the Showmen's Guild has already secured an exemption clause in the Act obtained by the Council to deal with nomad life. When a similar clause is secured in the proposed legislation in the county of Surrey it will prevent any local interference with the business and daily life of showpeople that might arise if the wording of the Act so loosely drafted as to simply specify van-dwellers, and not to clearly define what is meant by the term. There can be no serious interference with the freedom of travelling showpeople if the Act contains a carefully worded exemption clause.

The Guild Chaplain's Lenten Sermons.

By the request of the vicar (who is an hon. chaplain of the Showmen's Guild), the Rev. T. Horne is preaching two courses of sermons in his old parish of St. Mary's, Britannia-street, City-road, E.C., just a few minutes' walk from the Old-street tube and electric tramcar from all parts of Western, Eastern, and Northern London, every Sunday night at 7, and Wednesday night at 7.30 during Lent. The Guild Chaplain will resume his itinerary of the British fairs.

News from Wales.

Messrs. Skinner's waxworks and marionettes are on a visit at Mountain Ash. Messrs. Bostock's skating rink in the same town is very popular.

Messrs. Bostock and Wombwell's No. 1 Royal Menagerie, under the popular management of Mr. Birkett, is on a visit at Cardiff. The uneeka, a most weird-looking animal, is something new this tour. A litter of young porcupines—a thing never before seen in a travelling menagerie—is a unique feature. The Royal Italian Circus which has been so popular terminates its visit this week.

Stroked the Lion.

More than usual interest attached to the visit of Messrs. Bostock and Wombwell's Royal Menagerie to Newport on Monday night. It is ever a popular show, in which young and old revel alike, but the interest of this visit was greatly augmented by the fact that Mr. Charles Jones, licensee of the Butchers' Arms Inn, Griffin-street, had offered to enter a lion's cage. Shortly after eight o'clock, in the presence of a large crowd, Mr. Jones, who is a well-known figure in Newport, mounted a short ladder and, with an attendant, entered the cage of Emperor, a fine specimen of "the king of beasts." Mr. Jones walked around the lion, and stroked him on the neck. After remaining in the den between three and four minutes he descended the ladder to the accompaniment of ringing cheers and the tune "For he's a jolly good fellow" from the band. Subsequently Mr. Jones was presented with a beautiful gold and enamel medal by Messrs. Bostock and Wombwell in recognition of his pluck.

ANSWERS TO SHOWMEN.

Arthur Campbell (Consett).—We shall, of course, be glad to receive items of Showman's World news from the correspondent you name.

Pontypridd.—We are not aware of the winter quarters of the show you mention. An advertisement in our columns would be the best way of reaching them.

THE PENZANCE FAIR DISPUTE.

The concordat of peace effected by the Showmen's Guild and the settlement of better conditions with regard to tolls and tenancy for the Fair in future, granted by the conference held at the Town Hall, Penzance, on Jan. 26 last, was upset by the action of the one defendant who was not a showman.

The High Court Action to Proceed.

It is a great misfortune that upon merely technical points and not in the least effecting the real issues that were in dispute that the showmen who are prepared to support the Corporation in the vindication of their charter rights cannot be dropped out of the High Court action. Of course, the position of affairs (unfortunate as they are at the present moment) would have been a hundred times worse for the showmen if the conference had not taken place. The substantial gains that the showmen obtained by the conference can hardly be over-exaggerated.

To begin with, the schedule of tolls is a reasonable one, and the vexed question of tendering for sites will not again arise. A ballot will be taken for the best position, and thus everybody will have a fair chance. The increased facilities for both building and for pulling down are great advantages that will be much valued by the showmen, and will secure those peaceful relations between the Corporation and their show tenants that ought ever to prevail. Whilst we regret and deprecate extremely the unfortunate circumstances that necessitate the hearing of the case in the High Court, we are glad to be able to inform our readers that the Corporation and the Showmen's Guild, the two principal contracting parties and the two signatories to the concordat of peace effected at the conference, will still maintain that agreement, no matter what may be the outcome of the High Court proceedings.

It is a great mistake to suppose that although this unfortunate set-back has occurred that the ultimate issues will be anything less than the friendly agreement arrived at between the Showmen's Guild and the Corporation at the conference on Jan. 26 last.

The action must therefore proceed in order to bring the objecting party before the Court for judgment. In order to simplify matters, the showmen will not dispute any points in the Corporation's statement of claim (which we give below) that touch upon the validity and the maintenance of the ancient charter fair. It has never been the policy of the Guild to attack or to destroy the validity of existing fair rights; it is manifestly to the interests of the whole showman community that the fair rights should be maintained. Messrs. W. C. and S. Hancock, Messrs. Anderton and Rowland, and Mr. Joseph Brewer, the showmen concerned, will be obliged to put in a defence. Messrs. Strong and Mercer, the Guild solicitors for London, have the matter in hand, and counsel's opinion is being taken. Everything that can be done by the showmen to avoid costly argument as to the charter and fair rights of the Corporation will be done; in fact, after the concordat was signed the showmen defendants confidently concluded that the matter was at an end.

The Guild Chaplain, acting for them throughout, was able to secure the guarantees they sought from the Corporation, and as those guarantees still remain valid, the entire onus of a full defence of the case rests now with the objector, for the showmen will not brief counsel to offer any defence as regards their action in holding the carnival at Heamoor, nor will they in any sense whatever dispute the full powers of the Corporation to hold and to control the ancient charter fair of Penzance.

IN THE HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE.
Chancery Division.
Mr. JUSTICE JOYCE.

Writ issued the 19th day of Oct, 1908. Between the Mayor, Aldermen, and Burgesses of the Borough of Penzance, plaintiffs, and Otho Glyn Bolitho (against whom proceedings have been discontinued), John Kemp White, Albert Anderton and Arthur Rowland (trading as Anderton and Rowland), William Hancock, Charles Hancock, and Sophia Hancock (trading as W. C. and S. Hancock), and Joseph Brewer, defendants.

AMENDED STATEMENT OF CLAIM.

1. The Plaintiffs are by prescription and by divers Letters Patent and in particular by the Letters Patent hereinafter in this paragraph mentioned entitled to and possessed of a Fair or Mart holden in the Borough of Penzance on the Eve and Day of Corpus Christi and the two days following—By Letters Patent dated the 9th day of May in the twelfth year of the reign of His Majesty James I. being the Letters Patent hereinbefore particularly referred to his said Majesty granted to the Mayor Aldermen and Commonalty of the Vill of Penzance and to their successors (inter alia) that they and their successors hereafter for ever have hold and keep and shall be able to have hold and keep within the aforesaid Vill of Penzance and within the liberties and precincts of the same yearly and every year for ever seven Fairs or Marts therein particularly mentioned the first of the same Fairs or Marts to be holden continue and last on the Eve and Feast or Day commonly called the Body of Christ's Day together with Courts of Pie Poudre there to be holden at the time of the said Fairs or Marts from time to time for ever with all liberties and free customs tolls stallages piccages fines amerciaments and all other profits commodities advantages and emoluments whatsoever to such Fairs or Marts and Courts of Pie Poudre appertaining arising happening accruing or in any manner belonging and further his said Majesty did grant and confirm to the aforesaid Mayor and Commonalty of the Vill of Penzance aforesaid and their successors all and all manner of liberties franchises immunities privileges profits easements pre-eminences commodities advantages customs rights jurisdictions emoluments and exemptions whatsoever which the inhabitants of the vill aforesaid then had held used and enjoyed or ought to have had held used or enjoyed by reason or pretext of any gift grant or confirmation theretofore had made or granted by his said Majesty or by either of his progenitors or ancestors late Kings or Queens of England or by reason or pretext of any prescription use title right or custom theretofore had used or enjoyed or holden.

2. The Plaintiffs have always held the said Fair or Mart on Corpus Christi Eve and day and the two days following. The said Fair or Mart was formerly held in the streets of the Borough of Penzance but of recent years in a field within the boundaries thereof known as the Recreation Ground which has been assigned or appropriated by the Plaintiffs for the purpose thereof. Upon such Fairs being held persons resorting thereto for profit have erected stalls or booths or have taken from the Plaintiffs pieces of land or standings for the purpose of trading thereon and for the purposes of holding shows and performances and giving facilities for pleasure or pastime.

3. The Plaintiffs have always as of right levied from and charged upon and have been paid by the persons so erecting stalls or booths or taking pieces of land or standings reasonable sums of money as and by way of customs tolls stallages, piccages fines and other lawful dues or emoluments to the profit of the Plaintiffs.

4. On or about the 20th March 1908 the Defendants Albert Anderton and Arthur Rowland wrote a letter to the Plaintiffs and enclosed therewith a communication in writing signed by the said Albert Anderton and Arthur Rowland who thereby purported to act on behalf of themselves and other showmen who usually resort to the said Mart or Fair. The said communication suggested the arrangement by the Plaintiffs for the purposes of the Mart or Fair of the Plaintiffs' fair ground according to a plan set out upon the said communication and the maximum rents to be charged to such showmen for the ground and threatened that if the Plaintiffs were unable to comply with their suggestion they would carry on the Fair on ground not controlled by the Plaintiffs. The Plaintiffs by letter dated the 8th April 1908 refused to accept the terms offered by the said Defendants.

5. On or about the 15th June 1908 being two days prior to the Eve of Corpus Christi Day the Defendants other than the Defendant John Kemp White or some of them entered into an agreement with the said John Kemp White who was the tenant of land known as Poltaire Heamoor at a distance of one mile or thereabouts from the said Borough that he the said John Kemp White should let a part of the said piece of land to them the said Defendants so agreeing for four days beginning on the Eve of Corpus Christi Day for the purpose of holding a Mart or Fair on such piece of land. The consideration for such letting which was paid by the Defendants or some of them to the said John Kemp White was the sum of £70. The Plaintiffs have no particulars of the said agreement other than those which are stated in this paragraph.

6. The Defendants largely advertised in the public papers by means of placards or posters affixed in the said Borough and the vicinity thereof that a Mart or Fair would be open at one p.m. the 18th June Corpus Christi Feast Day and would be continued the two following days and that a charge of one penny per head would be made for admission to the ground.

7. The Defendants proceeded to hold and did hold a Mart or Fair on the land at Poltaire aforesaid on the said 18th June and the two succeeding days by letting the said grounds taken by them from the said Defendant John Kemp White to stall booth and stand holders and to showmen and by charging for admission to the said piece of ground. The Defendants other than the said John Kemp White further set up and held during the said three days stalls booths and stands. Large crowds of people resorted to Poltaire aforesaid who would if no such Mart or Fair had been held have resorted to the Plaintiffs Mart or Fair whereby the Plaintiffs lost the dues emoluments and profits thereof which they would otherwise have had and did not enjoy the said Mart or Fair and the dues emoluments and profits thereof in so ample and beneficial a manner as they of right ought to have done.

The Plaintiffs claim:

(a) A Declaration that they are by prescription and by virtue of Letters Patent dated the 9th day of May in the twelfth year of His Majesty King James the First entitled to and possessed of a Mart or Fair to be holden continue and last on the Eve and Feast or Day commonly called the Body of Christ's Day and the succeeding two days in the Borough of Penzance in every year.

(b) An injunction to perpetually restrain the Defendants their servants agents and workmen from establishing any Fair or Mart upon any portion of the land known as Poltaire Heamoor or elsewhere within seven miles of the said Borough and from using or permitting to be used any portion of the said land or property or any other land or property within the limit aforesaid so as to interfere with or disturb or prejudicially affect the rights of the Plaintiff Corporation in the said Fair or Mart as hereinbefore declared.

(d) An enquiry what damages the Plaintiffs have sustained by reason of the said letting of ground at Poltaire and by reason of the Defendants having held the said Mart or Fair at Poltaire Heamoor in disturbance of the Plaintiffs Mart or Fair and payment by the Defendants of the amount found to be due.

(e) Costs. S. H. LEONARD.

HOW WOMBWELL'S FOUGHT THE SNOWSTORM.

Wombwell's show is at Cardiff for a short season. Before reaching Newport on its Welsh tour, the concern had the most difficult and obstinate struggle with Nature which it has ever encountered in its history. At Newport on Monday a Western Mail representative had a chat with Mr. Birkett, the manager, on his recent experiences. He said that he had been with the show eighteen years, and his wife (who is a daughter of Mr. Wombwell, the original proprietor) had been with it for over thirty years. Neither of them ever remember such difficulties with snow as they had last week, although their experience includes Scottish tours.

On Wednesday morning the show left Gloucester at about ten o'clock to tour through Cinderford, Coleford, Monmouth, and Usk, and thence on to Newport and Cardiff. At the bottom of the hill at Littledean the wagons got stuck in the snow, but they managed to clear the hill and reach Cinderford and Coleford. Then, as the weather was still bad, Mr. Birkett decided to miss Monmouth and Usk, and work to Newport via Chepstow. Going through the village of St. Briavels on Friday night he was surprised to see a man who looked like a "Father Christmas," with a white stockinged nightcap, put his head out through his bedroom window and shout, "You are on the wrong road; I have told the elephants the same thing." The show had, therefore, to turn in the middle of the night and take the proper road. Mr. Birkett explained that the practice in night travelling was to send the elephant team on as an advance guard, the men with horse teams following about half an hour after, picking up the trail of the elephants.

The heaviest wagon, seven tons in weight, had a low, deep well. This well acted as a sort of snowplough, but at one time there were twenty-eight horses harnessed to it. Between Coleford and Chepstow on Friday night and Saturday morning the snow was, in places, 2ft. deep. Lil, the younger of the elephants, became unwell, and it was reported to him (Mr. Birkett) that she was down in the snow in a dying state. That was, happily, not so. She was shivering and twitching, but after she had had three or four bottles of gin and hot water she recovered, and is all right now. On Thursday, when the going was very bad, he had told the man in charge of her not to spare anything to keep her warm—that he was not to pass a public-house without giving her a drink of beer (old beer for preference, and the older the better) if she wanted it. That day she had six gallons of beer. Lil is a mere youngster of fifteen years. The other elephant is twenty-five. The camels bore the hardships all right. Some apprehension had been felt for the mandril gorilla, but the attendant bedded her up all over with straw and shared his hot rum and coffee and his hot whisky and lemon with her.

Going on ahead of the show to Chepstow early on Saturday morning, Mr. Birkett got ready two buckets of hot coffee and rum, a similar supply of hot whisky and lemon, then a large supply of hot Bovril for the staff, who were very nearly beaten. At the Bell Inn a hot breakfast was prepared, and some of the men ate six eggs and one pound of bacon. In order to ease the load from the elephants the band went on to Newport by train.

FILM GOSSIP.

Showmen and Managers throughout the United Kingdom, and in every English-speaking country, will find in this column particulars of some of the best and newest Films in the Market. Many of these Films we have seen ourselves, and can confidently recommend showmen to add them to their list of attractions.

Pathé Frères.

NAPLES, HER STREETS AND INDUSTRIES.—Naples is poor, but always adorned with flowers and picturesque and gay, in spite of her dirty streets. There the housewives lower their baskets through the windows for the hawkers to fill them with their goods, and the little street musicians sing lustily to the accompaniment of their grating mandolines. Naples spreads her houses under an ever blue sky, in spite of the latent fire that runs inside Vesuvius, striped all over with dusky streaks,, which are an unmistakable signs of previous eruptions, at the same time as a warning for the future.

STILTON'S REVENGE.—Mr. Stilton, a pale bank clerk, is the drudge at the office, as well as at home; he does not know how to make himself respected by anybody. One day an "energy dealer" teaches him the art of domineering by mere magnetic passes. Stilton, like a new Donato, is the master of his man in a few seconds, thanks to the marvellous invention, and now he avenges himself on his fellow creatures for all previous humiliations suffered at their hands.

THE PARIS REFUSE.—Where does the refuse go which is put out in the street every morning in large cities? In Paris dogs and ragpickers help themselves to what they find suitable for them in the dustbins, and the carts remove to the works what is left. There old iron, papers, &c., are sorted, and occasionally a silver spoon, expensive vases, or purses with money are found amongst the refuse, but of course this happens only too rarely. The dross is burnt, dirty paper is put on one side, and will serve for making new and coarser paper after bleaching, whilst that which can serve as manure is sent by rail to farmers and peasants.

A LOVER'S OBSTINACY.—Mr. Nuisance asks for the hand of Miss Dorothy Bell, which is refused him. He is not discouraged by this, but goes to the lady's father, disguised as a postman, who delivers to him a letter; as a waiter, who serves him at the restaurant; as a cabman, who drives him to the station; as a hotel porter; each time renewing his demand, "I beg to ask you for the hand of your daughter." At length the irritated father throws the importunate suitor out of the window, but he himself is passing under the window at the very moment when the lover seems to fall from the sky at his feet, with his petition ready on his lips. The poor father, fearing lest he should go mad, throws his daughter into the arms of happy Nuisance.

FOR HONOUR'S SAKE.—This is a common enough story. The daughter of a naval officer has been made love to during his absence by a man who must be challenged and fought with before the father's honour can be satisfied when he learns of the other's behaviour towards the girl. The beautiful landscape in which the scene takes place lends to the subject a special interest. First, there is in the blue Mediterranean the fleet leaving the Villefranche roads, throwing in the pure air thick columns of smoke, then disappearing in the misty distance. Along the country roads the cactus plants alternate with the red-berried pepper plants, whereas from the mountain the blue sea can be seen through the foliage of the lemon and orange trees.

HATE BETWEEN THE RACES.—In the maize-field the planter ill-treats the half caste's child, who has done some mischief. The servant's eye flashes with hatred at this, and having armed his gun, he goes towards the house and waits for the master's return. As the latter's wife is welcoming him home she is struck by a bullet aimed at her, and staggers into the planter's arms. The half caste is chased in the mountains, along precipices, and across torrents. At last he stands still, his strength has failed him, and like a hunted beast at bay he turns upon his enemies, and, lifting his knife, waits . . . and wounds one of the pursuers. The others surround him with revolvers pointed at him. Soon after the victim is hanged before the very eyes of his sorrowing wife and son.

HERBERT'S CIGARETTE.—Herbert cannot smoke his cigarette in peace, for every time he meets with an unforeseen accident the very moment when, having rolled it up carefully between his fingers, he is putting it to his lips. This cigarette of his costs him much, for through it he is dismissed for smoking during office hours and setting fire to official papers.

A DAUGHTER OF THE SUN.—This is a story of Japan at a period when few strangers were allowed to visit the Flowery Kingdom. With the exception of the Dutch and Portuguese traders—mostly established at the seaports—the only persons permitted intercourse were the faithful missionairy fathers, who sought to convert the warlike people. Our story is that of Mitsuka, a dancing girl of one of the famous tea-houses, who loved Komura, a young soldier. Both are converts to the Christian religion, but worship in secret. Taka, a noble, wants Mitsuka, but she spurns his suit, and he and Komura become rivals. Obtaining permission to take Mitsuka and her lover by force, Taka finds them together, but Komura escapes, and Mitsuka refuses to say where he is. When she is about to be put to the torture the crucifix is discovered, but Komura bursts in and strikes down the soldiers, and he and the girl escape together. The pair now appear with the priest, Father Orlotto, at Mass, when an alarm is raised. Conferring with the father, he is given to understand the position, and places Mitsuka and Komura behind him as the soldier's rush in. Unheeding the priest, the soldiers engage with Komura, who is at last overcome. In the resulting conflict the priest is struck down, and Mitsuka is also slain. As Taka rushes on, the priest pulls himself to the altar, Mitsuka puts up an imploring arm, and, as she finally sinks back, the priest gives his blessing to all and expires.

EDISON'S Pictures, under the general management of Mr. Victor Branford, conclude this week a successful three months' season at the Theatre Royal, Canterbury. The latest addition to the firm's list of towns is Heywood, where the Borough Theatre has been leased, and this Mr. Branford will open on March 22. An up-to-the-minute pictorial and variety entertainment is to be the fare provided.

R. Prieur.

PIETRO, THE BANDIT.—This film opens with a scene in which we see a tourists' guide made prisoner by a gang of bandits. He is forced to take off his clothes, and one of the gang puts them on and takes the place of the guide. He meets a party of tourists at the station, and after showing them the various sights, leads them into the trap prepared for them by the bandits. The party is captured, and one of them is forced to write to the Consul asking him to send a ransom of £2,000 or they will be put to death. The Consul sends the money by a messenger, who is robbed of his valuables before the prisoners are set free.

THE MADWOMAN'S CHILD.—The story opens with the kidnapping of a young child by a band of Gitanos. On learning the loss of their child the father and mother follow and endeavour to get back their babe. While struggling with one of the band the father is stabbed, and falls over the cliff. The loss of husband and child drives the young wife mad, and in her madness she goes to find her husband at the foot of the cliffs, and also imagines she is still nursing her child. After a lapse of fifteen years we see the young girl dancing in a public place, and one of the band is jealous of the looks she gives a young man who is watching her dance. While thus engaged the young girl's mother (who is still mad) comes up, and is taken to the camp by her daughter. The two are followed by the man whose love she rejects; and seeing her lover making his way to the camp he follows, and determines to kill him. But instead he stabs the girl, who, while lying wounded, is recognised by her mother as the babe she lost fifteen years before. The girl's lover follows the assassin. The two men meet on the rocks at the seashore, and are prevented from killing each other by the timely appearance of the mother and daughter, who take their knives away from them. The joy of once more seeing her daughter brings back the reason of the mother, who denounces the gang and gives her daughter's hand to her lover. The marvellous acting, coupled with the magnificent scenery, should appeal to all, and should be well received.

SPORTSMEN IN SWITZERLAND.—A gentleman and his family arrive at the station, and after making their way to the hotel they wish to join the various winter sports. So they try their hand at skating and ski-ing, and in doing this we see the many falls they have. We also see the professionals taking part in the sports. The party then climb glaciers, &c., and here again they have many falls, which cause much amusement. They finally dismiss their guide, and we see them leave the village disgusted.

THE SHOWMAN WORLD OF JAPAN.

Japanese fairs coincide with the Buddhist or Shinto religious festivals, and the showman erects his booth or portable theatre, composed of bamboo frames covered with rush-matting, in some temple court. The booths contain freak oddities on exhibition, such as a skeleton of a devil, the claws of a goblin, a rat as large as a sheep—probably a young kangaroo—a woman with an indiarubber neck, fortune-tellers, jugglers, acrobats, and dancers. There are also men who make pictures out of sand, and generally a menagerie. It is sufficient if a menagerie contain only two exhibits, as the charge for admission to all the shows is one of the smallest coins in use in the country. Ikiningyo, or living image exhibitions, are extremely popular, as are also the goblin exhibitions. The living image exhibitions correspond to our waxwork shows, but in this case the figures are not made of wax but of some much cheaper material. They consist of tableaux representing some popular tradition or sacred myth, and one or other of the figures is alive. So cunningly are they devised, however, that it is difficult to detect the presence of the real man or woman in the group. The goblin exhibitions have their Western counterparts in our haunted houses. The booth is darkened, and on entering one finds oneself in a sort of lane between hedges, and behind the hedges are what appear to be tombs. The effect is quite natural, and as one advances ghostly shapes appear suddenly over the hedges, clutch at the people, and then fall back with moans. The figures are moved by invisible strings, and the gift which is promised to those who can walk through without being frightened is seldom claimed. The magic-lantern show is essentially a dramatic exhibition. It is a play where the actors and the scenery are but luminous shadows, the dialogue being uttered by invisible persons. Favourite plays are those in which ghosts figure, and the audience watch with the utmost eagerness the development of the plot. The little open-air theatres wherein girls dance are much visited. The dancing is of a purely Oriental character, and consists of graceful posturing, accompanied with much waving of sleeves and of fans, and always a subtle play of eyes and features. Such is the showland of old Japan. Whether Japanese show life will be affected by the Western modes of thought which are permeating the nation remains to be seen. The exhibits now, at all events, harmonise with their surroundings, and more than satisfy the country folk.

Golden Sands at Yarmouth.

YARMOUTH CORPORATION, which already derives a revenue of between £2,000 and £3,000 from its beach in the shape of stall rents and concert ring rentals, did another excellent stroke of business at its meeting on Wednesday, when it agreed to lease for five years a strip of sand on the South Beach, only overlooked by the wall of the barracks enclosure, for a scenic railway similar to that at the Shepherd's Bush Exhibition, for which it is to receive a rental of £650 per annum, and the lessee is to pay all rates and taxes and use the Corporation service of electricity. The scenic railway is intended to be put up by Whitsuntide, at a cost of over £2,000, and, it is expected, will not only give a direct revenue to the ratepayers equal to a penny rate but will moreover greatly enhance the receipts from the Corporation electric cars running to the site. Yarmouth has certainly found its beach to be veritable golden sands.

FIGHT.

THE L.C.C. AND AMUSEMENTS.

THE usual weekly meeting of the London County Council was held on Tuesday at the County Hall, Spring-gardens, under the presidency of Sir Melvill Beachcroft, who was elected Chairman for the ensuing year.

IMPERIAL INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION.

The Theatres and Music Halls Committee reported that the Council, on Nov. 27, 1908, granted a provisional music and dancing licence to Mr. Imre Kiralfy for the Franco-British Exhibition, Shepherd's Bush, now known as the Imperial International Exhibition, subject to an undertaking inter alia that adequate free lavatory accommodation should be provided as from the opening of the exhibition, to the satisfaction of the Council, for the public and all persons employed at the exhibition. The Committee had been in communication with the Public Health Committee and with Mr. Kiralfy on the question of the lavatory accommodation to be provided at the forthcoming exhibition, and as a result plans have been submitted by Mr. E. White on Mr. Kiralfy's behalf showing the proposed accommodation.

The accommodation for the staff will be separate from that provided for the public, and subject to certain conditions. The Committee thought that Mr. White's proposals will satisfactorily meet the needs of the case. In the absence, however, of definite information as to the number of persons expected to attend the exhibition, and the numbers to be employed, they thought the Council should reserve to itself the right to require the provision of more accommodation if what is proposed should prove to be insufficient. The work in connection with the provision of the accommodation would, of course, have to be carried out to the satisfaction of the Hammersmith Metropolitan Borough Council, the authority for enforcing the by-laws made under the Public Health (London) Act, 1891. The Committee recommended approval of the three drawings submitted.

CINEMATOGRAPH FIRE.

Mr. Walter Reynolds asked the Chairman of the Theatres and Music Halls Committee whether his attention had been called to a statement in a trade paper with reference to a cinematograph fire alleged to have occurred in a London music hall on Feb. 28? It was stated that the regular operator was absent at the time, and that the films had been placed on the floor.

Mr. Greenwood, in reply, said his attention had been called to the statement referred to. None of the Council's officers were present when the fire occurred, but enquiries had since been made, and he was informed that the electrician, who was also the regular operator, and had had three years' experience in that capacity, was present. He put out the fire with his hands, but was not seriously injured. There appeared to be no justification for the statement that the films were on the ground.

THEATRES AND MUSIC HALLS COMMITTEE.

The Theatres and Music Halls Committee reported that they had passed cordial votes of thanks to their Chairman, Mr. H. J. Greenwood, and their Vice-Chairman, Mr. Ernest E. Wild, for their services during the past year.

It was agreed that the Committee, consisting of twelve members, should be constituted as follows:—Viscount Duncannon, Dr. J. Davies, Messrs. Jocelyn Brandon, F. Briant, J. A. Dawes, H. J. Greenwood, F. S. Hanson, Enos Howes, J. R. Lort-Williams, R. C. Phillimore, E. E. Wild, and Howell J. Williams.

THE new Harrogate roller skating rink in Dragon-parade is to be opened on March 13. Mr. Sharp, a local entertainer, has been appointed manager.

MR. WALTER REYNOLDS has been placed on the Education Committee of the London County Council.

CHARLES SANTLEY'S REMINISCENCES.

Some of the information contained in "Reminiscences of My Life," by Charles Santley, which has just been published by Sir Isaac Pitman and Sons, Ltd., has doubtless already appeared in the great singer's "Student and Singer," which was published in 1893; but the "Reminiscences" contain an immense amount of amusing and interesting matter. Especially piquant are the anecdotes in Mr. Santley's capital chapter on Sims Reeves, in which the veteran artist says:—

In the whole course of my life I have never known a man so belied; it was commonly stated that his abuse of stimulants was the sole cause of his so frequently disappointing the public by non-fulfilment of his engagements. I emphatically deny that statement; we were intimate friends, constantly engaged in the same performances from the year 1858 until a few months before he died. I had every opportunity of knowing him intimately, and I declare I have never met a more moderate man as regards either eating or drinking.

The first time I sang in Judas Maccabæus with him was at the Queen's Rooms, Clifton, in 1858. He did not turn up at rehearsal; I found him at the hotel when I returned, in a very despondent state; he said he felt bad and would not be able to sing at night. Being only a novice, I did not like to obtrude my advice, I merely hinted that he might feel better disposed for work after a good meal. He sent two prescriptions to be made up by the chemist, one a draught, the other a gargle; when they were brought to him, after examining them he made up his mind the bottles had been improperly labelled, and put them aside; he made a very poor dinner, he ate little and drank a glass of claret.

Before going over to the concert room, I looked in upon him; he said he felt a little better and would be over in time for his work. He came, and skipped through the first recitative, but in the air, "Call forth thy powers," he did call them forth, and they answered him in such a style that the audience burst forth in a storm of applause and thus relieved him of all anxiety. His power and energy increased as he went on. "How vain is man" was splendid, and "Sound an alarm" magnificent, as he alone could sing it in my time.

A few years after, we were singing together at the Winter Garden, Blackpool. I was in the green-room when he came in; he had got a fit of "nerves"; he said he would give £20 if he could go back to the hotel, for he felt he had no voice and could not sing a note. I rallied him, and proposed that if he could not sing, he should whistle his songs, as the public would never be satisfied unless at least they saw him. He smiled faintly; I left the room and planted myself in the wings to listen to his first song, Sullivan's "Meet me once again"; his trousers were positively shaking. The first bar or two sounded as though he had plums in his mouth, but he forgot himself and his dismals, and he "pulled the house down." His second was the "Bay of Biscay," which produced a storm such as that delightful bay can produce, without the mal de mer attendant thereon.

About thirty years ago, as far as I can guess, the Annual Irish Concert on St. Patrick's Day, arranged by Mr. W. Saunders, had to be given at Exeter Hall, as St. James's Hall had been taken for the "pops," or some other series of concerts. Reeves, of course, was the principal attraction. As usual, the room was packed. I arrived about ten minutes before the concert commenced, and found that, unfortunately, my friend Jack was laid up with a cold, and had deferred notifying the director until the last moment, hoping to be able to fulfil his engagement, too late for a substitute to be found. I offered to sing his first song to help the manager out of his dilemma. Before I went on, Saunders tried to say a few words to the audience, but he had no sooner shown himself on the platform than the furies broke loose and hooted him off.

I went on determined to do battle for my comrade. The audience had the courtesy to suspend their rage, and, after greeting me with some applause, to remain silent. Sidney Naylor had no sooner started the prelude to the song than the storm broke out afresh. I leaned my back against the piano and calmly watched the play; the noise abated and at last ceased. I gave Naylor a signal to recommence, he got through the prelude and I had just opened my mouth to charm the British public when one of the aggrieved called out, "Where's Mr. Reeves?" I called back, "I don't keep Mr. Reeves in my pocket and cannot say, I only know he is unable to fulfil his engagement this evening." Here I was interrupted by somebody behind me on the orchestra shouting, "No! he's drunk again." I turned swiftly round and shouted in reply, "If that person who has just now spoken will come down here, I will give him a reply he will not forget in a hurry." This turned the scale; it amused the audience, one of whom got on his legs and spoke out warmly. "You have a gentleman before you," said he, "then behave like gentlemen." The noise ceased, I sang my song, and the concert continued to the end without further interruption.

Reeves, like the major part of the human race, had his little idiosyncrasies, failings, if you like the name better. He was full of nerves, and like all nervous people at times very irritable. I had literally to push him on to the platform at St. James's Hall on a Burns night, when he was going to sing in Howard Glover's cantata, "Tam O'Shanter," a very trying part. A young tenor had been engaged to take Reeves's place in case he could not put in an appearance. Just as the singers were going up to take their places, the silly young man asked Reeves if he would like him to go up at once or wait until he might be wanted. "Who are you, sir, and what would you go on for?" said Tam. "I was engaged to take your place in case of . . ." "D——n you, sir, what do you mean?" roared Tam, "I'll choke you," and he certainly would have carried out his threat, only I got between them and pushed Reeves up the stairs, he growling vengeance, and I promising he should have it out in the green-room after he had polished off Tam. The juvenile was hustled out of the hall, and the "Cock of the North" (and of every point of the compass) was appeased with a little adjustment of his plumage and cautiously-administered chaff. So all ended well.

270 Replies.
WANTED, Wanted, Known,
Sir,—
I inserted an advertisement, asking for Music Hall Artists in the last week's issue of "The Era." May I say that I am absolutely astounded at the number of replies I received to my small advertisement, no less than 270 Artists favouring me with applications. May I by this means thank the many artists who sent in their terms, as it is impossible for me to reply to each individual. I thank all for their very kind promptitude in responding to my advertisement.
I remain, yours faithfully,
Alfred Ball.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

RE APPLICATIONS FOR ENGAGEMENTS.

All applications by either Artists or their Agents must be made to the Head Office. Lowest terms must be stated, and distinction made between salaries required for larger and smaller towns. Vacant dates should be stated. If a list of existing bookings be sent, it will render selection easier.

Artists employing Agents should accredit one only at one time, as the friction arising when several Agents are employed at the same time, all expecting the one booking to go through each of them, often renders it expedient to avoid that booking altogether rather than give undeserved offence to several Agents.

New Acts seeking Engagements, or turns not rebooked (possibly because they have played a series of dates without introducing new business), will facilitate matters by having their acts seen by our District Managers. Their Districts and Postal Addresses are as follow :—

EDINBURGH, GLASGOW, NEWCASTLE, AND DISTRICT.
MR. S. GETHING, Empire Theatre, Glasgow.

BIRMINGHAM, NOTTINGHAM, LEICESTER, AND DISTRICT.
MR. HATTON WHARTON, Empire Theatre, Nottingham.

SOUTH WALES DISTRICT.
MR. ALBERT MITCHELL, Empire Theatre, Cardiff.

LEEDS, SHEFFIELD, HULL, BRADFORD, AND DISTRICT.
MR. T. GERALD MORTON, Empire Palace, Leeds.

LIVERPOOL, MANCHESTER, AND DISTRICT.
MR. ALBERT BULMER, The Empire, Liverpool.

LONDON DISTRICT.
MR. J. CHRISTIE, Empire Theatre, Shepherd's Bush, W.

N.B.—Mr. OSWALD STOLL or Mr. FRANK ALLEN can be seen by appointment on all matters arising out of the above, and for the discussion of entirely new Numbers.

All Artists or Agents who communicate with our District Representatives must have made definite applications, in accordance with above directions, to the Head Office, at the same time, or just previously.

Artists and Agents are requested to note that the Standard Theatre, Shoreditch, and the Terriss Theatre, Rotherhithe, come within the areas absolutely barred by us. Artists and Agents are also requested to note that the Hippodrome, Aston, Birmingham, comes within the area absolutely barred by the Grand Theatre and Empire Palace, Birmingham.

INSTRUCTIONS TO ARTISTS.

Artists must have at least Fourteen Band Parts for English Orchestrations, and Seventeen Band Parts for Foreign Orchestrations. Matter of Bill, Blocks, and Specimens of Pictorials FOR THE ABOVE THEATRES must be sent to Co-operative Offices, at above address, THREE WEEKS before Opening, failing which Artists will run the risk of having their Engagements cancelled. It is important that separate bill-matter, blocks, pictorials, &c., for Dublin, Belfast, and South Shields, be sent direct to Mr. Frank Allen at the Co-operative Offices.

IMPORTANT.—Artists must forward Copies of Songs to the STAGE DEPARTMENT, ABOVE ADDRESS, TWO WEEKS previous to opening, with Assignments for same, which will be returned. Artists are requested to note carefully that the clause in their contracts relating to rehearsals will in future be strictly enforced. Artists' Scenery, Properties, &c., MUST be fireproofed in accordance with the regulations of the Licensing Authorities.

ARTISTS WILL CLEARLY UNDERSTAND THAT THEIR BUSINESS MUST BE FREE FROM ALL VULGARITY.

No order or contract for goods or services must be accepted for any of the foregoing theatres except upon receipt of an Official Form, issued from the Co-operative Offices, London, and signed by either Mr. Oswald Stoll, Mr. Frank Allen, or the Chief Accountant, otherwise the Company concerned will not be responsible for same, and will refuse payment. In special cases, where goods are required at once, suppliers must look to the individual placing the order, who will be personally liable, unless an official confirmatory order, signed as above, is received within forty-eight hours. Invoices must be sent to the Theatre, but monthly statements should be sent to the Co-operative Offices. The individual Company on whose behalf orders are signed is solely responsible for payment. The Management will not hold themselves responsible in the event of loss of or damage to any MSS., Songs, &c., submitted for consideration.

THIS WEEK'S NOVELTIES.

A LOVER'S OBSTINACY.
Code Word, "GENIE."

Mr. Nuisance asks for the hand of Miss Dorothy Bell, which is refused him. Nothing daunted, he goes to his lady-love's father, and, disguised as a postman, he delivers him a letter. Then, as a waiter, he serves him at the restaurant, as a cabman drives him to the station, then acts as an hotel porter, each time renewing his demand: "I beg to ask you for the hand of your daughter." Greatly irritated, the father throws the importunate suitor out of the window, but he himself happens to be passing under the window just at the moment that the lover falls at his feet with his petition on his lips. Fearing lest he should go mad, the poor father throws his daughter into the arms of happy Nuisance.

379ft. The Subject, £6 6s. 4d.

HERBERT'S CIGARETTE.
Code Word, "GEANT."

Herbert cannot smoke his cigarette in peace, for every time he puts it to his lips he meets with an accident. This cigarette in the end costs him a good deal, for through it he is dismissed for smoking during office hours and setting fire to official papers.

264ft. The Subject, £4 8s. 0d.

THE LOVE TABLOIDS.
Code Word, "GENETTE."

Are you suffering from melancholy, irritability, or nervousness, or losing all affection? If so, take Dr. Durant's peerless patent tabloids. The cure is instantaneous. Mr. Bridge, suffering from these morbid complaints, buys the tabloids. After taking the first one, he feels younger and ready for some fun. All his plans meeting with bad luck, however, he falls into the hands of the police, and ends his day's outing in the police station.

314ft. The Subject, £5 4s. 8d.

STILTON'S REVENGE.
Code Word, "GENIEVRE."

Mr. Stilton, a pale bank clerk, is made everybody's drudge. One day an "energy dealer" teaches him the art of domineering by magnetic passes, and now Stilton is able to avenge himself on his fellow-creatures for all previous humiliations suffered at their hands.

445ft. The Subject, £7 8s. 4d.

HATE BETWEEN THE RACES.
Code Word, "GENOU."

In the maize field the planter ill-treats the half-caste's child, who has done some mischief. The servant, seeing this, goes towards the house and waits for his master's return. As the latter's wife welcomes him home she is struck by a bullet, and falls into her husband's arms. The half-caste is chased for a long time, and at last, his strength failing him, he turns upon his enemies and, lifting his knife, wounds one of his pursuers. Soon after he is hanged before the eyes of his wife and son.

362ft. The Subject, £6 0s. 8d. Toning, £1 1s. 0d.

THE PARIS REFUSE.
Code Word, "GENIAL."

Every morning in Paris dogs and ragpickers take what they find suitable for them in the dustbins, and carts remove the remainder to the works. There it is sorted, and occasionally valuables are found among the refuse, but this happens only too rarely. The dross is burnt, dirty papers are put on one side and, after bleaching, are used for making new and coarser paper. Some of the refuse is sent to farmers for manure.

412ft. The Subject, £6 17s. 4d.

THE FORGOTTEN UMBRELLA.
Code Word, "GENEVRIER."

Mrs. Jackass has given her husband an umbrella for his birthday. On going out he takes what he thinks to be his umbrella, but which is in reality his walking-stick. Arriving home, his wife asks him where his umbrella is. Thinking he has left it in one of the numerous shops he has visited during the morning, he revisits them all, only to find that it is not at any of them. He then goes to an umbrella shop and buys an umbrella exactly like the lost one. Mr. Jackass's feelings may easily be imagined when his wife presents to him the umbrella which he believes to be lost.

362ft. The Subject, £6 0s. 8d.

FOR HONOUR'S SAKE.
Code Word, "GABELLE."

The daughter of a naval officer has been made love to during her father's absence by a man who must be fought with before the father's honour can be satisfied when he learns of the other's behaviour towards the girl. The beautiful scenery in which this takes place lends to the subject a special interest.

495ft. The Subject, £8 5s. 0d. Toning, £1 10s 0d. extra.

SATAN'S SMITHY.
Code Word, "GERCURE."

This film shows Satan appearing to a tired smith and offering to change into gold every nail in the smithy in exchange for the man's soul. Surrounded by his riches, the smith refuses to fulfil his part of the contract; the gold vanishes into fumes, and the smith is dragged into the lower regions. His daughter, however, arrives in time to free him.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1909.
"The Era" Dramatic and Musical Annual (5, Tavistock Street, Strand, 1s.) contains valuable dramatic reviews of the year, lists of new plays, lists of theatres, and other matter of interest to the player and playgoer alike. There is also the usual budget of stories told by well-known stage people, but these do not form the most valuable feature of the work.—Newcastle Chronicle, Feb. 3, 1909.

EXTRAORDINARY RESULT FROM AN ADVERTISEMENT.

Dear Sir,

I inserted an advertisement in "The Era" advertising Messrs. Barney and Berry's celebrated Phantom Skates. You may guess my satisfaction at the successful result of my speculating in your advertisement columns when I tell you that I have sold no less than 2,700 pairs of these Skates, the sale of which I directly trace to the advertisement in "The Era."

Yours faithfully,
Managing Director,
Messrs. BARNEY and BERRY.

THEATRICAL ACCOUNTS
— FOR —
BUSINESS MANAGERS.

How the Affairs of a Theatre can be Most Efficiently Controlled by the Adoption of Systems of Internal Check.

By CUTHBERT E. SMEDLEY, A.C.A.

Price 3/6. Post free, 3/9.

All concerned with the business side of a theatre will find much useful information and many valuable hints in "Theatrical Accounts for Business Managers," by Mr. Cuthbert E. Smedley, published at The Era office.—Referee, Jan. 31, 1909.

"Theatrical Accounts for Business Managers," by Cuthbert E. Smedley, A.C.A. (The Era, Ltd., London, 3s. 6d.), is a most concise and comprehensive little work, calculated to prove of assistance to the theatre-manager. It shows how the affairs of a theatre can be most efficiently controlled by the adoption of systems of internal check. Specimen pages of the books to be kept are given, and the chapters treating of receipts, tours, book-keeping, and accounts, and audit will be found to contain much useful information. In the appendix is given "a form of agreement with artists for touring engagements."—Liverpool Daily Post and Mercury, Feb. 3, 1909.

"Theatrical Accounts" ("The Era," Ltd., 5, Tavistock-street, W.C.), we should say, is a very useful compilation for business managers of our places of amusement. It is practical, exact, and analytical; it should stop leakages, and needs only good houses to keep it fully employed.—Sportsman, Feb. 8, 1909.

"Theatrical Accounts." By Cuthbert E. Smedley (The Era, Ltd., 3s. 6d.). Shows how the affairs of a theatre can be most efficiently controlled by the adoption of systems of internal check. Specimen pages of the books to be kept are given. Receipts, tours, book-keeping, and accounts, audit—each is allotted a separate chapter. "Theatrical Accounts for Business Managers." By Cuthbert E. Smedley, A.C.A. 3s. 6d. The Era, Ltd., 5, Tavistock-street, W.C. The work of accountants has now been brought to a fine art, and in almost every branch of business a different system has been elaborated. The present work deals in a small compass fully and clearly with all the special features of theatrical management on the business side.—Financial Times, Feb. 1, 1909.

Skeleton schemes of book-keeping, &c., with explanations, showing how the affairs of a theatre can be efficiently managed by the adoption of systems of internal check in all departments Contains also a draft agreement as between manager and artist.—Birmingham Daily Post, Jan. 27 1909.

PROVINCIAL THEATRICALS.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

ABERAMAN.—Grand Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. A. Jackson Withers; Resident-Manager, Mr. Archie Ainsleigh.—Mr. F. R. Benson's Shakespearean company (South) is presenting Othello, Twelfth Night, Merry Wives of Windsor, Julius Cæsar, She Stoops to Conquer, and The Merchant of Venice. On Monday night a large audience witnessed Othello. Mr. Baliol Holloway gave a powerful rendering of the title-rôle; as Desdemona Miss Emil Leslie was excellent; Mr. Charles Maunsell faithfully portrayed Cassio; Mr. Frank G. Weir made a dignified Duke of Venice; Mr. Charles Warburton was good as Iago. The remaining parts were adequately represented, and the play was carefully staged.

ABERDARE.—New Theatre.—Proprietors, The Aberdare Public Hall, Theatre, and Billposting Co., Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Z. Andrews; Acting-Manager, Mr. B. Richards.—Mr. G. Carlton's Wallace's company is here this week with The Love that Women Desire. Mr. Wilton Reed is good as Squire Abingdon; and the part of Richard Abingdon is well portrayed by Mr. S. Leigh Courtney. Mr. Sidney Bland submits an earnest and manly portrayal as Philip Carnaby; Miss Violet Young is a vivacious Molly; Miss Maud Hastings gives an excellent rendering of the rôle of Sybil Thorburn; whilst that of Madge Abingdon is well sustained by Miss Nellie Fletcher. Mr. John Hignett as Denis O'Rourke and Mr. J. W. Wilkinson as P.C. Sowerburry are amusing.

ABERDEEN.—H. M. Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Adair Nelson.—My Mimosa Maid is played this week to overflowing audiences. Miss Marie Studholme is the Maid, and the part allows her full scope for the exercise of her remarkable talents for piquant and dainty acting; Mr. Charles McNaughton is wholly admirable as the sweep turned millionaire; and the substitute sweep is humorously represented by Mr. Charles E. Paton; while Bock, the juvenile sweep, is delightfully impersonated by Master Archie McCaig, a Scottish comedian of much promise. Other members of the cast who attract attention are Mr. Percy Carr as the Café Proprietor, Mr. Powis Pinder, a fine singer, as a Captain of Zouaves, and Mr. A. Jackson as an ancient Waiter; and Miss Eva Sandford and Miss Ruby Gray, who sing charmingly as Popitte and Marcelle Pilaine.

Palace Theatre.—Lessees, the United County Theatres, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Walter Gilbert.—The more cultured sections of the audience are delighted with Miss Violet Hope's "Salome," "Cleopatra," and other dances. One can understand the meaning of the familiar phrase, "the poetry of motion," when one sees her giving expression to Mendelssohn's charming "Spring Song." The Gaudsmidts Bros., who have the assistance of two highly-trained Spanish poodles, are warmly applauded in their acrobatic turn; and Mr. Frank Fenton presents a deeply interesting sketch, Only an Actor, which is adapted from Davy Garrick. Mr. Fenton, who is a really admirable actor, receives the most efficient support from the other members of the cast—Miss Lillian Stennis and Miss Warrington and Mr. Charles F. Lloyd and Mr. George Thursby. Matthews and Brown are capital coon comedians; Mr. Henri Bekker shows much talent as a conjurer; Mr. Bert Harrow is a comedian of originality and humour; and the Baker and Franklin Trio contribute a most enjoyable musical act.

Alhambra and Empire Music Halls.—Managers, Messrs. R. Calder and J. Montague.—A wrestling tournament is the principal attraction this week. On Monday James Addison, a local athlete of reputation, easily threw all-comers. Mr. Jack McKechnie's humorous songs were popular; and the members of the Empire sketch company—Miss Marie Rose, Mr. Jack Marson, and Mr. Archie Murray—appeared with their usual success. Both houses were densely crowded.

ACCRINGTON.—Prince's Theatre.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. B. Ormerod; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. E. Barnes.—The Melodrama Syndicate, Ltd., is presenting the exciting drama Sexton Blake here this week. In the title-rôle Mr. Jack Fortescue acts with power and ability, and scores a decided success; Mr. Henry Nelson as Farmer Blackburn is eminently satisfactory, and Mr. Russell Barry as the son, Roger Blackburn, furnishes an excellent portrayal; Mr. Heaton Grey is well suited to the character of Randolf Lovell, and Mr. Stephen Nicholls is an acceptable Squire Lovell; Mr. Mayo Stanley as Tinker does good work, and Mr. Algernon Syms acts impressively as Rev. Edward Grey; Miss Pauline E. Straus impersonates the part of Marjorie Lovell with charming sympathy and grace; Miss Cicile E. Anson submits a meritorious performance as Philadelphia Kate, and Miss Lilla Norden makes the most of the part of Euphemia Pattacake.

New Hippodrome.—Proprietors, the Accrington Hippodrome Co.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Walter Mould.—The leading feature here this week is W. Selkirk's juvenile spectacle All Scotch, performed by 100 local children, and it is being received with great applause. David Poole, the novelty ventriloquist, supplies an exceedingly clever turn; the Three Orros are capital gymnasts, and Ernesto displays much skill as an equilibrist; the Lecardo Brothers gave an admirable performance as comedy acrobats, and Miss Suzie Dole is a very pleasing comedienne; the Sivronis present an interesting comedy act; Tennyson and Wallis are popular comedians, and Miss Leoni Dixon a bright comedienne. The Hippodrome Bioscope concludes.

ALDERSHOT.—Theatre Royal and Hippodrome.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Clarence Sounes; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Gladwin.—A good all-round programme is presented by the management this week. Miss Ethel Beech and her troupe of six lady dancers, in a song scena, head the bill. Miss Beech (who was principal boy in Puss in Boots last year) sings several songs to advantage, and the troupe give an effective chorus and dance. Miss Madge Osmond looks the immaculate dandy she is "programmed" in her songs "Good-bye to bachelor days" and "Bertie of the Guards," her style being highly appreciated. Captain Kettle as a comedy coin and card manipulator keeps the audience amused with his clever patter during his juggling. Miss Ada Gatley performs gracefully on the slack wire, and executes several smart balancing feats; The Happy Convict, a sketch by Mr F. Bertram and company, with Mr. Rolando Martin as the convict, provokes laughter; Fred Rolando is amusing with song and patter; and several interesting pictures are shown.

ASHINGTON.—Miners' Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Fred Gould.—Mr. Frank Adair and company are here this week with The Heathen and the Christian. Mr. Adair gives a powerful rendering of Li, the avenger; Mr. Hugh Newburn is good as Lung Hi; the George Berresford of Mr. Dudley Wynton is a finished reading; Mr. Herbert Robinson makes an admirable Lieutenant Lord Annendale; Miss Fay Garnet Vayne is very pleasing as May Berresford; Miss Adeline Raby renders the rôle of Mira Sampson exceptionally well. The comedy is good, Miss Eva Reed as Becky Fibbins, the love-sick slavey, being remarkably funny.

ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE.—Theatre Royal.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Chas. Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr. Chas. Revill, jun.—Messrs. Hardie and Von Leer's company is here with the popular drama Two Lancashire Lassies in London. Mr. Chris. Mason as Samuel Hallett, brother of the two girls, gives a wholehearted and earnest interpretation to a character which calls for much vigour; in the rôle of John Edmunds, an inventor, we have a gifted exponent in Mr. George Rammell; Mr. J. Edward Fletcher as the Rev. Frank Selby is the true self-sacrificing friend and defender of the poor and distressed; Mr. Arthur Elwyn as the manufacturer and speculator Jonas Deane, secures favour; Mr. Herbert Sidney found a character in Edward Langley suited to his capacity; Messrs. Miller and Walmsley do well as two burglars; Constance and Nelly, the two girls from Lancashire, are represented by Misses Laura Walker and Alice Defoe, each study being good; Miss Stanley Burt acts well as Bessie Edmunds, and Miss Evelyn Shaw finds ample scope for her special abilities in the part of Jane Adelaide Blomfield; the child Lucy is made lovable and intelligent by Miss Marie Corri.

Empire Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident-Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Leach; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Jesse Burslem.—Richard Corbin and his dogs submit an interesting demonstration; Mabel Robarts is a delightful song-stress, and her accompanying illustrations are very apropos; Carr and Rose, in A Winning Double, as Fred and Ada secure the favour of the audience by able impersonation of character and good singing; J. W. Gallagher is an entertaining comedian, and Edwin Garth as a quaint dame in a comedy scena, causes much laughter; Major Moss renders with expression and feeling several good old songs; the Ray Hearn Trio in The Model Husband sketch win favour by some capital acting; Ethel Loftus is a comedienne with a taking style; Dorien, assisted by Mlle. Doritz, wins applause in a novel "electro-mechanical comedy"; Marie Jones is a successful protean artist, she presents her quick-change novelty, assisted by Ernest Munro, and enacts six different characters in the sketch, The Way to Win a Bet. The Bioscope picture is The Little Violinist.

The New Pavilion.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Leech; Assistant-Manager, Mr. C. F. Wilson.—This week we have a coloured dramatic picture, The Way to Happiness. Another film depicting the heroism of a child, and a powerful drama, is that called The White-gloved Man. Carried Away by an Eagle is sensational, and the comic series raises plenty of hearty laughter. The vaudeville artists for the week are Conan Dewson, a wonderful mimic at the piano; Esaw and Jacob, Hebrew boy comedians, introduce some amusing comic duets, expert dancing, and patter.

The Picturedrome.—Lessees, Messrs. Weisker Bros.; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Marks.—There is a number of good pictures here this week including The Miracle of Notre Dame, the old-world story of a starving musician buffeted about by all classes, who seeks sanctuary in the famous church. The Birth of the British Gun from the Middle Ages is a most interesting cinematograph production. The comic element looms large. The Fortune of Baptiste Durand is a screamer, and The Microbe Fear, The Broken Heart, I've Lost the Ball are all very amusing. There are interlude artists who sing and dance.

ATTERCLIFFE.—Palace Theatre of Varieties.—Proprietor, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Acting-Manager, Mr. Bert Dent.—An attractive programme is headed by Mr. Leoni Clarke, with his novel and interesting family of highly-trained animals and birds; a popular turn is that of Blanche and Diacoff, in their "teacup track" cycle act, in connection with which local competitions are arranged nightly; Dolly, Agnes, and Maud, the "singing box-makers," receive hearty recognition for their vocal selections; the Gascoignes combine ability and comedy in their juggling and equilibristic act; a pleasing musical comedy turn is provided by Stidder and Dunbar; and the bill is also contributed to by Miss Ena Corelli, a juvenile vocalist and dancer; Mr. Fred Dunstone, comedian; and the up-to-date "Attergraph" pictures.

BACUP.—New Court Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Frank Denman-Wood.—Mr. Edward Leroy's company is appearing here this week with Rags. Brant-Yorel is portrayed by Mr. Edward Leroy in an earnest and manly manner; Mr. Charles E. Lambert is quaint as Major Timothy Seymour; Mr. F. E. Chalcot as Charles Kingston makes the most of a small part; as Pedro Valasquez Mr. Frank Wheatley gives a skilful representation of the villain, and is ably assisted by Mr. Arthur J. Saunders as Joe Crossley. As the nigger George Washington Mr. Alfred Lafolle is highly amusing, and his singing and dancing are fully appreciated; Mr. Martin J. Moar is well placed as Sheriff Wilson; Miss Hilda May is a captivating Esme Deering; Miss Louie Walton as Mrs. Timothy Seymour is highly amusing; and as Rags Miss Blanche Leroy gives a clever rendering.

BARNSLEY.—Theatre Royal.—Manager, Mr. A. C. Mitchell.—Mr. Fred Granville's Babes in the Wood is playing to good houses. Mr. H. Val Morgan makes a good Demon King; as the wicked Baron Mr. Norman Hall is very funny; Mr. Alf. Brooks is very diverting as Araminta; the Kimberley Boys are the "roughens" of the show; and they give an amusing performance; the Babes are in the capable hands of Dot Pardy and Violet Wilson; Robin Hood, as played by Miss Mary Poulton is very popular; Miss Hettie Lind pleases as Maid Marion. The scenery is of a gorgeous character, and clever specialities are introduced.

Empire Palace.—Managing-Director, Will Smithson; Assistant-Manager, J. J. Tennant.—Excellent houses are the order this week. Mr. Victor Widdicombe's company tops the bill with a refined sketch entitled Her Devonshire Dad; the Bob Hanlon troupe give a clever gymnastic performance; Mr. Sydney James's Strolling Players provide an excellent vocal number; the Tossing Austins, American comedy jugglers, Reg. Bolton, the "comedy incubator," the Bros. Lydamore, comedians, J. H. Wakefield, singer of coon songs, and the Sisters Edwardes, vocalists and drummers, with the Palacescope, make up the bill.

Public Hall.—Proprietors, the Mayor, Aldermen, and Corporation; Manager, E. Cheesman.—Mr. Jasper Redfearn's vaudeville company is here. Zeynard's Lilliputians top the bill; the evergreen Billy Richardson, the stump orator, creates much amusement; Rousby and Rene, in the quaint Lancashire comedy Fine Feathers give an amusing show; Miss Molly Doon is a refreshing and dainty soubrette; Crawford and Rosslyn submit a good topical turn; the Paolo Troupe of acrobats are wonderfully clever; the Birkenhead family give a new vocal act; and Fred Fosdike sings well. The pictures are, as usual, excellent.

BARROW-IN-FURNESS. — Royalty Theatre and Opera House.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Stone.—Mr. Seymour Hicks' company in The Gay Gordons is here. Mr. Charles Childerstone is a most capable Angus Graeme, and Miss Dorothy Giles an interesting and entertaining Peggy Quainton; Mr. Edward Carlton's humorous Nervy Nat, Miss Emily Levettez's Janet McLeod, Miss Daisy Burrell's Victoria Siddons, Miss Louie Emery's Charlotte Siddons, and Miss Tessa D'Alberti's Mary McLeod are all well played.

His Majesty's Theatre.—Lessees and Managers, Mr. and Mrs. Calvert Routledge.—Messrs. J. Fred Watson and Ernest E. Owen's company in How Women are Slandered is here. Miss Maisie Rudsdell is excellent as Annie Ruby; Mr. Courtney Robinson is a capital Major Sterling; and Miss Beatrice Hone as Mary Warburton and Miss Phyllis Elton as Madge Gilroy are exceptionally good.

Tivoli.—Lessee and Manager, Signor R. Pepi; Acting-Manager, Mr. Edgar Laban.—Joe Almasio and his assistant are at the top of the bill here this week. They perform some exceedingly difficult feats, and the comedy introduced is excruciatingly funny. Park's Eton Boys and Girls give a capital selection of vocal items and dances; Hunter and Maris are clever comedians and dancers; Charles Rowen sings some good songs; Leo Trainer has some quaint patter. Vernon's Bioscope adds considerably to the entertainment with some good pictures.

BARRY DOCK.—Theatre Royal and Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. Arthur Carlton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Brogden.—Miss Ida Molesworth and Mr. Mark Blow's company, in At Cripple Creek, opened here on Monday. Mr. Austen Mulroy gives a fine delineation of the part Joe Mayfield; Martin Mason finds a capable exponent in Mr. Geo. Hanbury, who is well assisted by Mr. Roy Jackson (Manuel Alvarez); Mr. Reginald H. West adds to the success by his character-study of Wahketah; Mr. Horace Stewart (Ben White) and Mr. Will Hook (Reggie Howard) are effective in their respective parts; Miss Agnes Verity faithfully portrays Dynamite Ann; and Miss Dorothy Hart scores as Belle Gordon.

BATH.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Egbert Lewis; Acting-Manager, Mr. Lewis A. Long.—You Never Can Tell, which was seen here as recently as September last, is again being staged. Mr. Trevor Lowe is inimitable as the waiter; Mr. Leslie Hamer has greatly improved as Valentine; Mr. J. Edward Pearce is convincing as Fergus Crampton; Mr. George Howard is as cute as ever as Bohun; and Miss Clara Earle as cheeky and bright as heretofore. The newcomers are Miss Lena Halliday, really excellent as Mrs. Clandon; Miss Muriel Dole, who scores heavily as Gloria Clandon; Mr. Percy Crawford, with a typical sketch of Philip Clandon; and Mr. Gerald Mirrielees, capital as Finch McComas.

Palace Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager Mr. Chas. Schuberth.—Entertainment of a refined and amusing order is that of Leslie's Comedy Cadets, who are scoring a legitimate success in Lights Out. Arayama provides a sensational act which includes wire and bamboo walking, also barrel feet tricks; Pat Lynch's dancing is loudly applauded; St. Ruth and Conyers, lady vocalists, sing duets far above the average in artistic merit; the Melbournes give a comedy act that creates no little merriment; Godfrey James, the singing collier, on a return visit, is heard to advantage in some well chosen ballads; the Ringling Trio tumble, walk, and dance on stilts, and in so doing add plenty of funny business; and Raymond's Bio-tableaux are fully up to their usual high standard.

BEDFORD.—Royal County Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. E. Graham Falcon; Acting-Manager, Mr. Walter R. Wilson—Mr. Tom Craven's successful drama, When a Lass Loves, is being played here this week. Mr. Arthur Cornell cleverly portrays the unselfish and straightforward Dr. Allan Crass; Mr. William Riley is good as the callous villain, and is ably assisted in his sinister dealings by Miss Janet Warden as Cynthia Bridge; humour is unobtrusively sandwiched between the pathetic incidents by Mr. Louis Palgrave as Slack, Mr. Percy Cahill as Reggie Stapleton, and Miss P. Rickmount as an Anglo-American chorus girl; Miss Nona Hoffe is exceptionally well fitted for the part of Constance Lane.

BELFAST. — Theatre Royal. — Managing-Director, Mr. Fred W. Warden; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. S. Salmond.—The attraction here this week is The Gambler's Daughter, produced by Miss Adria Hill and Mr. Robert Ayrton's company. The dual rôle of Mildred and Miriam Grant was skilfully played by Miss Adria Hill, and Mr. Robert Ayrton furnished a capital impersonation of Desmond O'Dare; Mr. Richard Pitt played the rôle of John Grant creditably; to the iniquities of Stephen Brand full justice was done by Mr. C. Russell; Mr. Harry Monte furnished a humorous impersonation of Solomon Solomons, and Mr. Basil Probyn was all that could be desired as Jack Grant; Mr. Fred Lawrence cleverly interpreted the rôle of Ralph Gillman.

Grand Opera House.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fred W. Warden; Acting-Manager, Mr. James M. McCann.—Mr. Norman V. Norman and Miss Beatrice Wilson and company opened here on Monday with Anthony Hope's play, The Adventure of Lady Ursula. The rôle of Lady Ursula Barrington was delightfully played by Miss Wilson. Honours were also achieved by Mr. Norman, who furnished a remarkably clever impersonation of the young nobleman, Sir George Sylvester. Miss Hilda Forbes-Phillips made a bewitching Dorothy; Mr. Frederick Lock ably sustained the rôle of the Earl of Hassenden; Miss Ethel Coleridge was well suited as Mrs. Fenton; and the part of the Rev. Mr. Blimboe was excellently interpreted by Mr. Cyril Percy. Mr. Norman Leslie was admirable as Mr. Castleton.

Royal Hippodrome.—Managing-Directors, Messrs. Fred Willmott and Will Sley; Resident-Manager, Mr. Henry T. Downs.—The favourite comedian, Mr. George Robey, returns here, and on Monday again achieved a hit with his capital character songs; Hanvarr and Anna Lee delight all with their juggling feats; the ventriliquial act of Mr. Harry Vardon is one of the best; Miss Ray Maskell is a dashing comedienne and fine dancer, and the Four Scoreys introduce with much effect their musical mélange. The feats of the Idania Lady Gymnasts are really remarkable, and also here are Mario, juggler and equilibrist; Mr. C. Pastor, comedian; and the Hipposcope.

Empire Theatre of Varieties, Ltd.—General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Acting-Manager, Mr. John A. Walker.—The leading position here is filled by Webb's Electrical Quick-change Scenas; Bonnie Goodwin's Apollo Piccaninnies, assisted by talented Miss Lily Vine, furnish a capable performance; the Three Sisters Grosvenor are delightful singers of popular melodies; Mr. Ted E. Box's funny songs create much laughter; and a welcome return visit is being paid by Mr. George Westland, Scotch comedian. Baker and Balfe are aptly described as operatic xylophone experts, and Miss Grace Langley, comedienne and dancer, and the Bioscope are also here.

New Alhambra Theatre.—General-Manager, Mr. Will White.—Among the pictures exhibited here may be mentioned The Gentleman Burglar, A Drama on the Sea Coast, A Gallant French Guardsman, &c. Also appearing are Wills and Warlock, speciality comedians, and Mr. Dan Tandy, Irish comedian.

St. George's Hall.—General-Manager, Mr. Fred L. Arthur.—This week the following pictures have been exhibited:—A Dumb Hero, Custom House Officials, Honesty Rewarded, &c. Matthew's Minstrels gain much favour for their excellent performance, and Miss Violet De Vere, a charming comedienne, also appears.

Cliftonville Hall.—General-Manager, Mr. O. E. Laumann.—The engagement of Prof. Monahan has been a great success, and the many patrons of skating here are looking forward to the Linen Carnival, which takes place on the 24th inst.

BILSTON. — New Theatre Royal. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. John M. Dawson.—At the World's Mercy is proving a capital attraction this week, Mr. Carr Loates' company doing full justice to the piece. Miss Polly Spooner is an expert dancer, and soon becomes first favourite as Kitty Knott; and as Skittles Mr. W. H. Irving does excellent work as Charley Smart. Miss Daisy Jago is good as Alice Lloyd; and Miss C. Carter does well as Dot. Mr. Geo. D. Knight renders efficient service as Morris Goldstein; and Mr. W. Melvyn makes the most of Captain Manly.

BIRKENHEAD. — New Theatre Royal. — Sole Lessee, Mr. W. W. Kelly; Acting-Manager, Mr. Reginald Grant; Secretary, Miss Isabel Morris.—Mr. Wentworth Croke's company is appearing here in the new version of Mr. Hall Caine's play The Christian. Mr. Henry Renouf is the John Strong, and fills the part with much earnestness, receiving admirable support from Miss Doris Gilham, who gives a fine rendering of Glory Quayle. Mr. Geo. R. Montford is an excellent Lord Robert Ure, making every point tell; Horatio Drake is well impersonated by Mr. Oswald Marshall; Father Lamplugh is impressively performed by Mr. Edwin Ling; and the important rôle of Archdeacon Wealthy could not be in better hands than those of Mr. C. J. Turpin. Miss Sinna St. Clair is a good Mrs. Callender; Miss Margaret Brodie is an unexceptionable Pollie Love; and Mesdames May Dudley, Minna Renouf, Katherine Maude, and Messrs. B. R. Holloway and Arthur E. Maskell also accord valuable assistance. The scenic effects are elaborate.

Argyle Theatre of Varieties.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. D. J. Clarke.—Mlle. Zona Vevey, a charming and accomplished vocalist, assisted by Herr Max Erard, pianist, is on a return visit. Hayman and Franklin, amusing Hebrew comedians, furnish an excellent turn; as also does Mr. Tom Leamore, the popular comedian. Miss Sable Fern, comedienne, is a general favourite; Miss May Henderson, the dusky queen, has again made a hit; the comedians include Mr. Harry Anderson, Mr. Frank H. Fox, Mr. Jack North, and Mr. Harry Brown, coloured artist; Carney and Armstrong are entertaining patterers; and Brown's Royal Bioscope adds variety to the programme. Mr. Ernest Denney ably conducts.

Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. Frank Weston.—A very capable company comprises the Three Meers, tight-wire performers; John Le Hay and company, musical comedians; Philip Levord, illusionist; the Fimans, comedians; the Sisters Draycott, duettists; Harry Beasley, comedian; Miss Ethel Stephenson, contralto; Mr. Flake White, cartoonist; Miss Annie Lang, top-boot dancer; Leonard Gale, comedian; and the Hippo. pictures.

BIRMINGHAM.—Theatre Royal.—Managing-Director, Mr. Tom B. Davis; Acting-Manager, Mr. Philip Rodway.—The rush continues here this week to see Havana, which Mr. George Edwardes's company is playing. Figuring prominently as Consuelo is Miss Dorothy Ward, a local young lady, who, since her début a few seasons ago at the Alexandra pantomime here, has made great progress. Her portrayal of the spirited heroine lacks nothing, either in grace or ability. Miss Jessie Broughton makes the rôle of Mamie very prominent with her fine singing of "Zara"; Miss Veronica Brady acts and sings delightfully as Anita; Miss Florence Phillips dances some bewitching measures as the cigarette girl, Tita; Miss Gladys Fontaine gives force and personality to the character of Isabelita; and the other young ladies of the company show distinct ability as well as charm. Mr. George Gregory as Nix, the bo'sun, has a part in which he revels, and his acting is irresistible; Mr. Maitland Marler impersonates the yacht's boy, Reginald Brown, with perfect success; and Mr. Frank Hector as the Don, Mr. Edward O'Neill as Diego, Mr. Fred Allandale as Charteris, and Mr. T. C. Maxwell, in his dashing assumption of Villiers, score.

Prince of Wales's Theatre.—Lessees, Messrs. Rodgers, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. J. F. Graham; Acting-Manager, Mr. Henry Johnston.—Boy Blue, so far from declining, seems to increase in favour, though this week must be the last. There is no doubt that Mr. Graham has scored. Last night was allotted Mr. Tom B. Murray for his benefit, a thoroughly-deserved distinction for the comedian.

Alexandra Theatre.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Lester Collingwood; Business-Manager, Mr. Fred Bernardo; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. T. Guest.—Little Red Riding Hood gives every sign of eclipsing all Mr. Collingwood's former successes. Last night was Anniversary Night, followed by the Alexandra Pantomime Ball, when "sounds of revelry" would be rife.

Metropole Theatre.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Andrew Melville; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Hindle Taylor.—The Great White Chief is inspiring tremendous applause here with its strong, romantic situations and fine company, presented by Mr. Lingford Carson. Mr. Hugh Brady portrays the dumb chief, Reindeer, in a masterly way; and Mr. Charles Homer makes a capital Leo Stanley, the white chief. Mr. J. Dobson Clyde retains his rôle of the rival chief, Sparrow Hawk, which he plays with a fine grip; Mr. George Bullen again gives full emphasis to the part of Hartley Deane; Miss Polly Denville invests the character of Latika with all its native charm; Miss Dulcie Lawrence fits the part of Hester Stafford well; the "sufferings" of George Rupert Walker, as exemplified by Mr. Leonard Maitland, cause uproarious mirth; and Miss Amy Ross Clyde scores as Martha.

Carlton Theatre, Saltley.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. James Alexander.—Fine houses have been the rule here with Mr. T. Morton Powell's Greed of Gold company. Mr. James Jarrett has gained chief interest with his graphic impersonation of the dumb man, Tom Welstead; Mr. Henry Parr repels and yet attracts with his powerful portrayal of the unnatural husband, Harry Hood; Mr. Alf. Stretton gives an earnest and manly tone to the part of the young surgeon and future husband, Arthur Errol; Miss Maude M. Powell portrays the wife's rôle, Dora, in a highly satisfactory and sympathetic style; while the comic relief is safe in the hands of Mr. Charles Eldred Wood as Conn Creamer and Miss Florrie Hayes as Patty.

Theatre Royal, Aston.—Lessee, Mr. Charles Barnard; General-Manager, Mr. E. Hewitson; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. J. Robertson.—For Wife and Kingdom, the new drama, with Messrs. Glenville and Osmond's company, is scoring here. Mr. Mathew H. Glenville's presence in the rôle of Capt. Maximilian creates the utmost interest, his acting being such that the audience rise from their seats to applaud; Miss Hettie Zillwood as the Grand Duchess acts as if to the position born, her pathos and intensity eliciting the fullest sympathy; Mr. Albert Guyon as the evil-working Baron is exploited to full advantage; Mr. J. Sutton Pateman takes the position finely as the General; Miss Margaret R. Frame renders the rôle of Camille very cleverly; and Mr. Fred Osmond as Karl Ludhayr, assisted by Miss Alice Buckland, &c., makes good comedy.

Palace Theatre, Bordesley.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Goodwin Woodward.—The Power of the Cross is seen here, with Mr. Geo. A De Gray and company. Mr. De Gray's acting as the Baron Curzola creates a marked impression on the audience, who are held fascinated to the end; Mr. Robert Hall plays the secretary, Fairfax, with much success; Mr. Alexander J. Haviland as Dr. Leslie Fairfax the hero, acts with fine, manly feeling; Miss Annie Hylton gives a poignant ring to the rôle of Margaret Seaton; Miss Stella Carmichael shows the passions and vices of Rita Lascelles cleverly; Miss Phyllis Vaughan's acting as the heroine, Blanche Kingsley, brings the audience into complete sympathy with the rôle; Mr. Tyrone Power as the O'Dowd undoubtedly scores; and Miss Etta Turner as Dolly Gray creates much amusement.

Grand Theatre of Varieties.—Resident-Manager, Mr. E. Foster.—Tom Foy and his company in the sketch, The Yorkshire Lad in London, are entertaining crowded audiences here. An oriental scena, A Vision of Japan, is presented by O Hana San and company. This is a charming turn, and is much appreciated. Mabel Lait, Daley Cooper, and company have a musical farce, Passing the Time, which gives scope for some good singing and dancing; The Enchanted Glen, presented by the Ten Zerbinis, is a clever and novel turn, and deserves the highest praise. The programme is exceptionally good, and includes Verno and Voyce in their Sporting Luck turn, the Eight of Hearts, Steve McCarthy, Sadie Simpson, and Bert Woodward.

Empire Palace.—Resident-Manager, Mr. A. W. Matcham.—The programme here is headed by Le Roy, Talma, and Bosco, whose difficult conjuring feats are most cleverly accomplished. Another popular turn is Marie Kendal, who has some new songs, which are loudly encored. The Chas Fisher Opera Company are paying us a return visit with Il Trovatore, which is rendered in a most artistic manner. Other prominent turns are those of Nance Elder, Beatrice Bonnie, Allen Hanbury, Stylo, Tom B. Finglass, Bennie Barrow, and Amy Anderson and company in a sketch, On and Off.

Hippodrome. — Resident-Manager, Mr. Harry Lyons.—Julian Rose, whose Hebrew patter is most amusing, is appreciated, Renroft introduces a highly trained horse, Effie White has a good scena, The Spirit of the Cave, and M. Payen presents a "pierrot automaton gymnast illusion" turn with success.

Gaiety Theatre.—Proprietors, Birmingham Gaiety Theatre of Varieties, Ltd.; General-Manager, Mr. Albert Bushill; Musical-Director, Mr. F. Leek.—A bright and original sketch, The Belle of the Orient, forms the premier attraction here. It is capitally played by an excellent company under the leadership of Joe Peterman, who portrays Nevinski, the money-lender, and is responsible for much of the fun. He is supported by a company including Florence Lee as the Belle. Wilson Hallett is clever as a mimic of childhood; Conan and Doyle are smart comedians and dancers; De Breans, fancy Japanese entertainers, are smart; Tom Collins (comedian), Willis and Mackenzie (vocalists), and Beattie Kent (comedienne) complete a strong company.

King's Hall.—Sole Owners and Managers, Messrs. J. P. Moore and B. Kennedy.—A splendid series of pictures is being shown here this week. Pervis and Par prove popular as comedy duettists, and Master W. Travis sings several pleasing songs. The roller-skating rink is also an attraction.

Curzon Hall.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. Waller Jeffs; General-Manager, Mr. Irving Bosco.—Some highly interesting pictures are shown here, including a set of views illustrating a visit to the Gold Mines of Klondyke, while a picture drama of absorbing interest is The Cabin Boy's Sister. The variety element is supplied by that popular vocalist Miss Ducie Saunderson, who introduces a patriotic song, "An Englishman's home is his castle."

Queen's Hall.—Sole Owners and Managers, Messrs. J. P. Moore and B. Kennedy.—The pictures shown at this hall maintain their popularity. Vaudeville items are given by Barney Deeley, a local comedian, and the Victorias, equilibrists.

BISHOP AUCKLAND.—Eden Theatre.—Lessees, Messrs. R. Addison, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. J. Huntley.—Mr. Geo. D. Day's company is paying a return visit in The Prodigal Son. Mr. Albert Ward and Mr. Alfred Goddard were well applauded for their powerful portrayals of the two brothers, Oscar and Magnus; Mr. Jackson Hayes is an able Stephen Magnusson, and Mr. David Beattie gives a finished impersonation of Oscar Neilson. The Pastor, the Sheriff, and Dr. Olsen are in the capable hands of Messrs. A. J. Williams, R. C. Brooksmith, and J. E. Savery. Miss Dorrie Roberts is a successful Thora and as Elin is still more effective. A deal of praise is due to Miss Pearla Gardner for her striking portrayal of Helga Neilson; Miss Maud Locker is a clever Margaret Neilson; and as Anna Miss Florence Lovell is quite adequate to the part. The scenic effects are good.

BLACKPOOL.—Her Majesty's Opera House.—General-Manager, Mr. J. R. Huddlestone.—Mr. E. Oswald Brooks' company is presenting The New Housemaid here this week. Mr. Howard L. Tracy as the Hon. Bertie Rashleigh plays his part characteristically, and Mr. Brember Wills is seen to advantage as Peter Pinkerton, J.P. Detective Doom has a capital exponent in Mr. P. Ramsey Forman, and Miss Babs Stuart gives an excellent rendering of Dolcie. Brokers Ahead forms a most enjoyable curtain-raiser.

Grand Theatre.—Owner and Manager, Mr. T. Sergenson.—Terence, an Irish comedy, is being played here this week by a company under the direction of Mr. F. J. Richardson. The acting is all that could be desired. A more delightful Maureen D'Arcy could not be imagined than Miss Lillian Hallows, and there are some excellent points in the character of Lady Nita Fanshawe as played by Miss Gwladys Morris. Miss Hilda Dick as Mrs. Duckett and Miss Elsie Wood as Mrs. Perry are also good. The title-rôle is sustained with considerable skill by Mr. Edgar Kent, Capt. Lovell is in the capable hands of Mr. Philip Leslie, and Mr. Ernest A. Douglas successfully handles the part of Sir Greville Fanshawe. Mention should also be made of the capital character-sketch presented by Mr. J. R. La Fane as Patrick Ryan. A Silent Woman serves as curtain-raiser.

Palace.—General-Manager, Mr. Geo. H. Harrop; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Waller.—King and Benson, in a musical burlesque, worthily occupy first place here. The Avoloe, whose acrobatic feats are well known, are also well received. Sybil Montague is a pleasing ballad vocalist, Walter Munroe is a popular Irish comedian, the Four Jumels contribute a clever musical act, Muriel Harding sings nicely, Victor Travers is a smart comedian and dancer, the Camplins provide an amusing turn, and Benson and Rose appear in a sketch.

BLYTH.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Arthur C. Moody.—Mr. William McHison and his talented company have paid a successful return visit here, opening with Julius Cæsar. Mr. Mollison as Marcus met with a hearty reception; Mr. William Calvert, in the title-rôle, was highly successful, adequate support being rendered by the company. The Bonnie Brier Bush and David Garrick were billed for the remainder of the week.

Hippodrome.—The Johnson-Burns Fight film forms the chief attraction at the above popular picture house, and a series of amusing films are included.

BOLTON.—Theatre Royal, Ltd.—Managing Director, Mr. J. F. Elliston; Acting-Manager, Mr. John Moncur.—Good houses have this week greeted Messrs. G. M. Polini and Austin Melford's company with The Silver King. The part of Wilfred Denver loses none of its strength in the capable hands of Mr. Fred B. Daviss; Miss Madge Morley gives a pleasing rendition of Nellie Denver; and Miss Flossie Hale Daviss captivates her audience by her winsomeness as Cissie Denver. Mr. Edward J. George again appears in his old part of Jaikes; and Mr. E. Stanton Sharp is a successful "Spider." The piece is well staged. On Wednesday afternoon a flying matinée was given by Miss Horniman's company, when Bernard Shaw's Candida was presented to a large and appreciative aud

BOURNEMOUTH.—THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Proprietors, Messrs. David Allen and Sons; Sole Lessee, Mr. Mouillot; Manager, Mr. Hubert Dunbar.—Mr. George Dance's company is presenting The Girls of Gottenberg here this week. Mr. Bertie Wright as Max Moddelkopf keeps the house in roars of laughter; Miss Simeta Marsden as Mitzi wins encores for her cleverly sung songs; Mr. Tom Shelford as Otto is capital, and his perfectly finished dancing and business is much appreciated; Miss Geraldine Burne, in the absence of Miss Maisie North, took the part of Elsa, and gave much promise for the future; Miss May Marshall as Clementine helps to make the performance a success. Mention must be made of the valuable services of Mr. Otto Manns, the musical director.

BRADFORD.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee, Mr. John Hart; General-Manager, Mr. T. F. Doyle; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Richardson.—Mr. George Alexander's company is here with Mr. Alfred Sutro's The Builder of Bridges. Mr. Stephen T. Ewart is a convincing Edward Thursfield; Miss Rosalind Ivan depicts the mental anguish of the complex character of Dorothy Faringay; Mr. Henry Ludlow is an emotional Arnold Faringay; as Walter Gresham Mr. Brisco Owen does well; Mr. W. R. Staveley makes a bluff and hearty Sir Henry Kilick; Mr. Eric S. Ward's Peter Holland is a commendable effort; and Miss Claire Pauncefort is delightfully humorous as the comely Mrs. Debney.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Councillor Francis Laidler; Acting-Manager, Mr. N. Hepworth.—The long and successful run of Red Riding Hood was brought to a close on Saturday. On Monday evening last the regular dramatic season was commenced with a return visit of The Village Blacksmith. Messrs. Dottridge, Longden, and Livesey's company again presents the drama, with Mr. Sam Livesey in his accustomed place in the title-rôle, which fits him finely. He has excellent support, notably from Miss Kathleen Saunders as the stricken child of hero and heroine. In the latter rôle Miss Maggie Edwards acts with ability. Mr. Albert Sinclair is effective as the athletic scoundrel Captain Leo, and Mr. Fred Haming contributes liberally to the broad humour of the play.

THE EMPIRE.—Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Percival Craig.—Fred Karno's comedians are here again, eliciting roars of laughter with their sketch The Bailiff. Albert Bruno in the title-rôle is irresistible, and is capitally supported. Helen Forsyth, in an illustrated song of the wreck of the Queen (of which she was a survivor) arouses much interest; Ernest Clifford, comedian, is a clever wooden-shoe dancer; Watson's Royal fox-terriers are cleverly trained and put through an enjoyable performance by Ida Kessanley; Alice Maple is an acceptable comedienne and smart step-dancer; Cliff Ryland's funny jokes and quaint and original style prove irresistible; as a whistler and a mimic Alf Holt is both amusing and clever; Maudie Francis, a juvenile comedienne and dancer of promise, submits a bright turn; and there are some very entertaining pictures by the Bioscope.

PALACE THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. E. Harrison.—Jock Whiteford's irresistible Scotch comedy is much relished by the patrons here this week; Gladys Witton, girl contralto, is received with marks of favour; Geo. Bendon's "white coon" songs are vigorously rendered; an excellent and novel juggling entertainment is presented by the Cromwells; Will Lindsay, the Yorkshire comedian of recent pantomime fame here, is eliciting hearty laughter; in their "African Gambols" the Tintos are very expert and entertaining; Bernard and Weston are amusing comedians and dancers; as a Scottish comedienne Victoria Cross adds considerably to her reputation as a pantomime favourite here in Fun in a Café the Seven Walfrunas do some amusing knockabout and comedy business; and Raymond's Bio-Tableaux are an interesting feature of the evening's amusement.

BRIGHOUSE. — ALBERT THEATRE. — Lessees, Messrs. Beanland and Emerson; Manager, Mr. Chas. H. Beanland.—The principal attraction here is John Grun Marx, termed the modern Hercules, whose performance is well received; the Four Dorians on the trapeze are clever, and Ada and Marie Webb give a novel swimming act in the tank; the Two Eltons cause roars of laughter with their comedy bar act; Kydd and Kydd, a pair of funny comedians, are loudly applauded; the Sara Trio give a neat representation of white statues; the Three Royal Temples are well received; and Wallie Gilbert, descriptive vocalist, Syd Crossley, comedian, and the animated pictures by the Loyal Dominion Co. complete a first-class programme.

BRIGHTON. — GRAND THEATRE. — Managing-Director, Mr. Ernest Gates; General-Manager, Mr. Ben Court.—Mrs. Frank Bateman and Mr. Stuart Lomath's company opened here on Monday with No Wedding Bells for Her. Miss Lizzie Montague (Mrs. Frank Bateman) gave a highly artistic impersonation of Lola Delaspièrre; Mr. Stuart Lomath was distinctly effective as Frank Hatherleigh; Mr. Percy Shaw was well placed as Dick Delva; Mr. C. Coleman made an admirable Montague Blair; Miss Mabel Durham submitted a capital impersonation of Doris Fane; Mr. H. Aynsleigh achieved great success as Abney Durham; Mr. Geo. Herbert as Horatio Fane and Miss Nellie Wilson as Mrs. Eastman were effective; and the remaining characters were satisfactorily sustained. Yesterday evening (Friday), at Miss Lizzie Montague's complimentary benefit, she appeared in a specially-dramatised version of Sapho.

ALHAMBRA.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Alfred Smith; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. A. Smith.—Lottie Lennox wins the heartiest of applause for her charmingly-rendered songs; the Five Vernons are highly accomplished xylophone specialists; the Haydns (Mabel and Rose) are delightful dancers; Argo is a clever mimic; Friscary, the original top-hat manipulator, is warmly received; Claude Ludo is a capital siffleur and coster comedian; Nellie Ridgway appears in a refined novelty act; Gladys Warren is successful in song and dance; Lillian O'Brien is a pleasing singer; and the Alhambra Picturegraph proves interesting.

HIPPODROME THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietors, Messrs. Barrasford and Smith; Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford; Resident-Manager, Mr. B. J. Brown.—Carrie Laurie's Kindergarten, in a comedy sketch, The Model School, provides a very popular turn; May Moore Duprez, "the jolly Dutch girl," is highly effective in song and dance; Cornalia and Eddie are amusing in their juggling entertainment; the Faludy Troupe, acrobats, perform some clever feats; Bliss and Bliss are excellent patter comedians and dancers; Rappo and Ella are skilful hand-balancers and equilibrists; Harry Simms, comedian, gives his songs in good style; Milner and Storey are entertaining comedy artists; Marie Vere is an artistic vocalist; and W. G. Wesley, character comedian, merits praise.

WEST PIER.—Secretary, Mr. A. W. Scholey.—Mr. Frank Weathersby's company is here this week with The Marriage of Kitty. Miss Helena Parsons gives a charming enactment of Katie Silverton (Kitty); Mr. Leslie Owen is very successful as Sir Reginald Belsize; Mr. Bert Morley acquits himself admirably as John Travers; Miss Kathleen Russell submits a finished portrayal of Mme. de Semiano; and the remaining characters are ably represented.

COURT THEATRE.—Lessee and Manageress, Mrs. Maud Barrasford.—The exhibition of animated pictures here continues to attract good houses. Love in Olden Times conveys a finely-acted drama; Drama in Sicily and When Love Will are stirring pictures; Galilio, Inventor of the Pendulum, is very interesting; The Dangers of the Deep is replete with sensational incidents; and much amusement is afforded by Love Tabloids and Love's Obstinacy. Mr. Reavley Long contributes illustrated songs in good style; and Mr. Arthur W. Briggs merits warm praise for his highly-descriptive pianoforte accompaniments to the series.

BRISTOL.—PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. James Macready Chute.—Mr. Oscar Asche, Miss Lily Brayton, and their company are here for the week. On Monday evening a fine performance of The Taming of the Shrew was given, Mr. Asche presenting his well-known exposition of Petruchio with his accustomed success, and Miss Brayton acting admirably as Katharina. The comedy was staged to perfection, and the various parts were cleverly undertaken. On Thursday evening the new play, adapted from Stanley Weyman's novel, "Count Hannibal," was performed for the first time on any stage. A full notice of the production appears in another column.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Ernest Carpenter; Resident-Manager, Mr. H. C. Alty.—This is the last week of the highly-successful pantomime Little Red Riding Hood. The company have all worked very hard for the general success, and much credit is due to them.

PALACE. — Local-Manager, Mr. Horace Livermore; Treasurer, Mr. F. J. V. Welchman.—Lew Lake and company are here for a second week, during which they present the little comedy-drama My Pal Jerry; Venturini, Continental illusion inventor, does some smart acts; the Three Orleans score with their songs and dancing; the Sisters Desmond are pleasing duettists and dancers; Hans and Lux obtain applause for cross-talk, &c.; Lily Arthur, comedienne and dancer, does well; and the performance concludes with up-to-date pictures.

EMPIRE. — Managing-Director, Mr. B. Pearce Lucas; Resident-Manager, Mr. Sid Macaire.—Daisy Lloyd Wood, comedienne, presents a clever and attractive turn; Deborah Volar is a refined and expressive vocalist; Pip Powell and Kate Vesey amuse with their smart duologue, "A Perfect Woman"; the Courtiers, under the direction of Paul Mill, are highly successful vocalists, &c.; Jack Smiles, comedian, has some good songs, and he is a first-class clog-dancer; Cyrus Dare, mimic at the piano, is successful; Marie Reeve is a pleasing comedienne; the Betsons do a good comedy cycling act; and Hemsley and Ambrose obtain applause for their motor car absurdity. Interesting animated pictures conclude.

COLSTON HALL.—This is the last week of Mr. Sidney Carter's New Century Pictures. There is an entirely new programme, embracing a wide range of subjects, both grave and gay. The season has been a successful one.

BROUGHTON.—VICTORIA THEATRE, LTD.—Manager and Licensee, Mr. J. Fred Watson.—Held in Bondage was presented to a good house on Monday by Messrs. H. W. Ebbutt and G. M. Copping, and gave much satisfaction. Villainy was well personified by Mr. Richard Vane as Prince Marazoff and Miss Aimee Grattan Clyndes as Leonie Devigne; Miss Constance Medwyn played the heroine Zara very successfully; the hero, Paul, was capably portrayed by Mr. Alex Wilson Wynne; comedy was well sustained by Mr. Matt Russell as Harry Dunn and Miss Kitty Russell as Lizette; Mr. Fred Elvin gave a good study of the sculptor Ivan Drouski; Mr. S. Langton as Sir John Hawthorne also introduced much humour; Miss Pattie Delshay as Princess Marazoff, Miss Annie Brunette as Baroness Valinski, Mr. L. Milner as Boris and as Petroff, Mr. Harold Knight as Dr. Petrovitch, Mr. Tom Ronald (Colonel Ispanoff), and Mr. W. Aldred (Karevitch) also did good work. The staging was admirable.

BURNLEY.—VICTORIA OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. W. C. Horner.—The boards of this house this week are occupied by Miss Lena Ashwell's company in Diana of Dobson's. Miss Emilie Polini is accorded hearty applause for her delightful representation of Diana, and high praise is due to Mr. Leslie Rea as Captain Bretherton; Mr. W. Kingsford Pearce presents cleverly the pompous Sir Jabez, and Miss Ada Palmer is very good as Mrs. Cantelupe; Miss Daisy England being a capable Miss Pringle.

EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. W. C. Horner.—A remarkable turn here is the acrobatics of the fourteen-year-old Denario Bros. James Walmsley, tenor, is greatly appreciated; the Miles Stavordale string quartette are pleasing musicians; Charles Mildare's bird whistling is effective; and Jack Hayton is a funny comedian with a style of his own; the Resas, jugglers, perform clever feats; Jock Mills is a Scotch comedian with laughable songs, and Jem Etherington, vocalist, sings well, Morrin and Cardiff are funny with patter and dancing, and A Moonlight Trip on the Nile is presented by the Empire Theatrescope.

PALACE THEATRE AND HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. Badcoe.—The Cattaneos, a troupe of clever acrobats, thoroughly please audiences here, and Rapoli, Herculean juggler, is loudly applauded for his difficult feats; Burnetti, character musician, gives clever impersonations; and Marie Forde is novel in song and dance; Hicks and Hunter give an extraordinary turn of dancing on ice skates; Geo. Lawrence is well received; Jack Hayworth, Scotch comedian, takes well; and up-to-date pictures are shown by Raymond's Biotableaux.

BURSLEM. — HIPPODROME. — Lessee, Mr. R. Colin; Manager, Mr. Matt. Hall.—The chief films are The Panther of Bengal, Imprints, and The Valet's Wife. Attractive turns are given by Les Kestrals, clever society acrobats; the Harolds, song and dance speciality artists; and Barney Noble, a clever singer and patterer.

BURTON-ON-TRENT. — OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Bennett; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. de Hague Body.—Mr. Allan Wilkie and company opened here on Monday with a fine performance of Othello. In the name-part Mr. Allan Wilkie (an actor of undoubted ability) played with pathos and intensity; Mr. Alexander Marsh did well as Iago; Mr. Frank Royde was good as Cassio; and Mr. Ian Fleming as Roderigo also was effective. Miss Haidee Gunn made a tender and passionate Desdemona; Miss Hunter Watts scored as Emilia.

BURY (Lancs.).—ROYAL.—Proprietors, Northern Theatres Co., Ltd.; General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling; Assistant Resident-Manager, Mr. H. H. Potter.—Mr. Fred Granville's company is giving two performances per night of the pantomime, Beauty and the Beast. Prominent in the cast are Mr. Sam Foster, Mr. Juan Wood, Mr. M. Madden, and Messrs. Daleno and Stream. Miss Dollie Barrie and Miss Hilda de Gray are well suited as principal girl and boy respectively. Specialities are introduced by Barrie and Wood, Miss Flo Milton, the Sisters Keble, Leslie Austin, and the Casino Belle Troupe of dancers.

CIRCUS OF VARIETIES. — Proprietors, Northern Theatres Co., Ltd.; General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling; Assistant Resident-Manager, Mr. H. H. Potter.—Charles Harvey and Co., in a farcical sketch, Broken Statue, top the bill here; the Sauteron Wonders are clever jumpers; Gibbon and Bell, acrobats and speciality dancers, Clifford Morgan, vocalist, Rosie Bartlett, comedienne, Lilian Neville, vocalist, Denby and Dent, comedians, and King Luis and Partner, acrobatic equilibrists, are also in the bill.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. Edward Owen.—Miss Kitty Colyer is a comedienne and dancer of considerable ability, and a big house on Monday thoroughly enjoyed her turn; always a popular comedian here, Martin Conway is well received; Rezene and Rezene are clever and amusing on the trapeze; a pleasing sketch is submitted by Lambeth and Robertson; Carl and Mary Ohms present some well-trained ponies, bears, and dogs; Arthur Page, Lancashire comedian, causes considerable merriment; and the evening's enjoyment is added to by the Melba Twins, vocalists; Frank Boyce, comedian; Die Kliener Reays, gymnasts; and the Bioscope pictures.

BURY ST. EDMUNDS.—ROYAL HIPPODROME.—General-Manager, Mr. Auguste A. Penieve.—The programme here includes "Empress," the lady of mystery, in remarkable feats of strength; John Wheelan, operatic vocalist; the Two Lyrics, in a sketch entitled The Highwayman; Mlle. Marie D'Alcourt, in illustrated songs; and Sulling's Bio.

BUXTON.—OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietors, Buxton Gardens Co., Ltd.; Secretary and Manager, Mr. Arthur Willoughby.—On Saturday evening Messrs. Jerrand Grant Allen and Geoffrey Besant's company paid us a visit with Dolly Reforming Herself. There was an excellent house. Mr. P. H. Clayton Greene was eminently satisfactory as Harry Telfer, and Mr. Reginald Besant certainly made a hit as Matthew Barron; Mr. Donald Calthorp was admirably placed as Captain Lucas Wentworth; Mr. Edward Sterling played capitally as Professor Sturgess; and Mr. C. F. Hawthorne displayed talent as the Rev. James Pilcher. Mr. Tom Mason was satisfactory as Criddle. Miss Aimee De Burgh was delightful in the title-rôle, and Miss Gertrude Bibby was very successful as Mrs. Sturgess; Miss Nellie Redwood was acceptable as Peters. The play was beautifully dressed and mounted.

CAMBRIDGE. — NEW THEATRE. — Managing-Director, Mr. W. B. Redfern, J.P., D.L.—Mr. Russell Rosse and his company presented Captain Swift on Monday. Mr. Edward Sorley gave a powerful impersonation of the title-rôle; Mr. Seabrook was well played by Mr. Arthur Dennis; Mrs. Bennett rendered Mrs. Seabrook very feelingly; Mr. Charles Boult gave a first-class portrayal of Gardiner; Miss Ida Phillips made the part of Stella Darbyshire interesting; Mr. Ben Barnett was capital as Harry Seabrook, Mr. Penn Hammilton as Marshall, Mr. W. B. Forster as Ryan, Mr. Clarence Pelham as Bates, Miss Betty Fairfax as Mabel Seabrook, and Miss Gertrude Le Sage as Lady Staunton were all satisfactory.

CARDIFF.—NEW THEATRE.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Robert Redford.—Mr. Wentworth Croke's company is presenting the new version of The Christian. The piece is well staged and capitally acted. Miss Daisy Scudamore is the Glory Quayle, and a most faithful portraiture she succeeds in making; as John Storm Mr. Roy Redgrave submits a rendition which calls for the highest commendation; Mr. Herbert Heweteon as Lord Robert Ure is particularly successful; Mr. Wilfred Noy acquits himself with credit as Horatio Drake; as Father Lamplugh Mr. Thomas Barry arouses the sympathy of the audience; while Mr. John J. Hooker (Archdeacon Wealthy) and Mr. Alan Jeayes (Paul) are well suited to their characters. Miss Cora Deane as Polly Love furnishes a pathetic interpretation; Black Meg is realistically enacted by Miss Muriel Marsden; Miss Molly Hayden is a motherly Mrs. Callander; while Miss Kitty Symonds is seen as Lady Ure.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. H. S. Dring.—La Tortajada appears with great success, her presentation of The Début of Dolores, in which the five characters are undertaken by herself, creating considerable satisfaction. Her singing and dancing are of a high order. A mysterious and sensational act is that of Fredk. Melville, who presents the moto girl. A great favourite is Annie Purcell, who sings her numbers in bewitching style. The new production of Donaldson Bros. and company, entitled Sports in a Jungle, is smartly contrived, the "animals" being cleverly worked. In an eccentric comedy act Lester and Moure prove very entertaining, and the Calcotts, in a wayside episode, Rags and Tatters, are clever versatile comedy artists, their banjo playing gaining much applause; Nora Emerald is a charming soubrette and expert dancer, and the Brothers Harrison, comedians and dancers, cause much fun during their turn. Disappointment was caused by the non-appoarance of the Cardiff comediennes, the Sisters Morgan, through the indisposition of one of their number, the Bioscope substituting.

PALACE AND HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Burton.—Mr. Leonard Mortimer and company appear in two delightful sketches, Paying the Penalty being put forward during the first part of the week, and The Bells of Vernavale during the second part. Both sketches have been highly appreciated. A very pretty scena is that entitled A Children's Christmas Eve, charmingly enacted by Harwood's Juveniles; Elton and Edwin are two talented banjoists, who score a great success; Ted Gill, a gifted vocalist, goes down well, while Nellie Walton, the Lancashire singing mill-girl, receives hearty approbation for her capitally-rendered numbers; Rosie Gaston, a pleasing comedienne, and Mulvey and Miriam, comedy entertainers, are the other two contributors to the programme.

CARLISLE.—H. M. THEATRE.—Lessees, Mr. Thos. Courtice and Mrs. B. Stewart McKim; Manager, Mr. Thos. Courtice.—A return visit of Messrs. Armadale and Warren's company in The Face at the Window is securing full houses. Mr. E. Hoggan-Armadale repeats his striking performance of Le Loup; the detective, Paul Gouffet, is well played by Mr. Scott Leighton, and Mr. Alfred Warne is excellent as the Banker. The comedy relief by Mr. Bert Ellis and Miss Lizzie Chambers amused the audience immensely, and Miss Elsie Marriot-Watson's Marie de Brisson is an artistically-played impersonation. The scenery and effects are admirable.

THE PALACE.—Managing-Director, Signor Rino Pepi; Acting Manager, Mr. C. F. Morgan.—Bella and Bijou again top the bill, and with two bright and cleverly worked sketches keep the audience in roars of laughter. A smart acrobatic act is contributed by the Alberto Troupe, who perform some wonderful feats of equilibrium; Charles Vincent has a clever medley song, and Arthur Stacey, in a different style, is no less amusing. The Pepiscope, with a large and interesting variety of pictures, completes.

CARMARTHEN.—ASSEMBLY ROOMS.—Proprietors, Public Rooms Co.; Secretary, Mr. Edward Baldwin.—This week Mr. F. R. Benson's Shakesperean company (South), under the management of Mr. Vivian Alldridge, paid their annual three-nights' visit, and were greeted by enthusiastic audiences. It would be impossible to speak too highly of Mr. Baliol Holloway's interpretation of Sir John Falstaff in The Merry Wives of Windsor; the part of Fenton was capably impersonated by Mr. Charles Maunsell, and that of Shallow by Mr. Frank G. Weir; Mr. Victor Hardy was a thorough success as Slender; Ford and Page were admirably impersonated by Mr. Charles Warburton and Mr. John Cairns respectively; Mr. Herbert Lester faithfully represented Sir Hugh Evans; Mr. Burgess Barratt shone as Dr. Caius, and was ably supported by Mr. J. Montague Neville as Rugby; Miss Emil Lealie as Mrs. Ford and Miss Constance Bromley as Mrs. Page were charming, and won golden opinions for their clever acting; Miss Dorothy White was a decided success as Mistress Quickly; Anne Page was capitally portrayed by Miss Agnes Ray, and the Host by Mr. R. Marris-Davis, and Simple by Mr. Fred Coyle. Miss Ada Pine was praiseworthy as Robin, and Bardolph, Pistol, and Nym (followers of Falstaff) were effectively interpreted by Messrs. Allen Douglas, Arthur Charles, and Owen Evan. On succeeding nights She Stoops to Conquer and Othello were presented, and at a matinée Julius Cæsar.

CASTLEFORD.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Proprietor and Licensee, Mr. Chas. Gadsby; Business-Manager, Councillor Henry Masterman, J.P.—Messrs. Edwin C. Jazon and Richard Nightingale's pantomime company are here with Dick Whittington and His Cat, and capital business is being done. The staging is excellent, and several scenes are works of art. Miss Maud Beaumont is a popular civic hero; she proves an actress of much ability and a vocalist of culture. A charming Alice is Miss Vera Snowdon, and here, too, praise must be accorded for good vocalisation and neat dancing. Mr. William Miller's excellent Fitzwarren is the essence of humour; Mr. Fred Ward is heard to advantage in several numbers, and as Idle Jack causes continued and hearty laughter whenever he is on the stage; Mr. Harry Albery has a grotesque make-up, and as Sarah, the Cook, wins favour for some really funny business; the Cat finds a faithful and nimble representative in Mr. Willie Vanda; Miss Daisy Dashwood, with a sweet and tuneful voice, looks pretty and does well as the Prince of Morocco; and Miss Olive Audrey has some pleasing numbers, and she makes an effective Fairy. The chorus and augmented orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Augustus T. McInnes, contribute in no small measure to the success achieved. The Vandas, on globe and silver wire; the Willoughbys, acrobatic eccentrics; Pearce and Ward, comedy act; and Terry and Snowdon, duettists are all good.

QUEEN'S THEATRE OF VARIETIES. — Proprietors, Messrs. Chas. Beanland and W. H. Emerson; General-Manager, Mr. Will H. Emerson.—At the head of the bill is Zarmo, the well-known comical juggler, with a host of original paraphernalia, with which he causes hearty laughter. Niagara and Falls, eccentric knockabouts and tumblers, score a distinct success; the Lashmars in a smart comedy act, Bits and Pieces, are a pair of good dancers, and their act is keenly appreciated; Smiler Lee, with a variety of amusing inconsequent patter and humorous ditties, is responsible for considerable merriment; the Darntons, a couple of young ladies with winning personalities, sing several duets with pleasing effect, being both tuneful and melodious; R. Dunning in a ventriloquial sketch, Nephew and Uncle, causes much amusement, and he does his work with remarkable skill and promptness; Khan and Khan, conjurors and thought-readers, mystify their audiences, and contribute materially to the evening's enjoyment; and amusement of a diverting character is also furnished by Dan Charles. Animated pictures by the Loyal Dominion Co. are highly appreciated.

CHELTENHAM. — OPERA HOUSE. — General-Manager, Mr. H. Oswald Redford.—This week we have a welcome return visit of Mr. and Mrs. John Walters's pantomime The Babes in the Wood. Miss Violet Thorne is the bold Robin Hood, and Miss Lily Miller makes a vivacious Maid Marian; Bertie and Cissie, the Babes, are charmingly represented by Misses Kitty Chesters and F. Parkinson, pretty children, who sing sweetly and dance engagingly; Mr. Ally M. Benson contributes a huge share of the fun as Dame Flossie, assisted well by Mr. Tom Lewis as the Baron; Mr. Tom Hulme as Soft Tommy is amusing and, with Miss Elsie Kedward (Dolly Dimple) contributes some capital dances; Blustering Bill and Wavering Walley are ably represented by Messrs. Martin Haley and Dan Rayner; Miss Elsie Naish does well as Daisy; the Emerald Quartette of dancers are very capable, and the Cattania Trio of Italian athletes do some surprising acrobatic feats.

CHESTER. — ROYALTY THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Milton Bode and Edward Compton; Resident-Manager, Mr. C. B. Fountaine.—Chester is enjoying a rare treat this week, owing to the visit of Mr. Geo. Edwardes's company, in The Merry Widow. The production is perfectly staged and costumed, and is under the able direction of Mr. J. A. E. Malone. Miss Mysie Devine, in the title-rôle, is charming and sparkling, and in voice and acting is admirably suited to the part; Miss Ada Thomas as Natalie acts with spirit and sings with delightful sweetness. As Baron Popoff Mr. Edward D'Arcy is very droll, and the Nisch of Mr. Fred Fowler is a grotesquely humorous performance; Mr. Ripley Evans as the Vicomte de Jolidon is praiseworthy, and the Novakovitch of Mr. Clifford Seyler was most amusing; Mr. William Allison as the Marquis de Cascada provoked much mirth, and so, too, did Mr. Adrian Beaumont as the Waiter; Mr. Frank Greene is perfection as Prince Danilo. The chorus was strong and effective, and the orchestral arrangements were under the able direction of Mr. Ernest Vousden.

CHORLEY (Lancs.). — GRAND THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. G. T. Sante; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank Sante.—Mr. Percy Norman's very excellent company, under the direction of Mr. A. B. Mackay, is here presenting the military drama A Woman Worth Winning. As Ivan Bardoff Mr. A. B. Mackay gives a particularly powerful and strong character study; Mr. B. Crosby capitally interprets Fergus Lovinsky, and Mr. Jerold Ord undertakes General Borinski in competent style; Messrs. C. Digby and Ernest Kendrick as Bertie Scribbles and Peter Popples respectively are decidedly good. As Roma Pauloff Miss Cissie Bellamy displays great emotional power, and is conspicuous; Miss Ida Mackay excellently portrays Katerina Kless and Miss Trixie Leighton Lola Kalnovsky.

COLCHESTER.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. Chas. Macdona; Lessee and Manager, Mr. F. Graham Macdona.—Mr. Fred Karno's company is paying a return visit with His Majesty's Guests, and Monday night's performance once more served to show what the piece owes to Mr. George Hestor, for as Sergt. Lightning he proved himself a capable comedian. Miss Aggie Morris ably undertook the part of Lady Maud, Miss Edith Ager made an admirable Dolly, and the minor female parts were capitally played. Mr. Tom Manardo was a good knockabout comedian as Selina; Mr. Sid Kearns was very droll as the Rev. Mr. Minks; Mr. Chas. Usher once more successfully enacted the rôle of Mr. Miffin; and Mr. E. O. Freshwater sang well as Lord Easem. The "Police" and "Burglars" choruses were good.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Colchester Hippodrome Co.; Directors, Messrs. Fredk. Mouillot and Walter de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. Ben de Frece.—A sensational turn is provided by John Clempert, the Siberian gaol-breaker, who, in addition to his usual show, releases himself from a tank containing boiling water. His reception on Monday night was flattering. Valosky, fancy and trick roller-skater, is an unique turn in this locality, and his shows is enhanced by reason of a competition for amateurs being run by Mr. Ben de Frece. Gus Earle presents a dancing act, and works particularly hard; Fynn and Payne shine as eccentric patterers, their business being very bright; Childie Stuart, smartly attired, sings well-written songs; Millie Wolfgang presents a nicely-staged song-scena, Kitty; and Harold Heath rand-dances in approved style.

CONSETT.—NEW THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Resident-Manager, Mr. Lloyd Clarance.—A hearty reception was accorded Mr. Robert Macdonald's company in The Dairymaids on Monday. Well staged and prettily dressed, the show is a great success. Mr. S. Lysons as Sam Brudenell and Mr. Edwin Dodds as Joe Mivens are very funny, and keep the house in continual laughter; Miss Babs Christapher gives a fine rendering of Lady Brudenell; whilst the quaint Miss Pyechase is splendidly portrayed by Miss Julie St. George. Miss Isa Bowman is a great favourite as Peggy, being greeted with much applause on her appearance; as Eliza Miss Maud Lucy scores well; the part of Winnie is well looked after by Miss K. Severn; Mr. Scott Melville makes a capable Lieut. Meredith; and Mr. J Barclay could not be improved on as Dr. O'Byrne. The minor parts are all ably filled by the rest of the company, and the chorus, under the guidance of Mr. C. W. Nightingale, is excellent.

CORK.—OPERA HOUSE.—Manager, Mr. R. J. Bell. Animated pictures of the world-famous Passion Play and other first-class pictures are shown here.

PALACE THEATRE, LTD.—Manager, Mr. Thomas F. O'Brien.—The Four Rio Brothers are a clever lot of gymnasts; an attractive turn is presented by the great Victoria Troupe, finished instrumentalists; Louie Belrose, vocalist, contributes some pleasing selections; E. Chimes, in a comedy musical act, deserves great praise; N. T. Kioto is a clever Japanese equilibrist; the Brothers Obo are a pair of entertaining comedians; King and Queen, comedy gymnasts, give a diverting acrobatic display; and the Palascope pictures continue to please.

COVENTRY.—THE OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietor, Mr. Wm. Bennett.—The first visit of The Flower Girl to the above house is drawing good houses. A great deal of the success of the piece is due to Miss Eva Nelson, who capably fills the title-rôle, and is ably assisted by Mr. J. T. MacCallum (Joe Wheeler), Mr. Robert Cranny (Billy Greenhill), Mr. Louis du Cane (Reginald Rackit), Mr. Henry Adnes (Alphonse de Racquet), Miss Lilian Drake (Mme. Lizette de Racquet), Miss Georgie de Lara (Miss Greenhill), Mr. John Latham (Johnny Wheeler), and Mr. C. Brailsford (Bertie).

HIPPODROME THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. S. T. Newsome; Resident-Manager, Mr. G. E. Wright.—Russell Wallett as "The Lady in Black" is very smartly made up, and his humorous songs and stories delight the audience; Sinclair and Whiteford give a very lively and entertaining performance; Tee and Tee, musical eccentrics, go through some laughable antics; Adams and Ward, acrobatic comedians, give a clever performance; Miss May Mars submits a song-scena, entitled In the Shadow of the Pyramids, with good effect; Mr. Dale and Miss Vale give a particularly good dancing turn. Other artists are Edmunda, singing ventriloquist, and Master Edward Frisby, boy soprano. Some good pictures finish.

THE EMPIRE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. George Dance; Manager, Mr. K. Draco.—The chief turn on an attractive programme is Carl Hertz, who gives a wonderful series of illusions in the mysterious bird-cage; the Three Krakes provide another good turn with their laughable sketch The Electric Tram Conductor; Lily Ashcroft soon establishes herself as a favourite comedienne; the Bijou Troupe of Juveniles appear in a musical item "Pansy's Scena"; Brent Hayes, a champion banjo player, is afforded a hearty welcome; Alec Kennedy is a capable comedian; and an instructive Bioscope picture, giving a graphic description of the new piece An Englishman's Home, closes.

CRADLEY HEATH.—EMPIRE THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. John H. Morton.—Mr. Coleman Davies's company is here for a week with the play No Escape. Mr. Coleman Davies as Constable Gripp O'Grady and as Major-General Geoffrey Arlington displays wonderful powers as a comedian; Mr. H. Harrold as Horace Hardcliffe gives a good impersonation; Mr. J. Nelson Turner is very funny as Samson Sloman; Mr. Arthur Prescott deserves praise for his humorous Jabez Guzzel; Mr. W. Fraser Brunner as Vandyke Collodion makes the most of a part well suited to him; Miss Queenie Fraser Brunner as Ethel Arlington wins unstinted recognition; Miss Eunice Udall is a smart parlourmaid as Molly Muggs; Mr. Fred Weston as Sergeant Arthur Arlington furnishes an interesting study

CREWE.—OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. H. G. Dudley-Bennett; Resident-Manager, Mr. Arthur Cuthbert.—The original version of East Lynne is being performed here this week by Mr. Tom Watt's company. Miss Julie Kennard makes a pathetic Lady Isabel, and is ably assisted by Mr. Edmund Kennedy as Archibald Carlyle; Mr. Frank G. Bayly as Francis Levison is well placed; Mr. Frederick Jacques as Justice Hare and Mr. Raysen Cousens as Richard Hare both give a good account of themselves; Mr. Cyril Hayward makes an excellent Lawyer Dill; the part of Cornelia Carlyle is ably undertaken by Miss Lilian Mason, and that of Barbara Hare by Miss Ida Heron. Mr. Joe Rowland as P.C. Bullock creates roars of laughter.

About six weeks ago I was suffering with

PIMPLES

ALL OVER MY FACE.

I was also suffering with SCURF IN THE HAIR. Being rather alarmed, I asked a friend's advice, and he recommended me to take "Clarke's Blood Mixture." I purchased a 2/9 bottle, and within a week I found marked improvement. The pimples and the scurf is entirely gone. I cannot tell you how thankful I am at having taken "Clarke's Blood Mixture," and I shall recommend it to everybody, as I think it only right that such a remedy should be known.—(Signed) JOHN HENRY JONES, known as "Little Johnny," Llandudno's Popular Comedian, Thorndale, Llandudno, Feb. 24, 1908.

VANISHED LIKE MAGIC,

CROYDON. — Grand Theatre.—Manager, Mr. Roland Daniel; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Ernest Archer.—Messrs. Smith and Carpenter's company is giving satisfaction here in Pete. Miss Helena Millais gives a charming impersonation of Kate Cregeen, which would be hard to improve upon; Mr. Frank E. Petley submits a fine, robust rendering of Pete Quilliam; Mr. Arthur Burne acts with dramatic effect as Philip Christian; Mr. Kenneth Brampton's Ross Christian has many good points; Mr. Frank Stone is quite up to the mark as Cæsar Cregeen; Miss Lucy Murray is commendable as Nancy; and minor rôles are carefully played by Messrs. E. H. Clarke, Chas. Clayton, Denis Bryan, and Henry Brooks.

Theatre Royal.—Proprietor, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Resident-Manager, Mr. G. Anthony.—An excellent series of animated pictures are being exhibited here by the American Bioscope Company. The illustrated songs are a pleasing feature. Miss Kitty Briggs, soprano, sings splendidly; Mr. Bert Williams deserves congratulations for his recitals; and Mr. Walter Hellier, baritone, is in fine voice. Business is good.

Empire Palace of Varieties.—Managing-Directors, Messrs. Walter Gibbons and Thomas Barrasford; Manager, Mr. Eustace Jay.—A palatable bill-of-fare is provided here. Charles Austin creates a perfect hurricane of laughter in Parker, P.C.; the Borghetti troupe of acrobats are exceptionally smart; Wilson and Waring are immense in the comedy sketch An Ugly Duckling; Gwennie Hasto is a clever comedienne and dancer; Dave Samuels is a droll comedian; Stacey and Williams, comedians and patterers, are commendable; Eva Ellis is a taking comedienne; Walter Emmerson is always well received here; and the Bioscope pictures and Mark Leslie, comedian, complete the entertainment.

DARLINGTON.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. James Bell.—The Moody-Manners Opera Co. is here. The opening selection was Faust, and the opera was played to a packed house. Mr. Chas. Carter as Faust was admirable, both in acting and singing; Mr. William Anderson has a powerful voice, and made a distinct impression as Mephistopheles; Miss Raymonde Amy as Marguerite won hearty applause; Miss Barry made a pleasing Martha; Miss Rosina Beynon as Siebel was very graceful; and the chorus is excellent. Mr. Cuthbert Hawley is the musical director. Other operas billed are Tannhäuser, Il Trovatore, Carmen, Lohengrin, Madame Butterfly and Maritana.

Hippodrome, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Signor Pepi; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. Hersee.—Heading a diversified programme, Mr. George Formby, with his silly songs and silly ways, keeps the audience in roars of laughter. The Jackson Family give an enjoyable musical performance; Mr. Fred Seymour, a local baritone, sings in a pleasing manner; Alf. Gibson, comedian, causes plenty of mirth; and the Olmars, acrobats, are clever. The remaining items are Fred Elton in the scena On Board an Ocean Liner, and the Pepiscope pictures.

DARWEN.—Picture Palace and Theatre Royal.—Lessees, the Animated Pictorial Enterprises, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. J. A. Whitehouse.—Edgar Cook, comedy illusionist, creates quite a sensation in his magical extravanganza, The Conjuring Chef; Sullivan and Edwards are two quaint comedians and excellent dancers; Helen Raye is a charming singer of illustrated songs; and the miniature pantomime given by Chester and Lees' marionettes is greatly enjoyed. Bioscope pictures conclude.

Public Hall and Palace of Varieties.—Lessees, Messrs. Thomson, Leivers, and Bennett; Manager, Mr. J. E. Thomson.—Miss Marie Powell, dainty speciality comedienne, proves a favourite; and Daly Male is a most amusing low comedian. The pictures are of the best.

DERBY.—Grand Theatre and Opera House.—Sole Proprietor and General-Manager, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Charles Denley.—Mr. George Edwardes's company is paying a welcome return visit with The Merry Widow, and excellent houses are the rule. Miss Nora Barry, who is new to Derby, in the title-rôle, is a charming artist and an accomplished vocalist; as Danilo Mr. Leonard Mackay repeats his previous success, and is literally a host in himself; Mr. Lionel Victor as Baron Popoff is responsible for a delightfully humorous assumption, his efforts being admirably seconded by Mr. Tom Redmond, whose Nisch is an exceedingly mirth-provoking presentment; Mr. Haigh Jackson plays Jolidon with great acceptability; and both Mr. Grafton Williams as Novikovitch and Mr. Bert Edwards as the Waiter at Maxim's deserve special mention. The Natalie of Miss Octavia Barry is a particularly polished impersonation; as Olga Miss Beryl Vaudrey is in every way entertaining; and Miss Dora Langham and Mr. Alfred H. Majilton, who play Frou-Frou and Franz Fall respectively, are seen to advantage in the "Danse des Apaches." Other parts are well sustained by Mr. Somers Bellamy, Mr. Sydney Calland, Mr. J. S. Durant, Miss Elsie Spencer, and Miss Mary Morison.

Palace Theatre of Varieties.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes.—The premier position this week is occupied by Herr Julius Walther, the well-known operatic vocalist, whose reception on Monday evening left no doubt as to his popularity. The Eight Lancashire Lads, a carefully-trained set of singers and dancers, submit an excellent all-round turn; the Fitzroys gain well-merited applause for their neat gymnastic feats; and Ward and Davis appear to good advantage in a comedy sketch, entitled Wanted, a Typist. Kenneth and Kane, comedy duo, keep the house in roars of laughter, as also does Kean Harker, comedian, with an endless fund of smart patter; while Winnie Wentworth is a vivacious little comedienne, whose songs and dances are duly appreciated. The Bioscope continues to be attractive.

DEVONPORT. — Hippodrome. — Manager, Mr. Herbert Taylor.—The Five Whiteleys are the principal attraction here; the Singing Jockeys entertain with a novel racing act; Maurice Hoffmann, Ethel King, and Co. present the sketch, The Closing Price, which proves very popular; Baker and De Sales retail some amusing patter; Willie Long's songs and parodies take well; the Bros. Brooks extract plenty of fun out of a comedy act; the Sisters Brand are dancers of ability; and a bare-foot turn of the same nature is presented by Lily Belle.

Metropole Theatre.—Manager, Mr. G. S. King.—Mr. Julian Malvern's company is here in the well-known drama I Defy the World. Mr. F. B. Woulfe portrays the leading part of Leon Darville capably; particular mention must also be made of the meritorious acting of Miss Edith Loraine. Other principals are Mr. Max Coutts, Mr. Alfred Denning, Miss Florence Delmar, and Little Dorothy Love.

DEWSBURY.—Theatre Royal.—Lessees, The Northern Theatres Co., Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. Herbert Asquith.—Mr. Herbert Sleath's company in A White Man occupy the boards this week. Praise must be given to Mr. Frank Tennant for his admirable presentment of Captain James Wynngate, V.C.; Diana has an ideal representative in Miss Eleanor May; the part of Big Bill is in the very capable hands of Mr. R. A. Brandon; Miss Margaret Fairleigh is to be highly commended for a perfect portrayal of Nat-u-Ritch; Tab-y-Wans, the Indian chief, is very ably taken by Mr. Eric Hudson; the Dowager Lady Kerhill is played with motherly sympathy by Miss Mary Relph; Mr. Harold T. Richardson and Mr. H. Wilmot Jackson as the Earl of Kerhill and Sir John Applegate are responsible for well-studied pieces of acting; and the Dean of Trentham, Cash Hawkins, and Bud Hardy have fitting representatives in Messrs. Louis Ashmeade, Gerald Earle, and Henry Hare respectively.

Hippodrome.—General-Manager, Mr. George Weldon; Stage-Manager, Mr. Jack Harris; Musical-Director, Mr. A. D. Willcox.—The Aldeans, comedy horizontal bar artists, head the bill here this week in a clever and amusing performance styled The Professor and His Pupil. The Millions are a pair of very clever skaters, their funny antics evoking laughter and applause; Emilie Warren, ballad vocalist, sings very sweetly, and finds much favour with the audience; who also appreciate the turn of Joe Cookson, ventriloquist, who gives a very clever and unique performance. The Danbys sing and dance well, and Miss Mamie Morris (comedienne), Horace Sade (character dancer), and splendid animated pictures shown by Mr. Jack Harris complete the programme.

DOVER.—Royal Hippodrome.—Proprietor, Mr. S. W. Winter.—This week a pantomime affords an agreeable change from the usual variety entertainment. The Forty Thieves is a very bright production, and the scenery and dresses are magnificent. Ali Baba, as impersonated by Willie Black, is a very quaint character, his brother, Cassim, being excellently portrayed by William Bosco. Bertha Clifton as Ganem is a smart, alert, and altogether admirable principal boy; while Poppy Holland looks charming as Morgiana, and sings with success "A tiny seed of love." The eccentricities of Kennedy Allen are exactly suited to the rôle of Hassarac; and Rob Wilton, to whom is allotted that popular song, "Afraid to come home in the dark," amuses all by his humorous delineation of Cogia. Dolly Tree, as the Captain of the Forty Thieves, and Bibby and Portia Tree as her lieutenants, form a striking trio, their musical numbers and expert dances being the most attractive items in the programme. It would be impossible to overlook the excellence of Cris le Brun's work as Percy, the faithful donkey, or that of Francis Haskoll as the Chief of the Police, the fine voice of the latter being heard to advantage in "Sons of the Sea." The members of the chorus, under the direction of Caffyn Baxter, the musical conductor, acquit themselves creditably, that gentleman's incidental music being tuneful and melodious.

DUBLIN.—Theatre Royal.—Managing-Director, Mr. Mouillot; Resident-Manager, Mr. Charles Terry.—The hippodrome season continues to attract very good houses. This week Clarke and Hamilton are the start turn. As a farmyard mimic Sydney Locklynne is greatly appreciated; Radie Furman receives applause for her dances and songs; Marianne Tostia and her lady troubadours present a musical scena which is very pretty and effective; a clever and special turn is Captain Joseph Woodward's exceptionally well-trained seals and sea-lions; Gwennie Llewellyn is heartily encored; and the Twelve Hippodrome Girls and the Royal pictures complete an excellent programme.

Gaiety Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mrs. Michael Gunn; General Manager and Secretary, Mr. Chas. Hyland.—The Players' Club occupy the boards here this week, and are presenting A. W. Pinero's famous comedy The Gay Lord Quex to appreciative audiences nightly.

Empire. — General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Acting-Manager and Secretary, Mr. George H. Marsh.—A bright and attractive programme submitted here is headed by Miss Sylvia Cavalho and company in a clever and amusing burlesque drama entitled What's Charles Worth? or, The Maid and the Motor-car, which is enthusiastically received. Whit Gray is a comedian whose songs and patter are thoroughly enjoyed; the San Remo Girls, speciality dancers, have quite a flattering reception; the Idento Brothers are droll and clever in their juggling act; Blake and Granby (Gus and Maud), duologue artists, score a success; Odeyne Sparke is a chic comedienne; Fred S. Howard in Funniosities of London Life proves very entertaining; Elroy, the armless wonder, meets with hearty approval; and the Empire pictures conclude.

Tivoli.—General-Manager, Mr. Charles M. Jones; Assistant-Manager, Mr. H. A. Murphy.—Good houses continue to witness the excellent programme submitted at this popular house. A most laughable and amusing turn is given by Miss Maud Rochez's performing monkeys; a distinct hit has been made by Sam Richards' College Boys in The Students' Party; the Dunvilles in their musical comedy act prove quite successful; Naughton and Gold, Scotch comedians, meet with a warm reception; R. C. Note is a capital vocalist; Wright and Lawson, eccentric comedians, are well received; and Miss Sara Rosebury is an excellent dialect comedienne. Bernando is an extremely good comedy juggler, and Lillie Dennis a pleasing comedienne. The Bioscope completes.

World's Fair and Music Hall.—Proprietor, Mr. C. A. James.—The artists appearing here include Witt and Wynn, comedy duologue artists; Edna Ray, ballad and coon vocalist; Harry Delmar, eccentric instrumentalist; Harry Hewitt, ventriloquist and living marionettes; Torie and Torie, sketch artists; and the Cinematograph.

DUDLEY.—Opera House.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. Maurice Clement; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. W. Tilley.—Mr. Charles Harrington's Uncle Tom's Cabin company is again welcomed here. Mr. Harrington, an old and tried actor, still puts zest into the part of Phineas; and Mr. J. Carr is earnest and sympathetic as Tom. Mr. G. Ridgway Thorne capably fills the part of George Harris; Miss Hero Hathaway as Eliza Harris displays refinement and ability; and Miss Annie Watson is highly amusing as Topsy. Miss Hettie Johnson secures distinction as Cassy.

Empire. — Proprietors, Midland Entertainment Corporation, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. F. H. Waters.—Truly sensational is the clever performance by the Three Original Hodginis, gymnastic wonders, who occupy the top of a strong programme. Percy Curry, comedian, has an original style of his own; the singing and dancing by The Sprees are greatly appreciated; an amusing turn is that of Ada Jenner; La Belle Greta is always sure of a good reception; Jock Walker, Scotch comedian, and Arthur Blount, patter comedian, are also good numbers. The Empire pictures conclude an enjoyable evening's entertainment.

DUNDEE.—His Majesty's Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Manager, Mr. Louis Karpe.—Mr. Wentworth Croke's company is appearing here in Hall Caine's masterpiece, The Bondman. The piece is magnificently staged, the sensational sulpher-mine scene being a marvellous piece of stage realism. Mr. R. Scrope Quentin gives an intensely dramatic performance as Jason; Mr. Oswald Lingard presents a convincing study of the part of Adam Fairbrother; and Mr. W. Henry Hargreaves is an excellent Michael Sunlocks. Mr. W. H. Rotherham in the rôles of Father Ferrati and Grandfather, deserves the highest congratulations for his excellent renderings; and Mr. Wilfred Beckwith appears to much advantage as Governor Testa. Miss Georgina Wynter gives a delightful study of the fickle Greeba; Mrs. Fairbrother is very effectively impersonated by Miss Madge Lanerton; Miss Bessie West is a pleasing Maria; and the children Mona and Danny are very cleverly represented by Miss Gertrude Helene and Master Walter Neville.

King's Theatre and Hippodrome.—Lessees, United County Theatres, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Alfred Moul; Manager, Mr. C. W. Young.—A report of the opening of this house appears in another column.

Palace Theatre. — Lessees, the United County Theatres, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Alfred Moul; Manager, Mr. S. McIntosh.—This old-established house, which, owing to the capable management of Mr. S. McIntosh, has been conspicuously successful, will in future give a larger selection of cinematographic views than was formerly the case. On Saturday evenings there will be given two performances nightly. Some very fine films are exhibited this week. In addition to the pictures Spangles and Sawdust present a comical trapeze act; Walker and Ray cause hilarity as coloured comics; and Oliver Martin is an A1 comedian.

Gaiety Theatre.—Lessee, Mrs. Lillie Williams; Licensee, Mr. W. E. Potts; Business-Manager, Mr. Frank Percival; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. E. Evans.—A varied programme is headed by Flora Cromer, who impersonates the different styles of vocalists on the music hall stage in a humorous manner; J. K. Macfarlane, Scotch comedian, makes a hit with his comical "Lodger" ditty; the impersonations of star artists by Ted Saunders are lifelike in the extreme; Charles Santon uses his double voice with effect; Victoria Dagmar, assisted by her clever comedy partner, gives an exceedingly graceful display on the horizontal bar and gymnastic rope; and Montague Biggs, Rose D'Aulby, with her chorus songs, Zellini, comedian and juggler, George Grenville, vocalist, and the Electro-Motorscope, with new pictures, complete.

Empire Theatre.—Lessee and Manageress, Mrs. Lillie Williams; Business Manager, Mr. Frank Percival; Acting-Manager, Mr. Alfred Ross.—Newman's pictures pay a welcome return visit here, the programme including many excellent dramatic and humorous films. In addition, the Cedrics, in a funny act entitled Chish and Fips, and Vela, a clever wire equilibrist, appear.

Newman's Picture Palace.—The programme here is up to the usual high standard associated with Mr. Fred Newman's house.

Kinnaird Hall.—Quite a host of new pictures are thrown on the screen here. The daring and graceful aerial act of Aerian and Ostara creates quite a furore; and the programme is further strengthened by Mr. Claude Howell, who recites with much elocutionary talent.

Gilfillan Hall.—The B.B. pictures are still drawing good houses here. An enjoyable item is the ventriloquial performance of Mr. Fisher Dixon.

American Roller Skating Rink.—Managing-Directors, Messrs. C. P. Crawford and F. A. Wilkins; Manager, Mr. Bert Crump.—There is no diminution in the popularity of this fashionable rendezvous. Quite a feature is the fine music by the splendid military band of the establishment.

EASTBOURNE.—Devonshire Park Theatre.—Sole Lessees and Managers, Messrs. Murray King and Clark.—Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison's company is appearing here in Peter's Mother. In the title-rôle Miss Violet Ley contributes a consistently earnest performance; Miss Mary Griffiths is a delightfully humorous Lady Belstone; Miss Josephine Rae an effective Miss Crewys; Miss Hilda Sims an excellent Sarah; and Miss Annie Stalman a dignified Mrs. Hewell. Fine and very successful work is given by Mr. Vivian Gilbert as the young prig Peter; Mr. Drew Mackintosh has a part which suits him admirably as John Crewys; Mr. Townsend Whitling is a forceful Sir Timothy; Mr. Walter Russell is a polished Canon Birch; and Mr. Edward Jephson an interesting Dr. Blundell. Turtle Doves is played as a front piece.

The Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. Sidney W. Winter; District-Manager, Mr. George Egbert; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Holloway.—Heading the bill here this week are the Showells, who sing duets with taste and expression. Mr. George Prince as a crazy comedian causes much laughter; Little Don is a quaint comedian, with a style all his own; Hunter and Williams (lady and gentleman) are clever coster entertainers; Mr. Dan Merritt keeps the audience interested with his big drum; Miss Julia Gilbert is a bright, pleasing comedienne; Miss Lottie Leighton a burlesque artist; and new films are shown.

Pier Pavilion Theatre.—Manager, Mr. George Hayes. Mr. Arthur Crichton's company is appearing here in Niobe (all smiles). In the name-part Miss Agnes Imlay, who possesses a fine figure and beautiful voice, is excellently suited, and is a regal Niobe; Mr. Harry Paulton, who repeats his intensely amusing performance as Peter Amos, keeps the audience in constant merriment; Mr. H. C. Lloyd is a distinct and successful Cornelius Griffin; Mr. Phil Cooper a funny Philip Jennings; and Mr. A. M. Seton a very natural Hamilton P. Tompkins. Miss de Burgh is a very animated and pleasing Caroline; Miss Clara Nicholls a sufficiently severe Helen Griffin; Miss Katherine Morris a bright and girlish Hattie; and the remaining parts are in good hands.

ECCLES.—Crown Theatre.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident-Acting-Manager, Mr. Albert Rogers.—Mr. Harry Foxwell's company is presenting A Broken Heart. Miss Shiela Walsh plays the part of Mary Barnard with intense feeling; Little May is well portrayed by Miss Daisy Rocheford; Miss Emma Rainbow makes a suitable Mrs. Barnard, mother of John; Mr. Clinton Dawson gives a good rendering of the character, John Barnard, and his acting is convincing; Mr. J. Moreton Williams imparts distinction to the rôle of Stephen Raylton; and that of Tony Tibbets is well enacted by Mr. Quinton Pearce. Mr. Vivian Charles as the Rev. Mr. Staunton, a village curate, is most successful.

EDINBURGH.—Royal Lyceum Theatre.—Proprietors, Messrs. Howard and Wyndham, Ltd.; General-Manager, Mr. Geo. T. Minshull; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. M. Downie.—Mr. Martin Harvey's engagement is always a popular one in Edinburgh, and on Monday last, when he opened here for six nights, the house was crowded from floor to ceiling. The Breed of the Treshams was the play chosen for the opening night, and it was acted all round by the company with the care and effect which characterise Mr. Harvey's productions. The distinguished actor, in the part of the "Rat," Lieutenant Reresby, played with passion, tenderness, and humour, and the touch of poetic feeling which marks his work. Miss de Silva repeated her admirable performance of Batty; Mr. Charles Glenny as Colonel Hungerford gave a powerful, convincing study of the villain; and Mr. C. J. Cameron as Viscount Dorrington played impressively. Mr. Leonard Craske as Cornet Tresham acted pleasantly; and Mr. George Cooke was an admirable Colonel Curwen. Miss Madge Fabian was graceful and pathetic in the important part of Margaret Hungerford; and the remaining characters were ably filled, the veteran, Mr. Fred Wright, sen., being a capital Colonel Bagshaw. The play was splendidly staged, and recalls were numerous. Mr. Harvey was compelled to appear at the end and express his thanks to the audience for their enthusiastic reception. The Corsican Brothers, The Conspiracy, and The Only Way have also been played during the week.

Theatre Royal.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. W. Wyndham; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. Whitehead.—Mr. H. Hamilton Stewart and company are here this week with the powerful play Sherlock Holmes. The central figure of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's fascinating detective dominates the piece, and the part is acted by Mr. Stewart with a coolness and reserved force which admirably suit the character; Mr. Robert Gilbert makes a very clever study of the daring criminal, Professor Moriarty; and there is distinct ability in Mr. Walter A. Chetham's impersonation of John Forman. Miss A. Bruce Joy plays the part of Alice Faulkner with grace and skill; and Miss Edith Vagne as Madge Larrabee shows genuine dramatic instinct. Master Thomas Russell is excellent as Billy; and other members of the large cast include Mr. Arthur Shelton as Dr. Watson, Mr. Louis Alexander as James Larrabee, and Mr. Eric Mordein as Alfred Bassick. The play is well mounted, the scene in the gas chamber producing its usual excitement.

King's Theatre.—General-Manager, Mr. Amand Mascard.—Almost a record variety programme has been presented here this past week. To Miss Vesta Victoria was accorded the leading number, and her several songs, rendered with all her well-known vivacity and charm of method, proved irresistibly attractive, provoking most liberal recalls. Mr. Tom Clare, at the piano, is one of those brilliant entertainers of whom audiences never seem to tire, and his turns were applauded to the echo and vociferously encored; Henry Hilton's juggling and sleight-of-hand tricks showed an extraordinary degree of cleverness, which distinguished him as an illusionist of the first rank; Lievin and Pantzer give an excellent display as acrobats and equilibrists, the grace and ease with which they executed most difficult feats being special features in their performance; and the slack-wire exhibition of Celeste was notable for skill and novelty. Jolly Jimmy Walker contributed an enjoyable comedian turn; Miss Blanche Leslie pleased her hearers with illustrated songs; Miss May B. Brilliant sang and danced herself into favour; and Bioscope pictures completed a good bill.

Empire Palace Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. Aynsley Cook.—Vocal and instrumental music was much in evidence here this week. Mlle. Liane D'Eve, a fascinating Parisian vaudeville artist, provided the outstanding attraction with a series of original chansons and novel changes of character, her different impersonations being all marked by a finished excellence which greatly gratified the audience. The single-handed turns supplied by Nina Wood at the piano, and by Harry Herbert, a quaint comedian, were very enjoyable; Annette Hayward's illustrated chorus songs, as well as the efforts of Kathleen Cogan, a young comedienne and dancer, received kindly recognition; and Virto and Venita showed to advantage as versatile and accomplished instrumentalists. Somewhat lengthy sketches were contributed by Henry Carlton and company, and by the Three Prestons; but the most sporting combination of performers was found in De Gracia's trained elephants, which appeared equally expert in comedy and athletic feats or at cricket and football. An amusing set of films was exhibited on the Bioscope.

The Oriental Original Picture Palace.—General-Manager, Mr. W. C. Burns.—Mr. Burns has made several changes in the programme this week, many beautiful and amusing films being displayed. The audiences continue to show their appreciation of the entertainment, alike in numbers and in the hearty way in which the items are received.

EXETER. — Theatre Royal.—Chairman and Managing-Director, Mr. Edward J. Domville, J.P.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Percy M. Dunsford.—The Gentleman Jockey is being presented here by Mr. Edward Marris's company—one of all-round excellence. Mr. H. Nelson Hancock endows the part of Sir Francis Granmere with frank manliness; Mr. T. Weldon Atherstone is an excellent villain; and Mr. Helier Le Maistre makes the most of his opportunities as David Grayson. Mr. Leonard Dalrymple is in happy vein as Archie Fitzherbert; Mr. George Brentwood as P.C. Blodgers keeps the house in continual merriment; Miss Ethel Ward is a bright and charming Poppy Grayson; Miss Maisie Jerrard is seen to distinct advantage as Kitty; as is Miss Lily Gold as Jennie Jarvis.

New Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. Fred Karno and A. H. Edwards; Resident-Manager, Mr. Frederick Sandy.—Harry Randall on Monday made his first appearance before an Exeter audience. His reception was of the most cordial description, and he had to respond to a couple of encores. Another first-rate turn is that of Athas and Collins, in their speciality act, The Lady and the Scarecrow; Little Ganty, a comedian, is really funny; Guy Ryder is a talented mimic and sifflleur; A Private Rehearsal is presented by Annie Schuberth, the possessor of an excellent voice; Harry Carsdale, the farmyard linguist, is well received; and Madge May proves a smart comedienne.

FALKIRK.—Grand Theatre and Opera House.—Managing-Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Resident-Manager, Mr. H. W. Ebbutt.—The attraction this week is Napoleon's Divorce, staged by Mr. F. H. Neville's company. The piece is brimful of incidents of Napoleon's life during the war with Russia and the Battle of Waterloo, and his exile in St. Helena. The play is a powerful one, and gets an excellent lead in Mr. Neville, who is an ideal study of the Emperor. The appearances of Mr. Neville's horses for the tableau in the last act is a feature of the piece. The part of Josephine, from whom he is divorced on his return from the war, to gratify his own ambitions, is taken by Miss Lily Lews, a charming actress; Mr. Graham Hamlyn as Bonaparte's brother acts his part with great credit; Mr. W. Verne as the Duke St. Everard and Miss A. Beddard as the Duchess reveal undoubted talent; little Ethel May is smart as the Little King of Rome; and praise must also be bestowed upon Mr. J. Loder, Mr. C. Moore, and Miss Kate Randolph, the second Empress. Mr. Neville is announced to take a benefit on Friday night in the special production of The Sinner that Repented.

FLEETWOOD.—Queen's Theatre. — Manager, Mr. H. J. Snelson.—A strong variety company is headed by Talberto and Douglas, whose clever and funny turn is assisted by the wonderful dog Clinker; Little Hackenschmidt, the boy wrestler, is meeting local men nightly, and has not found his match; Cliquot is a marvellous sword-swallower. Among others in the bill are Will Saunders, May Vincent, Melvin and Max, and the Sisters Spadonis.

FOLKESTONE. — Pleasure Gardens Theatre.—Manager, Mr. H. W. Rowland.—A return visit of Miss May Palfrey in Mr. W. Somerset Maugham's delightful comedy Mrs. Dot proved an attraction for the first part of the week. Miss Palfrey again delighted the audiences with her graceful and clever acting in the title-rôle, and she was ably supported by Mr. F. Kinsey Peile, Mr. Hugh C. Buckler, Mr. A. W. Tomlinson, Miss Evelyn Kerry, Miss Emily Patterson, and other members of the company. The play is followed each evening by The Mystery of Redwood Grange, in which Mr. Weedon Grossmith appears with his accustomed skill. Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison's company, in Peter's Mother, is billed for the remainder of the week.

GAINSBOROUGH.—King's Theatre.—Lessees, Gainsborough Theatre Co.; Managing-Director, Mr. Fred Leighton.—Mr. E. H. Bertram's company appeared here for three nights last week in Somebody's Sweetheart. On Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday the 10.30 Down Express was presented by Mr. Horace Stanley and company. Jack O'Malley and Bessie Leigh were pathetically played by Mr. T. A. Plummer and Miss Cora Linda. Mr. Carthage Caldcleugh gave a powerful rendering of the villain, James Inderwick. The comedy parts of Sam Wagstaffe and Peggy Potts were most amusingly portrayed by Mr. Stanley and Miss Kate Kilpack, and the other characters were in capable hands. The sensational scene of the express was well done. For the remainder of the week a variety company occupies the boards.

GATESHEAD.—King's Theatre.—Proprietors, United County Theatres, Ltd.; Resident-Manager and Licensee, Mr. Harold Arnold.—Mr. John Tiller's able company in High Jinks is here. The cast includes Messrs. Bob Selvidge, Fred Lawrence, Teddy Gibbs, and Barney Dixon, and Misses Jessie Templeton and Lizzie Hay. Captain Devereux's dogs are worthy of the applause they evoke, and the Arntes, coon comedy artists, Will Mitcham, eccentric musician, and the Kingscope are also attractive.

Metropole Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. F. W. Bolam; General-Manager, Mr. R. G. Elder; Acting-Manager, Mr. Ernest Dixon.—Leah Kleschna is here this week, played by Messrs. Armitage and Leigh's company. Miss Bessie Rignold portrays Leah admirably, and is nightly rewarded with abundant applause; Mr. William Clayton depicts Kleschna with great power, and the part of Paul Sylvaine is handled with just the right touch by Mr. Charles Barrett; Mr. Arthur Leigh makes an interesting Raval, and Schram is capitally impersonated by Mr. Wm. Heilbronn.

GLASGOW.—Theatre Royal, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. W. Wyndham; Acting-Manager, Mr. Percy Humphrys.—The Moody-Manners Opera company's second week commenced on Monday with Maritana, in which Miss Kate Anderson gave a charming impersonation of the strolling gipsy; Mr. John Child was pleasing as the rollicking Don Cæsar de Bazan; Miss Bessie Weir's fine contralto voice was heard with excellent effect in the part of Lazarillo; and Mr. Charles Manners expressed the music allotted to the King of Spain with all his usual ability. The part of Don José was finely rendered by Mr. Lewys James; while Mr. F. Davis made an amusing Marquis, the Marchioness being adequately played by Miss Penville. On Tuesday Verdi's Aida was the attraction, with Mr. Philip Brozel as Radames, and Mme. de Vere-Sapio as Aida; Mr. Charles Manners as Ramphis, and Mr. Charles Magreth as the King of Egypt. The Lily of Killarney on Wednesday, Faust on Thursday, Tannhäuser on Friday, with Lohengrin and The Bohemian Girl on Saturday.

King's Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. W. Wyndham; Business-Manager, Mr. H. Macfarlane.—Mr. Lionel Rignold is here with F. Lonsdale's comedy, The Early Worm. The piece gives Mr. Rignold every opportunity, and consequently a good evening's entertainment is the result. As Allan Marchmount (the Worm) he meets and overcomes his various misfortunes in a highly diverting manner. He is supported strongly by Mr. T. Warburton Gamble as George (Duke of Tadcaster), and Mr. Frank Graham as Lord Steyne. Mr. Raymond Dudley as Sir William Mayton makes a satisfactory representation; while Mr. Eric H. Albury is very amusing as Tom (the Steward). Miss Fyfe Alexander as Sybil Annesley and Miss Marie Dultra as Lady Steyne contribute two fine studies of the suspicious couple; Mr. W. H. Pierpont as Capt. Baxter and Mr. Robert Melrose as a sailor are very successful in introducing the necessary nautical flavour.

Royalty, Ltd. — Managing-Director, Mr. F. W. Wyndham; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Carpenter.—A novel entertainment was provided by Mr. F. R. Benson's company, on Monday, in the old Chester Mystery Plays, four of which were given—The Salutation Play, The Shepherds' Play, The King's Play, and The Slaying of the Innocents. A crowded house followed with rapt attention the development of these Bible incidents, and rewarded the actors with hearty applause at the conclusion. The programme gave the names of the characters only, but Mr. Benson and his able coadjutors were, of course, known to most of the audience. The actor who played Herod gave a specially strong portrayal of that vindictive monarch. Repetitions of Macbeth, Merchant of Venice, Merry Wives of Windsor, and The Belle's Stratagem were given later in the week.

Grand.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; District-Manager, Mr. B. G. Maclachlan; Resident-Manager, Mr. W. Christie Grant.—To bring in their second week the Carl Rosa Opera Company on Monday night staged Tannhäuser, the leading rôle being taken by Mr. E. C. Hedmondt. The manner in which he presented it on Monday night raised his audience to the highest pitch of enthusiasm. Owing to the indisposition of Miss Beatrice Miranda, Miss Elizabeth Burgess was pressed on short notice into the part of Elizabeth. She was undoubtedly nervous, and, perhaps, not quite so free as might have been anticipated, but withal came through the ordeal satisfactorily. As Venus, Miss Marie Alexander was suffering somewhat from a cold, and taking this into consideration she did well. Mr. Dillon Shallard as Wolfram might also have been heard to better advantage, although at times his voice touched its usual standard. As Landgrave Mr. Arthur Winckworth performed his part commendably, and was in excellent voice. Messrs. Wm. O'Connor and Alex. Richard did capital work in the minor parts; while Miss Annie Walker performed creditably in the rôle of the Shepherd Boy. The chorus was well-balanced, and the orchestral portion of the score, under the leadership of Mr. Eugene Goossens, was pleasing. During the week The Merry Wives of Windsor, The Bohemian Girl, Cavaleria Rusticana, Pagliacci, Don Giovanni, Carmen, and Faust were presented with equal success.

Royal Princess's.—Proprietor, Mr. Rich. Waldon; Acting-Manager, Mr. Hugh Murdoch.—After a long run of pantomime the dramatic season has opened here with Mr. Walter Melville's company in A Girl's Cross Roads, in which Miss Hilda Beverley powerfully illustrates the decadence in character of Barbara Wade; while the unscrupulous Nellie Meadows is portrayed with equal force by Miss Nita Langton; the heroine, Constance Cornell, is charmingly played by Miss Muriel Dean; and Mr. Norman B. Cannon as Jack Livingstone made a manly hero. A pleasing character is that of John Meadows, an old farmer, delightfully rendered by Mr. Harry Cane; while the villainy is well expressed by Mr. W. J. Butler as Cuthbert Lumley; Mr. Edward Valentine as Dr. Weston makes a pleasing picture; and is contrasted with Luke Ramsden, a bad lot from the colonies, played by Mr. Fred Withers. The comedy is well handled by Miss Jeannie Thomas as Tillie Vane, ably assisted by Mr. Fred Hodson as Toby Turvey.

Metropole, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. Arthur Jefferson; Acting-Manager, Mr. G. Gordon Jefferson.—The attraction here this week is Messrs. Edward L. Garside and J. Forbes Knowles' company in the sensational drama Her Marriage Vow. Mr. J. Forbes Knowles as Ned Benton performs excellently; while Miss Lillian Herries is pathetic and telling as Kate Walters; Mr. Edward L. Garside depicts cleverly the evil nature of Gilbert Carlton; Mr. B. Vincent Wardle bears himself admirably as Daffy Dan; and Mr. Wilfred Bailey is effective as Eben Chubb; Mr. John W. Ryder is fully equal to all the demands made upon him as William Walters; Mr. Owen Remonde as Larry Leary and Miss Effie D. Crawford as Maggie Clair contributed agreeably in the comedy line; Hester Norton has an appropriate representative in Miss Nellie Shirley; and Miss Grace Garside was most successful as Almira.

Lyceum.—Proprietor, Mr. Rich. Waldon; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. H. Oakden.—Mr. Morton Powell's company is paying a first visit here in How Girls are Brought to Ruin. The part of the heroine, Jessie Burton, is played with feeling by Miss Rona Merrick; and Mr. Walter Steele ably portrays the breezy sailor lover, Harry Hailing; the rôle of Philip Edgar provides Mr. Polson Turner with a strong and effective part, a suitable foil being seen in Winnie Waters, a light and airy character played by the authoress, Mrs. Morton Powell; Solomon Sleek is well realised by Mr. Alaric Burton; the coster Jack Josse is smartly represented by Mr. Sidney Bryant; Miss Violet Crauford gives decided character to the part of Mrs. Burton; Lucy Lawton (Miss Jeannie Risley) is a well-enacted part, as also are Mrs. Slutt (Miss Addie Adair), Sergeant Pride (Mr. James Tarner), and P.C. Dooley (Mr. Allen Harvey).

Empire, Ltd.—District-Manager, Mr. S. Gething; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Manners.—At the head of affairs here is the inimitable Sheridan, who never fails to make his "Mark." He has this week increased his popularity by his seaside song and smart patter. In her series of art dances La Pia comes out with great credit. Her work is clever, and her show spectacular. In her latest creation, "The Sea Nymph," she is seen to great advantage. Stratton Mills and company present an absurdity, entitled Ananias II. The sketch is funny, and the artists make the most of it. It would be difficult to unearth a and Scott, the Hebrew comedians, are a laughable couple, and pleasing alike in patter, song, and dance; Arthur Aldridge has been in good voice all the week, and renders his songs with much acceptance; Takio, the Japanese mimic of sounds is clever; while Dot Hardy is a sprightly comedian; Geo. Young, the blind musician, and the Bioscope pictures conclude the entertainment.

Zoo-Hippodrome.—Proprietor, Councillor E. H. Bostock; Assistant-Manager, Mr. E. H. A. Bostock.—The Frank L. Gregory Troupe of hoop manipulators give a very neat and smart display here; Bennett and Martell again cause roars of laughter as the shipwrecked mariners; Minnie Hunt and Rhys Thomas repeat their former success with the smart duologue, Her Birthday; Kremka Bros. are a clever couple of acrobats and balancers; Tom Conway and company produce a new sketch, Jane Ann's Prophecy, which is noticed in another column; Dolly Ross, coon singer and dancer; Rosie Archer, in her mimicry at the piano; Bi-bo-be, the eccentric musician; and Maude Vera, comedienne and dancer, all provide enjoyable turns.

Pavilion, Ltd.—General-Manager, Mr. Samuel Lloyd; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Evan Good.—Marie Lloyd tops the bill here, and is giving a lot of new songs, including her "Directoire girl"; Morny Cash is another strong favourite, and his quaint humour is much enjoyed; Crissie Cross is a clever coon singer and smart dancer; the Columbia Trio show some novel and daring feats in balancing, which take well; Arthur Royer, eccentric American comedian, is a clever acrobat and high-kicker; Charles Banks and his well-trained little dog contribute an interesting turn; De La Fiore is an expert player on the xylophone; Jack Haddon and company make a successful appearance in The Courier of Lyons, a condensed version of the famous play; George Street's quick-change act, "Military Commanders of the World," contains a good idea.

Palace.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Rich. Waldon; General-Manager, Mr. Harry M'Kelvie.—The programme this week includes the principal artists from Diccory Dok. Mr. Waldon's successful pantomime. Maggie Fraser and Edith Haley, duettists, were specially favoured, and have maintained the position earned by them as pantomimists; the Sisters Bartholomew, comediennes and dancers, also shared the favours and submitted new songs; Peter Bermingham ("Wee Hughie") was in a happy mood; and Syd Walker and Cliffe Lake kept the house in laughter with their new sketch, The Phrenologist. Ernie Mayne, comedian, is very amusing as Cupid; the Bros. Pasquali give a splendid acrobatic display; Harry Gribben contributed a pleasing whistling solo. Other artists include Jack Hylton, eccentric comedian; Diana and Natalia, gymnasts; Bros. Ford, comedians and dancers; and Edna Latonne, a charming male impersonator.

Coliseum.—District-Manager, Mr. S. Gething; Resident-Manager, Mr. Harry Burdette.—The Poluski Brothers (Will and Sam) occupy the star position, and submit their latest amusing scena, "Pictures," which is exceedingly funny; the Selbinis are appearing in their wonderful pot-pourri act, introducing a number of sensational cycle tricks; Elsie Roby is a clever pianist and impersonator; Gracie Moore describes in song some well-known pictures; Charlie Rich and Harry Rich are clever comedians and patterers. Other notable artists are J. H. Milburn, vocal comedian; Mr. and Mrs. Harry A. Meynott, clever sketch artists; Tambo and Tambo, tambourine manipulators; and Chas. Kitts and Rhoda Windrum, speciality artists. The performance concludes with a display of amusing and interesting Bioscope pictures.

Gaiety, Ltd.—Manager, Mr. Harry Bowerman.—Will Godwin heads the bill, and with his catchy songs and choruses he again establishes himself in public favour; the Nicholsons are a clever pair of patter comics, whose funny sayings evoke much merriment; pleasing duets are given by the Sisters Poole-Pelham, and in their acrobatic dances display an ability of which due appreciation is shown; Miss Gladys Godwynne (daughter of Will) is a young artist of promise, who has had to respond to repeated encores; Miss José Salome contributes some fine catchy songs; the performance of Miss Rene Raie, instrumentalist, vocalist, and dancer, is deserving of great praise. Not only in her songs and dances does this artist shine, but her selections on the bells and instruments provide an entertainment as interesting as it is enjoyable.

Panopticon.—Proprietor, Mr. A. E. Pickard.—Eddie and Emmie, with their newspaper kiosk, patter amusingly, and their dancing is smart; Jongleur is an entertaining erratic juggler; George St. Helen, vocalist, and Kitty Vallance, contribute good items. The Bioscope pictures of the Territarials' March through Glasgow are the cause of enthusiastic applause.

GLOSSOP.—Theatre Royal.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Sydney Spenser.—Lena Stanton and Harry Joseph's pantomime Robinson Crusoe opened here on Monday. Miss Lena Stanton in the title-rôle gives a dashing representation, her dancing being clever and graceful; Miss Gertie Lovedale is a charming Polly Perkins; Miss Marie Gerrard is well suited as Captain Billy Taylor; Mr. Melville Page's Will Atkins is droll; Davy Jones is in the capable hands of Mr. F. Forms; Mr. Vic Verney as King Kop-Em is amusing; and as Mrs. Crusoe Mr. Sidney Deane evokes laughter. The specialities include the Leglere Troupe of acrobats and the Alhambra Girls.

GLOUCESTER. — Palace. — Owners, Poole's Theatres, Ltd.; Director, Mr. C. W. Poole.—Mr. Harry Roxbury and company present a capital musical mélange entitled The Prince of Monte Carlo. Mr. Tubby Edlin causes the heartiest laughter as the pseudo Prince. Benson and Waite have a cordial reception for a smart talking, singing, and dancing act; Bostock's baboons are cleverly trained, and go well; the Gilberts in tight wire speciality are deservedly applauded; and the Netty Janowsky Troupe of acrobats and ladderites do some clever feats; Miss Toina Davis is a neat comedienne, and Taylor and Bridge as two singing mill lads duet nicely; Mr. Johnny Walker sings a couple of funny songs; and the Mays in comedy act The Maniac's Child are also in the bill.

King's Hall.—Poole's Theatres, Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. R. T. Rea.—Animated pictures still going strongly.

Public Baths.—Owners, the Corporation of Gloucester.—The Italian Circus, which has appeared before Royalty on several occasions, is here for two weeks. There are over 200 animals, including bears, elephants, dogs, goats, zebras, &c., and a wonderfully attractive show is presented. The clowns are at once favourites, and include Piccolo and Fiori, Nimble Nip, and Wee Wullie.

GRAVESEND.—Grand Theatre of Varieties, Ltd.—Manager, Mr. T. W. Wright.—The Ten Dixie Girls, in their scena, The Silver Coon, introduce dancing and up-to-date coon songs with telling effect; De Lilo and Metz, the former described as a charming lady bender and the latter a clever juggler, are a good turn; Kisbey, the retired call-boy, creates roars of laughter; Harry Clare is a marvellously clever boy actor, giving some good impersonations of Charles Dickens's characters; Adey Spencer gives some clever imitations on the piano; Nellie Wilson is a bright comedienne and dancer; and Bert Dansie, comedian, is a success.

New Public Hall and Theatre.—Secretary, Mr. R. Feaver Clarke, J.P.—Mr. Joseph Poole's renowned No. 1 Myriorama is here for the week, and is doing good business. The following comprises the variety part of the programme:—The Tissots, living marionettes; Funny John O'Rourke, the tourist; Eileen and Maynie, exceptionally clever dancing duo and musical experts; the Seddons, the lady juggler and the lazy waiter; the Maclaines, marvellous illusionists; Mr. Bert Berry, guide and vocalist; Steve Cooke, comedian; and Mme. Frederica's terriers and cake-walking pony.

GREAT YARMOUTH. — Royal Aquarium. —Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. W. Nightingale; Assistant-Manager, Mr. W. H. Nightingale.—Mr. Tom H. Taylor's company is here in the drama As Midnight Chimes. Mr. Melville Richford ably depicts the villain Luke Dezzard; Mr. Clifton Boyne makes a manly Dave Stannard; Mr. Walter Westwood gives a clever character sketch of Ezra Gamble; Mr. Tom Sinclair is very humorous as Tat Slavin; Mr. Harvey Welton displays ability as Limpy Mudge; Miss Jessie Farrington is a chic Luzette, and her singing and dancing are much appreciated; Miss Lilian Earle is excellent as Mary Stannard, and Miss Marjorie Davenport appears with success as Zamora.

Hippodrome.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. George Gilbert.—Harry Friskey is a big favourite with his comedy juggling; Dick Bradley appears in an amusing comedy cycle act; Dan Rodney is a smart comedian; Mint and Mart create a lot of laughter; and the animated pictures are first-class.

GREENOCK.—Alexandra Theatre, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Resident-Directors and Managers, Messrs. A. B. and J. J. Wright.—Mr. Harry Starr and company opened here on Monday in Otto the Outcast. Mr. Harry Starr as the outcast, Otto, gave a capital representation of the part, while as Laura Miss Katie Norris was exceedingly good. Mr. Will Hee as the villainous Roderique D'Estalier was successful, and Mr. Edwin Firth as the Marquis de Laporte was well placed. The other parts were in capable hands. for the last three nights of the week Carl the Clockmaker was billed.

Empire.—Lessees, The Greenock Empire Syndicate; Responsible-Manager, Mr. Edward McCormick; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. J. Colquhoun.—Lowenwirth and Cohan, the popular Hebrew comedians, take the lead here this week, and, as usual, are securing a most flattering reception. The Katos contribute much to the fun of the evening with their automatic theatre; and other attractive turns are provided by Chandos George, assisted by Mlle. Leonitta, in an Arabian song scena; Sira, a clever one-legged acrobat; Dewar and Dunville, expert dancers; Tom Colton, versatile vocalist; and Bert Lytton, light comedian.

Hippodrome.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Harry L. Skivington.—Albertus and Miller head the bill here, and win hearty approval in their comedy act, A Scene in the Fairgrounds. An exceptionally clever acrobatic interlude, "The Ragman and the Postman," is that presented by Cummin and Seaham; Irve Hayman and company submit an effective dramatic sketch, Christmas Eve, which is well received; C. H. Charlton excels as a magician; and others who contribute to the pleasure of large audiences are the Paul Hesse Trio in a pot-pourri act; Will and Jenny Sage, comedy artists; Madge Allen, a charming comedienne; Burns and Bentley, simultaneous dancers; and Madge Goodall, comedienne and dancer.

GRIMSBY.—Prince of Wales's Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. H. Curry; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. W. North.—The Hypocrites is here again, presented by Mr. Charles Frohman's company. Mr. H. Lawrence Leyton now appears as the Rev. Edgar Linnell, and gives an earnest representation of this fine character; Miss Violet Harley instils just sufficient pathos into the part of Rachel Neve, and makes a notable success; Miss Grace Murielle gives evidence of considerable emotional power as Mrs. Wilmore; Mr. Charles Harley is quite at ease as Mr. Viveash, and imparts a genial dignity to the character; Mr. F. Morland is good as Mr. Wilmore, and the same may be said of Mr. S. Denny, who represents Lennard. Others contributing to a successful representation are Miss Muriel Wilson as Helen Plugenet, Miss Millie Emden as Mrs. Blaney, Mr. Charles Tyrel as Sir John Plugenet, Mr. F. C. Thurstans as the Rev. E. Danbury, and Mr. Fred Lake as Dr. Blaney.

The Palace.—General-Manager, Mr. G. Rhodes Parry.—Reano and his band are making a considerable sensation, and the celebrated conductor receives ovations nightly; Bob Hamilton is repeating his former success, and his exposition of Scottish humour is very amusing; the Lutinas are a couple of clever lady gymnasts; Fred Bamford, a popular whistling expert, gives an interesting turn; Clara Reid and John Power appear in a comic sketch, and Marion Armitage is a pleasing Scotch comedienne.

HALIFAX.—Theatre Royal, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Robinson; General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling.—Mr. Robert Courtneidge's company is here with The Dairymaids. Miss Clare Marsden makes a vivacious and very acceptable Peggy; Miss Vera Crichton is well placed as Winifred, and gains encores for her songs; Miss Gladys Silvani is a good Eliza; Miss Dorothy is a stately Lady Brudenell; Miss Lucy Edwin is capital as Miss Pychase; Mr. Dan Agar's Joe Mivens is admirable; Mr. Nelson Keys is good as Sam; Mr. Percy Marshall makes a fine Dr. O'Byrne.

Grand Theatre, Ltd. — Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Robinson; General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling; Resident-Manager, Mr. S. Winks.—Pictures are the attraction at this house. Some fine subjects are shown, notably The Date Industry and Runaway Dogs; a clever conjuror and Connie Leon also contribute.

HANLEY. — Royal. — Proprietors, Hanley Theatres and Circus Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Chas. G. Elphinstone; Manager, Mr. Douglas Elphinstone.—The Gay Gordons is being presented by Mr. Seymour Hicks' company. Mr. Brett as Angus is a tremendous hit; Miss Ash is admirable as Peggy, and possesses a charming voice; Miss Nellie Dade is a clever Charlotte Siddons; Miss Lillie Maxwell as Victoria Siddons is one of the hits of the piece, and her singing is a treat; Miss Gladys Dene plays Lady Millicent Graeme perfectly, and sings finely; Mr. Fred Rolph is a very quaint Nervy Nat; Mr. Ernest Torrence plays and sings in thoroughly artistic style; Mr. George Carroll is exceptionally excellent as Edmund Siddons, and wins unstinted applause; Mr. Reginald Adair is a good Lord Elmington; and the Jack McPhriskey of Mr. J. S. Wooley causes continual merriment. The remaining parts are played perfectly, and the chorus is "champion." The dresses are delightful, and the scenery splendid. Mr. F. H. Irving cleverly conducts.

Grand.—Proprietors, Hanley Theatres and Circus Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr Chas. G. Elphinstone; Manager, Mr. Arthur Rand.—The picture The Invasion of England is keenly appreciated. The Ten-Ji Troupe of Japanese magicians are marvellous; C. D. Reekie is a popular comedian; El Tampicos, Mexican troubadours, win loud applause; Joe Boganny's Lunatic Bakers triumph in their clever tumbling act; the turn of Charles Chard, comedian, is greatly enjoyed; the Sisters Warwick, trick cyclists, score a perfect hit; the Brothers Smarte, after a big hit in pantomime here, are warmly received; and Annie Casey, comedienne, wins no small measure of applause.

King's.—Lessees, Messrs. Moore and Kennedy; Manager, Mr. H. Kennedy.—A series of splendid pictures is drawing large houses. The Mohawk's Ring and Flash James are followed with breathless interest. New-laid Eggs and The Blind Boy are also exceptionally fine. Maurice Lee scores with several smart songs.

HARROGATE.—Grand Opera House.—Managing-Director, Mr. William Peacock; Acting-Manager, Mr. Eric Fielding-Smith.—The Klein Family are the head-liners, and prove both popular and clever; Luna Love sings a couple of tuneful songs and does a neat dance; and Mark Henton works some quaint wheezes; the Four Garricks are both amusing and musical in their song-scena, and Hulbert introduces ventriloquial figures; Nellie Nora plays well on various instruments; and Lena Wylie sings a couple of ballads in pleasing style.

St. James's Hall.—Managing-Director, Mr. Sydney Carter; Resident-Manager, Mr. F. Parker.—A series of beautiful views of travel in foreign parts here this week include pictures of Palermo and the Land of the Midnight Sun. Lauri Wylie, with his funny little mimicing mannikins, is to be congratulated on his very clever impersonations; Roxborough and Wright play a funny sketch entitled My Little One in a highly capable manner; and De Lil, illusionist, completes the bill.

HASTINGS.—Gaiety Theatre.—Manager, Mr. H. W. Rowland; Resident-Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles E. Scutt.—A week's visit is made here by Miss Emma Hutchison and London company in Mrs. Dot. Miss Nancy Beresford is pleasing in the title-rôle; Miss Sybil Brooke as Aunt Eliza Macgregor and Mr. Frank Lacy as James Blenkinsop are responsible for much merriment; the love affairs of Freddie Perkins and Nellie Sellenger are well presented by Mr. Charles A. Staite and Miss Ethel Grahame respectively; and Miss Emma Hutchison provides an excellant portrayal of Lady Sellenger.

Hippodrome. — Managing-Director, Mr. Harry Boyd; General-Manager, Mr. Walter Norman.—A programme of pleasing variety is submitted here. Will Sergeant, a favourite comedian, has an excellent style of singing; some good dramatic pictures are shown by the Alhambra Bioscope; Miss Chummie la Mara is a vocalist of considerable ability; the musical comedy duo given by the Melroses wins them great applause; Wilbert and Lealand give an amusing turn; and Tom Carrick, the pantomime favourite and a roller-skating carnival and competition are other attractions.

Pier Pavilion. — General-Manager, Mr. J. D. Hunter.—The principal feature of an excellent variety entertainment here is Harry Reynold's Minstrel Quintet. The Pavilion Bioscope exhibits an attractive drama entitled England Invaded.

Public Hall.—Attractive amusement is provided here by the St. Louis Animated Picture Co., under the management of Messrs. Allen and Vincent. The interest in the pictures is well maintained.

Royal Concert Hall.—Manager, Mr. H. F. Blackwell.—An extra fillip has been given to the votaries of roller-skating by the American Syndicate so well represented by Mr. Blackwell, and there are now three sessions daily, well attended by followers of this healthful amusement, which on Tuesday was officially recognised by the attendance of the Mayor and members of the corporation, when an exhibition of fancy skating was provided by Professor Albert and other experts.

HORWICH.—Prince's Theatre.—Lessees, The Horwich Theatre Co.—Pantomime holds sway this week. Mr. Arthur Farren's Cinderella is the attraction, and opened on Monday to a large audience. The scenery and dresses are handsome, the musical numbers bright and catchy, and the comedy element is exceptionally strong. Miss Eva Travis in the title-rôle is eminently successful, her vocal efforts thoroughly delighting the audience; Miss Florrie Anderson is a fine, dashing Prince Charming; Miss Gladys Byron is a dainty inkeeper's daughter; Miss Lola Renie as Fairy Fortune gives a fine exhibition of pirouette dancing; Peps the Page is capitally rendered by Mr. James Mackenzie, who contributes some rattling songs; Mr. Arthur Farren plays the Baron Limrich in diverting style; the Ugly Sisters, as portrayed by Messrs. E. Malcabe and Alf. Stokes, create roars of laughter; Messrs. Dave Anderson and Bert Norman as Phil and Garlic, the Baron's footmen, are very droll; Mr. James Clarkson is a typical village innkeeper; Dandini has a handsome exponent in Miss Alice Westbourne; the Misses Gertie and Kitty Johnson give a good show as tambourine dancers, and the Misses May Burns, Burgess Leclaire, Polly Johnson, and Jean and Queenie Stewart help to keep the ball rolling merrily. Mons Le Clair has a fine troupe of performing dogs, and Lord Tom Doddy contributes some excellent songs.

HUDDERSFIELD.—Hippodrome, Ltd.—Resident-Manager, Mr. N. M. Robinson.—At the top of the bill are Staig's cyclists in a sensational performance of riding on a perpendicular-frame track. Other turns are Harry Drew, basso; Miss Belle Braham, in her popular illustrated songs; the Tripellos, who give a pleasing musical interlude; the Sisters Du Cane, singers and dancers; Wyotti, a neat juggler; the Mohamed Ben Mohamed Troupe of Arab acrobats in their well-known feats; and some thoroughly good pictures on the Bioscope.

HULL.—Grand Theatre and Opera House.—Mortons, Ltd.—Manager, Mr. W. F. Morton.—Miss Ada Reeves is here this week, and drawing the city with her Rodanthe in Butterflies. Mr. Louis Bradfield takes Puck with pleasing effect; in the small part of the chauffeur Mr. Laurie de Frece proves a comedian of excellent talent; and Mr. Blake Adams's Podmore is a sterling embodiment. Miss Stella St. Audrie and Miss Clive play with great credit the rôles of Mrs. and Miss Podmore respectively; Miss Phillis Monkman gives with fine effect the dance "La Naissance du Papillion." The production is elaborately mounted, the dressing being superb.

Alexandra Theatre.—Mortons. Ltd.—Manager, Mr. Geo. Morton.—Second to None is proving a considerable attraction. As Neil Greystone Miss Ward gives a realistic study; the Harry Wildy of Mr. Leonard Williams is a truly soldierly reading of the rôle; Mr. C. Spencer is a very fine Sir Reg. Greystone; Mr. Fred Lloyd is forcible as Captain Mannering; and the Sergeant Horseman of Mr. J. G. Maine is not without distinction. The play is well mounted.

ILKESTON.—Theatre Royal.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. L. F. A. Rogers.—Home, Sweet Home is being played here by Mr. Frank Lindo and company. Miss Marion Wakeford wins sympathy as Joan; Mr. Frank Lindo as Stephen is an actor of ability; Mr. D. Lawrence Doyle is a suitable David Armitage; the Duke of Ancaster is cleverly taken by Mr. Norton Shields; the Sybil Fay of Miss Helene Thompson is amusing; Mr. B. Turner is successful as the Hon. Percy; and the character of Dick Redmayne lacks nothing at the hands of Mr. Richard Walsh. Lucas Lyle finds an excellent representative in Mr. Leo R. Neilson.

Hippodrome.—Manager, Mr. L. F. A. Rogers.—Reno, conjurer; Cissie Ferndale, vocalist; Le Wist, ventriloquist; and an entire change of pictures are drawing good houses here.

ILKLEY.—Bridge Pavilion.—Lessee, Mr. Frank Barron; Manager, Mr. George Asaf.—The Coronets continue to amuse large audiences, and, with an ever-changing programme, their entertainment is most enjoyable. Mr. Asaf is a comedian in every sense of the word, while Mr. Godfrey Pariss also helps in the fun; Mr. W. Edwardes-Towle is a vocalist who knows how to treat his songs, and renders them in an excellent manner; the trio of ladies (Misses Barbara Merle, soprano, Phyllis Beryl, contralto, and Leila Byron) are heard to advantage in songs and concerted items. The Pavilion closes on Saturday, and reopens after a thorough renovation on April 5.

INVERNESS.—Theatre Royal.—Manager, Mr. Cameron Burgess.—Mr. Edmund Tearle and company are here this week, and on Monday they opened with Othello. Mr. Tearle gave a powerful study of the Moor; Iago was well embodied by Mr. Stuart Black; Mr. Denis Hogan was good as Cassio; as the beautiful and hapless Desdemona Miss Wanda Beresford presented a sweet and pathetic figure; Miss Mary Campbell gave an effective rendering of Emilia; the Duke of Venice was ably portrayed by Mr. A. Edwards; as Roderigo Mr. P. P. Miller did well; and the other parts were in capable hands.

IPSWICH. — Poole's Picture Palace.—Good audiences have been drawn to this new place of entertainment, the pictures being all new on Monday. The film representing the King's Visit to Berlin proved very popular. Miss Eileen Russell delights with her illustrated songs, her charming voice giving them excellent effect.

Hippodrome. — Proprietor and Manager, Mr. E. H. Bostock.—Miss Lillian Lea provides a most enjoyable musical programme of high-class songs, which are thoroughly appreciated; the Harvey Boys give an exhibition of scientific boxing with some funny interludes; Gerard, a herculean juggler, tosses about weighty cannon balls as though they were made of rubber, and his assistant is very amusing; Les Rallis are two clever gymnasts and tumblers; the Brothers Lawrance dance skilfully; and the Concoran Brothers play a number of brass instruments with good effect; Mr. Arthur Holland sings some catchy chorus songs, and the Bioscope concludes.

JARROW.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. H. Lionel Locke.—This week we have a visit from Mr. Charles Hawtrey's company in The Sportsman. Mr. George Lestocq as Harry Briscoe furnishes an excellent performance; while the part of Dr. Halroyd is carefully handled by Mr. Wilfred Compton, and Mr. Sydney Bransgrove does full justice to the rôle of Mr. Perkins. The character of Mrs. Harry Briscoe is capitally played by Miss Madeline Duval; and Miss M. V. Charlsworth is quite at home as Ada; while Miss Agnes Maude is praiseworthy as Mrs. Critchley. The play is followed by a one-act musical piece, entitled The Garden of the Gods.

KIDDERMINSTER. — New Opera House.—Licensee and Managing-Director, Mr. Jas. P. Moore; Acting-Manager, Mr. R. C. Gudgeon.—Mr. C. Watson Mill presents Miss Blanche St. Albans and company in A Warning to Women. Mr. W. Palliser Acock as Ferdinand de Joules is excellent; Mr. Harry C. Robinson ably portrays the part of Dr. Marcus Dread; and Mr. Edward Warden that of Shuan Fergus. M'Naughton is in the capable hands of Mr. Chas. O'Connor, and Lord Eversleigh is realisticly played by Mr. Leicester Jackson. Miss Blanche St. Albans plays the rôle of Moira Rennion with artistic effort; Miss Gertrude Vickers as Sheile Rennion is good. The piece is well staged.

KILMARNOCK.—King's Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. J. Cummings.—The attraction here this week is Messrs. H. B. Levy and J. E. Cardwell's juvenile company, in the pantomime The House that Jack Built. The book is by Mr. Levy and the music by Messrs. G. F. Dodds and Carl Sherrington. As Jack Miss Fanny Adamson makes a dashing principal boy, and sings herself into popular favour; Miss Evelyn Major as Jill has a good reception; while Miss Olive Purcell in the part of Fairy Twinkle Star has a sweet voice and sings a couple of catchy songs. Mr. H. Hillerby makes a distinct success as Aunt Purdy; and as Wee McGregor Miss Gladys Wise is capital. Among others worthy of notice are Misses Florrie Edwards and J. Marsden, and Messrs. McNorton, Wakeman, and Gibson and Doyle.

KING'S LYNN.—New Royal Theatre.—Manager and Lessee, Mr. B. Pareezer; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Reginald Pareezer.—The boards have been occupied this week by Miss Florence Glossop-Harris and company in the farcical comedy Angela. The title-rôle is sustained by Miss Harris with irresistible charm; the nonchalance and diplomacy of Mary Pembridge are faithfully portrayed by Miss Gertrude Gilbert; Mr. Frank Cellier shows great precision in revealing the excellent traits in the character of Richard Evesham; and Mr. Arthur Keane presents cleverly the idiosyncrasies of Christopher Keswick; Mr. Arthur Seaton as William Blithers, Mr. A. D. Layland as John Evesham, and Mr. Stuart Vinden as Hales are responsible for quiet humour. Each evening the play is preceded by an excellent rendering of the Garden scene from Romeo and Juliet, Mr. Eugene Wellesley taking the part of Romeo and Miss Gertrude Tate that of Juliet.

KIRKCALDY.—King's Theatre.—Proprietress, Mrs. C. Ellis; Resident-Manager, Mr. Frank Seabrook.—Messrs. Paumier and Howard's company is presenting The Prince and the Beggar Maid. As Monica Miss Annie Saker acquits herself with distinction; Miss Ivy Millais gives a touching and effective rendering of Camiola; and deserving of special praise is Miss Elsie Walton for capable acting as Viola. Principal among the male members of the cast is Mr. Wallace Court as Prince Olaf, and it would be hard to imagine a finer reading of the rôle; Mr. Graeme Campbell as Prince Michael makes the most of a difficult part; and as Prince Hildred Mr. James Gordon excels; Mr. Richard Lane makes a pleasing and humorous portrait of Lieut. Karl; Mr. Francis Hawley is a sufficiently dignified Bishop; and Messrs. R. H. Stephens and Kendal Chalmers are good as Captain Hector and Nathan. The smaller parts are in capable hands. The piece is admirably staged.

LANCASTER.—Grand Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Stanley Rogers; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. C. Howitt.—Messrs. Dottridge, Longden, and Willard's company opened on Monday with The Midnight Mail. The hero and heroine could not be in better hands than those of Mr. James Hare and Miss Trissie Humphreys; Mr. Charles A. Longden as Leonard Royle and Miss Jennie Weston as Lady Eustace do exceedingly well, and Miss Daisy Clifford in the rôle of Nancy Brewer is smart and acceptable. Mr. B. W. Avery as Billy Brewer is very quaint.

Hippodrome.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. John Porter and W. J. Fergusson.—The premier place is occupied by Miss Helen Roberts in a Salome Dance; Avon and Crest are smart comedy artists; Captain Curt, assisted by two ladies, two ponies, and two soldier boys, supply a remarkable turn; and Farrell and Dunn, comedians, have plenty of patter; Vera Clifford, vocalist, sings well; Moore and Sumner, in a comedy act, are well received, and Mr. J. H. Ellis, comedian, also entertains. The Hippograph pictures still attract.

LEAMINGTON. — Theatre Royal.—Lessees, Messrs. Milton Bode and Edward Compton; Manager, Mr. George G. Ridley.—During the earlier part of the week Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison's company appeared here in Idols, and good business was done. Miss Edith Goodall gave a very sincere and natural performance as Irene Merriam; Mr. A. B. Imeson sustained with much merit the difficult rôle of her husband; and as Hugh Coleman Mr. Herbert Ford was in the right vein. Miss Moira Creegant's Minna Hart was an excellent delineation, carefully played; and other performances worthy of special mention were those given by Mr. Frank Powell, Mr. George Conroy, Mr. A. E. Grahame, Mr. Harvey Braban, Mr. Gilbert Clark, Mr. Alfred Ibberson, Miss Adelaine Lester, and Miss Kathleen Maude. The latter part of the week Mr. Stanley James's company is appearing in the comedy My Wife.

LEEDS.—Grand Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. Jno. Hart; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wynn Miller.—Miss Lena Ashwell's company, in Grit, is making a welcome appearance. We cannot speak too highly of the acting capabilities of Miss Gladys Purnell as Erith Winter; as Jim Barr, the carpenter-socialist, Mr. Leslie Carter acts with much sincerity; the part of Dick Travers is in the capable hands of Mr. T. A. Shannon; Mr. Philip Sanders and Miss Elspeth Dudgeon are successful as Mr. and Mrs. Winter respectively; and Miss Violet Vorley is a sympathetic Mrs. Percival. A smart curtain-raiser is Charlotte on Bigamy.

Theatre Royal.—Lessee, Mr. Frank MacNaughton; Manager, Mr. Harry Liston.—A Wife's Triumph is staged here. Miss Ada Abbott plays with success the rôle of Bessie, and is well supported by Mr. Abbott as the Bank Clerk; Mr. H. B. Wilson as Ellis Jordan makes the most of the character; Mr. Weedon Ross as Julius Cartman submits a convincing impersonation; and the bluff and cheery Squire is in the capable hands of Mr. Douglas C. Phelps.

The Empire.—District-Manager, Mr. T. Gerald Morton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Alex Galley.—Fred Karno's production, The Football Match, which includes Harry Weldon, is drawing good houses; second in popularity is Ernest Cadle's Casey's Court; the Two Macs, smart patter merchants, also give a comic boxing display; Ben Albert possesses a good voice and good songs; and other popular turns include Edie King, Melia and Mozarabar, and Minnie Mace and Sisters Dorrell.

The Hippodrome.—Lessee, Mr. Thos. Barrasford; Manager, Mr. Arthur Collingwood.—Captain Woodward's sea lions show wonderful aptitude; Maud Hall and Carleton Macy are applauded in an American sketch; Bertisch performs some smart feats of strength; Winifred Ward is well received; and the old Leeds favourites, Belrose and De Velin, meet with gratifying success; Edie Veno (serio), George Antill (comedian), Moeller and Theodor (comedy acrobats), and Dorothy Gould (vocal comedienne) also appear.

The Varieties.—Lessee, Mr. Fred Wood; Acting-Manager, Mr. Sam Jones.—The Five Musical Tritons, in a clever musical act, and pictures of the Johnny Summers fight are the leading items. Monty Walker, Metz and Metz, Nan Farren, Shenton and Chicks, Chris Baker, and the Rollicking Ranstons complete the bill.

The Queen's.—Lessee, Mr. Fred Wood; Manager, Mr. Frank Bush.—Ella Shields is repeating her

JOHN BULL

LOOKING WELL.

John Bull looks as well as anyone and jovial too. So broad, so sturdy, and so strong. Folks say, "How well you look!" Poor John is really ill like so many of us, and dare not say so—people would not believe him.

Looks belie people. Only those who are ill know how much suffering there is. How we wish our heads didn't ache! Or we wish food was enjoyable and would digest—wish we hadn't the pain, the flatulence, and the acidity that follows eating.

Why "wish" only? Take a short course of Mother Seigel's Syrup. There is renewed hope and renewed health in every drop of it. It will so tone up and strengthen the digestion that life itself becomes a new joy.

Mother Seigel's Syrup is now also prepared in TABLET FORM and sold under the name of Mother Seigel's Syrup Tablets. Price 2s. 9d. One size only.

"For so long as I remember, Mother Seigel's Syrup has been used by the various members of my family, from time to time, for indigestion and allied complaints, always with excellent results. As for myself, it has kept me fit and well for more than twelve years past."—Samuel R. Evans, B.A., 41, Rosebery Road, Redfield, Bristol. Jan. 8th, 1908.

MOTHER SEIGEL'S SYRUP.

previous successes in well-chosen songs; August, September, and May, eccentric comedians, create much fun; the Westbrooks appear in a clever dancing scena, entitled, Two Little Maids from School; Sam Spira, child impersonator, is successful; Baby Vi Davis sings three songs with effect; the Three Clarkes are entertaining; and the Whittakers complete.

LEICESTER.—Opera House.—The attraction is provided here this week by a first visit of Messrs. Smith and Carpenter's company in Pete. The company is a thoroughly capable one, and the play is most effectively staged. Mr. Frederick Victor well maintains his high reputation with a sterling performance of the title-rôle, being admirably seconded by Miss Marjorie Murray as Kate Creegan with a portrayal of especial excellence; Mr. Percy Rhodes is good as Philip Christian, and others who do justice to their parts are Mr. Pennington Gush as Ross Christian, Mr. Hartley Summers as William, Mr. Thomas W. Ford as Cæsar Creegan, and Miss Amy Grace as Nancy.

Theatre Royal.—A first visit is being paid here this week of the thrilling melodrama Convict 99, of which the Melodrama Production Syndicate, Ltd., are the proprietors. The principal parts of Lawrence Gray and Geraldine Lucas are effectively played by Mr. Frank Beresford and Miss Dorothy Milne respectively.

Palace Theatre, Ltd. — Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; District-Manager, Mr. Hatton Wharton; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. Finch-Hatton; Assistant-Manager, Mr. W S. Bucclench.—The top of this week's bill is shared by Phil Ray, the popular and mirth-provoking comedian, who is receiving a hearty welcome, and Willie Zimmerman, with his entertaining and clever impersonations of celebrated composers. At the other end is the young and talented artist Gertie Gitana, who is receiving her usual warm welcome for a particularly smart turn. Terry and Lambert are always worth seeing, and are given a show that proves most popular in all parts of the house; the Jackley Trio of amusing acrobats, including the clever whistling comedian, score repeatedly; McCann's dogs (Irish terriers) are put through a good performance; the Lyric Mummers are excellent duologue artists; Harry Leybourn is a mimic of ability, and Jennie Hartley dances and sings in an attractive manner. The Bioscope shows Industries and Sports in Burmah.

Pavilion Theatre.—Proprietor and Director-General, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Acting-Manager, Mr. Joseph Lawrence.—An attraction quite out of the ordinary is the presentation by Mr. Frank C. Bostock of the remarkable chimpanzee Consul. His performance is of a most unique character, and is watched with the keenest enjoyment by crowded houses. Harry Pleon creates roars of merriment with his truly funny burlesques; Fred S. Peake and company are retained over another week, and are scoring a well-deserved success in the dramatic sketch The Hypocrite; Bett and Betts are very good in their comedy act; Ethel Yorke is a vivacious comedienne. Others who entertain are Harry Desmond, eccentric comedian; and Colin Mail, light comedian. Walter H. Pallister's Bioscope depicts A Zulu's Heart and Runaway Kids, and the cinephone has new films. Rose Cass did not appear on the occasion of our visit, owing to a cold.

Empire.—Lessees, the New Bioscope Trading Company; Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles R. Craig.—The moving pictures here this week are of the usual high-class character. Will Harmony is making a most successful first appearance here in his mimicry of leading stars.

Association Hall.—The Original Merry Cadets give a capital performance, the chief artists participating being Horace Merry, a rising baritone; Charles Galloway, comedian; Fred Richardson, an entertaining ventriloquist; Ted Saunders, Scotch comedian; Fred Tilley, comedian and pianist; Charles Grange, humorist and dancer; and Harry Carnell, pianist.

LEIGH.—Theatre Royal and Opera House.—Proprietor, Mr. J. W. Cragg; Manager, Mr. W. H. Chippendale.—Mr. Lingford Carson's company is on a return visit with A Fight for a Throne. Mr. John Millyard makes an admirable Captain Jack Fortescue; Mr. Jerrold Reed plays with quiet reserve as King Nicholai I.; Mr. Charles E. Linney powerfully portrays the treacherous Otto; Mr. Walter Graham is a convincing Lieut. Paul Rodna; and Mr. Charles H. Hughes ably depicts the rôle of Tom Ferret. Miss Dora Hammersley as Princess Esmee is sympathetic and charming; Countess Valeska is well presented by Miss Margarette Tueskie; General Rodna is ably rendered by Mr. Tom Royden; and enjoyable comedy is provided by Mr. Patrick Evans at Lieut. the Hon. Percy Fitzmaurice and Miss Emmeline B. Lewis as Lady Pat.

Grand Theatre and Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Leigh Grand Theatre and Hippodrome, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. W. Benson; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Woolstencroft.—Heading the bill here is Mr. Harry Rogers and company with Told in a Flat. The Paul Kramer Troupe of head-balancers are loudly applauded; Miss Lily Hayes, comedienne and dancer, is deservedly appreciated; Mr. Will Walton is amusing; and the Great Lumars contribute a first-rate acrobatic performance. In addition there are Kelmere and Burns, comedians; Indiana, the flexible lady; and the Bioscope.

LEITH.—New Gaiety Theatre.—Licensee and Director, Mr R. C. Buchanan; Resident-Manager, Mr. John Darlinson.—A return visit of The Girl Who Took the Wrong Turning affords an opportunity of improving acquaintance with one of the most interesting in the long list of Melville dramas, and the piece is well handled by a capable company. Mr. F. Ronald Adair puts breziness as well as feeling into his impersonation of the sailor hero, Will Mason; Mr. Sidney Sarl gives an excellent character study as Bill Slater; the persecuted Jack Fenton is effectively portrayed by Mr. Frank R. Robertson; and the villainous Vesta le Clere and James Harcourt are well represented by Miss Nannie Meade and Mr. Raymond Wood. Useful work is done by Mr. Frank Denis as Richard Fenton; virtue and error are carefully contrasted by Miss Zoe Davis and Miss Jessie Belmore in the respective rôles of Lucy and Sophie Coventry; and the comedy element is abundantly supplied by the Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Walker of Mr. Fred Ingram and Miss Marie Kildare.

LINCOLN.—Royal.—Lessees, Messrs. Seddon and Pope; Manager, Mr. Ernest Pope.—Messrs. Skardon and Martin's company is presenting Leah and The Way of the World twice nightly. The representation is very fine in each case, and the scenic effects rouse enthusiasm. Miss Sidney Crowe is seen to advantage in the chief rôle in each piece.

Palace.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. A. E. Dobney.—To a powerful bill this week Ted Karno's company contribute the screamingly funny sketch The Dinner Hour; the Brothers Redmond's quaint acrobatic act is funnier than ever; the Czar troupe of Russian dancers give a whirlwind show; and Rose Pink, the Sisters Cora, Alec B. Thorne, and Bert and Dora score greatly.

Central Hall.—The Dayton Family head a capital bill, and in addition to their own wonderful act there is a crowd of good turns. The Cecilias offer a refined drawing-room turn; the Milfords are daring trapezists; and the whole show goes with spirit.

LOUGHBOROUGH.—Theatre Royal and Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. Payne Seddon and George Robertson; Resident-Business-Manager, Mr. W. Payne Seddon.—Mr. Chas. M. Daly's second Hippodrome company has been attracting good houses. Miss Mamie Morris is a dainty soubrette dancer; Mr. Harry Bland a good comedian; Mr. and Miss Ives appear in a grand ball-punching act; Miss Marie Wilson is an expert male impersonator; Miss Sara Roseberry amuses as the Lancashire comedienne, and Miss Rene Glendower and her comedy company keep the house in constant laughter by their sketch, A Bit Too Clever. Mr. Daly's animated pictures are a great success.

LIVERPOOL.—Royal Court Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Lawrence.—On Monday the Mersey city had a first glance at the new musical play, entitled The Dollar Princess. Its reception by a critical audience was marked by keen appreciation, the general opinion being that it is one of the most amusing and dainty productions of its kind seen for years. Mr. H. Corson Clarke, as the American millionaire, whose hobby is to engage impecunious titled persons as servants in his house, was exceptionally funny, and kept the ball rolling in capital style; Mr. Robert Michaelis fitted the part of the sportive Fairfax to a nicety, and deservedly earned numerous encores for his able rendering of several difficult numbers; a delightful Alice Conder was submitted by Miss Hilda Moody, who certainly captivated everybody, her singing and acting giving much strength to the whole of the work; another distinguished artist in the cast was Miss Kitty Gordon, who wore several lovely dresses, she found great favour as the adventuress lion queen, and among her musical pieces was one, given very pleasingly, dealing with her calling; much credit was due to Miss Alice Pollard for her winsome Daisy. Included among the most humorous characters was that of the baronet-footman, capitally depicted by Mr. Willie Warde; while Mr. Vernon Davidson helped greatly as the earl, employed in the capacity of groom. The whole play went with a swing and was charmingly mounted.

Shakespeare Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wentworth Croke; Manager and Secretary, Mr. John Gaffney.—Peter Pan returned here this week for a fortnight's stay, and large audiences extended to Miss Pauline Chase a most flattering reception. That little lady's picture of the boy who would not grow up was as delightful as ever, and she certainly won the appreciation of all to the greatest degree. Miss Gertrude Lang played Wendy in proper fashion, making the rôle a most natural one; Mr. Rob Harwood enlivened the play with his comical Captain Hook; Mr. George Shelton as Smee lent great assistance in the matter of creating fun; Mr. Stanley Logan and Miss Sybil Carlisle were the parents, whose other children found pretty exponents in Master George Hersee (Napoleon) and Master Herbert Hallom (Michael); while Miss Ninon Dudley and Miss Nellie Bowman pleased as Tootles and Nibs.

Rotunda Theatre.—Manager, Mr. M. Montgomery.—Here during the week Miss Mary Neil and Mr. George Kirk presented Her Luck in London, which afforded satisfaction to large audiences. Miss Neil repeated her powerful assumption of Nellie Harborne, winning loud applause; Mr. Douglas Cecil made a striking Fitzgerald O'Connor; a carefully enacted rôle was that of Stephen Harborne by Mr. T. Lionel Ellis; Miss Beatrice Hudson gave the utmost satisfaction as Lilian Harborne; Mr. Walter Mann did every justice to the character of Lenowen; Miss Florry Groves (Shovepenny) and Mr. J. W. Melrose (Jerry) were responsible for the comedy; Miss Amy B. Ellis did well as Mrs. Harborne, and Mr. Douglas Tremayne acquitted himself excellently as the Rev. Lionel Strong.

Star Theatre. — Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Harris Fineberg.—A hearty welcome was given here this week to Chalmer Mackey's capital Irish play, Rollicking Rory, and large audiences richly enjoyed the great fund of humour shown by Mr. Mackey, who assumed the title-rôle. As Mrs. Ashleigh Mrs. Mackey earned much favour; Mr. Wallace Campbell played strongly in the part of Stephen D'Arcy; Mr. Richard Hutton made an admirable Captain Ashleigh; the character of Shaun Brady was done justice to by Mr. St John Stuart; Mme. Constance Bellamy as Peggy O'More sang several Irish ballads in most pleasing manner; Miss Nana Flensburg proved a merry Rosie Callagan, and danced and sang with taste; and Mr. J. P. McBride made an admirable Desmond Fitzgerald. The Bioscope pictures shown by Films, Ltd., were much appreciated.

Empire.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Horace Cole.—George Gilbey has been foremost here this week with his capital songs and business, the reception given to him being highly flattering A smart military episode, entitled Drummed Out, which met with great acceptance, came from A. C. Lilly and company, the artists including Messrs. W. G. Blunt, Leo Lilly, Fred Thompson, A. C. Lilly, and Miss Gladys Rose-Jones, Miss Lillie Leigh, and Miss Stella Charteris; Ian Colquhoun, a baritone, possessed of an excellent voice, rendered to the general satisfaction several national character songs; Burke, Andrus, and Frisco caused much laughter with their spectacular absurdity, Trafalgar-square, London, 4 a.m.; that pleasing little ventriloquist, Miss Maude A. Edwards, earned loud applause; the St. John submitted an acceptable turn as musical comedians and dancers; the hand-jumping acrobatic work of the Steineretto Troupe was watched with interest; Fred Edwards and company, including Miss Bertha Northam, amused greatly with their funny Kleptomaniacs, and Silvo showed skill on the musical glasses and chimes.

Queen's Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fred Granville.—Here during the week we have had Human Nature presented by Mr. R. A. Beaton's company, including Mr. S. Herbert Humber as Captain Temple.

Lyric. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. Henry C. Arnold.—Here this week in big type was Madie Scott, whose taking songs got hold of the house; Kitchen and Lister's company had a most entertaining dramatic sketch, The Sundowner; the always popular Harrigan and Holt were heartily welcomed; a smart comedy acrobatic turn came from the Hyde and Cody trio; H. C. Lovell and company presented a neat musical comedietta, Mlle. Pompom; a pretty song-scena was submitted by Miss Minnie D'Aubyn; Richard Fineberg gave several well-presented studies from famous plays; Nat Clifford had a rousing reception for his new songs, "The Bullfighter" and "Living Pictures"; and Lena Leslie, comedienne, also appeared. The Thursday matinée here is a big success.

Royal Hippodrome. — Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford; Manager, Mr. Walter Hassan.—The Six Brothers Luck gave their merry sketch Lift 'ems, Ltd., which was received with unbounded delight; George French, freed from Glasgow pantomime, visited Liverpool again to be greeted by his many friends for his very humorous songs; Hal Godfrey and company presented the amusing item A Very Bad Boy; the Arthur Gallimore Troupe of comedy artists were received with applause; as comedy and wire-trick cyclists, Johnson and Devere gave an excellent show; an appreciated musical novelty was provided by the Four Canadians; Parker and Parr sang and pattered in capital style; and also in the list were Stuart and Evans, refined comedians; the Vasilescu Troupe, and Tom Lowen, comedian.

Royal Palace of Varieties.—Manager, Mr. M. Montgomery; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank O'Toole.—The Rich and Poor of London, by Max Goldberg, has during the week been given here by the stock company.

Westminster.—Lessee, Mr. Fred E. Weisker; Acting-Manager, Mr. G. Montgomery.—Lena Stanton and Harry Joseph's pantomime of Aladdin has been the attraction here this week. Miss Annie Rose held the title-part; Mr. Rex Kempton was the Widow Twankey, and specialities were introduced by the Gibson Girls, the Sabot Trio of vocalists and dancers, the Bros. Shephard with a comic boxing act, and the La Dore Troupe of classic acrobats.

Olympia.—District-Manager, Mr. Albert Bulmer; Acting-Manager, Mr. Ernest Wighton.—The leading line here this week has been the favourite, Whit Cunliffe, who had a big reception for his latest ditties, "Exercise" and "Nobody's satisfied"; the Stockham Grecian band gave an admirable performance; Fred Ginnett and Wal Pink's company pleased generally with their sketch The Beacon Bell; that clever little entertainer at the piano, Ray Wallace, earned a most flattering reception; Arthur Kenny's sensational cycling was watched with close interest; an amusing and clever turn was provided by Harry Lickson's dogs; as juvenile instrumentalists, Dorothy and Alexander showed a deal of talent, and contributions also came from Ugo Nap, and Fayre and Manning, comedians.

Pavilion.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Manager, Mr. Henry Hearn.—Top of the bill here this week we have had Dinah Morris and company with the very entertaining sketch A Yankee Girl in Dahomey; Billy Merson kept his audience in a merry humour; the juggling by the Wallys was skilful and pleasing; a refined and picturesque gymnastic act came from the Mars Trio; Will Willis had some amusing songs; the dancing of Wynnie Darrell earned that able artist loud applause; and also in the list were the Sisters Mawdsley, juvenile duettists and speciality dancers; George Hyam, comedian, and Nellie Rose.

Grand Tivoli.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Jasper Redfern.—Harry Burns's very funny pantomime Robinson Crusoe has put in a second week.

Park Palace.—Lessee, Mr. Jasper Redfern.—The series of animated pictures shown here have continued to please. During the week they were supplemented by the following artists:—George Bernard, with song dramas; Evelyn and Norrie in the sketch Set a Thief; 'Appy Alpho, ventriloquist; Chant and Chant, comedians; the Sisters Varley, duettists, and the Itrams, with an acrobatic pot-pourri.

New Century Picture Hall.—Proprietors, The New Century Animated Picture Company, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Walter W. Hook.—Good business continues to be done at this favourite place, the constant change of films giving something new each week. Those shown recently included The Fisherman's Daughter, Sights and Customs in Egypt, Rifle Bill, and humorous pictures.

LOWESTOFT.—Marina.—Manager, Mr. E. A. Smith.—The Power of the King is appearing here this week for the first time locally. It is well staged, and the situations are well worked up.

Hippodrome.—Proprietor, Mr. Geo. Gilbert; Manager, Mr. Frank Freeland.—The popular form of entertainment here is hugely enjoyed by large and delighted audiences nightly. Surrey and Carlton figure prominently in their sketch, The Blind Boy, Miss Kitty Maynard appearing to advantage in the name-part; Charles Cole, Lily Butler, Day Rey, and Dan Rodney all contributed to a successful bill. The Bioscope is also a powerful factor.

LUTON.—Grand Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. E. Graham Falcon; Resident-Manager, Mr. Louis J. Beard.—Miss Mary Austin and Mr. E. Vivian Edmonds is this week presenting Woman and Wine. Mr. Edmonds appears to advantage as Dick Seymour; Mr. Harry Harrop as Charles Santer is really clever, and Mr. J. Milne Taylor is pathetic as the blind man; the part of Mary Ragadout is ably portrayed by Miss St. Elmo, as also is the character La Colombe by Miss Octavio de Noel; Miss Ethel Vinroy as Janet Marlow deserves a word of commendation, and an attractive exhibition is furnished by the Lottie Stone troupe of whirlwind dancers.

MACCLESFIELD.—Theatre Royal.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. W. K. Gatley.—Miss Loie Esmond and company are here with The Sorrows of Satan and Nana, the former being presented on Monday. As Prince Lusio Rimanez, Mr. Edward Neville gave a most sardonic representation; Mr. F. Douglas Howard made an ideal Geoffery Tempest; Amiel was capably undertaken by Mr. E. Holland Day; Morris was well played by Mr. Edwin Ramsdale; Mr. J. Le Fleming did well as the Earl of Elton; Miss Rosie Neville's acting as Lady Sybil Elton displayed ability; Miss Loie Esmond admirably fulfilled the requirements of the part of Diana Chesney, and as Mavis Clare Miss Gladys Hastings Walton did creditable work. The Green-eyed Monster preceded.

MAESTEG. — Town Hall Theatre.—Lessees, Poole's Theatres Co., Ltd.; Manager, Mr. G. F. Knowles.—Mrs. F. G. Kimberley's play, Her Secret Lover, is being presented here this week by Mr. Thompson Carruther's company. Mr. Cecil Grey gives a forcible rendering of Gilbert Seymour; Mr. Arthur Preston as Captain Darrel Rose plays in a convincing and earnest manner; Mr. Millar Anderson very creditably depicts the villainous John Strange; Mr. Milnes Noble gives a capital portrayal of Mr. Murfield; Mr. Eric Campbell as Juan Burley creates a deal of laughter; Miss Mabel Mannering acts with intelligence and emotional power the part of Ivy Seymour; Alicia Royale is cleverly impersonated by Miss Amy Ellam; as Jane Maria Wilkes Miss Beatrice Reynolds causes roars of laughter. Other parts are well sustained by talented artists. The piece is staged and dressed on a most elaborate scale, and does great credit to Mr. Carruther.

MANCHESTER.—Theatre Royal.—Lessees, the the United Theatres Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Edmondstone Shirra.—A fairly good house witnessed the performance here on Monday of A Message from Mars by Mr. Fredk. Mouillot's company. The piece proved highly entertaining in the hands of a very well-chosen cast, the principal successes being gained by Mr. Wallace Widdicombe as Horace Parker—a clever rendering; Mr. William H. Brougham in a persuasive depiction of the Messenger; Mr. Robert Grey as the American, Mr. Dicey; Miss Rose Helene, who impersonated Minnie Templar very nicely; and Miss Winifred Knightly as Horace Parker's aunt. Many other parts were neatly and effectively handled, and the piece had all the advantages of good staging and wonderful electrical effects.

Prince's Theatre.—Proprietors, the United Theatres Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. George Lee.—A second week of the D'Oyly Carte répertoire company is welcome fare at this theatre. In addition to a number of the popular operas played last week, a performance of The Pirates of Penzance was given with great success on Tuesday, and on Thursday a fine rendering of Patience varied the programme.

Gaiety Theatre.—Proprietor, Miss A. E. F. Horniman; Manager, Mr. B. Iden Payne; Acting-Manager, Mr. Edwin T. Heys.—Miss Horniman's company revived St. John Hankin's comedy The Return of the Prodigal here on Monday, and the abundant talent of the cast assured, as usual, a capital entertainment. The outstanding feature was Mr. Basil Dean's impersonation of the central figure, the contemptible Eustace Jackson; but the character is far less pleasing than even the firm, commercial Henry, played remarkably well by Mr. Lewis Casson, or the snobbish father, depicted by Mr. Charles Bibby with his customary force and skill, or, again, the supercilious Lady Faringford, played excellently by Miss Sybil Thorndike. Among the more likeable personages, Miss Ada King was especially successful as Mrs. Jackson, Miss May Saker played Violet with considerable sympathy, and Miss Hilda Bruce Potter was charming as Stella; while Mr. Edward Landor's character sketch of Dr. Glaisher was a welcome piece of comedy. A new play in one act, Going on Parade, preceded. See notice elsewhere.

Royal Osborne Theatre.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Mason.—Mr. T. Edward Ward presents here this week C. Watson Mill's romantic play The Love of the Princess. Mr. Wilson Coleman as Prince Conrad and Mr. E. H. Tobell as the decrepit and palsied King Josef stand out prominently, and an ideal performance as Princess Idalia is given by Miss Maisie Hanbury. Miss Olive Lloyd makes a charming Lady Irene, and Miss Nellie Graham as Constantia, a Sister of Mercy, is noticeably good. It is hard to discriminate where all is so admirably well done, but praise should be bestowed also upon Mr. Beckett Bould's depiction of Lieut. Orlans, the Lieut. Zaroff of Mr. Douglas B. Watson, the princely impersonation of the Regent of Navarra by Mr. Graham Winsford, and Mr. E. Ibeson's virile rendering of the traitor, Count Nicholas. The play is notable for its power and its freedom from undue sensationalism.

Metropole Theatre.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Dry.—A return visit of Messrs. Glenville and Osmond's company in A Soldier of France is the attraction here this week. Mr. F. Rivers as Corporal Jean is very effective, and Miss Beatrice Shirley as Pauline Lorraine is an engaging heroine. Mr. G. Kennedy adds a strong delineation of Judas Delara; Mr. E. Hobart's dual character of Capt. and Lieut. Lorraine is well done; and acceptable comic business is provided by Mr. F. Edwards and Miss Maggie Hobart.

Grand Junction Theatre.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Brearley.—Messrs. Hinton, Green, and Zillwood's company are here this week in Her Fatal Marriage. Mr. Arthur Hinton gives a fine performance as the villainous Zaco Malletto, and an equally effective rendering of Myra Malletto is provided by Miss Ruth Zillwood, who is admirably suited to heroic rôles. Mr. Norman Tracey plays Wilfred Grey in good style, and Mr. Gerald Byrne gives a very clever depiction of the half-witted Paul. Amusing work is added by Mr. William Bailey as Jim Rogers, and by Miss Laura Wright as Dolly Dimple.

Empire.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Hall.—The Johnson v. Burns fight is shown here, rather wearisomely long, on the Bioscope, and Herbert Darnley's sketch, The Mandarin, which will improve with time, is also prominent. De Canty's "Water Grotto," an electrical spectacle, is pleasing; and other smart turns are the McConnell Trio of vocal sketch artists; Walter King, the doleful comedian; Eily Adair, Irish comedian and dancer; Frank Sylvo, comedy juggler; Dennis Drew, in a Territorial scena, assisted by a number of clever youths; and the Sisters Simms, in a vocal and dancing act.

Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Manager, Mr. Nelson Barry.—Mr. Norman Wrighton presents here this week a patriotic playlet, entitled Wake Up, England! The characters are all well sustained by Mr. H. Scott-Russell, Miss Maud Stuart, Mr. Richard Norton, Mr. Frank Harding, and Mr. Norman Wrighton. Mme. Madeleine De Noce, prima donna of the Grand Opera, Paris, sings beautifully, and is well received; the Griffiths Brothers score, as usual, in their excellent burlesque wrestling skit; Joseph Hart's Rain Dears, including Miss Neva Aymer, in a fine musical and dancing novelty, with unique effects, are delightful; Nell Emerald makes a hit in song and dance; Victoria Carmen, a refined comedienne, sings pleasingly; Lydia and Amelys are excellent Parisian dancers; Albert Rees is a capital drawing-room entertainer; and Gaumont's Patent Chronomegaphone is realistic. Bioscope pictures complete.

Palace.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter de Frece; Manager, Mr. A. J. Carter.—Madame Albani, the famous singer, is here this week, and meets with a deservedly great reception. She is ably assisted by Mr. Victor Marmont, accompanist, and Herr Zakovsky, the renowned violinist. Emerson and Baldwin go through an exceedingly smart eccentric juggling act; Max Gruber introduces with success his performing elephant, horse, and pony; Herr Zakovsky's violin selections are exceptionally fine; Hillman and Russell sing well in The Somnambulist; Fred Hastings, comedian, makes a hit; Fyne and Hurley, as the coster and the dude, are very amusing; and the Sisters Herbert are very pleasing duettists and dancers. Up-to-date pictures are also shown.

King's, Longsight.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. Jas. R. Trippett.—Send Him Victorious, played by Mr. Montague Beaudyn's company, is here this week, still engaged in the successful entertainment of local audiences.

Tivoli.—Managing-Director, Mr. Charles A. Wilkes; Manager, Mr. Arthur B. Wilkes.—Esther Palliser, the well-known prima donna, is the top star here this week, and meets with a fine reception. Ethel Newman is exceedingly good in a new comedy monologue The Widow; Fred Herbert scores, as usual, as a topical vocalist; Nita Kelly gives a unique performance as an equilibrist on the trapeze; Beatrice Lindley is good in songs at the piano; the Carlyles are very clever whirlwind dancers; the Leonas give a pleasing musical act; Billie Burford, comedienne, has some good chorus songs; and an unnamed eccentric comedian appeared on the occasion of our visit as deputy for Julia Reeve, comedienne, and made a big hit.

Queen's Park Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. W. Meek.—Wild, Willie, and West are here this week, and provide plenty of amusement with their bounding and knockabout business. Sydney Brandon, a youthful character impersonator, is exceedingly good; La Belle Duchess presents with success intelligent horses and high-jumping dogs; Ruhart, ably assisted, amuses with a smart burlesque vaudeville act; Vanando, a clever ventriloquist, has some smart talk; Adela Crispin is a dainty musical comedy artist, her rendering of "The Sunshade Girl" being much appreciated; Angus Strong, baritone, has a good voice; Jack Hartley, comedian, and Harry Kirk, comedian, are good; and the Saxony Sisters gain great applause for their wooden-shoe dancing. Pictures complete.

Hulme Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. Thos. Baker.—The Lyons Trio top the bill, and give a smart turn as pantomimists and dancers. Clown Barker introduces clever animals with great success; Lillie Le Main in a neat and pretty speciality The Living Marionettes is good; Bains and Reed cause much laughter in a clever tumbling act; Sig. Arvi gives an astounding mystery act; Beattie Foster, comedienne, makes a hit; Cyril Dane is a neat light comedian; Wallace Whitney, character comedian, is popular; Armiens gives a good musical scena; and Ben Silvo is a smart gymnast and clown. Troubles of Childhood, shown on the Bioscope, is a good film.

MERTHYR TYDFIL.—Theatre Royal.—Sole Lessees, The South Wales Entertainments, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Albert Jackson.—Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchson's company is here with Lady Frederick. Miss Eleanor Delaporte made a success with a clever impersonation of the title-rôle; Mr. Robert Minster gave an excellent study of Paradine Foulder; Mr. W. Barnard Parker played with briskness the rôle of Sir Gerald; Lord Mereston was cleverly enacted by Mr. E. F. Meade; Miss Celia Gordon acted effectively the part of Lady Mereston; Mr. Edward Bonfield as Captain Montgomery was good, as was also the Admiral Carlisle of Capt. Gerald Gambier. Miss Lynne Fontanne pleasingly depicted the part of Rose Carlisle.

Temperance Hall.—Manager, Mr. Israel Price.—The programme includes Lockhart's well-trained elephants, the five X Rays, justly described as the mad athletes; the Aribos in a sensational novelty; the Jollions, in a vocal scena, The Spider and the Fly; De Nebos; Johnny Dwyer, versatile comedian; the Della Sisters, in their latest London successes; the Four Goldins in a carpet spinning speciality; and Cave Burnett, actor-vocalist. New films are shown on the Biograph.

MEXBOROUGH.—Prince of Wales's Theatre.—Manager, Mr. W. H. Melton.—Miss Marie Dagmar's company is this week presenting the drama The Tyrant. Mr Roy Fortesque gives a vigorous portrayal of the title-rôle; a fine study of Homodei, the avenger, is submitted by Mr. Norman E. Overton; Prince Rudolph has a dignified exponent in Mr. Ed. E. Lewis; Pan is capably sustained by Mr. T. Ashmore; as Victor and Nobbs, Mr. Frank Etheridge and Mr. Tom J. Taylor are responsible for enjoyable comedy; Miss Marie Dagmar displays her well-known artistic gifts as Tisbe; the character of Lady Catherine is treated with great ability by Miss Frances Waring, and the rôle of the unfortunate Eulie is exceptionally well played by Miss Lallah Shelton.

New Picture Hall.—Lessee, Mr. Will Hunter; Manager, Mr. E H. Jones.—Leading features in the programme here this week are a fine dramatic film The Road to Ruin, and a capital detective picture, Nick Carter

MIDDLESBROUGH.—Grand Opera House.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. E. Jowsey; Manager, Mr. W. K Chatto.—Her Forbidden Marriage is interesting audiences here, and Mr. H. Lonsdale and company are popular.

Theatre Royal.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. C. Imeson.—The Old Home has a story full of pathos. Miss Gertrude Bonser, Miss Annette Jeins, Messrs. Fred L. Connynghame, Roland Yorke, and Charles Franmore play their respective parts with success.

Empire Palace.—Managing-Director, Mr. Alf Mattison; Manager, Mr. Chas. B. Rembges. — Good entertainment is to be found in the programme at this place of amusement. Tom and Marie Motramo, in an amusing sketch, prove themselves artists of exceptional ability; the Kellinos submit a clever risley speciality; Beaty and Blanche, Rose and Challoner, Alexandra Dagmar, Wisper, Beattie Bloom, and last, but not least, J. A. Wilson, the well-known entertainer, assisted by his dog, Private Towser, all contribute to an enjoyable bill.

Hippodrome. — Managing-Director, Signor Rino Pepi; Manager, Mr. Nichols.—Haley's Juveniles are a troupe of highly-trained children; a clever turn is given by the Kurios; Miss Carlotta Levey's turn is appreciated and enjoyed; Miss Hilder Bowker is a successful vocalist; and Dene and Dawson create much merriment in their sketch, Stage Aspirants. Esta Stella, the Military Maid, and Harry Luck, comedian, also do well.

MOTHERWELL.—New Century Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Resident-Manager, Mr. Arthur Hales.—Mr. Fredk. Melville's company is this week paying a return visit with The Ugliest Woman on Earth. Miss Beatrice Homer is excellent in the title-rôle, and Mr. Philip Darien is equally good as Jack Merryman; Mr. Leyton Cancellor does well with the unsavoury character of Hubert Gold, his accomplice, Antonio Luchesi, being aptly rendered by Mr. Leonard Hacking. A pretty bit of character acting is given by Miss Violet Macaree as an Italian girl; Rose Courtenay is capitally rendered by Miss Gertrude Harrison; and Mr. William de Brigord does well in the small part of Tom Redvers. A word of praise is due to Miss Nellie Jackson and Mr. Freddie Bently for their really excellent comedy acting as Aggie Brown and Tubby Harrick respectively.

NEATH.—Gwyn Hall.—Lessee, Mr. J. W. Robinson; General-Manager, Mr. J. W. George.—The Neath Excelsior Dramatic Company presented Current Cash here on Tuesday in aid of charity.

NEW BRIGHTON.—Winter Gardens.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. H. E. Jones and A. Douglass.—On Monday another excellent programme was submitted here. Mr. R. H. Douglass, fresh from his great success in the Liverpool Court Theatre pantomime, gave two or three of his clever original sketches, and was again and again called before the curtain, and eventually had to respond to a fourth encore. His success was decided and pronounced, and he occupied the stage for thirty-five minutes. A most welcome return visit of Mr. Leo Carle, the quick-change artist, gave universal satisfaction. Another immediate success was made by the Four Vagabonds in their mirthful musical melange. Ducalim is responsible for a neat and original equilibrist act on ladders, and the Veroniques present a humorous sketch, The Lady Typist and the London Messenger Boy. Miss Gwennie Morgan and animated pictures complete.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE.—Theatre Royal.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. F. Teale Lingham.—This is the last week of Mr. Robert Arthur's brilliant and successful pantomime Aladdin. Amongst those who have helped in this huge success, special mention should be made of Misses Fanny Fields, Violet Lloyd, Doris Dean, Maud Thorne, and Florence Hersee, and Messrs. Harry Tate, Malcolm Scott, Regan and Ryan, Horace Lane, and Harry Claff.

Tyne Theatre and Opera House.—Lessees, Messrs. Howard and Wyndham; Manager, Mr. Fred C. Sutcliffe.—This week we have Messrs. George Edwardes and Charles Frohman's company in A Waltz Dream. Miss May De Sousa makes an unmistakable hit as Franzi (leader of the ladies' orchestra), acting with passion and charm, and singing with sweetness and expression; Miss Ethel Cadman gives an artistic rendering of the Princess, and delights the house with her exquisite singing; Miss Amy Augarde is effective as Friedrike; Miss May Marton makes a vivacious and amusing Fifi; Mr. John Humphries meets with a good reception, his easy and amusing style being admirably suited to the part of Joachim XIII.; Mr. Wilson Pembroke as Lieut. Niki furnishes an ideal representation, all his songs being encored, the melodious waltz in particular; while Mr. Leslie Holland extracts a great deal of humour from the part of Count Lothar. Mr. Willie Warde, jun., is very quaint as the waiter, Max Bauer; and Mr. John Hamilton is well suited as Lieut. Montschi. Other parts are ably played by Miss Mary Hamilton, Mr. Albert Kavanagh, and Mr. Langford Kirby. The chorus and augmented orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Hamish MacCunn, are excellent.

Palace Theatre.—Manager, Mr. T. W. Rowe.—Mr. Frederick Melville's company in Her Road to Ruin is here this week on a return visit. Miss Beatrice Edwards as Jess gives a brilliant rendering of a difficult and exacting part; Miss Nellie Bonser's portrayal of the Lancashire girl is highly successful; while the rôle of May Willoughby is enacted in a charming manner by Miss A. Bowes. Mr. H. Walston submits a powerful impersonation of Frank Temple; the Bishop is presented with due dignity by Mr. Dane Clark; Mr. A. Bradley as the villainous Philip Hardy is well placed; Mr. Duncan as Tom Wells and Mr. V. R. C. Moore as Charles Cholmondeley make the most of their parts.

Grand Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. F. W. Bolam; Acting-Manager, Mr. Chas. E. Linney. — Large houses are witnessing Wilson Barrett's drama Claudian. In the title-rôle Mr. William Maclaren is admirable, his acting being powerful and convincing; whilst Almida is played with ability by Miss Lily C. Bandmann.

Empire Theatre.—Resident-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; Resident-Manager, Mr. W. Parham Wells; Assistant-Manager, Mr. J. W. Kilgour.—Prominent on the bill are Eli Hudson and Olga and Elgar, who give a most refined and clever musical act, which proves immensely popular; Kara, a juggler of more than usual skill, provides a most entertaining performance; a novel and refreshing turn is contributed PAVILION THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Thos. Barrasford; Manager, Mr. Will H. Boardman.—The Tomson Mystery heads an excellent bill here this week, and other artists appearing are Nellie Wallace, Joe Nightingale and Arthur Stigant, Ted Moxon Trio, Juno Salmo, Ferris and May, the Florias, and W. T. Ellwanger.

SKATING RINK, EXHIBITION BUILDINGS.—Manager, Mr. Fred B. Crowe.—The skating rink proves a most pleasant retreat this stormy and unsettled weather, and is daily attracting new patrons. Everything possible in the way of comfort is provided, and rinking has now become an institution.

NEWPORT.—LYCEUM.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Sidney Cooper.—Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch is being presented to good houses here this week. The central figure is delightfully enacted by Miss Augusta Haviland. Miss Armine Grace plays Miss Hazy with a touch of the grotesque that in itself is pathetic; Miss Beatrix Bell showed the spirit of aggressive spitefulness in the part of Mrs. Eichorn; Miss Violet Chamier's Mrs. Schultz is another good study; and Miss Winifred Murray does splendidly in the part of Miss Lucy; while Miss Dorothy Clifton's Lovey Mary is simple and sincere. Miss Mary Nybloc, Miss Mimi Le Clair, and Miss Marie Stella are exceedingly lively as Asia, Europena, and Australia; Mr. Burton Cooke provides a good character study of Mr. Shibbins; Mr. Francis Chamier's Mr. Wiggs is amusing; and Mr. Guy Addison made the best of Mr. Bob. The Hunkerdunkus Jones of Mr. Forrester Harvey is lively; Mr. Colston Mansell and Mr. Lawrence White do well as Billy Wiggs and Chris Hazy; and Mr. Harry G. Wright dances smartly as Deacon Bagsby.

EMPIRE.—Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. O. Stoll.—The Coloured Meisters sing sweetly; Daisy Jerome, "the electric spark," is a host in herself; and Rex Fox, a good ventriloquist, is also an adept on the slack wire. Jack Lane, the Yorkshire rustic, is applauded; the Delevenes as Flipp and Flopp provide a turn that is acceptable; and the Lupinos, eccentric comedians, Frances Letty, wooden shoe dancer, and Lupino Lane, comedian, all receive warm recognition. The Bioscope, showing excellent films, completes.

NORTH SHIELDS.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Stanley Rogers; Acting-Manager, Mr. Horace Lee.—Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Levy and J. E. Cardwell's company is attracting large audiences here this week with The Babes in the Wood. Miss Daisy Wood makes a capital Robin Hood, her excellent singing being a special feature of her impersonation; Little Peggy McDonnell and Little Cissie Wyse as the Babes, Leslie and Marjorie, are much appreciated; Miss Jennie Hughes shines as Fairy Dewdrop, and Miss Dolly Dodds is a charming Marion, her singing and dancing being loudly applauded. As Baron Strangeways Mr. Neil Hardy is very funny; Mr. Jimmie Watson causes hearty laughter as Lucinda Lovejoy; Mr. J. G. Aitken makes a hit as Sandy Simple; Mr. Harry Leander proves a capable Friar Tuck; and Messrs. Graham and Barron as the ruffians, Willing and Weary, are very clever. Some capital dancing is introduced by Levy and Caldwell's Troupe of International Dancers, and the Marguerite Quartette; whilst the chorus and augmented orchestra, under the directorship of Mr. H. B. Levy, perform in capital style.

CENTRAL PALACE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. William Mould.—Mr. J. W. Hall, the popular comedian, heads the bill here, and has come in for his usual hearty reception; the Three Coopers, comedy vocalists, are very entertaining; Miss Eddie Cascelli excels as a banjoist; and Morimura, Japanese magician, presents a clever act; Little Georgie, the boy comedian, is smart; the Three Sisters Volka, in My Birthday, are very pleasing; and the Pictures are excellent.

NORTHWICH.—PAVILION.—Proprietress and Manageress, Mrs. P. Fletcher.—Glyn and Glyn present a taking turn in their vocal patter and dancing act, entitled The Captain and the Maid; "Sunny Boy" is a good delineation of coon songs; Miss Nell Desborough is a chic comedienne; Will Hardy, comedian, does well; and Erle and Godfrey are expert instrumentalists. The Bioscope new pictures are entertaining.

NORWICH.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessee, Mr. Fred Morgan.—Mr. Eugene C. Stafford's excellent company in The Private Secretary pays a welcome visit here. Mr. Douglas Price-Evans was as droll as usual as the Rev. Robert Spalding; Mr. W. Hargreaves gave every satisfaction as Mr. Cattermole; Mr. Fredk. Tyrrell was good as Mr. Sydney Gibson; Mr. Herbert Garthorne was successful as Douglas Cattermole; and Mr. Alex. Begbie equally so as Harry Marsland. Mrs. Alfred Davies deserves praise as Miss Ashford; Miss Dulcie Conrey was a pleasing Eva Webster; and Miss Nan Macrea appeared with success as Edith.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. E. H. Bostock and F. W. Fitt; Manager, Mr. Councillor F. W. Fitt.—A capital programme is provided here. Clarissa Talbot and Albert Pearce in a Japanese singing duologue are pleasing; Ralph and Nellie Howard display ability in their act Military Mad; Pete and Minnie Lee score in their comedy act The Scotsman's Visit to London; Shaun Glenville and company in their sketch The Art of Deception create fun; Maude Mortimer is a favourite comedienne; Lily Lonsdale sings pleasingly; Willie Gardiner is a clever roller-skate dancer; and Ernie Myers evokes laughter with his comical patter.

NOTTINGHAM.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. Howard Finney.—The visit of Mr. Forbes Robertson and Miss Gertrude Elliott in The Passing of the Third Floor Back has aroused great excitement, and the house on Monday was packed by an eager and enthusiastic audience. As the "Passer-by" Mr. Forbes Robertson is splendid, his fine diction and dignified presence contributing towards an ideal performance; Miss Gertrude Elliott develops Stasia on delightfully humorous lines, and is as artless and amusingly sly as the character demands; Mr. Ernest Hendrie invests the part of Joey Wright with earnestness and power; and Chris Penny is agreeably played by Mr. David Powell. Miss Haidee Wright assumes the affectations of Miss Kite with charming naïveté; Miss Keith Lytton as Mrs. De Hooley and Miss Agnes Thomas as Mrs. Sharp give artistic portrayals; Miss Kate Carlyon makes an excellent impression as Mrs. Tompkins; and Mr. Ian Robertson well portrays the utter meanness of Major Tompkins. Admirable work is done by Mr. Edward Sass, Mr. Wilfred Foster, and Miss Amy Brandon Thomas. A Play in Little, written by Mr. Ian Robertson, precedes.

GRAND THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. Harry Upton.—The Fatal Wedding is being well presented by Mr. Percy Williams's company. Mr. Cecil A. Melton gives a well-studied and effective reading of Howard Wilson; Miss Ethel Kay is amply gifted to portray the emotional part of Mabel Wilson, and gains sympathy for her embodiment; the tigrish nature of Cora Williams is capitally suggested by Miss Elaine Vanbrugh; Mr. W. H. Garbois' portraiture of Robert Curtis is a skilful piece of work; Mr. J. Newton is good as the clergyman; Miss Lulu Wohlmann makes an important "little mother"; and all the children's parts are ably filled. The large element of fun is sustained by Mr. Harry M. Vernon as Toto, Mr. Frank Ashley as a Policeman, and Mr. Cyril Melton as Schwartz.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. Albert C. Duncan.—Karno's comedians are a constant source of merriment in the sketch G.P.O. Headed by that inimitable comedian, Fred Kitchen, the combination keeps their audience in continuous laughter. Alice Pierce gives her impressions of star artists with charming grace and artistic merit; the musical turn of Van Allen is enlivened by clever fooling and patter; and the songs of Austin Rudd are rendered with plenty of spirit. Percy Parrimond, the singing collier, gains hearty applause; and vocal items are also contributed by Primrose Harding and Edith Brown, the latter lady playing her own accompaniments. Moon and Morris are experts in comedy and dancing; and the Bioscope concludes.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford; Resident-Manager, Mr. A. V. Carnell.—The main attraction here this week is Mr. Arthur Roberts in the humorous sketch Till Sunday; a wire act of a sensational description is presented by Kartelli; and a mixture of clever cycling and quaint fooling is a very enjoyable turn by Harry and Tyler. Jack Barker in his mimetic monologue is distinctly good; a comedienne of unusual merit is found in Miss Annie Heath; the Ted Curtis Trio of singers and dancers are above the average; and a novel Risley act is the one executed by Will Douglas's Troupe, entitled The Bakers' Beano. J. G. Scatter, dialect comedian, sings and chatters in an amusing manner; and Brull and Hemsley and Sibb and Sibb add no little to the enjoyment of a good programme, completed by Bioscope Pictures.

NUNEATON.—PRINCE OF WALES'S.—Proprietors, Theatre and Entertainments Co.; Managing-Director, Mr. A. F. Cross; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Brown.—Mr. C. Watson Mill's company is here with For Love and the King. Mr. C. W. Mill makes a forcible Jarvel; Mr. John Burton as Michael Obrenovic, and Mr. Henry Earlesmere as Valdimir Obrenovic fit their parts exceedingly well; Mr. Villiers Stanley is good as Prince Uros; Mr. Geoffrey Chate as Duke Ferdinand and Mr. A. H. Leslie as Kosta Marco are well suited; and Mr. J. K. Woods gives a carefully studied rendering of the German artist, Carl. Miss Rosalind Tate as Princess Athene is seen to advantage; Miss Joan Ellis does good work as Natalie; and Miss Lily Wynter as Grazia and Miss Francis Tierney as Edith Meredith deserve praise.

OLDHAM.—GRAND THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. S. Mayall.—Mr. Herbert Ralland's company is here with His House in Order, playing to large audiences. Mr. J. Herbert Beaumont, in the character of Hilary Jesson, is the recipient of much applause; and Miss Elise Roberts as Mina, who acts in a very clever manner, also has a good reception. Miss Avis Grahame is very successful as the dignified Lady Ridgeley; and Miss Victoria Wray is capital as the austere Geraldine. Miss Katie Neville is a smart Mlle. Thome; and Miss Peggy Rae is clever as Derek Jesson. Mr. J. Parish Robertson makes an excellent Filmer Jesson, M.P.; Mr. Langford Browne as the pompous Sir Daniel is most capable; and the same may be said of Mr. Dudley Stuart as Pryce Ridgeley. Mr. Richard Dalton is very amusing as the outspoken Dr. Dilnott; and Mr. Randolfe Reade is a capital Major Maurewarde.

COLOSSEUM THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Wm. Eastwood.—Two Little Drummer Boys is played by Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Kimberley's company. Miss Maggie English as Eric Carsdale is excellent; and Miss Maudie Douglas is equally good as Jack Smith. Miss Mary Ainslie is a sympathetic Alma Kingsley; and Miss Violet Ingram as Margaret Rivers is well suited; Mr. Harry Scott is a manly Capt. Frank Carsdale; Mr. Oswald Douglas is a vigorous villian as Capt. Darrell; Mr. Edward Bikker plays Gen. Kingsley in a well-balanced style; Mr. Wilson Holmes is very good as Jim Barker; Mr. George Turner makes a capable Rev. John Rivers; and Mr. Tom Beasley is a capital Lieut. Allen Kingsley. Miss Elsie Dene in the part of Molly Meadows is responsible for clever comedy; and she is ably supported by Mr. W. Percy as Quiney O'Quirke and Mr. D. Seddon as Timothy Trimmer.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Hulme.—Jenny Johns is as popular as ever with her catchy songs; Mr. Paul Barnes proves a very entertaining monologuist; the Bensons provide a neat vocal and musical comedy act; and in Haley's "Garden of Girls," excellent singing and skilful dancing are introduced. John Leopold's comedians cause screams of laughter in The Houseboat; the American Pattersons are smart in their novelty trampolin bar act; the Twin Andersons have a neat dancing act; and Edie Anderson is a dainty comedienne and dancer; Fred Casburn does well with funny patter; and the Bioscope has an amusing picture.

PALACE THEATRE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter De Freece; Resident-Manager, Mr. F. Thorne; Assistant-Manager, Mr. E. Sharrocks.—Madame Alice Esty, the well-known prima donna, sings with telling effect selections from her excellent répertoire; Radford and Valentine, in their comedy juggling act, cause much amusement; Leslie and Stevens are excellent in a capital comedietta; the Max Milian Trio give a skilful equilibristic turn; Kitty Cameron is smart in song and dance; Tony Iveson, at the piano is entertaining; Hal Berte is a good comedian; and Burley and Grean are a capable eccentric tumbling duo. The Palace pictures are interesting.

ROYAL THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—General-Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Kilrow.—W. J. Churchill has a pleasing reception for his breezy songs and patter; Hayes and Merritt give a clever act on the bars; and Walter Bellonini's juggling act achieves great success. The Six Albyns are good in a miniature musical comedy; the Lannons sing well and dance cleverly; Madoline Rees is a dainty vocalist; and the Brewster Troupe perform their drill and do speciality dances with good effect; Ernest Montefiore and company act well in The Little Colonel; the Davies and Gledhill Trio do some daring cycle riding on rollers; Fremel and Fremel are capital eccentric comedians; and Robbie Roy is a good Scotch comedian.

HIPPODROME.—General-Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. L. King.—The living pictures continue to attract good houses.

OXFORD.—NEW THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. C. C. Dorrill; Assistant-Manager, Mr. G. T. Lucas.—On Monday Mr. Stanley James's company, including Mr. C. H. Croker-King and Miss Mary Carnegy, opened here with My Wife, which was very favourably received. Mr. Croker-King, an old member of the Oxford University Dramatic Society, had a most flattering reception on his appearance, and played the part of Gerald Eversleigh with a crispness and finish that delighted all his old admirers here; Mr. James Gelderd well backed him up with a most amusing rendering of the Hon. Gibson Gore; and the parts of M. Dupré, René Falandres, Baron Grandos, M. Valboure, M. Potin, and Davies, the butler, all found excellent exponents in Messrs. C. Brooking, V. O. Crabtree, A. Percival, Stanley Killby, L. Hansen, and F. Stoney. Miss Mary Carnegy was very charming and fascinating as Trixie; Miss Katharine Harrington was an effective and handsome Miriam; and the Misses Olivia Edwards, Barbara Fenn, Winifred Beadnell, and Dorothy Mayhew all appeared to advantage as Mrs. Denham Lane, Baroness Grandos, Mme. Dupré, and Marie. My Wife was preceded by The Vengeance of Jim, in which little Miss Beryl St. Leger appeared with much success as the child, Maggie.

EAST OXFORD THEATRE.—Lessees, East Oxford Theatre Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Stuart.—Mr. Dickie Clare's company is here with Lucky 'Liza. Mr. Walter T. Hybert enacts the dual rôle of Silas Slim and the French waiter, "Why," with conspicuous ability; whilst Mr. Dickie Clare is intensely amusing as the Judge. Mr. T. W. Benson gives a finished and natural rendering of Peter Pettitoe; Mr. J. W. Forrest does well as William Biffins; Mr. Harry George is seen to advantage as Barnaby Bladderwick; and Mr. Martin Alwyne is especially good as Paul Pettitoe. Miss Evelyn Wood is graceful as Sadie Potts; Miss Helen Douglas makes an effective Marie Pettitoe; Miss Violet Hurley is full of life, dances well, and is very sprightly as Vergina Bladderwick; while Miss Vesta Brownie scores with a bright and clever impersonation of Eliza Bird (Lucky 'Liza). Dances are contributed with great success by La Belle Trio.

PAISLEY.—PAISLEY THEATRE.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. H. Savile.—The boards for the first three nights of the week were in the occupation of Mr. Edward Compton and his company in three plays of their répertoire—A Reformed Rake, Davy Garrick, and The Scarlet Coat. The first-named comedy was performed on Monday night, and the rôle of Harry Jasper, B.A., was handled by Mr. Compton in his characteristically artistic manner; Mr. Henry Crocker was admirable in his assumption of Mr. Thornton; Adolphus Thornton was well and efficiently played by Mr. Ivan Leslie; Frederick Adderley was skilfully treated by Mr. Henry Worrall; a fine portraiture of Andrew Wylie was furnished by Mr. W. Johnston; and Mr. Philip Gordon in his embodiment of Matthew was excellent. Miss Kathleen Leigh as Joyce Thornton acted with natural charm and grace; the part of Mrs. Thornton was neatly and effectively presented by Miss Constance Merton; and Miss Viola Compton showed high accomplishments in her delineation of Arabella Mountstuart.

HIPPODROME.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Bostock; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. Stead.—The Harmony Four top the bill here this week in their clever and original musical comedy act, and cause no end of laughter, their antics being screamingly funny; a musical turn of a high order is given by Phern and Phern, comprising selections on various instruments; Shrillo, operatic whistler, gives a delightful entertainment; Jukes and Earle, harmonising duettists and dancers, come in for a hearty reception, their dancing being particularly smart; Edith Chantler, juvenile vocalist, provides some excellent singing; Chorley and Connor make a big hit as patter comedians and dancers; Carl Volta does some wonderful conjuring tricks; D'Artagnan, the equestrian lion, with his poodle pet, performs in a manner which elicits admiration; and the Hippodrome Bioscope is entertaining with capital pictures.

PEMBROKE DOCK.—TEMPERANCE HALL.—The Merry Widow was presented here on Monday and Tuesday by Mr. Geo. Edwardes's company, under the direction of Mr. J. A. E. Malone. The piece is excellently mounted and dressed. Miss Daphne Glenne, in the title-rôle, proved a charming actress, and sang delightfully; Mr. Alec Worcester's Prince Danilo was an excellent impersonation; Mr. H. Sinclair Cotter as Baron Popoff was successful; Mr. Harry Emeric as Nisch was really good; and as Vicomte Camille de Jolidon Mr. Arthur Geary deserves equal praise; Mr. Tom H. David as Marquis de Cascada, Mr. Spencer Lloyd as M. de St. Brioche, Mr. Cecil Warwick as General Novikovitch, Mr. C. L. Steward as M. Khadja, and Mr. Clinton Reynald as the Waiter at Maxim's all deserve credit. Miss Violet Hobson gained general admiration as Natalie; Miss Mabel May did some pretty dances as Frou-Frou; Miss Beatrice Maude, Miss Alice Humphrys, Miss Ethel Darsley, Miss Beatrice Willis, Miss Neste Laurel make captivating Maxim Girls; and delightful impersonations were also given by Miss Enid Forde as Prascovia, Miss Mary Florence as Sylvanie, and Miss Eileen Clanford as Olga.

PERTH.—THE PERTH THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. J. H. Savile; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank Aldridge.—The drama Driven from Home was here for three nights. Mr. Felix Pitt was highly successful as Anthony Raybrook; Mr. P. George Beresford well realised the part of Walter Hatherleigh; Mr. Charles Burdon as Geoffrey Waring was clever; Mr. Percy Dawsone was a popular Willie; Mr. Fred C. Imbert scored as John Anderson; Mr. Harry Cornwall was a very good Jabez Thomas; Mr. Edward Finlay as Dick Saunders was effective; and Laura Raybrook was well sustained by Miss Ada M. Ryder; Barbara Ashdown, Raybrook's housekeeper, Miss Kate Walfred as Fanny Jones, Miss Susie Bevan as Margaret Bailey, afterwards Mrs. Anderson, Miss A. Williams as Mrs. McCarthy, Miss Florence Wilson as Peggie, Miss Madge Muriel as Jane, and Miss A. M. Ryder as Walter Hatherleigh, the younger, all filled their parts in capital style. Mr. Edward Compton and company are to be here for the last three nights of this week, and will produce A Reformed Rake, The Scarlet Coat, and Davy Garrick.

PETERBOROUGH.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. E. Winter; Resident-Manager, Mr. H. Watson.—Messrs. Sutton and Raynor's company opened here on Monday with Moths. Mr. Cecil Wynne is an ideal Prince Sergius Zouroff; Mr. Raynor is well suited to the part of Lord Jura, his acting being decidedly clever; Miss Henrietta Schrier in the rôle of Fuschia Leach achieves success. The part of Lady Dolly Vanderdecken is well acted by Miss Lilian Kevill-Davies; Mr. Leonard Laurence is good as the Duke of Mull and Cantire; Mr. Conrad Heywood makes the most of the character of Raphael de Correze; the Duchess de Sonnaz of Miss Cecilia Dare is all that could be desired; Miss Dorothy West-Symes as Vere Herbert is worthy of special mention.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. Fred Karno and A. H. Edwards; Manager, Mr. Percy Hart.—The chief turn is that of F. V. St. Clair, who is making his first visit to Peterborough, and is quite successful; Little Victoria is a dainty comedienne; and a capital act is furnished by the Royal Delomes, duettists and dancers. Prof. Buer's educated talking donkey keeps the house in good humour; Charlie Jerome, the American speciality artist, also submits a good item; Lulu Evans, a talented comedienne, and Horace White, the ventriloquist at the piano, have a flattering reception; Hippodrome pictures complete.

PLYMOUTH.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Manager, Mr. J. Langdon Lee.—Mr. Geo. Dance's company presented Havana for the first time locally on Monday to a crowded house. To Miss Daisie Irving the leading part of Consuelo is entrusted, and a better choice could scarcely have been made; Miss Gladys Guy as Anita displays wonderful dancing powers which are fully appreciated; as Nix, the melancholy boatswain, Mr. Mark Lester furnishes a clever study; Mr. Tom Seymour as Reginald Brown, in addition to being a first-rate comedian, sings and dances excellently; Mr. Cecil W. Parke is well placed in the sentimental part of Jackson Villiers; and Mr. Ray Russell is smart and lively as the Hon. Frank Charteris.

PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. Jack Field.—In the absence of Mr. Sam Mayo, the Ten Dark Knights furnish some well-rendered vocal selections; Joe Reichen's Dog Show is truly wonderful; Harry Tomp's patter is much enjoyed; Miss Adah Payne is an accomplished vocalist; Dacey and Lewis find favour with a comedy turn; and Miss Daisy Hicks is a graceful comedienne.

PONTEFRACT.—ALEXANDRA THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—General-Manager, Mr. Tom Diacoff.—Harry Tate's No. 1 company, in the comedy sketch Motoring, is highly appreciated, and deservedly so. There is still another sketch, Ferdie's Ma-in-Law, which for clever comedy and witty lines is almost unique. Mlle. de Rose has a phenomenal voice, and is assisted by Hilda Claremont, a soprano, who sings with refined taste; Lillie Luraine is a specialist in the way of wind instruments, and the Sisters Delmore sing and dance daintily; J. F. Franklin makes some amusing references to life in gaol; Cliff Owen has funny quips; J. H. Hawtrey sings stirring songs; and Daisy Maholne is everything to be desired as a comedienne. Then there are the pictures.

PORTH.—THE PALACE.—Proprietors, Poole's Theatres Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. C. W. Poole; Manager, Mr. Walter Bynorth.—The chief place in the bill here is occupied by Les Ventrix, with The Garden of Terpsichore, which is greatly appreciated; Caban's Circus is a rare treat, the animals being well trained; Elton and Elma have a first-class triple bar performance; Massona scores a success as a comedy juggler; Hughes and Elliott meet with a good reception in their singing and dancing act; Mona Garrick gives excellent representations of scenes and characters in various plays; Oliver Conroy is a great favourite; and Georgina Leno is a very refined comedienne.

PORTSMOUTH.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Armstrong Bell.—Although by no means the first visit with Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch, Mr. Gaston Mayer's company met with a cordial reception from a delighted audience. In the title-rôle Miss Gertrude Irving played with charm and ease the cheery optimist Mrs. Wiggs; poor Miss Hazy was amusingly impersonated by Miss Rita Carlyle; Lovey Mary had a sympathetic exponent in Miss Margaret Shelley; Mr. Stubbins received a characteristic impersonation from Mr. Fred Forrest; the matrimonial agent was capably played by Mr. Edward A. Coventry; and the rest of the cast was in efficient hands. The piece was well staged.

PRINCE'S.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. E. Agate.—Another of Walter Melville's plays and company occupy the boards this week, during which The Girl Who Wrecked His Home is being staged. Miss Louise Hampton by clever acting keenly interests the audience in Bertha Marshall's misfortunes; Mr. Fred Goddard admirably impersonates the husband Jack Marshall; Mr. Edward Thane capably plays the scoundrel Leonard Kenyon; Miss Winifred Whyte doing well as his accomplice Val Raymond; Mr. Francis Hope and Miss Nellie Burdette as Tommy Biffen and Tottie Primrose are responsible for the lighter side of the play, and Mr. Herbert Goddard's rendering of the brewer Henry Stevenson is a good one.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Capt. E. H. Warren Wright; Acting-Manager, Mr. R. A. Maddox; Secretary, Mr. W. Pratt.—The keen attention of a packed house was concentrated on Dr. Walford Bodie's wonderful demonstrations in the practice of electricity. Besides presenting former local objects of his care he proceeded to treat fresh cases of paralysis, and finished up with an amusing display of the comic side of his art. Wee Mona Vivian is a clever little dancer and mimic; the Maro Duo perform some capital feats on the triple bars; an amusing farce Two to One finds scope for energetic acting by Mr. and Mrs. Finden; the Four Parisian Girls excel in song and dancing; the Bros. Curran display their prowess in the boxing act Taking the Census; and a welcome turn is that of Teresa da Silva, vocalist and burlesque.

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter De Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Harris; Assistant-Manager, Colonel F. Roberts.—The star turn in a strong programme is the Great Roland, who quite mystifies the audience; The Dandy Millionaire, a musical farce prettily staged and dressed, is presented by Mr. Edward Marris and a strong company; Jordan and Harvey's Hebrew dialect is amusing; Miss Dora Lyric has a fine stage presence; L. W. Harris, Harry Russon, Kendrick and Laura are pleasing turns. Films showing the advance of the Russian ships into harbour and subsequent landing of the men are interesting.

PRESTON.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietors, the Executors of the late W. Johnson; Resident-Manager, Mr. Stephen Pritt.—Mr. Brandon Thomas's company is here with Charley's Aunt. Mr. Theo. McCausland Stewart is a typical Colonel Sir Francis Chesney, Bart.; and Mr. Roy Byford is exceptionally good as Stephen Spettigue. As Jack Chesney and Charles Wykeham, Messrs. Robert Burnett and Hastings Lynn are both excellent, and act with plenty of spirit; Mr. Arthur Chesney is well suited as Lord Fancourt Babberley, and keeps the audience in a roar of laughter with his vagaries as Charley's Aunt; Mr. Sydney Compton is well suited as Brassett. Miss Vere Gerald is an excellent Donna Lucia, and Miss Sylvia Morris a winsome Ella Delahay; as Kitty Verdum Miss Estelle Winwood is vivacious and attractive; and Miss Ethel Fifield is a bewitching Amy Spettigue. The interesting one-act play by Brandon Thomas, The Colour-Sergeant, is given as a curtain-raiser.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. Sawyer and Woodruff.—Fred Granville's company in the drama The Better Land is here this week. Mr. Leonard Aardale acts with much ability as Philip Radcliffe; Mr. Stanley Radcliffe in the character of Hubert, his brother, enacts the part of the polished villain to perfection; Mr. Leonard Marshall as George Grant gives a vivid impersonation of the hunted criminal; Mr. Bert Dench is amusing as Tom Tadpole; Mr. Guy P. Ellis is capital as Detective White; and Mr. G. F. Hughes is excellent as Bill Bones. Miss Gerty Moodie as Harry and Miss Emily Entwistle as Tessa are two clever child actresses; Miss Agnes Collier is to be congratulated upon her rendition of the part of Mercedes; Miss Bella Moody causes much laughter as Polly Perkins; Miss Violet Vivian wins applause for her capital portrayal of Aunt Jemima; whilst Miss Maud Stewart Drewry wins fresh laurels for her very able rendering of the trying part of Doris.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident-Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank E. Burdett.—Coram, ventriloquist, tops the bill this week, and proves himself a first-class entertainer; Lennard and Vereker, in their illustrated songs, prove a pleasing turn; the Three Cascaellas, comedy tumblers, given a capital act, concluding with the "human chain"; Charles Baldwin's company appears in a laughable sketch entitled The Merry Wives, which attains its object in raising hearty laughter; the Days, in their second-sight entertainment, are distinctly clever; Little Tichbourne, "the little lump of comedy," proves himself a clever big-boot dancer; A. H. Drinkwater, swell comedian, contributes some catchy songs; Jack Crawley has a novel act, Lights Out; Tiny and Mite are wonderfully clever child vocalists and dancers; Walter Ellis presents his comic scena, Captain Duncan and His Airship, in which Bob Barbour and Harry Danby cause much merriment. The White Suit on the Bioscope concludes.

RADCLIFFE.—GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Geo. T. Santé; Acting-Manager, Mr. Jas. Boothman.—A change is made this week by introducing a variety show. One of the attractions is G. de Relwyskow, winner of the Light-weight Wrestling Championship of the World at the Olympic Games, London. Bert Wickham, the world's champion all-round athlete; Kavados, the incomparable juggler; Rozel, a very fine gymnast; E. W. Selman, comedian; Flo Melville and Ivy Gallard, comediennes and dancers, also add to the entertainment of the audience.

RAMSGATE.—ROYAL PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Lord George Sanger; Lessee, Mr. Ernest Mansell.—The Eve of Her Wedding is played in good style by Mr. Wilson Benge's company. Mr. Benge appears with distinct success as George Tremain and Miss Sadie Smith sustains the rôle of the heroine, Mavis Leverton, admirably.

RAWTENSTALL.—GRAND THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. Fred Granville; General-Business-Manager, Mr. A. R. Feather.—Mr. Harry Foxwell's company is here this week with Mother, which is performed with great feeling and power. Mr. Harry Foxwell gives a realistic impersonation of the bluff, honest skipper, Duncan Fairweather; and Mr. Alex Alexander makes an effective Frank Rodney. Mr. Sidney Leyton is an excellent impersonator of the villain Stephen Carrington; Miss Thorne Hallam as Nellie Fairweather gives a talented portrayal; and Miss Blumenthal as Mrs. Martha Fairweather is successful. As Polly Crumpet Miss Lily Alexander gives a vivacious interpretation; and Miss Kathleen Hunt is a capable Mrs. Bagot. Miss Marie Holmes as Little May is very clever; Mr. Teddy Myles is a comical Tommy Noblets. The scenery is good.

READING.—ROYAL COUNTY THEATRE.—Proprietors and Managers, Mr. Milton Bode and Mr. Edward Compton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Benton.—The musical play Butterflies is being presented this week by a strong company, which includes Mr. Harrison Brockbank, whose fine baritone voice is heard to great advantage in the character of Puck; Miss Annie Heenan is a charming and vivacious representative of Rhodanthe, the witch; Mr. Edwin H. Wynne gives a clever impersonation of the infatuated stockbroker, Christopher Podmore; Mr. Johnnie Wilkinson is highly diverting as Yarker, the chauffeur; Miss Lilian Wesson is very pleasing as Elsie Podmore; Miss Ada Davidson is good as Mrs. Podmore; Miss Edith Joyce as Salome, Mr. Arthur Edwards as Paul, Mr. Alan Mudie as Peter, Mr. Cyril Riadore as Max all sustain their parts well. A special feature of the performance is Miss Millie Gordon's graceful rendering of the classic "Danse du Papillon." The Parisian corps de ballet of eight also give a spirited terpsichorean display. The scene of the Butterflies' Ball is exceedingly artistic and the costumes very effective. There is a full opera chorus and augmented orchestra, Mr. Thomas Gray being an efficient musical director. The company is under the personal direction of Mr. Wilfred Cotton. A well-attended special matinée was given on Wednesday.

THE PALACE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Geo. Howard Watson; Acting-Manager, Mr. P. E. Draco.—The Hungarian actor-violinist, Jan Rudenyi, and company provide a most attractive turn this week, in the form of a musical romance entitled The Power of Music, in which Jan Rudenyi displays his marvellous power as a violinist, his performance being most rapturously received. Victoria Glen is a pleasing comedienne; the Wedburns give a quaint and humorous dialogue and instrumental turn; Great Scott gives a clever ladder and juggling act; Tom Jones, the Welsh comedian, contributes two amusing songs; Miss Bartenelli is "caught bending" in a clever contortionist turn; Keen and Waller go through some clever acrobatic tumbling; and Harry Russell and company create much hilarity in their comedietta Binks's Blunder. The usual Bioscope pictures complete an excellent programme.

A roller skating rink is about to be opened in Vastern-road. The season commences Monday.

ROCHDALE.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietors, The Northern Theatres Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. W. Robinson; General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling; Resident-Manager, Mr. S. Burton.—A Soldier's Honour, the attraction here, is presented by Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Kimberley's company. Mr. T. Arthur Ellis fills the rôle of Captain Deane with good effect; Captain Gerald Temple is capitally played by Mr. Wm. Vane; Mr. Andrew Money cleverly sustains the villainies of Henry Thornton; Mr. Henry Rutland is a convincing General Rochester; and Mr. Harry Lyndon an amusing Percy Brattle. Miss Iza Lyndon is an effective Gwendoline Temple, and Miss Edie Trapnell an ingenuous Queenie Deane; Miss Violet Langley enlists sympathy in the part of Doring Illingworth; Miss Edie Macklin is bright as Jemima Eliza; and Miss Lilla Wilde in the leading part of Cora Lee is excellent.

THE EMPIRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Thomas Hargreaves; General-Manager, Mr. Frank Hargreaves.—Nellie Coleman, who tops the bill here, evokes roars of laughter; the Channings submit a pleasing and refined vocal and instrumental act; Lozern performs some clever sleight-of-hand tricks, and other good turns are Fred Dornan, comedian; Fred Poplar, comedian; Princess Pauline, comedienne; Kitty Wager, vocalist; Abalo and Hurst in The Sportsman and the Shoeblack; and the Empire Bioscope pictures.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, The Jackson Family; Business-Manager, Mr. Jno. Jackson; Resident-Manager, Mr. James Jackson, sen.—Ye Colonial Septette in An Olde Tyme Hallowe'en present a pretty and most acceptable musical act; the Mezzettis, in their comedy gymnastic act, The New Recruit, display clever acrobatic feats; the New York Nippers, in comedy act Bedtime, are entertaining; Cestria is an amusing juggler. Alice Lingard, comedienne; Little Zola, comedian; Dave Carter, Irish tenor; Belmoir Sisters, comediennes and dancers; and the Hippodrome pictures complete an enjoyable programme.

SALFORD.—PRINCE OF WALES'S.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. E. B. Goulden; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harold Goulden.—Her Nameless Child, by Madge Duckworth and Ridgewood Barrie, is meeting with considerable success. Mr. J. W. Evelyn sustains the character of Anthony Ford with dramatic power; Arthur is well portrayed by Mr. Sidney C. Cranston; Mr. Arthur E. Pringle ably plays the part of Lord Henry Woodville; Mongrole is very successfully presented by Mr. Frank Thompson; Mr. Larry Clements as Tom Rivers and Miss Renie Douglas as Bessie Brooks are responsible for much laughter; Miss Pattie Hastings does well as the unfortunate Phyllis Ford; Lady Sybil Woodville is made effective by Miss Mona Grey.

REGENT THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. Turner; General-Manager, Mr. Herbert Raymond; Secretary, Mr. J. C. Patterson.—Harriett Vernon heads the bill, and her excellent performance is much enjoyed; Leslie Bros. in *Music

SEAHAM HARBOUR.—New Theatre Royal.—Proprietor, Mr. A. C. Harrison; Manager, Mr. Wallace Childs.—The Little Breadwinner is again being successfully presented here by Mr. J. A. Campbell's company. Lord William Dorrington finds a dignified exponent in Mr. J. Monkhouse; as Richard Lawrence Mr. Reginald Brown gives a manly portrayal; the scheming Joseph Prior is satisfactorily drawn by Mr. Alfred Maurice; Charles Prior is humorously sketched by Mr. Sydney Lynn; much of the success of the production must be credited to Little Irene, who as Meg, the little breadwinner, captivates the audience; Margaret is sympathetically treated by Miss Josephine Richards; Bridget is capably played by Miss Clara Hunt; as Kate Cherry Miss Millie Ford is entirely successful; Ruth Cherry is charmingly played by Miss Kitty Melville; Miss Letta Young as Bobby Trot adds materially to the humour of the play.

SHEERNESS. — Hippodrome. — Proprietors, Hippodrome Co.—The Catch of the Season opened on Monday for three evenings. It was admirably presented by Messrs Dudley Bennett and T. C. Wray's company. The Duke of St. Jermyns was ably impersonated by Mr. William Greene; Angela was prettily played by Miss Dorothea Clark; Bucket was successfully portrayed by Master Ernest Grata; Miss Grace Hampton was distinctly good as Lady Caterham; and Lord Dundreary was cleverly taken by Mr. Joseph Bruce. The two Sisters were ably impersonated by the Misses Barry Eldon and Kate Robertson; and Miss Claire de Vere was successful as the Duchess.

SHEFFIELD.—Lyceum Theatre.—Managing Director, Mr. John Hart; General-Manager and Treasurer, Mr. J. E. B. Beaumont.—The Sins of Society, magnificently staged and presented with a good cast, has done excellent business this week.

Theatre Royal.—Managing-Director, Mr. John Hart; General-Manager and Treasurer, Mr. J. E. B. Beaumont; Assistant-Manager, Mr. A. Henfrey Aldred.—Miss Maud Hildyard's company opened on Monday to a large audience in The Great Awakening. Miss Hildyard's charm and dramatic ability combined to make the character of the beautiful and fascinating Lola an interesting and convincing study; Miss Lillian Deane's Molly Merton was invested with grace and sweet womanly dignity; Mr. Bernard Copping did good work in the dual rôle of Sir Henry and Jack Merton; and other well-played parts were Mr. Charles Ashwell's Captain Lambert, Mr. Wallis Clark's James Selby, Mr. Gifford Reynolds's Richard Wilson, Mr. Gordon Laws's Guy Rogan, Mr. Willie Scott's Billy Brass, and Miss Bellingham's Selina, the two latter causing amusement in their low comedy scenes.

Alexandra Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. D. Forsdike; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. W. Ramsay.—Mr. Walter Melville's new play The Beggar Girl's Wedding is being performed here this week by the author's principal company. Leading characters are well sustained by Miss Vashti Wynne, Miss Doris White, Miss Anita Playfair, Miss Olive Warne, Miss Meynard, Mr. Frank McLennan, Mr. Herbert Lloyd, Mr. E. G. Batley, Mr. D. Cartwright, Mr. G. Vernon, Mr. H. Playfair, Mr. Herbert Morgan, Mr. J. C. Taylor, Mr. H. Kenny, and Mr. Otto Minster, who appears to advantage as Jack Cunningham.

Empire Palace Theatre.—The Moss' Empires Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Alan D. Dunbar.—The pantomimic absurdity Our Smoking Concert is rattled through amid roars of laughter by Mr. Fred Karno's clever troupe of comedians. First-rate performers who also contribute to the gaiety of the Empire are Mr. Tom Edwards (ventriloquist), Mr. Walter Aubrey, Mr. Phil Parsons, the talented Vetter Brothers, Miss Linette Robarty, the Rawsons (in an original act), Mr. Will Cornish, Miss Maisie Hibbs, and the sensational Bioscope drama England Invaded. First-rate pictures conclude.

The Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr Thos. Barrasford; Resident-Manager, Mr. P. D. Elbourne. The dainty and accomplished artist Miss Decima Moore appears in a musical comedy skit, and the diverting comic singer Mr. Harry Ford is here with new songs. Others engaged are Mr. James Piper, the clever Zenary Brothers (in a novel act), the Primrose Quartette, Paul Vandy (a smart society juggler), Mr. Joe Conway, Mr. Fred Hobbs, the Auers (novelty performers), and Mr. Arthur Reece (the popular vocal comedian). The Barrascope concludes.

Grand Theatre.—Manager, Mr. A. W. Turpin.—A capital picture entertainment nightly meets with the approbation of large audiences.

Surrey Palace.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Howson.—Good comic turns are engaged here, and business is excellent.

SHREWSBURY.—Royal and Hippodrome.—Lessee and Director, Mr. W. Yates Gregory; General-Manager, Mr. Thomas Baugh; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. B. Parkinson.—There is a tip-top variety programme here this week, including the special engagement of the wonderful Yokohama troupe of Japanese acrobats and entertainers, with their startling and almost incredible rope-sliding and ladder-balancing on foot feats; T. W. Barrett, an old and tried footlights favourite, vastly amuses with his eccentric comic singing; Harl is an accomplished juggler; France and Francis are really smart acrobatic comedians; Smith and Johnson give a novel and clever show, their vocalism being praiseworthy; Vera Mayne merits encomiums; and Palette has a capital studio act, displaying artistic ability of the lightning order, and being assisted by his well-trained dog "Max." Two interesting moving pictures are Love and War and He Who Arrives Late.

SMETHWICK. — Theatre Royal.—Proprietor, Mr. C. Barnard; Manager, Mr. E. Hewitson.—The King and the Unknown Woman, as is usual with all Mr. Hill-Mitchelson's plays, is most interesting. It is presented by a strong company. In the difficult part of the Countess Melveitch Miss Muriel Inglis displays ability; Miss F. Conyer Radcliffe as the adventuress Zora gives a clever performance; Miss Norma Dumayne is seen to advantage as Else: and little Elsie Clarke as Cæsar is delightful. Mr. James Stillwell is a natural and dignified Prince Loris; Mr. Stephen E. Scanlan a stage villain of powerful attainments; Mr. W. R. Winning acts the character of General Platz with much effect; and the comedy is admirably brought out by Mr Cyril Harrison as Captain Gara, Mr. William E. Passmore as Corporal Stack, and Miss Cissie Podmore as Schnapps.

SOUTHEND-ON-SEA.—Empire Theatre.—Empire Theatre Co., Ltd.; Managing-Directors, Messrs. Geo. Conquest and Richard H. Nervey; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. Lingham Power.—Through the Divorce Court, as told in four acts, each prettily and tastefully staged, is being played here by Messrs. Henry Chattell and Jack Denton's company. Mr Cecil A. Collins makes a typical English peer as Lord Robert Penarth; Lady Dolores Penarth as entrusted to Miss Katherine Carew is creditable as the divorced wife; Sybil is well taken by Little Genna Lyndon; and Mr. Cyprian H. Matthews works well as Guzman di Mendoza. Mr. Jack Denton evokes the heartiest laughter by a clever portrayal of Algy Fitzmaurice; and Miss Edith Cruikshanks as Lady Hilda Fitzmaurice and Miss Pattie Groves as Miss Rachel Dobbins give every satisfaction. Mr. Henry Colbeck is decidedly amusing as Patsy Rafferty, as also is Miss Nellie Sheffield as Dinah.

SOUTH SHIELDS. — Theatre Royal. — Lessees and Managers, Messrs. John and Fred Coulson.—Mr. Fredk. Melville's company appears here in Married to the Wrong Man. Mr. Oswald Gray delineates the part of Captain Gladwin convincingly; Captain Deering and Jasper Skinner, the villains, are ably depicted by Mr. H. Lane Bayliff and Mr. C. Vivian; Miss Gertrude Boswell as Ruth, the dumb witness, makes the part stand out prominently; Miss Dorothy Haigh is good as Rose; and the comedy element is supplied by Mr. Syd Cladon as Timothy Clinker and Miss May Davis as Dolly.

Empire Palace Theatre.—Proprietors, South Shields Empire Palace, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Resident-Manager, Mr. Geo. F. Thompson.—Mr. George Leyton in a military scena Lucknow, assisted by some local survivors of the Indian Mutiny, is received with great applause here. Another welcome turn is Carter Liveesey and Lillian Rosebery in The Would-be Actors; the Falcons are clever comedy acrobats; Spry and Monti in a nonsensical turn do well; and other good items are Percy Hannen, American tenor, Robusto, Billy French, wooden shoe dancer, Arthur Gill, original singing yokel, and the Bioscope.

STAFFORD. — Lyceum Theatre. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. James Elphinstone.—A bright and rollicking sketch, played by a crowd of able artists, entitled The Cruise of H.M.S. Victory, tops the bill, supported by Edna Francis, a dainty singer; Dennis McCarthy, in a very smart speciality scena, At the Bar; Miss Lena Page, a vocalist of real ability; the Gentrys, with their "bits of everything"; and the ever-new Bioscope pictures.

STALYBRIDGE. — Hippodrome. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. James Fioni; Resident-Manager, Mr. W. A. Jackson.—Messrs. Cullen and Carthy must be complimented upon the manner in which they produce their pantomime, Babes in the Wood. Miss Bessie Cohen is a spirited Robin Hood; Miss Ruby Roya daintily enacts Maid Marion; and other parts are capitally undertaken by the Misses Nellie Edwards (Fairy), Cissie Spencer, Nellie Amphlet, and Dorothy Vasey, Messrs. F. Melville, Arthur V. Stratton (Baron), Little Cluley (a mite of humanity who undertakes the secretarial duties of the Baron), and many others. The songs are the most recent published, and the specialities and scenery are excellent.

ST. HELENS.—Theatre and Opera House.—Proprietors, St. Helens Theatre, Ltd.; General-Manager, Mr. A. McLeod Loader; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Harry E. Johnson.—The Madeira Maid is here this week. Mr. Charles Carey as No One in Particular has a breezy manner that is very taking; Mr. Harold Perry, with some good songs to sing, acquits himself successfully in the part of Jack Danby; as the father of many daughters Mr. Eno Downe is capitally taken by Mr. W. E. Mathews; and Mr. W. Layard does well in the character of Martin Smith. Miss Madge Lacey is an accomplished dancer, and introduces with great acceptability the Waltz Dream Dance in the part of Maidie; Miss Marie Ault extracts a tremendous amount of fun out of Mary Ann Chovey; Miss Jessie de Gray fills the rôle of Mrs. Amelia Downe to perfection; Miss Georgie Wallis dances and sings nicely as Veda Downe, and looks pretty. The chorus do themselves credit in their rendering of the tuneful music, and the piece is excellently staged.

Hippodrome. — Proprietors, Messrs. Barrasford, Sley, and Willmot; Acting-Manager, Mr. Leo. Weisker.—A picture of the Johnson-Burns encounter is displayed here. Gus Garrick, with his comicalities, finds much favour; Cora Corina is seen in some fine dances, and Maxey and Pete give an exceedingly smart performance on cycles; Harley and Melton provoke much laughter, and the Godfreys play cleverly on several instruments. The Three Behans and Helm and Cozens are also on the bill.

STOCKPORT. — Theatre Royal and Opera House.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Charles Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. Revill.—The Crimes of Paris has quite suited the popular taste here this week. Mr. Clavering Craig as Pepin Cardel admirably portrays many characters; Mr. Alfred D. Adams makes a thoroughly efficient Viscount de Vismes; and Jules Mantel is effectively acted by Mr. Kendrew Milson; Miss Marie Barrett sympathetically fills the character of Angele Martel; La Belle Helene has a capable representative in Miss Flora Hastings; and Miss Christine Bickerstaff acquits herself creditably as Lizette.

Empire.—Proprietors, the Stockport Empire Theatre Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Black.—Ada Fawn, comedienne, is the chief attraction here this week, and is as popular as ever. Among others appearing are Thomas and Taylor, who are amusing in their scena Fun on the Midland; Alice Blandford, a pleasing vocalist; Hewitt and May, in an entertaining musical act; Folay and Francis, mith-provoking patter comedians; Francis Drew, whose vocalism is appreciated; George Reeves, a comedian of ability; and the Richards Trio in a clever and amusing acrobatic sketch.

STOCKTON-ON-TEES. — Castle Theatre. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. Charles Imeson; Acting-Manager, Mr. Cecil Imeson.—Mr. George Alexander's company is presnting The Thief. Miss May Congdon gives a fine portrayal of Marise Chelford, and is perfectly natural; as Isabel Leyton; Miss May Dibley is charming; Mr. Grendon Bentley as Richard Chelford is most commendable; as Raymond Leyton Mr. Gerald Ames played with distinction; the part of Harry Leyton is well played by Mr. Alfred Lugg; Mr. Cyril Cattley is prominent as Mr. Protheroe. In the one-act play A Nursery Governess Mr. Percy Marmont, Mr. Cyril Cattley, Mr. Frank Elton, and Miss Elsie Davison gain considerable applause.

Hippodrome.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Harry Burns; Resident-Manager, Mr. Geo. Stainton—Miss Florrie Gallimore is the leading turn here this week, her popular songs being greatly appreciated. Cedar and Elgar, in a comedy act, Ye Dayes of Olde, take well; Les Voces, duettists, sing in good style; Thiessen, with his acrobatic dogs, receives loud applause; little Vesta Dawson is a promising juvenile performer; Brothers Esdaile, comedians, have some good patter; Craig, Rose, and Craig are daring gymnasts. The Bioscope concludes with An Indian's Romance and His First Chemical Experiment.

Grand Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. John Batty; Manager, Mr. Walter Batty.—Mr. M. Montgomery's stock company presents here this week the historical drama A Fatal Crown. The leading characters are ably sustained by Messrs. Stanley S. Gordon as Lord Guilford Dudley, Frank S. Strickland as Simon Reynard, Leslie Nolan as Earl of Northumberland, Miss Nina Vaughton as Lady Jane Grey, and Miss Lina Naseby as Mary Tudor.

STOKE-ON-TRENT.—Hippodrome.—Proprietor, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; General-Manager, Mr. H. F. Miller; Assistant-Manager, Mr. H. Moroney.—An entertaining exhibition is that provided by Maurin's Fairy Fountains, the effects produced by various coloured limes being most beautiful; the Four Burnells pay a return visit with their musical and comedy scena, which causes much amusement; a smart and clever gymnastic act is contributed by the Krags; Lise Rolland is a graceful equilibrist. Also to be noted are Happy Attwood, Marie Kay, Kenway and Emery, Arthur Pier, and the Bioscope.

The Victoria Institute.—The New England Animated Picture Company commence their spring tour here with new pictures and illustrated songs, and should prove a popular attraction.

STOURBRIDGE.—Alhambra Theatre.—General-Manager, Mr. Douglas C. Phelps; Manageress, Miss Maude Lynton.—This week we have Mr. Ernest Bodkin's company with The Thief. Mr. Paul Lovett submits a fine piece of acting as Richard Chelford, and Miss Kathryn Stocks as Marise Chelford is entirely successful; Mr. Ernest Bodkin imparts a wonderful amount of pathos to the character of Raymond Leyton; Mr. C. W. Lindsey wins the sympathies of the house, and deserves special mention for his able interpretation of Harry Leyton; as Isabel Leyton Miss Mary Forrester throws just the right amount of energy and feeling into her portrayal; Mr. T. Taylor Vinson as Mr. Protheroe deserves a high meed of commendation; Mr. Jno. Chester makes a good servant. The play is preceded by The Man in the Street.

Town Hall.—This week we have C. W. Poole's Myriorama and vaudeville company. Eight tableaux of Trafalgar are the hit of the panorama. Amasis, the Egyptian illusionist, and his two assistants, give a smart show; the Banzai troupe of Japanese acrobats furnish a capital act; Harry Raymond is a first-class step-dancer, as also is his little daughter; Willie Dean is a comedian who convulses the audience; the Seven Bramusas deserve special mention for their turn as a juvenile brass band. The Bioscope and Cinephone complete.

SUNDERLAND.—King's Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. S. F. Davidson; General-Manager, Mr. Alexander Telford; Treasurer, Mr. L. Crawford Orr.—Mr. John Clyde and his company are here in Jeanie Deans. The double of the Duke of Argyle and Counsel for the Defence was capitally taken by Mr. John Clyde. As Dumbiedykes Mr. W. G. Robb was successful; Mr. George Hunter does well as David Deans; Mr. D. Bain gives a capital impersonation of Reuben Butler; Black Frank and Tyburn Tom are capitally taken by Mr. George Elliott and Mr. J. Oswald; Miss Lena Levenstone gives an artistic impersonation of Jeanie Deans; Miss Ella Gennett supplies a sympathetic rendering of Effie Deans; and Miss Mary Allan is good as Caroline, as also is Miss Belle Cecil as Madge Wildfire.

Theatre Royal.—Proprietor, Mr. Richard Thornton; General-Manager, Mr. Hy. Esden; Acting-Manager, Mr. George Dunn.—Mr. A. Clifton Alderson's company is presenting The Coal King here this week. Mr. A. Clifton Alderson takes the part of Tom Roberts, the young mine manager, in which he gives one of the finest portrayals seen at this house. Miss Joan Wellman as Mad Ann, a village character, showed unmistakable skill; another clever lady is Miss Winifred Love, whose rendering of Grace Shirley was an excellent performance; Sir Reginald Hartford was well done by Mr. Ulick Burke; Walter Hartford was in the safe hands of Mr. Escott Robson; a capitally-depicted rôle was that of Dick Shirley, and Mr. Frank Dalton gave it a fine rendering; and Miss Max Hinton and Mr. Sam Roberts as Araminta Green and Jim Williams were most diverting.

Empire Theatre. — Managing-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; General-Manager, Mr. Harry Esden.—This week we have the Achmed Ibraham Troupe of ten Bedouin Arabs, whose performance creates a sensation. The juggling feats of "the great Weiland" are clever and humorous; Arthur Lennard, comedian and actor, was the recipient of tremendous applause for his contribution "One of the brave old Guards"; the Two Anartos, musical comedians, gave a capital turn, and kept the house in a god humour; Edie Endon, comedienne, gave some capital acrobatic dancing; the Tre'ntavoni Sisters gave a good gymnastic act; Hilda Jacobsen, burlesque actress, gave two songs in good style; and Mike Nono, the Irish cowboy, submitted some smart dancing.

Avenue Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. Richard Thornton; General-Manager, Mr. Harry Esden; Acting-Manager, Mr. R. Foulkes-Edwardes.—The principal picture is entitled Invasion, and is particularly interesting and descriptive. The reproductions of the Summers. v. Britt boxing competition and the replayed Cup-tie Sunderland v. Newcastle are enthusiastically received, and "Round the Lake Constance" is a capital spectacular trip.

Palace Theatre.—General-Manager, Mr. Henry N. Phillips; Resident-Manager, Mr. Francis MacDermott.—The conversion of this theatre from Bioscope to variety (under the same management—Mr. Phillips, of the New Era Bioscope Co.) is of interest, and the management is to be congratulated on securing so capital a programme for the first week. Rameses heads the bill with his mystifying act "The Egyptian Temple of Mystery," and his varied disappearances and productions create wonderment. A Bou-Kou, the famous Chinese juggler, also gives a popular turn, his juggling being particularly original; Miss Chrissie Francis and company show considerable histrionic ability in a pathetic sketch entitled His Father's Teacher; Professor Newman submits an exceedingly popular ventriloquial act; May Gibson renders some pretty songs in an excellent manner; Fred Costin, comedian, makes himself extremely popular with his audience; and Dave Syms gives some capital exhibitions of mimicry. The Foresters are good in a comedy sketch, Brought to Her Senses, and some capital items are depicted by the Ruffelscope.

SWANSEA.—Grand Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. E. Oswald Brooks; Acting-Manager and Treasurer, Mr. Walter Page.—Not for some time has such a reception been given to any artist as was given to Mr. Percy Hutchison this week at the Grand, where he is appearing as Monty Brewster in Brewster's Millions. The audience on Monday was not content with the usual recalls, but insisted on a speech. It was a worthy tribute to remarkable acting. Mr. Hutchison is excellently supported by Miss Lilias Earle, who was distinctly good as Mrs. Dan de Mille, and Miss Cicely Stuckey was the sweetest Peggy imaginable.

The Star.—Manager, Mr. William Coutts; Assistant-Manager, Mr. S. J. Powell.—Mrs. F. G. Kimberley's company is at the Star this week with Bound to Win. Philip Ayre was played by Mr. Nayher Grimson, who brought out the villainy of the character well, and Mr. Franklyn Harcourt as Ned Oakley was also good; Squire Forbes was well impersonated by Mr. Ernest C. Edwards; Miss Nancy Roberts made a charming heroine, and Miss Violet Quest showed real cleverness as Gladys Crene.

The Empire. — Manager, Mr. P. C. Rowe; Assistant-Manager, Mr. W. H. Lennon.—Mr. Fred Ginnett's sketch Hunting Morn provides really good entertainment; Ella Retford, with new catchy songs, at once goes well, and Miss Marquis' cobs give a wonderful exhibition; Bertha Stuart's singing fairly brings the house down, and Frank Hartley, though young, has not much more to learn of the art of juggling; the Three Welsh Girls harmonise sweetly in illustrated numbers, and Orpheus plays various instruments in a masterly manner; Walter Wade is an acceptable comedian, and the Bioscope completes.

TON-Y-PANDY. — Royal.—General-Manager, Mr Sam Duckworth; Acting-Manager, Mr. Ridgewood Barrie.—This week Mr. Douglas Bruce presents The Girl Who Lost Her Character. Mr. Edward McLean is all that can be desired as the Rev. Robert Everton; Mr. C. W. Standing does well as Jack England; the part of James Sutton is in the capable hands of Mr. Geo. Mitchell; Mr. Richard Fernis is good as Captain Geoffrey Caversham; Detective Weathersby is well played by Mr. Augustus Bowerman; the comedy is in the safe hands of Mr. Geo. Asquin as Dick Punch; Miss Lydia Mannington plays the rôle of Marian Franklyn with great success; as Rose Seymour Miss Cherry Veheyne is well placed; and Miss Doris Brookes is seen to advantage as Molly.

Hippodrome.—Lessee, Mr. Will Stone; General-Manager, Mr. E. Harper.—The Four Musical Watsons top the bill this week. Other turns are the Zeenas (gymnastic comedians), Fernis and Farnley (patter comedians), Lea and Lovell (American song illustrators), and Geo. Hyatt (society juggler). On the Bioscope we have Nick Carter, &c.

TORQUAY.—Theatre Royal.—Licensee and Managing-Director, Mr. W. H. Mortimer; Secretary, Mr. Arthur Pearse.—The Luck of Roaring Camp is being performed here by Miss Ida Molesworth and Mr. Mark Blow's company. An admirable interpretation of Nell Curtis is given by Miss Olive Wilton; Miss Florence Melrose-Millett is attractive as the adventuress; as Mrs. O'Flynn Miss Jenny Clare gives an amusing impersonation, in which she is ably assisted by Mr. Hyland O'Shea, who does equally well as Paddy McGinty. Mr. Arthur Redmond is a typical Sheriff; a clever representation is given by Mr. Chas. E. Johnson of the brutal Tom Barnes; Mr. Geo. Porteous is well placed as Gonzales; Mr. Clarence Ibbotson introduces much merriment as the negro; and Mr. G. Cuthbertson also does well as Old Pard; Mr. Robert Purdie plays Will Gordon with success.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS. — Opera House.—Lessee, Mr. Welton Dale.—Dick Whittington is being successfully presented this week by Mr. Dan Thomas, who makes a big hit as Betsy the Cook, and is well supported by Messrs. H. D. Lyndon, J. Harris, H. Maddison, and R. Morris in the comedy parts. Miss Daisy Yates and Miss Constance Mori are a charming principal girl and boy; and Misses Ethel Robertson and Lily Parker are also successful as second boy and girl; Mr. Pete Almont is excellent as the Cat; and Mlle. Lilian as the Fairy is well received.

WAKEFIELD. — Opera House.—Proprietors, Messrs. Sherwood and Co.—Messrs. Van Biene and Traynor's company is here this week in the drama Man and Wife. Mr. John F. Traynor makes an impressive and strong Paul Revere; Mr. Edward M. Hamilton gives a capital rendering as Captain D'Esparre; Mr. George Overs is good as the cripple, Jean; Mr. Edward Van Biene does full justice to the rôle of Colonel Lateur; Mr. A. Horton is effective as Sergeant Jacques; and Mr. E. Hall Eldon as Bimbo and Mr. George Vining as Bambo are very successful in their respective amusing parts. Miss Kate Hallam gives a praiseworthy portrayal as Marcelle; Miss Millie Doris is bright and smart as Rosette, and Miss M. Thorne is admirable as Ruth Revere.

Hippodrome.—Manager, Mr. Sydney Tolfree.—Mr. George M. Marriott and company, including Miss Edith Finlay, present a stirring sketch, The Maid of the Alps, with success; Mr. John Lloyd's Gondolier Glee Singers provide a popular turn; Carl Howard is seen in an amusing burlesque conjuring act; Miss Nancy Renshaw, coloured comedienne, is an expert bone soloist; Herman and Evelyn, wire performers, merit applause; Cosselly, hand-jumper, wins favour; and Miss Nelly Bly, comedienne, also contributes.

WALSALL. — Her Majesty's Theatre of Varieties.—Proprietors, The Walsall Theatres Co., Ltd.; General-Manager and Secretary, Mr. W. H. Westwood.—The principal attraction here this week is Mr. Van Biene, the actor-musician, and Miss Mary Mannering, who present The Master Musician. Other artists are Frank Lynne, the "funnymantograph"; Bessie Slaughter, contralto; the Paxton Trio, head and hand balancers and hand vaulters; the Three Dixons, bâton swingers, banjo soloist, vocalists, and dancers; La Danseuse, in her dancing scena "Santa Claus"; Boyd and Gilfain, in their operette Sunny Spain. The American Bioscope completes the programme.

Grand Theatre.—Proprietors, The Walsall Theatres Co., Ltd.; General Manager and Secretary, Mr. W. H. Westwood.—Mr. Arthur Jones and company are here this week with the drama When Other Lips. Miss Marie Daventry makes a charming Ruth Lingley; Mr. T. A. Jones as Ted Daunton is all that could be desired; Miss Jane Watson is very successful in the part of a Woman in Black. Other parts are well sustained.

WARRINGTON. — Royal Court.—Proprietor, Mr. Joseph Beecham; General-Manager, Mr. A. M. Leader; Acting-Manager, Mr. S. Smiley.—Mr. Dudley Bennett and Mr. T. C. Wray's company is delighting large houses here with the sparkling musical comedy A Country Girl. Full justice is done to the many charming numbers by the talented combination, and the staging and dresses are equally praiseworthy. Mr. Harry Burton has a fine chorus under his command. As Barry Mr. Coningsby Brierley is the personification of humour. His acting, singing, and dancing are alike excellent, and up-to-date witticisms are introduced. Mr. Hardy Jackson has a capital voice, which is heard in the tender song "My own little girl"; Mr. W. O. Billington makes much of the bumptious Sir Joseph Verity; and as his son Douglas Verity Mr. H. Besley-Beltran is well placed; Mr. Frank Tealey is a dignified Lord Anchester, and Mr. Fred Burchell makes Raikes, an Indian rajah, an imposing personage. Miss Anna Hickisch scores a success as Nan, and her vitality appears to have no limit. She is the possessor of a soprano voice full of melody, and her intonation is exceptionally true. Miss Victoria Sievers is a charming Marjorie, and wins an encore with the song "Coo"; Miss Lucy Lever as the Princess imparts much dramatic power into her acting, and her singing of "Under the Deodar" is rapturously encored; Miss Effie Vincent is a winsome Sophie, and together with Mr. Brierley had the honour of a recall for the piquant number "Two little chick-chicks."

Palace and Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Eric Longden.—The realistic scenes of the Johnstone Flood catastrophe are much enjoyed. Menotti supplies a remarkable turn, and the riding of a bicycle on a single wire worked by electricity is viewed with amazement; Percival is a remarkable performer at the piano, and Dorma Morgan is a charming comedienne with a good collection of songs. Henriquette Maude relates her experiences of travelling across various continents in a little sketch round the poem "Lasca," which proves most interesting. She is warmly applauded, and is an immense favourite. Morton and Elliott are phenomenal paper-tearers, harmonica players, and vocalists; an artistic novelty is shown in the A-Ba-Be picture postcard album; and the Raymond Bio-tableaux depict some good views. On Monday a flying matinée with Dolly Reforming Herself delighted a large audience.

Royal Theatre of Varieties.—Proprietors, the Franco-British Animated Picture Co.; Managing-Director, Mr. W. Turner; Manager, Mr. Jack Waters.—Capital business is being done here this week, and the pictures again afford much pleasure, those depicting the coal-mine disaster at the West Stanley colliery being viewed with much interest. Excellent turns are supplied by Fame and Fortune, versatile comedians, there being a spice of originality in their business; Baby Bowden is a clever juvenile; Bessie Wilton a popular burlesque actress; and Karsley Cynski plays several cymbala and xylophone solos in capital style.

WEDNESBURY.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Harry Battersby.—This week Messrs. Clayton and Lorne's gorgeous pantomime Cinderella is attracting big houses here. The pantomime, which is written by Captain Clayton, is full of wit, and attractive throughout. The musical parts adapted are exceptionally bright and cheerful. Prince Charming is admirably presented by Miss Amy Allnut; the rôle of Cinderella is delightfully undertaken by Miss Linda May, her songs and dances being most artistically performed; Miss Nina Coleman as the Fairy achieves marked success; whilst the Fairy Godmother is ably portrayed by Miss Marie Preston. Humorous turns are contributed by Mr. C. Turner as Nervous Joe; and as Lord de Cuff Miss Lola Hunt leaves nothing to be desired. Demon Thunder is capitally represented by Miss Mollie Nevell; Mr. G. Birtles comes in for a good share of applause for his interpretation of lightning. The artists included in the specialities are:—The Zola troupe of acrobats, in their interesting knockabout performance; the Gibson Girls, acrobatic dancers; La Belle Mascot, in her wonderful feat on the telephone wire; Mons. Rollo, expert roller skater; the Brothers Alpiné, on the revolving trapeze; and Mr. P. J. Durney, champion globe roller.

WEST HARTLEPOOL. — Palace.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Julius Simpson.—J. W. Rowley is more popular than ever; Ted Waite, the spasmodic comedian, is also making a great hit; Leo and Roland, equilibrists and hand-balancers, give a smart performance; Ormonde Penstone, billiard ball manipulator and smoke picture artist, obtains a warm welcome; Bert Weston, comedian, entertains well; Miss Diana Hope presents the society episode, Her Good Name, which is full of life and interest; Raymond's Bio-Tableaux supply, as usual, the pick of the picture world; Miss Dot Moss (toy comedienne) was unable to appear on Monday owing to indisposition.

Grand.—Lessee, Mr. Fred Granville; Manager, Mr. H. E. Feather.—Messrs. H. Armitage and Arthur Leigh's company is presenting With Edged Tools. The staging is on a magnificent scale, and the Storm scene is wonderfully realistic. The fine acting of Miss Marie Leonhardt inspires enthusiasm, so sympathetically does she interpret the tender, womanly character of Jocelyn Gordon; Miss Alice Esther Belmore as Millicent is artistic and effective; Mr. W. M. F. Grant makes the most of the character of Jack Meredith; the rôle of Guy Oscard could scarcely be in better hands than those of Mr. Chas. Hartopp. Others who are most successful are Mr. J. A. Rosier, Mr. J. Graham Pockett, Miss Marion Fawcett, and Miss Florence Dulhurty, and Mr. Campbell Goldsmid is powerful in the character of Durnovo.

WEST STANLEY.—Theatre Royal.—Proprietors, The Stanley Theatre Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Mark H. Lindon; Assistant-Manager, Mr. W. Kelly.—The Prince and the Beggar Maid is being played here to crowded houses by Alfred Paumier and Walter Howard's company. Mr. Walter Cox portrays the part of Prince Olaf in manly and breezy fashion; Mr. Lionel Gadsden contributes a good study of Prince Michael; and the Prince Hildred of Mr. Alfred Brandon is very good. Mr. R. Noble makes a fine Captain Hector; Miss Ethel Bracewell gives a charming portrayal of the Princess Monica; and Camiola is represented by Miss Gertrude Branscombe. The rôle of Lieut. Stromberg is in the capable hands of Mr. J. H. Vivian, who is responsible for some very good comedy.

Victoria Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. T. C. Rawes.—Excellent turns are furnished by Mr. Harry Nelson, the Bombays, Mackenzie's Moments with the Masters, J. H. Noble, Toleski, the Golden Spider, Joe Humphreys, and the Bioscope.

WIDNES.—Alexandra Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. Jas. Kiddie; Secretary, Mr. T. Swinton.—Mr. Walter Melville's company is here with The Soldier's Wedding, and the staging and dressing of the play evoke much admiration. Mr. Wingold Lawrence is a fine military hero; Mr. Beresford Whitcomb draws a good portrait of Colonel Graham; Mr. Johnny Chippendale is a whimsical Tommy Spratt; Mr. A. Anderson plays admirably as Jasper Northcot; Mr. Frederick Biron wins much sympathy by his handling of the part of a deceived husband; Mr. Gerald Jordon is suitably villainous as Charles Courtney; Mr. Fred Yarnold is quite at home in the part of Nathaniel Lee; Miss Dorothy Richardson is a fresh and charming heroine; Miss Marie McAulay is powerful, natural, and convincing as Julie de Beauvrais; Miss Mabel Lowe is equal to all the demands made by the character of Peggy Munroe; and the other parts are, without exception, capably played.

WIGAN.—Royal Court Theatre.—Proprietors, The Wigan Entertainments Co.—A welcome return visit is being paid here by Mr. J. A. Campbell's No. 1 company in The Old Folks at Home. Miss Mary Fulton is a charming Dorothy Robin, and afterwards makes a dignified Lady Kenilworth; Miss Kate Froud is eminently successful as Patricia Bathurst; and Miss Clara Santley portrays the part of Martha with great faithfulness; Miss Maudie Grayson is a vivacious and sympathetic Susan; and Miss Amy Rale leaves nothing to be desired as Bonita Durham. The character of Lord Howard is in the capable hands of Mr. Frank Liston, and Mr. H. E. Herbert gives a striking portrayal of Andrew Ross; Mr. Eugene Santley deserves special mention as Christopher Robin; while Mr. Frank Caffrey creates roars of laughter as Ben Jolly.

The Hippodrome.—Proprietors, the Wigan Entertainments Co.—A skilful entertainment is given by Mr. Fred Lindsay, who performs some marvellous feats with a stock-whip; the Five Breens are a troupe of smart and humorous jugglers; Edgar Budden dances exceedingly well on roller skates; and Harry Levaine's patter produces much merriment. The Lovelaces are well received for their illustrated songs, while the Donatos, one-legged clowns, are also exceptionally good; the Three Florodoras give an enjoyable entertainment; Mollie Seymour is a violinist deserving of much merit, and Tom Joy causes quite an ovation with songs; Millie Denham, comedienne, and Revill Hall, entertainer, conclude a good programme.

WORKINGTON.—The Opera House.—Lessee, Mr. Stanley Rogers; Acting-Manager, Mr. Falconer Jackes.—Good houses have assembled this week to witness the Life Motion Pictures. Miss Madge Brownie, in a style all her own, captivates the audiences here. Messrs. Bell and Dryden, comedians, do some very smart "cross-talking" and a speciality song and dance. A very good show indeed.

Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr McKenzie Morgan.—Some splendid pictures are put on the screen this week, and an excellent variety programme is sandwiched into it. The Driscolls are a pair of smart cyclists, and do some good dances besides. Sid Stanto as a musical turn is popular; whilst Goodall and Knox are a pair of smart knockabouts and "repartee" artists.

WORTHING.—Theatre Royal.—Manager, Herr C. Adolf Seebold.—Scottie's variety combination is sustaining the programme here. Napoleon at Waterloo forms an enjoyable item; Mr. Joseph Vesta makes a hit as Terence O'Moore; Miss Kitty Aaen pathetically takes the part of Kathleen O'Moore; Mr. B. M. Alec is good as Valdet; Mr. Chas. Withens is an imposing Marshal Murat; Mr. Oswell Hopcraft cleverly takes the part of Dr. Brette; and Mr. Scott Alexander typically enacts the part of Napoleon. Miss Ivy Cornwallis's efforts are greatly appreciated. Scottie's operatic ballet troupe in The Cry of the Children were seen to advantage; Barry and Barrie are extremely entertaining in Jenny, the Burglar's Pride; the Swaddies, military nondescripts, are affording great amusement; the Whizzing the Whirl forms another amusing item, and in this Dana Royal excels.

WREXHAM.—Empire Music Hall.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Jno. J. Scott.—Wright Aitken and a clever comedy company appear this week in their highly successful sketch *A Family

STAGE STAFF GOSSIP.

THE attention of employees generally is specially drawn to the meeting to be held in Terry's Theatre (by kind permission of Mr. Edward Terry), on Sunday evening next, for the consideration of the rules of the Dramatic and Variety Theatre Employees Provident Association.

THE proceedings will commence at 7.30 prompt. Mr. Cecil Raleigh will preside; vice-chairman, Mr. Cecil Paget, manager of the Hippodrome, Peckham. The chairman will be supported by members of the committee, and representatives of a number of theatres and music-halls in the metropolitan area.

MR. C. T. CORY, master carpenter of the Vaudeville Theatre, has been nominated for the position of treasurer. Mr. Cory was a member of the late Dramatic and Musical Fund for many years, and is connected with a number of similar societies. The trustees will be Messrs. Cecil Paget, Harry Norton (stage-manager, the Haymarket Theatre), and G. H. Dyball (stage-manager, the London Pavilion). The finance committee will be Messrs. Wm. Barbour (electrician, the St. James Theatre), hon. secrtary of the Heads of Departments Association; A. Jones (carpenter, Royal Opera House), who is the treasurer of the Carpenters' Society; and James Atterton (Adelphi Theatre), who is the vice-president of the General Staff Branch, N.A.T.E. Mr. J. Cullen (master carpenter, St. James's Theatre) is the chairman of the committee. Mr. Wm. Johnson, general secretary of the N.A.T.E., has been asked to act as the secretary. It will, therefore, be obvious that the new fund will have the services of experienced men, holding responsible positions in the business, who will assure economical and efficient management of the new association.

THE Dramatic and Variety Theatres Employees Provident Association aims to secure the co-operation of all who are connected in any capacity with the dramatic and variety theatres, except actors and artists. Managers, scenic artists, box office keepers, hall keepers, dressers, attendants (male), and employees in any department, under the rules, are eligible for membership. A matter of immediate importance to those who are over forty years of age is the decision to suspend the proposed age limit (forty years) until the end of this month, thus affording those who are too old for any similar association an opportunity of making provision for sickness and at their death.

THE objects of the Association are as follows:—

To provide by entrance fees, contributions, levies, fines, donations, interest on capital, and other funds specially raised:—

(a) To assist financial members who are incapacitated from following their usual employment.

(b) To insure a sum at the death of a financial member or on the death of the wife of a financial member.

(c) To make grants to members in distress.

(d) To divide annually, less the cost of management and the payment of benefits, the surplus general funds of the Association.

WITH reference to the Benevolent Fund it may be stated that it is proposed to devote a portion, if not all, the proceeds of the annual Theatrical Sports to it.

THE rule providing for the annual division of the surplus general funds will add to the other benefits the advantages of a savings bank.

THE contributions will be as follows:—

(b) The entrance fee shall be 1s. 3d., including cost of membership card and rules.

(c) The contribution shall be 6d. per week, payable on or before Saturday of each week.

(d) A levy of 6d. on the death of a financial member and a levy of 3d. on the death of a financial member's wife.

(e) One shilling per annum to the Benevolent Fund, deducted from share.

THE benefits proposed are as follows:—

During sickness, as per rules, members shall be entitled to 15s. per week for the first thirteen weeks, 7s. 6d. for a further thirteen weeks, if necessary. At death of a member a sum equal to a levy of 6d. per member; at death of a member's wife a sum equal to a levy of 3d. per member shall be paid, as per rules. Levies not paid within four weeks, 3d. fine.

Grants from the Benevolent Fund to members in distress, at discretion of the committee; from any such grant any moneys due to the other funds of the Association shall be deducted.

IT is estimated that there are at least 4000 persons connected with the Metropolitan theatres and halls eligible to join this new Fund. There is, therefore, the possibility of building up a very useful Fund. With a levy of 6d. per member the sum at death of a member would be equal to £25 per thousand members, half this sum on the death of a member's wife. A levy on 4000 members would mean £100. Such a fund would put an end to all the present haphazard forms of charity and indiscriminate collections, friendly meetings, &c., now a burden to the thrifty, and often mistaken benevolence for the thoughtless.

No existing fund connected with the profession offers such advantages, and considering the small contributions and the prospects of careful management, employees of all sections will be acting wisely and for their individual and mutual benefit by giving the new Association their hearty support.

COPIES of the draft rules, membership forms, &c., may be obtained from the stewards at the meeting, in the main entrance to the theatre, to whom entrance fees may be paid. While the meeting is open to all eligible to join, only those who have applied, or apply to join at the meeting, may speak or vote on the questions submitted to those present. Any information available will be given on application to Wm. Johnson, acting secretary, 29, Wellington-street, Strand.

A WELL-ATTENDED meeting of the committee of the Cinematograph Operators' Association was held at 29, Wellington-street, on Tuesday. Mr. J. Wood, president, in the chair, supported by Mr. E. Catlin, V.P., S. J. Henry, hon. secretary, Wm. Johnson, A. Malsom, A. L. Merritt, C. Mayo, F. Green, J. Clayton, and others.

MR. S. J. HENRY, having been appointed instructor to the London Bioscope School, felt, in view of the pressure of work in connection with his new duties, that he must regretfully submit his resignation as hon. secretary to the Association. The resignation was accepted, and a hearty vote of thanks given to Mr. Henry for his past services. Messrs. A. Malcolm (Walturdaw Co., Ltd.) and A. L. Merritt (Matt Raymond Co.) were appointed joint hon. secretaries.

A NUMBER of applications for membership were granted subject to passing the examination. Numerous applications for particulars of membership were dealt with. It was decided to appoint a sub-committee to draft a reply to the communication received from the L.C.C. (This committee met on Wednesday and drafted the reply.) The proof of a revised copy of the examination papers was considered and further amended, making the papers much more stringent. It was decided to print 200 copies, and send one to each of the members who have not yet obtained a certificate. Arrangements are being made to have a meeting of the board of examiners next week, and several well-known exhibitors have been invited to act on this board for the next examination. Mr. J. D. Walker, of the Walturdaw Company, has already kindly consented to act as one of the examiners.

THE second annual luncheon will take place on Tuesday, April 6, at two o'clock, in the Horseshoe Hotel, Tottenham Court-road. The tickets are 3s. 6d. each, and members should apply at once to the secretaries. Friends will be welcome at the luncheon. Mr. W. Reynolds, L.C.C., has been invited to attend as a guest of the Association. Mr. C. W. Bowerman, M.P., has been invited to attend the luncheon and present the certificates awarded to the members successful in the examination. A special circular is being issued to members, and those who have changed their address recently are requested to advise the secretaries.

MR. MATT RAYMOND has kindly arranged to give the profit derived from the Sunday Concerts at the Variety Theatre, Hoxton, to the Benevolent Funds of the National Association of Theatrical Employees, a portion of this balance to be given to the Benevolent Funds of the Cinematograph Operators' Branch.

THERE is every prospect of the dispute between the N.A.T.E. and the Middlesbrough and Stockton Theatrical Managers' Association coming to a satisfactory conclusion. The lock-out has lasted about nine weeks, and it is expected a conference between the parties will take place early next week in Middlesbrough. It has already been agreed that both sides suspend proceedings, and the N.A.T.E. have stopped all printing, billing, picketing, sandwich-board men, and meetings on their side.

THE annual Theatrical Sports Committee have secured the Stamford Bridge Sports Ground for the sports on Saturday, June 26. This is the first time the sports have been arranged for a Saturday, and may be regarded as an experiment. The committee feel the sports deserve, and will secure on a Saturday, a larger measure of public support. On the days previously selected there have always been some matinées, and it is thought that, at that time of the year, there will not be more matinées than have usually happened on the day of the sports, while on Saturday a very much larger number of employees will be able to attend.

SUGGESTIONS relating to the list of events are invited from those interested, and should be sent to Wm. Johnson, 29, Wellington-street, Strand.

THE annual general meeting of the Heads of Departments' Association, representing stage-managers, electricians, master carpenters, property-masters, &c., was held last week, Mr. James Cullen, president, in the chair. The statement of accounts and report for the past year were submitted and accepted. The following were elected to serve the Association during the ensuing year: President, James Cullen, master carpenter, St. James's Theatre; vice-chairman, Mr. G. H. Dyball, stage-manager, the London Pavilion; hon. secretary, Mr. Wm. Barbour, electrician, St. James's Theatre (Mr. Barbour was the first hon. secretary to the Association); organising and financial secretary, Wm. Johnson; committee, Messrs. Wm. Pullinger (master carpenter), G. E. Willcox (property master, the Garrick Theatre), H. J. Powell (property master, Hicks Theatre), Sheridan (electrician, Scala Theatre), W. G. Wilton (property master, the Vaudeville Theatre), A. Earnshaw (electrician, the Duke of York's Theatre), John Brunskill (master carpenter, the Savoy Theatre), F. B. Fidge (electrician, the Lyceum Theatre), R. J. Carter (electrician, Terry's Theatre), and Philip Sheridan (electrician).

THE representatives for the National Executive Committee are as follows: General president, J. Cullen; general vice-president, G. H. Dyball; general trustee, Wm. Barbour; committee, Messrs. Powell, Fidge, and Sheridan.

IT was decided to have a river outing in place of the annual dinner, and the date suggested is Sunday, July 4.

THE Savoy Baths, the largest, best heated, ventilated, and the most luxurious in London, are in the centre of the theatrical world. Turkish or Russian baths (or combined) may be enjoyed up to 6 p.m. A Turkish bath is a splendid tonic for an actor. It cures colds, and relieves many ailments.

MISS MARGARET PATON, the understudy for Miss Gertrude Lester in the musical comedy Havana, which was presented at the Theatre Royal, Bradford, last week, was succeeded in the part of Consuelo by Miss Dorothy Ward on the Thursday evening. Her success both vocally and histrionically was instantaneous and complete.

AN influential local syndicate has been formed at Fleetwood with a view to putting up a first-class modern theatre. Plans have been passed by the town council for a compact building with a seating capacity of 800. It is proposed to begin operations at once, with a view to having the house ready for opening by August Bank Holiday.

SOME remarkably interesting letters, addressed by Chopin to his friend Fontana, are shortly to be offered for sale in Berlin. There are altogether fifteen letters, written in Polish, the composer's native language, and bearing dates between 1838 and 1848, references being contained in them to Georges Sand, and to the writer's increasing ill-health.

THIS week Hardie and Von Leer have another strong company visiting the Palace Theatre, Watford, to which satisfactory audiences have been attracted throughout the week by the evergreen Two Little Vagabonds. The play is well staged and so ably acted by the large company that 'twere invidious to mention names.

MR. EDWARD DE VERE, who was responsible for the stage management, at the last performance of the Elephant and Castle pantomime was presented with a handsome case of four silver and amber mounted pipes from the principals, and a bronze-gilt clock from the ladies of the chorus.

PLAYERS OF THE PERIOD.

MISS MAUDIE THORNTON.

Miss Maudie Thornton, who was engaged to succeed Miss Carrie Moore as the Prince in Cinderella at the Adelphi, has scored a triumphant success in the part. Miss Thornton dances exquisitely, and is specially gifted by nature for her profession, having a charming presence, a beautiful voice, plenty of vivacity and "go," and a personality which speeds her in favour. A brilliant future undoubtedly lies before this gifted little lady. Miss Thornton's recent success in The Antelope at the Waldorf will be well remembered, her military song, "The drums of the fore and aft," being the feature of the production. In South Africa last year Miss Thornton achieved a veritable triumph as Sonia in The Merry Widow, and the record run of that popular play in Johannesburg was celebrated by a public banquet given by the citizens to Miss Thornton, at which all the leading official and social people were present. As Mitza in The Girls of Gottenberg, Marie Blanche in The Little Michus, See See in See See, and other operas, Miss Thornton's performances were noted by the entire press and public as among the finest ever presented in South Africa. Miss Thornton has all the advantages of youth and enthusiasm, and it will not be long before she takes a very high place in the artistic world of London.

MR. MARK LESTER.

As a lad Mr. Mark Lester was apprenticed to the sea, and during his early life travelled practically over the world. It was in Australia that he had his first stage experience, and played a short season there. On arriving in England he joined the late Mr. Henry Dundas for the Price of Peace, playing the Speaker in the House and the comic policeman, both silent parts. Then followed pantomime with the same gentleman. Subsequently he went to South America to join Maurice E. Bandmann, with whom he remained five years, visiting Buenos Ayres, Monte Video, Rio de Janeiro, Falkland Isles, Valparaiso, Iquique, Lima, over the Isthmus of Panama—during the time of the revolution, when the train was guarded by American Marines—Colon, Jamaica, Trinidad, Barbadoes, Demerara, Bermuda, Halifax, N.S., Boston, U.S.A., Gibraltar, Malta, Cairo, Calcutta, Bombay, Rangoon, Singapore, Hong Kong, Shanghai, Manila, Kobe, Yokohama, playing musical comedy, comedy, and drama. The parts he has played include:—The title-rôle in Sergeant Brue, Hooley in A Shop Girl, Spoofah

MR. MARK LESTER.

Bey in Morocco Bound, William in La Cigale, Imari in The Geisha, Yen How in San Toy, Brother Tamarind in A Runaway Girl, Pettifer in Toreador, Zaccary in The Orchid; the Second Mrs. Block in Christopher Columbus, Hi Lung in Chinese Honeymoon, Blinky Bill in Belle of New York, Colonel Chesney in Charley's Aunt, Mathieu in A Night Out, Napoleon in The Duchess of Dantzic, Cæsar Cregeen in The Manxman, Tigellinus in The Sign of the Cross, and Taffy in Trilby. Mr. Lester was at the Borough Theatre, Stratford, for pantomime last year, and in the following summer helped to write The Gay Deceivers, a musical comedy that has been very successful, the other two authors being Mr. Frank Stanmore and Mr. Leslie Hawkins. Last Christmas found him at the Theatre Royal, Brighton, playing Johnny Stout. Mr. Lester's favourite pastime is golf, though he confesses that he is not much of a player, but lives in hopes. He has produced a number of pieces, and recently staged A Pantomime Rehearsal for Lady Brassey and Mrs. G. W. Fitzwilliam, when he was presented with a magnificent gold watch, which he prides very much.

PRINCESS LOUISE and the Duke of Argyll witnessed the performance of The Prisoner of Zenda at the St. James's Theatre on Thursday evening.

The production of the adaptation by Messrs. Norreys Connell and Oscar Asche of Mr. Stanley Weyman's successful novel before a crowded house at Bristol on Thursday last adds yet another to the list of popular plays which have first seen the light in the provinces, although only the difficulty of getting a theatre with a stage that would accommodate the large cast and larger crowds prevented Mr. Oscar Asche and Miss Lily Brayton from introducing it to a London audience at Christmas. The play follows the book very closely, and opens on the eve of St. Bartholomew. Clotilde, the Lady of Vrillac, and her betrothed, Monsieur Tignonville, both Huguenots, have come to Paris to the Court of Charles IX. Here she is seen and loved by the Catholic Count Hannibal de Tavannes. When the massacre of St. Bartholomew is at its height Tignonville, who, to save himself, has adopted the Catholic badge, makes his way to the hotel of his betrothed. Here he finds the doorway guarded by Count Hannibal, who can only save Clotilde, her lover, and her household from the sword if she is his promised wife. To save them Clotilde consents to his proposal, but stipulates that she shall be married by a minister of her own faith. Tignonville makes ineffectual attempts to make her break her pledged word, which attempts are divined by Tavannes, who exacts from him a promise to procure a minister to perform the required ceremony if, as proves to be the fact, the result of a duel between them is against him. After the ceremony Count Hannibal, who is determined to make Clotilde his willing bride, ordains that she shall come to him once every day either for a kiss or a blow—as she chooses. Count Hannibal sets out, with his newly-made wife and his followers, with letters from the King to Angers. Clotilde, who learns that the papers he bears are the death warrant of those of her faith in Angers, steals them from him as he sleeps in the inn on the road thither, but defends his person against Tignonville and others, who would kill him. Partly as the result of the loss of the letters, Count Hannibal and his party have to fly from the wrath of the clericals in Angers, and, being misled by Tignonville for his own ends, they fall into an ambush, and finally take refuge with their dead and wounded in Clotilde's stronghold of Vrillac. Here the wounded and broken Count Hannibal, whose innate nobility has been partly concealed by a rugged and domineering exterior, proves a more effectual conqueror, and all ends happily on a note of simple tenderness.

In Clotilde Miss Lily Brayton has a character which should prove one of her most notable impersonations. From the first scene, in which she suggests by tone and demeanour the alarm and annoyance of the young girl temporarily deserted by her lover at the brilliant Court, through all the dramatic situations in which the play abounds, to the last most moving scene of all, Miss Brayton held and carried the large audience with her by the charm of her gracious and dignified personality. In Act IV. Scene 2, in which Clotilde has finally to choose between the remnants of her affection for her old lover and her growing loyalty and love for her husband, Miss Brayton was particularly fine. Mr. Oscar Asche has given us a consistently strong character study in Count Hannibal, and the duel in Act II., Scene 2, was finely and realistically carried through. It was a superbly strong embodiment. Mr. Gerald Kay Souper as Tignonville played the young lover with sufficient fire, and cleverly indicated the inherent weakness of the character. The part of Mme. St. Lo, the cousin of Tavannes, was daintily and intelligently played by Miss Elfrida Clement; the vacillating character of Charles IX. in the first act was well brought out by Mr. Herbert Grimwood; Mr. Athol Forde and Mr. J. Fritz Russell as Count Hannibal's faithful followers Badelon and Bigot were particularly good, and gained applause; Mr. A. Tranton as the Provost of Angers was sufficiently bourgeois and subservient; and Mr. A. V. Bramble as the Archdeacon of Angers, Mr. Caleb Porter as Father Pezelay, and Mr. Charles A. Doran as the Huguenot minister, La Tribe, sufficiently differentiated the several types of clerical character.

That close attention to the details of the period presented which marks all Mr. Asche's productions was apparent. The dresses and armour, designed by Percy Anderson, are rich and elaborate, though the Huguenots are necessarily rather severely garbed; but the Court scene in Act I., Scene 1, affords an opportunity for the display of some magnificent costumes, that of Miss Lily Brayton being of cream satin, lace, and pearls. Mr. Joseph Harker's setting of Scene 1, Act. III., The Riverside, was a charming study, and gained a round of applause, and Scene 3, Act I., The Hotel of the Lady of Vrillac, Paris, was also very fine. The music was specially composed by Mr. Christopher Wilson, and was conducted by him. The large audience was unanimous in its approval, and insisted on a speech, but the author was not in the house.

AT the Opera House Winter Gardens, Southport, Mr. R. Courtneidge's company presented The Dairymaids. Miss Empsie Bowman's Peggy was charmingly piquant; Mr. Richard Telford as Lieut. Sam Brudenell was excellent in every way, and created much amusement; Mr. Johnny Osborne (a local favourite) sustained his reputation in the part of Joe Mivens, which he played to perfection; Eliza was cleverly and vivaciously impersonated by Miss Edie Martin; Miss May Casson enacted the character of Winifred with much grace and piquancy; Frank Meredith, R.N., had a very capable representative in Mr. J. Scott Melville; Mr. Bernard Vaughan was prominent and very acceptable as Dr. O'Bryne, R.N.; Lady Brudenell was well played by Miss Carrie Lacey; and Miss Doris Dickens was good as Helen.

AT the Theatre Royal, Tyldesley, Mr. Chas. H. Lester and company this week are presenting A Life for a Life. Mr. Lester powerfully sustains the part of Don Leon; Miss Chris Felton gives an admirable portrayal of Pedro Li Celci; Kit Osward is well taken by Mr. Harry T. Wood; and Mr. W. Carr is an impressive Sherriff Evelyn. Miss Dorothy Riddell makes a sweet and attractive Eva Evelyn; Aulalia finds an able exponent in Miss Lydia Hart; and Little Winnie proves a very clever child actress. Smart comedy is introduced by Mr. Edmond O'Grady as Tim McCarthy and Miss W. Rousby as Nancy Dorn.

BERLIN, THURSDAY, March 18.—A very cordial reception was accorded to this novelty, the author of which is, or rather was, unknown to Berlin. He was present at the production, and responded to the hearty applause by appearing before the curtain several times. The plot being probably known to your readers, a detailed account will hardly be necessary. The original title is Le Passe-Partout; the "Lantern" of the German title refers to an influential newspaper of that name, the proprietor of which is a roué of the most unscrupulous kind—whose name is Lionel Régis. His liaisons are numerous as the sands of the sea, and when a pretty young widow, with two small children to support, begs employment, he instals her forthwith as his secretary. The widow, Jacqueline Hélonin, very nearly falls a victim—and not an altogether unwilling one—to the fascinatioins of our Don Juan, but the latter has a brother named Eugen, who loves Jacqueline, and wishes to marry her. Lionel at first breaks out into violent rage when his discovers his nobler-hearted brother's penchant for the lovely widow, but he knows how to console himself, and finally—in a fit of unusual generosity—he bestows his blessing on the happy pair. Interwoven with the love story are some incidental episodes which have their humorous moments, but the piece is crude on the whole, and the author—who is young—will no doubt do himself greater credit later on. The acting was capital all round.

AT the Trianon Theatre another French farce made a very successful hit last week—Liebesgewitter, adapted and translated from the original of Xanrof by Benno Jacobson. It is among the riskiest things of the kind ever put on the German stage, and the plot is a confused jumble of wild absurdities, which it would be difficult to disentangle. The main idea is that a certain Fräulein Prudence suffers from certain unpleasant attacks whenever a thunderstorm rages; these lead to disastrous consequences, and are turned to good account by a clever rascal, one Alfred Carotte—a valet by profession—who plays providence to his own advantage throughout the piece. The vivacious acting and the introduction of Berlin colloquialisms aided the success.

AN attempt was made at the Hebbel Theatre a few nights ago to revive what one of our best critics terms a "sad comedy"—Die junge Welt—by Frank Wedekind. The play was produced in Munich some ten years back, and was there hissed off the stage. The same fate awaited it here, and the artists who took part were to be sympathised with.

MISS EDITH WALKER came over from Hamburg, where she is engaged at the Stadt Theatre, to sing the part of Elektra on Tuesday at our Royal Opera. The result was a great and well-deserved triumph for the American artist, who gave the difficult rôle in magnificent style, and was applauded enthusiastically. A second "guest" was Fräulein Petzl—also from the Hamburg theatre—who sang and acted the part of Chrysothemis very satisfactorily.

"KUMMERE DICH UM AMELIE," the French farce running at the Residenz, has passed its 150th consecutive performance, and is still drawing. Herr Alexander, who had a new piece in rehearsal, has no reason yet to change the bill.

AFTER a long and painful illness, Herr Adalbert atkowsky, one of the leading members of the Royal Schauspielhaus, passed away on Tuesday evening at the age of fifty-one. The artist was the most popular actor of his kind in Berlin, and on a "Matkowsky night" the house was always crowded. In classical plays he was inimitable: Wilhelm Tell, Wallenstein, Goetz von Berlichingen were among his best rôles, and his place will be very difficult to fill. The Emperor—in whose service Matkowsky acted for nearly twenty years—was exceedingly fond of him, and showed him much honour. His Majesty received daily intelligence as to the course of the illness. Herr Matkowsky was married to an English lady.

HERR SIEGFRIED LUTZ has acquired the rights of When Knights Were Bold, and the piece will be produced at the Neues in a few months in his translation.

ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

On Thursday evening, March 11, Schubert's Posth. Quartet for Strings, in D minor, formed the opening item in the concert, and was played by Miss Dorothy Devin, Mr. Antonio Piedra, Mr. Frank Bridge, and Mr. Felix Salmond. The tone of the strings in the Scherzo was slightly rough, but the young performers gave a good account of the lively finale, which was, unfortunately, delayed by the breaking of a string. The duet for two pianos, Andante and Variations in B flat (Schumann), played by Miss Florence Cotterell and Miss Mary Vickery, proved an attractive feature in the programme; while Mr. Ivan Powell and Mr. Felix Salmond were in perfect harmony in Beethoven's fine Sonata for Piano and Violoncello in A major. The Scherzo and Adagio were capitally played, and after a spirited performance of the finale, the audience gave both performers a rousing reception, and no less than five recalls. In the vocal department Miss Florence Barrow was very successful in recit. and air "From Rosy Bowers" (Purcell); while Miss Dorothy Webb sang two songs, "Lullaby" and "Looking Back," by Hamilton Harty. In "A Voice by the Cedar Tree," a graceful setting, by A. Somervell, of Tennyson's poem, Mr. George A. Baker sang admirably; but his other song, "We sway along," was so poor in quality that it did little justice to so clever a vocalist. "We sway along" is evidently intended for a description of a ride in an express train; but what can be said in favour of the inconsistency of the concluding verse:

"We shake off the miles like water;
We might carry a royal ransom,
And I think of her waiting, waiting,
And I long for a common hansom."

All the songs on Thursday evening had one merit—they were sung in English. The programme concluded with an able performance of Schumann's Trio for Piano and Strings in G minor, by Miss Ellen Tuckfield, Miss Dorothy Devin, and Mr. Felix Salmond. Miss Ellen Tuckfield acted as accompanist.

"THE SAILOR'S WEDDING" is being presented at the Empire Theatre, Swindon, by Hardie and Von Leer's company. Mr. R. A. Greene's impersonation of Gordon Drake is capital; Sir Victor Lascelles is well taken by Mr. Cecil Klein; Mr. Harold Weston makes a good Count Bellini; Mr. T. Hodgson Taylor presents a careful study of Giovanni Ferici; a realistic portrayal of Giacomo is given by Mr. F. Finch Smiles; and Mr. Walter Pemberton causes much fun as Jack Hawkins. Miss Laura Hansen impressively renders the part of Countess Bellini; Miss Mary Pemberton enacts Mary Bellini to perfection; Miss Winifred Pearson is seen to advantage as Lenore; and Miss M. Sadie is good as Polly Clarke.

LONDON & SUBURBAN THEATRES.

KING'S THEATRE, HAMMERSMITH.

On Monday, March 15, the Drama, by Walter Howard, entitled

"HER LOVE AGAINST THE WORLD."

This week at the King's we have had a return visit of Mr. Walter Howard's celebrated Lyceum play, which has exercised its old fascination, and attracted large audiences. Mr. Howard has a happy knack of so constructing his plays that they appear to be quite fresh and natural, and an entire breaking away from old lines. In Her Love Against the World the author travels into the imaginary kingdoms of Ravensberg and Saxonia, and an interesting story of love and hate is interwoven with war between the two States. A strong company, under the direction of Messrs. W. H. Hallatt and Walter Howard, take part in the production. Mr. Walter Howard is seen to excellent advantage in the very effective part of Eric, Earl of Strathmere, which, by his admirable acting, meets with marked approval. An exceedingly good representation of the brutal Prince Ulric of Ravensberg is given by Mr. Lewis Gilbert, whose style and appearance command much praise. Mr. W. H. Hallatt, of ripe experience, makes a successful Prince Othmar. As clever and neat a piece of acting as could be desired is Miss Rossie St. John's impersonation of the boy Lionel, and the audience was by no means backward in showing their appreciation. Mr. Fred Emery's rendering of Prince Maurice of Saxonia is one of ability; and General Gessler has a smart representative in Mr. Charles R. Hann. Sergeant Kaspar is stolidly undertaken by Mr. Victor Rowland; and Mr. A. H. Hallatt is a vigorous and manly Surgeon-Captain Helgar. Heinrick Pimpernickle and Fritz Pimpernickle, the two servants, are amusingly impersonated by Mr. Henry B. Lewis and Mr. John Mill. The Princess Iris of Idalia is a most engaging personality as played by Miss Grace Heywood, whose earnest and sympathetic acting lends much assistance to the artistic success of the piece. Miss Blanche Steele displays skill and power in the unfeeling character of Shulah. Miss Gertie Reid and Miss Hettie Ferguson are bright and animated as Katinka and Gretchen. Excellent scenery is provided, and the brilliant military costumes add to the general effect.

THE GRAND, FULHAM.

On Monday, March 15, for the First Time in West London, the Drama, in Three Acts, by Charles Darrell, entitled

"THE EYES OF THE WORLD."

M. Achille Fanfarade ..Mr. J. Edward Whitty
M. Hector de L'Orme ....Mr. George D. Daiper
M. Gaston de Carnac .....Mr. Will Casey
Octave .....Mr. Charles Stirling
M. Paul Roqueville .....Mr. Charles Sewell
Brigard .....Mr. Albert Hendley
Avice .....Miss Elsie Capell
Mme. Esme de Carnac...Miss Beatrice Fitzhugh
Mlle. Susanne Pomfleure ..Miss Nellie Garside
Antoinette .....Miss Ivy Courtney
Hélène de L'Orme ....Miss Ethel Van Praagh

A "conflict of sex, in three encounters," is being enacted before Fulham audiences this week, and is proving highly engrossing. The prolific pen of Mr. Charles Darrell has been utilised effectively, and his attacks on the sin of society which has been denounced from time to time in the pulpit, are pungent and severe. The piece, which was originally produced at the Prince of Wales's, Grimsby, on Dec. 21 last, and was later seen as near London as Woolwich, proceeds on lines superior to the ordinary melodrama, and gains strength as it advances from a series of dramatic scenes, some of which come as a startling surprise. The first of the three encounters, all of which take place in France, is that between Hector de L'Orme and his wife Hélène, who has discovered that an intrigue exists between her husband and the wife of his friend Gaston De Carnac. She taxes Hector with his infidelity, and he promises to have no more to do with Mme. de Carnac; but only a few minutes later Hélène discovers Hector and the lady in an affectionate embrace. Hélène determines to leave her husband; but in order to avoid a scandal that would recoil upon the head of her child, she consents to remain silent regarding her husband's perfidy.

For ten years Mme. de L'Orme lives in privacy at Cannes, happy in the love of her daughter Avice, whom she idolises. Every year Avice goes on a month's visit to her father, according to agreement. She has now reached the age of eighteen, and on her return soon shows signs that her love, hitherto reserved wholly for her mother, is shared by someone else. During her visit to Paris she has met Octave, the son of Gaston de Carnac, and the two young people have fallen in love. Hélène is appalled at the idea of her daughter marrying the son of the woman who had brought desolation to her home, and when Octave arrives to ask for Avice's hand Hélène reveals his mother's shame. Octave submits that his parent's vice does not affect him, but Hélène points out the awful possibility that Avice might be his sister. The doubt is cleared up by Hector, who comes to make a proposition to Hélène, declaring that Octave was born two year before his illicit association with Mme. de Carnac began. Hélène is thus enabled to consent to the marriage; but there is one more obstacle. Gaston de Carnac, Octave's father, has become a Cabinet Minister, and, anxious that the family name shall appear without blemish "in the eyes of the world," makes it a condition to the union that Hélène shall return to her husband. He gives only one alternative, and that is the death of either party. Hélène is unable to consent to go back to Hector, and suggests that he, being the guilty one, shall take his life. Hector shrinks from such a fate, and Hélène, bent upon securing the happiness of her child, proposes that they shall decide by cards. The fateful ace falls to Hélène, and her craven husband, obviously elated, retires to enable her to carry out the fatal act. Hélène has scarcely placed a revolver to her forehead when Avice rushes into the room, and falls fainting into her mother's arms, declaring that to part from Octave would kill her. Hélène determines to set aside the compact, and under the threat of exposure, to wring from de Carnac his consent to the marriage.

She carries out her intention in the third "encounter," which takes place at De Carnac's house in Paris. Although forbidden the house by Mme. de Carnac, Hélène obtains an entry, and after loading Madame with scorn, reveals her infamy to her husband. De Carnac will not credit the statement, especially as Hector denies it, but the testimony of Octave, who had come to fight a duel with Hector, is believed, and De Carnac takes upon himself the responsibility of the fight. The two men adjourn to the garden; there is a pistol shot; De Carnac returns alone, and, after bidding his wife leave his house, joins the hands of Octave and Avice. It is not an essentially "happy ending," but, after the strenuous events that have preceded, it seems the only one feasible.

The new play was acted with much credit by Miss Ethel Van Praagh and Mr. J. Edward Whitty's company, which has so long and successfully travelled the provinces. The burden of the piece was borne by Miss Van Praagh, whose exacting part as the outraged wife called up all the resources of her art. Her impersonation was one of dramatic excellence throughout, tender, emotional, and tragic by turns, and her admirable voice, though at times kept too low in tone, gave telling effect to the lines she had to deliver. Miss Van Praagh exhibited, too, an exquisite taste in dress, and her gowns were rich and beautiful. A fresh and girlish rendering of the daughter Avice was given by Miss Elsie Capell, who acted with agreeable youthfulness and grace. A truly ignoble figure was made of Hector de L'Orme by Mr. George D. Daiper, who gave a capital study of the cowardice, the malice, and the deceit of the unscrupulous libertine. Mme. Esmé de Carnac was played with quite serpentine venom and spite by Miss Beatrice Fitzhugh, who left no detail of her work incomplete. The lighter side of the piece is confined chiefly to the advocate Achille, who woos and marries a young actress named Susanne. The former was played on droll lines by Mr. J. Edward Whitty, who caused roars of laughter in a mesmerism scene which he is called upon to enact. The actress was portrayed by Miss Nellie Garside, a clever little ingénue, who revelled in the comedy of the part. Susanne is given to jealousy, and at the least excuse insists on reconstituting an imaginary scene in which her lover is conspicuous. Miss Garside is very versatile and very popular. Mr. Charles Stirling made a gallant and chivalrous youth of Octave. He has good declamatory power and vigorous methods of acting, and it is a pity that he should mar his performance by exaggeration. A little modification, both in delivery and attitude, would greatly improve an otherwise fine embodiment. Mr. Will Casey, who was obviously suffering from a cold, portrayed the Cabinet Minister with dignity and care, and the dialogue of M. Paul Roqueville, Hélène's father, was delivered with point and a keen sense of humour by Mr. Charles Sewell. The piece, which consists wholly of interiors, was elaborately mounted, the furniture of Mme. de L'Orme's boudoir and that of De Carnac's drawing-room being sumptuous. The play had an appreciative reception, and calls after the curtain were numerous, Miss Van Praagh being the recipient of a floral tribute.

CORONET THEATRE.

On Monday, March 15, the Musical Comedy, entitled

"THE GAY GORDONS."

Mr. Seymour Hicks's company is at the pretty Notting Hill Gate theatre this week in the successful musical comedy, The Gay Gordons. About this time last year Mr. Seymour Hicks and his charming and accomplished wife, Miss Ellaline Terriss, were here in the same piece. Miss Madge Crichton, fresh from her triumphs "across the herring-pond," makes her re-entry into the metropolis in the part of Peggy Quainton. Miss Madge Crichton plays the part delightfully, the "See-saw song" and "Everybody loves me up in London" are charmingly rendered with taste and piquancy, and her acting is bright, exhilarating, refined, and artistic. Mr. Frank Lincoln, who essays the part of Angus Graeme, afterwards Earl of Meltrose, is full of sparkle and animation, and carries the character along at the necessary racing speed, and with all the Seymour Hicks abandon. Mr. Tom Graves is exceedingly droll and original as Nervy Nat, the showman, and his song, "If she says it's black, it's black," is admirably rendered. Mr. Edward Nainby is quaintly amusing as Edmund; and Miss Ida Laurie works hard to make the part of Charlotte Siddons "go." Miss Mabel Dent is eminently satisfactory as Victoria Siddons, with song; and Miss Norah Guinness is well in the picture as Lady Graeme of Lockalt. Miss Emily Mellon acts with pathos and naturalness as Janet McLeod; and Misses Rosa Carlisle, Gladys Waring, and a bevy of beauty help to adorn the stage. Mr. Ernest Ruston is quite satisfactory as "Poppa" Quainton; Mr. Norman Forrest is funny as Corporal John Smith; Mr. Mervyn Dene, besides stage-managing the show, acts very well as the Marquis of Dalesbury, and sings the "Welcome" song delightfully. Mr. Charles Tyers proves himself an adept at calisthenic exercise as Jack McPhrisky; and other small parts are efficiently played. The orchestra is under the direction of Mr. Arthur Spittle, and Mr. W. A. Seymour is business-manager.

ELEPHANT AND CASTLE THEATRE.

On Monday, March 15, the Drama, entitled

"IN HOLY RUSSIA."

The above thrilling drama forms the attraction here this week. Being a Russian play, the Nihilist movement must needs be indispensable, and the excellent company, under the direction of Mr. J. Rice Cassidy, is to be commended for an interesting and exciting representation. Mrs. J. Rice Cassidy enacts the rôle of Rene Rubinoff, the escaped prisoner from Siberia, in a convincing manner. Her dramatic situations are very realistic, and her assumption of the character of an American lady, in which disguise she enters Russia, is a fine study. The character of Catska Lavotski, an adventuress in the pay of the Russian police, is played with much dramatic force by Miss Amy McNeill. Mr. Rolf Leslie gives an excellent reading of the calm, but masterful Count Gregori Petrolski, "the people's friend"; and a striking contrast to this character is that of the excitable Nihilist leader, Laurice Steragoff, admirably portrayed by Mr. George H. Doyle. Mr. Carl Beechey is seen to advantage as the cruel and determined chief of Russian police, Baron von Pleve; and Mr. Henry Compton infuses a good deal of humour into the many-sided character of Colonel Richard Forrest. Mr. J. Rice Cassidy gives a capital representation of the colonel's Irish servant, Mickey Nolan, introducing the necessary amount of really clever comedy into the play. The other minor characters are in safe keeping. The drama is well dressed and well staged, and the incidental music is adequately supplied by the capable orchestra under the direction of Mr. W. Stephenson.

THE SHAKESPEARE.

On Monday, March 15, the Play, in Four Acts, by Alfred Sutro, entitled

"THE BUILDER OF BRIDGES."

A rare dramatic treat is provided this week at the popular Clapham theatre, where a powerful company, under the supervision and direction of Mr. George Alexander, is presenting Mr. Alfred Sutro's great play, The Builder of Bridges, which attained such a success at the St. James's Theatre. Chief interest in the play centres round the doings of Dorothy Faringay, played with conspicuous success by Miss Dorothy Green, an actress of undoubted talent and ability. Her impersonation of the woman who awakens to a sense of her love for one man after her hand has been given to another left nothing to be desired, and the varied feelings of emotion were portrayed with great fervour. Not less successful was the Edward Thursfield of Mr. Leonard Pagden. Possessed of a genial personality he fully realised the lighter vein of the character, and in the stronger passages his acting was powerful and convincing. Miss Kemmis brought her ripe experience to bear on the part of Mrs. Debney, and acquitted herself artistically. Miss Beatrice Smith made the most of the rôle of Miss Closson; and Miss Ella Collins was satisfactory as Minnie. Mr. Lewis Fielder handled the part of Arnold Faringay with considerable tact and skill, and is to be congratulated on a sterling performance. Walter Gresham was played by Mr. Arthur Vezin in a quiet, yet sincere manner, and was always interesting; and Mr. Alfred Harris's embodiment of Sir Henry Kilnick was a clever piece of acting.

CRYSTAL PALACE THEATRE.

On Monday, March 15, the Domestic Drama, entitled

"SWEET LAVENDER."

It is a pleasant task to chronicle the success of Mr. Edward Terry and his company in their week of varied répertoire at Mr. J. Bannister Howard's theatre here, and Mr. Pinero's play went as merrily and freshly as ever. Mr. Edward Terry as Dick Phenyl had a great reception, and his well-known crisp style, attention to trifles, and quaint mannerisms, which custom cannot stale, showed this eminent comedian to be in his best vein. The Clement Hale of Mr. Percival Madgewick was refreshingly youthful and natural; Mr. William Dexter as Dr. Delaney was excellent; Mr. Edmund Hollick as Horace Bream, the travelling American, with just enough, but not too much, of the Yankee intonation and inflection, made a hit; Mr. Bulger, the hairdresser to the legal profession, became an amusing entity in the hands of Mr. R. Goodyer; and Mr. George Byrne did all that was needed for the part of the solicitor, Mr. Maw. Mr. Poole Kirkwood as Mr. Geoffrey Wedderburn, the banker, succeeded in investing the impersonation with reality and dignity. The subdued tone so necessary to the part of the suffering Ruth Rolt was caught to a nicety by Miss Lydia Busch, and Miss Christine Rayner as the heroine, Lavender, was charming and sympathetic throughout. Miss Sophie Lingwood made the part of Mrs. Gilfillian a most amusing and acceptable one, and Miss Edith Coleman was a sprightly and engaging Minnie. At the conclusion of the performance there were vociferous demands for Mr. Terry, and the veteran comedian had to appear before the curtain and bow his acknowledgments. The theatre orchestra, under the guidance of Mr. Leonard Gautier, gave a programme of music far above the average, and added much to the pleasure of the evening's entertainment.

KENNINGTON THEATRE.

On Monday, March 15,

"AN ENGLISHMAN'S HOME."

An Englishman's Home made its first appearance outside the West End at Kennington Theatre on Monday night, and Mr. H. B. Brandreth, the enterprising acting-manager, had seen to it that Mr. Frank Curzon's company should have a good send-off on what promises to be a long and successful tour. The house was packed from floor to ceiling by an anxiously expectant audience, which included amongst its number the Mayors of Southwark and Lambeth, supported by many members of their respective Corporations, the officers of the 21st and 23rd Battalions of the London Regiment, whose headquarters are in the Kennington district, and scores of khaki-clad soldiers of the Territorial forces. It was fittingly enough a military welcome which awaited a play that has done more to impress upon the young men of the metropolis the duty which they owe to their country than any number of appeals from the Minister of War. The production was an immediate and complete success. The play is magnificently staged, and from the moment that the invading patrols made their appearance at Myrtle Villa, amidst the Boxing Day festivities, to the last phases, when Mr. Brown is led out to be shot for defending his home against an enemy, who are almost immediately themselves outflanked and captured, nothing is wanting to stir the pulse and arouse the dormant patriotism of the onlooker. The mounting is a triumph of stage-craft, the whistling of bullets, the whizzing of shell, the sharp crack of the rifles at magazine fire, the clatter of the horses' hoofs, the blazing roof and shell-shattered walls, all combining to give a vivid picture of the grim reality of war. The acting is excellent in every direction. During the opening act a humorous representation is given of the lighter side of the average middle-class home, but that gives place in the second and third acts to the most intensely dramatic situations powerfully played by artists who have caught the spirit of the story. The laughter which the crude satire of Geoffrey Smith constantly evokes is quickly changed when he drops dead with a bullet through the heart. Quite a shudder goes through the audience at that realistic touch, and when at the fall of the curtain on Monday Col. Whitehead made an appeal for recruits for the Territorial Army his words did not fall on deaf ears. Mr. Cecil Calvert gives a splendid study of the rôle of that sturdy Englishman, Mr. Brown, whose soul is stung into action by the ravages of the invader, and who desperately defends his home—facing the resultant death penalty with equanimity. Mr. Bertram Steer is exceedingly clever as Geoffrey Smith, the light-hearted football enthusiast, and his smart repartee keeps the house in roars of laughter. The Paul Robinson of Mr. Martyn Roland is a fine piece of acting, and he delineates the strong-limbed, stout-hearted young patriot to the life. The eccentricities of Capt. Finch, of the Blinkshire Volunteers, are effectively developed by Mr. Littledale Power, while the grotesque Reggie Brown is ably enacted by Mr. R. Fielding. Miss Lilias Waldegrave makes a stately and heroic figure as Maggie Brown; the Amy Brown of Miss Amy Willard is a vivid piece of stage portraiture; while Miss Evelyn Martheze creates much merriment as Ada Jones. The Prince Yoland of Mr. Charles Vaughan is admirably presented, and Mr. Alick Churnley is well placed as his Lieutenant; Mr. Horace Dawson makes an impressive Sergt. Thol, leader of the invading patrol; Mr. George Ide scores a great triumph as the alert and soldierly Colour-Sergt. Harris, of the Volunteers Permanent Staff, and Mr. Walter Gay is a dignified Adjutant. Mr. Ernest Graham is amusing as Lieut. Jackson, and Mr. Arthur Murray deserves mention as Syd Brown. Others who assist towards ensuring the success of a notable melodrama are Mr. Ernest Mayne, Mr. Fred Permain, Mr. W. Waller, Mr. H. L. Staples, and Mr. Lionel Scott. The play is preceded by Mr. Cyril Clensy's clever impersonations of well-known actors.

DALSTON THEATRE.

On Monday, March 15, the Play, in Four Acts, entitled

"THE SIGN OF THE CROSS."

Mr. William Greet's company, appearing this week at the Dalston Theatre with The Sign of the Cross, are creating an excellent impression. Mr. Cyril Austen-Lee looks the part of Marcus Superbus, Prefect of Rome, and his scenes with Mercia, a part admirably sustained by Miss Constance Little, are sympathetic and impressive. Miss Little enlists sympathy, and in certain scenes arouses enthusiasm. Mr. C. Yorke's Nero is a well-studied performance. Mr. H. Thurston Harris as Servilius, a spy, displays all the truculence of a relentless foe; and Strabo is well played by Mr. Ernest Duggan. Miss Edith Drayson plays Stephanus impressively; Mr. Walter Fleet makes an interesting Favius; Miss Beryl Hamilton capably enacts the part of the Empress; and Mr. Frank Wood is a droll Glabrio.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE, N.

On Monday, March 15, the Play, in Four Acts, by E. W. Hornung and Eugene W. Presbrey, entitled "RAFFLES."

For the second week of the season here Mr. Leonard Boyne's company, including Mr. Eille Norwood and Miss Ruth Mackay, are appearing in Messrs. Hornung and Presbrey's highly successful play Raffles, which enjoyed such a considerable measure of success on its production at the Comedy Theatre a year or two back. The gentleman-criminal as hero of a play seems always to possess a peculiar power of attraction, vide Captain Swift and Jim the Penman, to quote only two examples, and A. J. Raffles is no exception to the rule, for although he is nothing more than a common thief, the authors have contrived to invest him with the halo of a hero, and the audience always hails with delight his escape from the just penalty of the law. Mr. Eille Norwood, in his interpretation of the part, need fear nothing from comparison with those who have preceded him in it, and the picture he draws of the amateur crackeman is quite an engaging and attractive one. Miss Ruth Mackay as Mrs. Vidal has a none too pleasant part to play, but she plays it with commendable restraint and freedom from exaggeration, and her impersonation is altogether effective. A clever character study of the professional burglar, Crawshay, comes from Mr. Dalziel Heron. Mr. E. W. Thomas as the American detective, Curtis Bedford, makes the most of the many opportunities with which the part abounds, and a neat and amusing little sketch of Viscount Crowley is contributed by Mr. Cecil Brymer. Mr. Arthur Willoughby is duly aristocratic as the Earl of Amersteth, whose sister, Lady Melrose, is ably impersonated by Miss Agnes Knights. Miss Dorothy Gordon as the French maid, Marie, adds to the general success by the excellence of her work, and Lady Ethel and Gwendoline Conran are prettily and gracefully played by Misses Beatrice Fitzgerald and Lucie Milner respectively. Mr. Harold West does well as Harry Manders, alias "Bunny," especially in the later scenes of the play, and the cast is completed by Messrs. Stevenson, Oswald Griffiths, and Arthur Fitzgerald. The longer play is preceded by Mr. Eric Lewis's comedietta, A Lesson in Shakespeare, in which Messrs. Dalziel, Heron, and Harold West and Miss Beatrice Fitzgerald appear.

THEATRE ROYAL, WOOLWICH.

On Monday, March 15, the Drama, entitled

"THE ASSASSIN."

Excellently mounted and lavishly dressed, The Assassin deals with life in Russia, which invariably affords a means of both powerful and picturesque treatment, and the author, Mr. E. Hill Mitchelson, has thoroughly availed himself of the opportunities that have presented themselves and has evolved a play of highly interesting qualities. Produced under the guiding hand of Mr. Augustine Knight, the drama is received with emphatic expressions of approbation. Mr. Augustine Knight gives a clever impersonation of Prince Demetri, and depicts the dastardly schemes in which that personage is engaged in convincing style; Mr. John Worth stands out prominently in the character of Ivan Ipanoff; Mr. Henry C. Ward offers a careful study of the Duke Carl; Baron Alphonse is humorously portrayed by Mr. Murray Hathorne, who submits a thoroughly diverting characterisation; Mr. Wilson Summers shows ability as General Nicol, Chief of the Police; Mr. Edwin Jenner essays the part of Captain O'Neil in a manly fashion; Peter, a "greenhorn" in the secret police, is made a morth-provoking person in the hands of Mr. J. Tilley Dillsen; and the wordless Evangie of Mr. W. R. Christmas is highly popular. Miss Ella Vane in the title-rôle as Countess Wanda offers a powerful rendering, a noteworthy feature of her performance occurring in the duel scene. Nita is pathetically played by Miss Maude Steeple; Miss Eva Trevanna gives a successful rendering of Connie Jonathan, an American girl, who becomes a great favourite; and Miss Katie Lever is happily suited as Katrina. Miss Ada Douglas, Mr. Arthur Hill, Mr. Jones Flood, and Mr. George S. Stephens lend adequate assistance in minor parts.

ARTILLERY THEATRE, WOOLWICH.

On Monday, March 15, the Pantomime, entitled

"BLUE BEARD."

Produced under the supervision of Mr. John Clegg, Mr. Charles Constant's company in Blue Beard is paying a week's visit to this theatre. Having been on the boards since Christmas, the pantomime has been judiciously improved from time to time, and now runs its merry course in a very brisk fashion, the numerous musical numbers with which the play abounds making strong claims on popular favour. Miss Daisy Lake makes a good principal boy in the part of Selim, her songs "I don't care if there's a girl there" and "I want you to see my girl" being well received. Miss Marie Duncan is a charming Fatima, and scores in the song "The lovelight in your eyes," also evoking applause by her rendering of "Keepsakes." Miss Laura Wickenden is suitably placed as Asphodel and looks a pretty Fairy Queen. Sister Ann has an able representative in Mr. Johnny Clegg, who provokes much laughter. He is heard to advantage in the songs "My girl's a Yorkshire girl" and "Good-bye to Charlie." Mr. Jack Parker sustains the part of Bamboozlum in a diverting manner, and contributes an attractive turn in the song "Study your cookery book." Mr. Walter B. Freer (who is a brother of that well-known and clever comedienne Miss Louie Frear) imparts much humour to the part of Pimple. He is in his element in a lively dance, and catches the ear of the house in the song "Follow me." Mr. Ellis Carlyle in the title-rôle makes the most of his opportunities; Mr. W. Harlin and Mr. B. Hanlon provide a large amount of comedy as Shacabac and Abdulla respectively; and Loolah and Cashim are capably played by Miss D. D'Armour and Miss Gerte Gordon. Specialities are supplied by Russell and Gage and Miss Dolly Moore. The orchestra is under the able direction of Mr. L. Finch.

GREENWICH THEATRE.

On Monday, March 15, the Drama, in Four Acts, entitled

"THE NIGHT BEFORE CHRISTMAS."

Mr. Alfred B. Cross and Miss Watersford's company is appearing here this week with considerable success in the drama entitled The Night Before Christmas. Mr. A. B. Cross has long been a favourite here, his vigorous style appealing strongly to his audiences, and he submits an artistic and effective study of Judge John Phillips; Mr. C. Vernon Proctor acts well as Jack Phillips; Mr. Henry Lloyd is excellent both as Bud Means and Absalom Mack; Mr. John E. Tomlinson is very good indeed as Daniel Webster Wills; Mr. Charles Brandon does well as Joe Miller; Mr. John Beech is a clever Blind Billy Pickerall; Mr. Alfred Selwood is a capital Sam Simkins; and other parts are well filled by Messrs. W. Jackson, Fred March, William Berson, and W. Hudson. Miss Minnie Waterford is charming and clever as Marion Williams; Miss Alicia Rayleigh is good as Annie Phillips; Miss Maude Elliott gives a clever study of Grandmother Phillips; Miss Mary Forsdyke is excellent as Mrs. Higgins; and Miss Amy Rudd is a capital Charity Smith. The parts of the grandchildren, Ruby Phillips Carlton and Llewellyn Phillips Carlton, are well acted by Miss Winnie Warden and Master Sidney Forest. The scenery and dresses are good and appropriate.

BROADWAY THEATRE, S.E.

On Monday, March 15, the Drama, in Four Acts, by Walter Howard, entitled

"THE MIDNIGHT WEDDING."

Messrs. Paumier and Howard's company, including Mr. Alfred Paumier and Miss Yvonne Orchardson, is the attraction here in The Midnight Wedding. Mr. A. Paumier is a sterling actor, and does full justice to the fine character of Paul Valmar; Miss Orchardson is a charming Princess Astrea, looking and acting admirably; Miss Nesta Sandford is a clever and attractive Satanella; Miss Gwladys Faunce is a pleasing Kathie; and Miss Prudence Lawrence plays Marie cleverly. Mr. John Nesbitt gives an excellent performance as the Crown Prince Leopold; Mr. A. E. Winnington-Barnes is very good indeed as Eugene; Mr. Aidan Lovett is a finished Count Rudolf; Mr. Arthur Radford is good as Sub-Lieutenant Kulman; Mr. Forbes Harrison is an excellent Father Gerard; Mr. James E. Page is a capital Sergeant Max; and Mr. Vernon H. Vayne and Mr. Algie Spalding do well as Otto and Bebo. Mr. J. Harringay is well suited as Nathon; and the remaining characters get full justice at the hands of Messrs. C. E. Dane, Charles Stephens, Mark Shelding, and Bert Lewis. The play is lavishly mounted and exceedingly well dressed. The acting-manager for the company is Mr. Forbes Harrison, and Mr. Bertram Iles continues to grow in popularity in his position as resident-manager.

BOROUGH THEATRE, STRATFORD.

On Monday, March 15, the Play, in Three Acts, entitled

"THE THIEF."

Mr. George Alexander's company, in the St. James's Theatre success, The Thief, is occupying the boards at the Borough Theatre this week, and was received with much favour by those present on the opening night of the week. The piece is splendidly staged, and the small cast required has been most suitably selected. Miss Marie Polini, in the exacting rôle of Marise Chelford, achieves a striking success. Very graceful and charming, Miss Polini readily enlists sympathy for the fear-haunted wife, under whose butterfly surface there exists such deep devotion for the husband, who is her sole thought, and her incisive, restrained acting in the strong second act is a very fine histrionic effort. As Richard Chelford Mr. Rupert Lister portrays every phase of this important character with conviction and virility, and entirely suggests Marise's honourable, if rather casual, husband, who is determined, at any sacrifice, to uphold the truth. Mr. Cyril Harcourt is responsible for a quiet, well-defined portraiture of Raymond Leyton; and Mr. Owen Nares, as the infatuated, though chivalrous, Harry Leyton, plays in a fluent and natural style which is most effective. Mr. Luke Forster as the calm, deliberate detective, Mr. Protheroe, is eminently well suited; Miss Frances Leighton plays very appropriately as Isabel Leyton; and the small part of a servant is safely entrusted to Mr. Bernard Stevens. The Nursery Governess, a one-act play, provides a very popular curtain-raiser, the parts in which are capitally undertaken by Mr. Charles King, Mr. Luke Forster, Mr. Bernard Stevens, and Miss Eileen Kerin.

THEATRE ROYAL, STRATFORD.

On Monday, March 15, the Drama, by Walter Howe, entitled

"A VICTIM OF VILLAINY."

This stirring drama, which had its initial production at the Stratford Borough Theatre some time back, is at Mr. Sam Frederick's popular Theatre Royal this week, and is proving a potent attraction, the strong domestic interest of the story, the many thrilling situations, and the interpolated comedy supplying a dramatic dish of piquant flavour. Mr. Frank J. Pitt's company interprets the piece most satisfactorily, and some very fine scenery is carried. Mr. H. Creagh Hunt in the important rôle of the villainous Stephen Cavanagh acts very powerfully and makes this inhuman wretch an object of particular aversion to the more susceptible among the audience. Mr. Frank J. Pitt as the young inventor Frank Manton looks the part well and speaks his lines very distinctly; Mr. John Campling is a very satisfactory Walter Lennox; Mr. Wilson Roberts plays in versatile style as the ne'er-do-well Dick Carson; Mr. Frank Dallas is a prime favourite as the good-hearted policeman, Patrick Maloney, being always entertaining and interesting; and Mr. Fred Carroll is a very amusing Tom Leckie. Miss Florence Halton acts with considerable feeling and latent strength as the much-wronged Alice Cavanagh, thereby adding prominence to this important rôle; Miss Kathryne Eckart plays with sympathy and tact as Mary Manton; Miss Olive M. Pitt is a bright and prepossessing Norah Maloney; and a word of praise is due to Miss Dollie Lester as the boy Eric. Remaining parts are all in quite capable hands.

THE WEST LONDON.

On Monday, March 15, the Play, in Four Acts, by J. W. Sabben Clare, entitled

"THE POWER OF A WICKED WOMAN."

The many powerful situations in this intensely human play proved very acceptable to the habitués of Mr. William Bailey's commodious Marylebone playhouse on Monday. Mr. Montague Beaudyn was a host in himself as the fear-haunted Philip Carey. Heart and soul in his work, he made a deep impression on his audience, who were not chary of their applause. His whole manner and bearing were quite in keeping with the part, and his elocution was very commendable. Mr. C. D. Pitt gave a bright and manly portrayal of Horace Winter; Mr. Arthur Cresswell was quite at his ease as Guy Oliphant; Mr. Rupert Talbot was a humorous figure as Lord Arthur Dumley; and Mr. Arthur A. Tomlin did well as Bransby. As Denise Carey Miss Florrie Green played with touching effect; Miss Malone enacted Nellie Montague with an archness and vivacity that charmed all; Miss Phyllis Rae was well placed as Marie; Miss Irene Munro made the most of her opportunities as the "wicked woman," Helen Terraire. The play was well staged and mounted, and its reception was very cordial.

GUILDHALL SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

A pianoforte recital was given by the pupils of Mr. John Francis Barnett on Friday afternoon, March 12, at the Guildhall School of Music. The programme commenced with Mozart's Concerto in E flat, for two pianofortes (first movement), Cadenza by Reinecke, which was ably played by Miss Muriel Kingsbury and Miss Jessie Attwell. An excellent performance was also given by Miss Beatrice Dunn, of Clementi's seldom heard Sonata, Op. 50, No. 3, "Didone abbandonata," Scena tragica. Miss Dorothy Ellis played Sarabande, from Holberg Suite (Greig) and Chopin's Ballade in F skilfully; while Miss Frances Cox gave an expressive rendering of Schumann's Concerto in A minor(two movements), Miss Bethwin Foss playing the second piano. Mr. Wallis Bandey, A.G.S.M., was heard in a really brilliant performance of Chopin's C sharp minor Scherzo; and Miss Bethwin Foss was heartily applauded after her playing of Nocturne in C minor (Chopin) and Mr. T. F. Barnett's bright and very effective Tarantelle in G minor. After a clever interpretation of Liszt's Rhapsodie Hongroise, No. 12, by Miss Jessie Attwell, Miss Greta Dunlop was heard in Nocturne in E flat (Chopin), and Mr. Conrad Richardson in the same composer's Ballade in A flat. The recital concluded with Mendelssohn's Serenade, Op. 43, played by Miss Lily White, with Miss Beatrice Dunn at the second piano. The recital was a success, and all Mr. Barnett's pupils gave evidence of sound training and acquitted themselves admirably.

Miss Eleanor Wort, pianist, gave a careful performance of Mendelssohn's Prelude and Fugue in E minor at the students' concert on Wednesday evening, and Miss Lilian Budds, a blind pupil of Mr. Johannes Wolff, did her professor great credit in her violin solo Sonata in E minor (Veracini), and had an enthusiastic reception from the large audience. In Handel's recitative and air, "O ruddier than the cherry," Mr. John Younger, for so difficult a composition, had a fair amount of success; while Miss Ethel Dieselhorst sang Bohm's beautiful song "Still wie die nacht" with expression, being more successful therein than in her second song, "I think," by Guy d'Hardelot, a somewhat tame example of a clever composer. Although taking some liberties with the time, Miss Margaret Wilson gave, on the whole, a meritorious performance of Liszt's Rhapsody, and Mr. Leonard A. Connabeer, a youthful but most promising violinist, had a hearty greeting and two recalls after a clever interpretation of "Souvenir de Moscow" (Wieniawski). A somewhat unusual song for a lady is Schumann's "The Two Grenadiers," but Miss May Harding certainly deserved praise for her singing. The Rita Mandoline Quintett, pupils of Mme. Fiammetta Waldahoff, greatly pleased the audience by their clever playing of Neapolitan Airs and "Fantasia Caratteristica" (Francia). Mr. J. A. Maynard sang "Love is a Bauble" (Parry), and Miss Ethel Oliver was much applauded in Bemberg's "Nymphs et Sylvains." The last item in the programme was the Love Scene of Catherine from Shakespeare's Henry V., ably acted by pupils of Miss Kate Rorke. Miss Joyce Francis made an attractive Catherine, and Mr. W. Bentley spoke his lines distinctly and with humour, while his gestures were graceful and appropriate, but a little more regal dignity as Henry V. would have been welcome. The little part of Alice was played by Miss Kathleen Roberts.

Chevalier A. Foa, of Paris, has gratuitously designed an artistic front cover for the programme of the Alexandra Palace amusements, and Messrs. Ede and Townsend, Ltd., of Southwark Bridge-buildings, S.E., have presented the process blocks. The trustees gratefully acknowledge the gifts.

"WHO IS SHE?"

Romantic Play, in Four Acts, by E. Hill-Mitchelson, Played for the First Time in London at the Lyric, Hammersmith, on Monday, March 15.

King Vladamis .....MR. GRAHAM WOODS
Prince Bora .....MR. E. HILL-MITCHELSON
Captain Arthur Sower ....MR. SINCLAIR HOLDEN
Sergeant Metroff .....MR. ALFRED GRENVILLE
Chang-Tee .....MR. EDWARD SWINTON
Paul .....MR. GEORGE SCULLY
Michael .....MR. LEI-HAIR
The Spy .....MR. C. H. HENDERSON
Sentry .....MR. HENRY GIBSON
Headsman .....MR. CYRIL MAITLAND
Father Petra .....MR. JAMES FURGUSON
The Little King .....MISS MABEL RONALD
"Who is She?" .....MISS VIOLET CARLYLE
Sarette .....MISS MARY COLLIER
Zeta Noveitch .....MISS MARIE ROBSON
Countess Ladori .....MISS ALICE BARBER

Mr. E. Hill-Mitchelson, the author of Who is She?—produced at the Hippodrome, Wigan, on Dec. 16, 1907—is not unknown as a playwright, having written Death or Glory Boys and other dramas which have enjoyed long runs in the provinces and the suburban theatres. There is action in abundance in his latest play, the many thrilling incidents and effective "curtains" revealing the hand of the practised writer for popular audiences. The action takes place in an unknown country in a state of rebellion. King and Queen and nearly all their faithful followers have been killed when the curtain rises, the first scene being the interior of an old inn near the frontier, where most of the principals come to seek refuge. The chivalrous Prince Vladamis is established King, and the cruel Prince Bora, the leader of the rebels, and his companion in duplicity, Zeta Noveitch, quickly reveal their evil designs. The lady who gives the play its title next comes on the scene, accompanied by Sergeant Metroff, one of the few faithful surviving soldiers of the late King. She refuses to reveal her identity, and eventually Vladamis promises to befriend her. A box supposed to contain her belongings is brought in, and when the coast is clear it is opened, and out steps the little King, the rightful heir to the throne. This is the youngster whom Bora is anxious to get out of the way, and his whereabouts and identity are unknown to all save the unknown lady. In the first scene of the next act she and the lad are almost starving, and she is about to sacrifice herself to Prince Bora in order to provide food for the little King when Vladamis offers to make her his wife. The next scene, the unknown woman's boudoir, is particularly fertile in sensation. Spies are on her track, and the whereabouts of the young King is suspected. She is aware she has been followed, and bids the faithful Metroff guard the door with his life, a command the loyal old soldier is only too happy to obey. When she and the boy have retired to rest Bora enters by the window, and peering through the arras and seeing Metroff removes that source of danger with a sword thrust. The unknown woman is silenced on her appearance with chloroform, and Bora then sets about to find the little King. The youngster, however, has profited by his pistol practice with Metroff, and wounds Bora in the wrist ere he is eventually removed to a place of safety. Vladamis also comes on the scene, and Bora makes it appear that he is his (Vladamis's) wife's paramour, incidentally making a cowardly attack on the hero's life. In the next act the identity of the little King—who is now dressed as a drummer boy—is nearly disclosed; and Vladamis, thinking his wife faithless, decides to annul the marriage. It should be mentioned that hero and heroine have been frequently helped out of difficulties by the cunning of a Chinese servant, Chang-Tee, who has been ill-treated by Bora, on whom he swears to be revenged. His ingenuity and resourcefulness are again conspicuous in the last scene of the third act, the Prison Grounds, and Vladamis and the unknown lady also have valuable friends in Captain Arthur Sower, a young Englishman, and the Countess Ladori, who disguise themselves as sentries, and thus frustrate Bora and Zeta Noveitch. In this scene we witness the death of the brave Metroff, who is shot by order of Bora, now in command, as Vladamis has abdicated. In the final act, Bora, who has given way to drink, quarrels with the woman who has stood by him in all his treachery, admitting that he loves the unknown woman and means to make her his mistress, eventually killing Zeta Noveitch. Chang-Tee gains admittance into the apartment, and drills a hole in the safe containing the death warrants of the young King and Vladamis, which he burns. In the end the little King, learning his power, is enabled to save Vladamis. Hero and heroine (who, it appears, is the daughter of the late Chief of the Police) are reunited, and the scheming Bora made captive, his own death-warrant being found attached to his coat.

The company responsible for the production—Mr. Hill-Mitchelson's—is an excellent one throughout, the author giving a particularly convincing portrayal of Prince Bora. There is nothing of the crafty or cunning villain about this relentless murderer, who stays his hand at nothing to remove any obstacle from his path, and Mr. Mitchelson's fine appearance and crisp and distinct delivery of his lines were exactly suited to the part, which it would be difficult to imagine more effectively enacted. The brave and generous Vladamis was undertaken in a manly and natural manner by Mr. Graham Woods, particularly praiseworthy being his handling of the scenes with the unknown woman; and the loyal and fearless Sergeant Metroff was a dignified, easy, and in every way satisfactory portrait as presented by Mr. Alfred Grenville, his scenes with the little King being especially well played. As the ubiquitous Chang-Tee Mr. Edward Swinton submitted a portrayal of the cunning Celestial which soon became popular, and on which he is to be highly complimented; Mr. Sinclair Holden played the timid lover, but brave soldier, Captain Sower, exactly as we should imagine the author intended; and Mr. George Scully, who largely contributed to the comic relief, drolly depicted the cowardice of the unfortunate servant Paul, his impersonation throughout of a rather difficult part being a very humorous one. Miss Violet Carlyle was a refined and natural representative of the title-rôle, admirably suggesting her love for the little King and Vladamis; Miss Alice Barber as the Countess Ladori was responsible for a quietly humorous and altogether admirable enactment; Miss Marie Robson as Zeta Noveitch quite realised that unhappy woman's devotion to Bora her share in the concluding scene with the Prince being excellently managed; Miss Mary Collier contributed valuably to the comic scenes by her bright and vivacious portrayal of the maid Sarette; and the little King was naturally and intelligently played by Miss Mabel Roland. The other characters were all admirably sustained. The play was excellently mounted, the handsome military uniforms and ladies' toilettes being much admired. The drama evidently gave great satisfaction to the Lyric audience on Monday, and their frequently-expressed approval augurs well for its continued success "on the road."

A WELL-ATTENDED concert was given at King Edward's Hall, Canonbury Tower, on Saturday evening, the programme being provided by the Standard Part Singers' Concert Party. The several quartettes were harmoniously rendered by Messrs. G. Morgan, E. Starkey, W. Clare, and W. Hamilton, and were well received. Miss Ethel Beetlestone's songs at the piano, admirably given, were greatly appreciated; Mr. Emil Clare and Mr. Will Hamilton also scored with humorous ditties; Mr. G. Morgan was applauded for his songs, "The Sergeant of the Line" and "Cheero"; and Mr. W. Clare deserves praise for his rendering of "In your dear eyes."

ACTORS' ASSOCIATION.

A council meeting of the Actors' Association was held at 353, Strand, on Tuesday, March 16. Mr. F. J. Arlton was in the chair, and amongst those present were Mr. H. W. Mote (honorary solicitor), Messrs. Clarence Derwent, Robson Paige, Sebastian Smith, Jackson Wilcox, and Clive Currie, Miss Rose Mathews, and Mr. Hubert Blount (secretary).

Mr. Paige asked the hon. solicitor as to the legality of the council continuing its sitting after a quorum had ceased to be in attendance, and the council asked Mr. Mote to draw up a resolution dealing with the matter to come up next Tuesday.

The chairman read a letter from a non-member asking as to a girl friend of his having paid a premium to join an unknown management, and the secretary received instructions to reply as follows: "In reply to your letter we know nothing of the syndicate and management you mention, but we would strongly impress upon you that in any case it is unwise to pay a premium to people personally unknown to you. We would like to add that we should regard with suspicion any manager offering 2 guineas a week to an artist who is making his or her first appearance."

A letter was read from Mr. Leonard Houghton tendering his resignation as hon. medical officer owing to his going to British Columbia, and recommending Dr. W. H. Marsden to act in his stead. A letter was also read from Mr. Chris. Walker recommending Dr. J. Murdock Brown as hon. medical officer to the A.A. The secretary received instructions to take the usual course in both cases.

John H. Mote and Sons reported having written five letters for members, interviewed two members, and advised another.

The Finance Committee's report was read and adopted. On the House Committee's report the council gave the secretary instructions to carry out repairs, but before doing so to get a written estimate.

With regard to the nomination of a ballet mistress the secretary received instructions to write to the candidate to the effect that her qualifications, as stated, did not permit her to become a member.

The following were elected: Elsie Goulding, proposed by Mark D. Draper, seconded by Ethel Russell; Marjorie Carey, proposed by Maud Kirwan, seconded by Dora Levis; Lionel Yaldwyn, proposed by A. Collins-Rolfe, seconded by Clive Currie; and Gwendoline Garland, proposed by Clarence Derwent, seconded by C. Hayden Coffin.

Miss Mathews brought up the subject of Mr. Harcourt's Bill, and the secretary received instructions to endeavour to obtain a copy of the measure.

The secretary reported that Mr. William Poel had called on him with regard to the representation of the dramatic profession on the list of Governors of the National Memorial, and received instructions to communicate with Mr. Raleigh on the subject.

ACTORS' UNION.

As only four members of the committee were able to attend on Friday last, no quorum was formed, and the meeting was adjourned till the 19th inst., when it is hoped that every member of the committee who can will attend. Members, when remitting cash to the office, are requested to register their letters and cross all postal orders and make them payable to the Actors' Union.

ALEXANDRA PALACE.

The Central Hall was crowded on Saturday with a loyal and enthusiastic audience assembled to do justice to the grand concert in celebration of the anniversary of the wedding of their Majesties, the King and Queen. The Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress and the Sheriffs of London attended in State, being supported by the Mayors of North London Boroughs and Chairmen of District Councils. The massed bands of H.M. Brigade of Guards, Grenadiers (conductor, Dr. A. Williams, Mus.Doc., Oxon, Second Lieutenant); Scots (conductor, Mr. F. W. Wood); Irish (conductor, Mr. C. H. Hassall); Coldstream (conductor, Dr. J. Mackenzie Rogan, Hon. R.A.M.), were in attendance.

The programme opened with recitals on the grand organ by Mr. G. D. Cunningham, the organist of the Alexandra Palace. Probably Wely's grand fantasia, "The Storm," evoked the most appreciable marks of approval. At eight o'clock the concert proper commenced with "God Save the King," the first verse being sung by Mme. Mary Conly, the second by Mme. Edna Thornton, and the third by the audience. The afore-named ladies afforded the respective vocal numbers during the evening, Mme. Mary Conly sweetly rendering Verdi's cavatina "Ernani, Ernani, involami," and Mme. Edna Thornton the aria, "Softly, awakes my heart," for both of which efforts the artists had the pleasing compulsion of submitting an encore. The grand overture "Solonnelle" ("1812"), with the usual pyrotechnic effects by Messrs. James Pain and Son, was as enthusiastically received as ever; and Jullian's "British Army Quadrilles," with over half a century's record behind it, had lost none of its popularity. The assistance rendered by the drums and Fifes of H.M. 2nd Scots Guards and H.M. 2nd Coldstream Guards, and the pipers of H.M. 2nd Scots Guards, left nothing wanting to make the concluding number on the programme a most successful and realistic effort.

PROVINCIAL THEATRICAL MANAGERS.

MR. JAMES LANGDON LEE.

The popular manager of the Theatre Royal, Plymouth, Mr. James Langdon Lee, drifted into theatrical management by accident rather than design. Had he followed the career which had been mapped out for him he would now doubtless be a priest of high degree. With a view to entering the Roman Catholic Church Mr. Lee was trained at a Jesuit College in Ireland, and at St. Edmund's, Ware, in Herts. But destiny determined otherwise.

Ten years ago Mr. Lee was permitted to "walk on" in pantomime at the Theatre Royal, Plymouth, then leased by Mr. C. F. Williams. He walked off again with the conviction that to appreciate acting is one thing and to achieve it is quite another. The result of his initial association with the Theatre Royal, however, was that Mr. Williams offered him the post of assistant-acting-manager. With no experience, but with strong natural aptitude, young Mr. Lee entered upon his new calling. Some three years after his début the Theatre Royal was acquired by another syndicate, and Mr. Lee went with Mr. Williams, in the same capacity, to the Grand Theatre, Stonehouse. By diligent attention to duty Mr. Lee rose steadily to that standard of administrative efficiency which fits him to direct the affairs of a first-class playhouse.

After a brief absence Mr. C. F. Williams returned to the Theatre Royal, under changed conditions of proprietorship. He finally retired some two years ago, and the remaining directors then unanimously appointed Mr. Langdon Lee as resident-manager, a post he has filled with great success. Many brilliant bookings stand to his credit, he having introduced to Plymouth playgoers for the first time such eminents artists as Sir John Hare and Mr. Arthur Bourchier, and secured return visits from most of the leading stars on tour. Mr. Lee, in conjunction with Mr. Bannister Howard, arranged the production of the recent pantomime Cinderella, which beat all existent records as a money-maker at the Theatre Royal.

Mr. Langdon Lee is still comparatively young, and measured by the success of his career thus far his future should be fraught with the promise of big things in theatrical management.

"PLAYS OF OUR FOREFATHERS," by Charles Mills Gayley, which has been recently published in London by Messrs. Chatto and Windus, is an attempt to interest the reading public in the mediæval drama, not only as an instance of the development of literary art, but as a chronicle of the ideas and traditions, the religious consciousness, the romance and humour of times that seem to be remote. After describing the origin of the mediæval drama, Mr. Gayley deals with the evolution of Liturgical plays, the "invasion of the humorous," the Boy Bishop and St. Nicholas plays; and, finally, after other learned excursions, leads us up to the famous Miracle Plays and Mysteries. All these subjects are treated with vast knowledge, and are carefully and elaborately described. The illustrations are numerous and excellent, most of them being quaint reproductions from ancient engravings, full of the naïf oddity of old times, and unintentionally comical and curious. The book will be read with avidity by those who take interest in the drama of the period of which the author treats so exhaustively.

"GOING ON PARADE."

A Play, in One Act, by H. M. Richardson, Produced for the First Time on any Stage by Miss Horniman's Company at the Gaiety Theatre, Manchester, on Monday, March 15.

Mrs. O'Horan .....MISS MARY SAKER
Mrs. Tyms .....MISS LOUISE HOLBROOK
Mr. Tyms .....MR. EDWARD LANDOR
Mr. Richards .....MR. HENRY AUSTIN

Mr. H. M. Richardson's new one-act play, Going on Parade, depicts a corner in slum life with an amount of realism that is almost too quietly typical to be dramatically effective. There is much sordid excitement in slums, and doubtless much rough humanity and bitter pathos, for the budding dramatist to work upon if he would be really dramatic; but Mr. Richardson has chosen a few typical figures within a typical court by way of mere setting for a quiet episode which is rather sentimental in the author's brain than pathetic in the central figure he creates. Mrs. O'Horan is a typical Irishwoman who has lost an unimaginably good husband ("rest his sowl!"); Mrs. Tyms is typical of the fighting, broad-beamed, beery, half-dressed Englishwoman; and Mr. Tyms is a good specimen of the dirty British workman who seldom works, who is not unwilling to thrash his wife on the slightest provocation, and whose ideas of congenial employmen lie in the direction of tobacco and beer. The fourth personage is Mr. Richards (owd Dick), whose wife is dead and whose son was killed in the war. Richards mends shoes and sells gingerbeer. But times are bad, and the landlord has given him notice to quit. There is nothing for the old soldier but the workhouse. The bursting of a bottle of gingerbeer is meant as a premonition; his sentimental appreciation of many little kindnesses of his uncouth neighbours has a ring of farewell; and his distribution of the remaining bottles of gingerbeer—all that are left of his wife's last brew—has also a doleful significance; to all of which is added a sort of sentimental wandering of the mind, such as comes to a dying person. The old man comes forth wearing a soldier's coat and cap and carrying a gun. He is "going on parade." But the neighbours persuade him to return indoors. Presently there is a sharp report. It is not gingerbeer this time: "owd Dick" has shot himself. The theme is invested with much sympathy, and the author's sentimental fancy expresses itself further in the idea of the linnet in its cage by Richard's door and the release of the little bird preceding the more tragic release of the old soldier who could not face the workhouse. But it is not very easy to believe in Richards at all, though Mr. Henry Austin's rendering of the idea was quietly and sympathetically done. The others were real enough. Miss Louise Holbrook as Mrs. Tyms was painfully natural; Mr. Edward Landor was perfect as Tyms; and Miss May Saker's Mrs. O'Horan was sufficiently true to life. The piece, however, lacks movement, and is indicative of a narrative rather than a dramatic gift in the author. It might make an effective story.

UNACTED AUTHORS' SOCIETY.

The above society was renamed the Playwrights' Association at a general meeting held under the chairmanship of Mr. William Haviland at the Eustace Miles Restaurant on Monday.

Amongst those who have promised to become patrons are Messrs. Cyril Maude, Robt. Courtneidge, William Haviland, C. Aubrey Smith, Allan Aynesworth, Gerald Du Maurier, Lyall Swete, Henry Ainley, F. R. Benson, H. V. Esmond, and Norman V. Norman, Miss Irene Vanbrugh, Miss Rosina Filippi, and Miss Nancy Price. Mr. Dion Boucicault has also promised assistance.

Mr. THORPE MAYNE (the hon. secretary) said that altogether they had heard from 120 people, including one in France, who had membership in view.

Officers were elected and two committees appointed. Messrs. Cyril Maude, C. Aubrey Smith, and Allan Aynesworth were chosen as readers, they having promised to read plays submitted and give a written criticism.

There was considerable discussion over the title of the Association. Eventually the title chosen was the Playwrights' Association.

Mr. WILLIAM HAVILAND said that he had never sent back a play unread, and this was true of other managers. Still the society would bring pressure to bear, and if it could find a really fine play it would soon be produced.

The rules which were agreed upon provided that plays sent in to the reading committee must be unsigned, but accompanied by a sealed envelope enclosing the author's name. The entrance fee has been fixed at 10s. 6d. and the annual subscription at £1 1s. Those plays which pass both the committee and the readers will be either submitted to managers or produced by the society. All productions will be at matinées, and may be private or open to the public at reduced prices. No translations from a foreign author, unless he is a member and one of the "unacted," will be entertained. No play is to be produced which would be prohibited by the Censor, and in the case of those which are put on for a run through the society the author is to pay the society 5 per cent. of the royalties received during the first run.

"ARE 'YOU' THE MAN?" a play, in four acts, by Frank Price, was produced for copyright purposes at the Royal County Theatre, Reading, on Saturday, March 13.

THE PLAY ACTORS.

Four new one-act plays were produced on Sunday evening by the Play-Actors' at the Court Theatre, and it is pleasant to be able to state that each item on the programme contained some merit. The opening piece was an East-End Episode, by Sybil Noble.

"SAWNEY,"

Mrs. Jenks .....MISS CLARE GREET
Mr. Jenks .....MR. WILLIAM PRINGLE
Katie .....MISS FLORRIE LEWIS
Tommy .....MASTER D'OYLY SHEPPARD
Mrs. Gort .....MISS LILLIAN TWEED
Sawney .....MISS SYBIL NOBLE

Mrs. Jenks is a working woman who possesses what may be characterised as "feline propensities." In other words, Mrs. Jenks would be described by members of her own sex as a "catty" woman. Her out-of-work husband, whom she supports as well as her two children, has had goodly experience of the quality of her acrimonious tongue. So has poor Sawney, an unpaid drudge of a girl, whose life is rendered perfectly wretched by Mrs. Jenks's treatment. Mr. Jenks has decided that he has had quite enough of his too-attentive spouse, and he has, unknown to her, accepted a situation in Canada. During Mrs. Jenks's absence he leaves the house, taking Sawney's carpet-bag with him, previously arranging to take the girl with him, the two to meet a few hours later. Upon Mrs. Jenks's return the hitherto complacent Sawney proves quite refractory, and even refuses to wash down the steps, and she tells her mistress that the "lady" to whom she has lent her bag has taken her into her service. The children, however, love Sawney, and she loves them. Other considerations come to the girl's mind, she once more becomes the obedient drudge, and the appointment with Jenks is relinquished. Miss Sybil Noble, the authoress, gives us in this piece several interesting character-studies, enacting the rôle of the disconsolate Sawney in a manner that is worthy of all praise. Miss Clare Greet is sufficiently vicious as Mrs. Jenks; and other able studies are furnished by Mr. William Pringle as Mr. Jenks and Miss Lillian Tweed as Mrs. Gort, a neighbour.

The second piece was

"THE APPLE,"
by Inez Bensusan.

Ann Payson .....MISS WINIFRED MAYO
Helen Payson .....MISS ADELINE BOURNE
Cyril Payson .....MR. P. PERCEVAL CLARK
Nigel Dean .....MR. ERNEST YOUNG

"The Apple" is the nickname given to a lackadaisical young gentleman, who is permitted every opportunity of enjoying himself and generally taking life easily, while his two sisters have to drudge for a livelihood—one as a typist and the other as the domestic worker in the home. The typist sister, Helen Payson, who is in the same employment as her father and brother, rebels, intimates her intention of going out to Canada, and threatens to demand her share of the money that has been left for the three. Cyril, her brother, wants the whole of it in order to assist him in a good "match," and in the end Helen has to consent to sacrifice herself. Miss Adeline Bourne acted spiritedly and with considerable feeling in the rôle of Helen Payson, Mr. P. Perceval Clarke furnished a really capital portraiture of the selfish brother; and Miss Winifred Mayo was bright and good-humoured as the sister who busied herself with the affairs of the home.

"DARRACOTT'S WIFE,"
by Affleck Scott and Alan Carmichael.

Will Darracott .....MR. JACKSON WILCOX
Bess .....MISS WINIFRED RAE
A Revenue Officer ....MR. GEORGE FITZGERALD

Will Darracott is a smuggler, and he has the most loyal-hearted wife a man could desire. She succeeds in putting a revenue officer off the scent while her husband is away on one of his dangerous nocturnal enterprises, and when he returns by way of a secret passage, and prepares to make an escape, she attempts to divert the attention of the revenue men from her husband by donning his overall and walking out into the darkness. Her act of loyalty is rewarded by a shot, which proves fatal. Miss Winifred Rae was seen in an admirable study of the plucky little wife, and other rôles were suitably handled.

"A QUESTION OF IDENTITY,"
by Archie J. Matthew.

Sykes .....MR. LEONARD CALVERT
Rev. Aloysius Brown .....MR. FARREN SOUTAR
A Householder .....MR. EDWARD JAMES

This is an amusing playlet, which might well be given a place in a West-End programme. Sykes is on the point of removing his swag—consisting of a sack of silver plate—when footsteps are heard, and a gentleman in clerical garb, carrying his boots in his hands, enters. The Rev. Aloysius Brown—for so the reverend gentleman's name is given on the programme—is immediately covered by Sykes's revolver, and of course has to do as Sykes desires, the latter taking him for a brother burglar; while Brown protests that he is a harmless curate who has got into the wrong house. An entertaining conversation between the two—which leads one to believe that Brown is precisely what he describes himself to be—is interrupted by sounds, the lights are hastily switched off, and when turned on again we see the curate engaged in a desperate struggle with the householder, who is secured to a chair. Brown seizes an opportunity of getting possession of Sykes's revolver, and, that accomplished, he flings the sack of silver over his shoulder, and takes his departure, leaving Sykes aghast at his audacity.

In this piece the author very cleverly leads the audience, by implication, to believe that Brown is really a clergyman, and it is not until Brown goes away with the booty that the audience realise the real nature of his profession. Mr. Farren Soutar was delightfully suave and good-mannered as the seemingly complacent curate; and Mr. Leonard Calvert was distinctly good as the rough-cut burglar of the old school. Indeed, the contrast between the two thieves—one clumsy and uneducated, the other at any rate possessing the veneer of gentlemanly culture—was made very distinct by Mr. Matthew's commendable character-drawing.

TRINITY COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

The students' concert on Monday evening commenced with a neat performance of Widor's Toccata in F, from Fifth Symphony, Op. 42, No. 1, for organ, by Mr. William J. Comley. In Elgar's "A Song of Autumn" Miss Hilda Mayston displayed in her singing much intelligence; while Miss Vera Steel was equally successful in Mendelssohn's song, "On Wings of Song." Miss Mabel Gidden, set down for a violin solo of Wieniawski's Capriccio Valse in B, was, through influenza, unable to appear. Master Edward Mitchell, in his pianoforte solo of "Waldesrauchen" (Liszt), was heartily applauded; and Miss Gladys Whitaker, another clever pianist, was very successful in Schumann's "Des Abends" and "Grillen." F. Clay's once-popular song, "She wandered down the Mountain Side," was well rendered by Miss Edith Davis; while the excellent baritone voice of Mr. Leslie A. Betts gave effect to Lully's song "Sombre Words." After "The Rosary" and "In my Garden," cleverly sung by Miss Grace Trundle, Miss Bertha Tomlin, Miss Rachie Smith, and Mr. Walter Britton, members of Dr. Gordon Saunders Chamber Music class, gave Harvey Lohr's Trio Adagio-Rondo (Allegro vivace) with good results, the Adagio being particularly well played.

MISS GEORGIE CORLASS finished a successful engagement in Butterflies on March 6. She was the recipient from the members of the company of lovely bouquets, which she greatly appreciated.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

Mr. Beerbohm Tree has decided upon the evening of April 7 as the occasion of his revival of The School for Scandal. All the characters have now been allotted, and the full cast will consist of Mr. Tree as Sir Peter Teazle, Mr. Edward Terry as Crabtree, Mr. Hermann Vezin as Rowley, Miss Marie Löhr as Lady Teazle, Miss Ellis Jeffreys as Lady Sneerwell, Mr. Henry Neville as Sir Oliver Surface, Mr. Robert Cunningham as Sir Harry Bumper, Mr. Henry V. Esmond as Sir Benjamin Backbite, Mr. Basil Gill as Joseph Surface, Mr. Robert Loraine as Charles Surface, Mr. Charles Quartermaine as Careless, Mr. James Hearn as Snake, Mr. Lionel Brough as Moses, Mr. Godfrey Tearle as Trip; Miss Suzanne Sheldon as Mrs. Candour, and Miss Dagmar Wiehe as Maria.

Mr. George Alexander had a full house despite the inclement weather on Sunday afternoon when he gave at the St. James's Theatre a reading of Mr. Stephen Phillips's poetic tragedy, Paolo and Francesca. The reading was delivered in connection with the Sunday Lecture Society. The interior of a mediæval hall was the scene set for the occasion, and the auditorium being darkened Mr. Alexander read seated at an antique writing table, by the light of a shaded lamp. His highly dramatic rendering of the tragedy delighted all. Mr. Percy Pitt's incidental music was played by the orchestra, and the choral effects were rendered "off" by the students of the Royal College of Music. Mr. Alexander has been elected chairman of the Public Control Committee of the London County Council.

Mr. Oscar Asche and Miss Lily Brayton produced at the Prince's, Bristol, on Thursday, with complete success, the adaptation of Stanley Wyman's novel, entitled Count Hannibal. The piece was received with tumultuous applause by an appreciative audience, which packed the house, and followed every point in the play with absorbing interest. Undoubtedly both Mr. Asche and Miss Brayton have scored another personal triumph. The audience was deeply thrilled during the daring and touching love scenes between Count Hannibal and Clotilde. Mr. Asche's power as a lover of the forceful type is well known. After the dagger and sword fight between Mr. Asche and Mr. Souper the curtain was raised again and again. The Massacre of the Huguenots was a masterpiece of stage-management; and Mr. Christopher Wilson's music, specially composed for the play, was deservedly applauded. The beautiful Louvre Palace scene was greatly admired.

Mr. Arthur Bourchier will celebrate this evening the first half-century of Samson, which seems destined to run beyond the season at the Garrick. Mr. Bourchier has in the title-part one of the most remarkable of his career, and his artistic performance should be missed by none.

The Society of West End Theatre Managers had under discussion on Wednesday Mr. William Willet's Daylight Saving Bill. Among those present were Mr. Tree, Mr. George Alexander, Mr. Robert Courtneidge, Mr. Lewis Waller, Mr. William Greet, Mr. Vedrenne, and Mr. Lestocq, representing Mr. Charles Frohman. The opinion was expressed that the measure, if passed, would be distinctly injurious to theatrical business, and it was unanimously resolved to present a petition against it to the Committee of the House of Commons, and, further, to request the Prime Minister to receive a deputation on the subject.

Miss Ethel Irving will join Mr. J. E. Vedrenne's management when she finishes her engagement at the Haymarket. Mr. Vedrenne is negotiating for a suitable West-end theatre for Miss Irving, and has secured several plays for her. The season, which will commence early in the autumn, will in no way interfere with Mr. Vedrenne's partnership with Mr Lewis Waller.

Mr. Arthur Collins has kindly lent Drury Lane for a matinée, under the direction of Mr. Cyril Maude and Mr. Collins, on Tuesday, May 11, in aid of the Queen Alexandra Sanatorium at Davos, for patients suffering from any form of pulmonary disease. The generosity of members of the theatrical profession, who are continually giving their services in the cause of charity, is to a certain extent to be reciprocated, for in return for every £500 gained by the matinée, a bedroom in the building will be placed at the disposal of the dramatic profession.

The Queen has already graciously intimated her intention of taking a box, and Lord Rothschild has sent a cheque for £50 for another box. All the leading actors and actresses of both the theatrical and music-hall professions will appear, including Sir Charles Wyndham, Sir John Hare, Mr. Beerbohm Tree, Mr. George Alexander, Mr. Cyril Maude, Mr. Arthur Bourchier, Miss Winifred Emery, Miss Marie Tempest, and some of the leading artists of the operatic world. A souvenir, consisting of literary contributions by some of our leading dramatic authors and actors, and original drawings by well-known artists, is in preparation.

The cost of the building will be something over £36,000, and Lord Balfour of Burleigh, the president of the sanatorium, and the council have already raised the sum of £30,000, leaving a balance of £6,000 yet to be obtained before the institution can be opened, which it is hoped will be done early in the autumn. It is the earnest desire of Her Majesty that this sanatorium should be opened free of all debt, and it is anticipated the matinée will contribute substantially towards that end.

The last meeting of the Theatres Alliance was held on a special date to enable the members to adjourn to attend on a deputation before the L.C.C. on the question of the Water Board's impositions, particularly in respect to hydrants, this being a matter on which members of the Alliance feel very strongly. All efforts to get the Water Board to meet theatre and music hall proprietors in what they consider to be a fair and reasonable spirit having failed, the matter is shortly to come before the Courts in what is practically a test case in that the Water Board have taken proceedings against a member of the Alliance. Into the merits of the case one way or the other we cannot, of course, go at the moment; but the irony of the Water Board's claims is obvious, as, whatever may be their strict legal rights, having made the full statutory charge and given the minimum statutory allowance they claim an extra payment for each hydrant.

The question of the employment of children in theatres and the unreasonable attitude of certain magistrates is another matter that the Theatres Alliance are actively dealing with, letters on this subject having been addressed to the Home Secretary as well as to other officials. It is a matter that cannot be dealt with without legislation, but nothing can be more inconvenient and annoying than the present system under which a touring company has to obtain a licence for a child in each town and be subject to the whim of this or that local magistrate, with a prejudice, perhaps, against the theatre altogether. The Alliance rightly contends that once inquiry has been made and proper undertakings given and safeguards established, a licence should be available for a certain given period and area.

Mr. George Bancroft has resigned his appointment of Administrator of the Academy of Dramatic Art, and retires with the "warm thanks" of the council for his services. He has held the position successfully since 1906, when the Academy was taken over from Mr. Tree by its council, having, prior to that period, been its secretary from the date of its foundation by Mr. Tree in 1904. The result of Mr. Bancroft's management has been that the institution is in the proud position of being entirely self-supporting and without a creditor; while in the space of two years, independently of any outside assistance, it was able completely to discharge its large debt to Mr. Tree for its lease and furniture in Gower-street. Upon the artistic side, also, the Academy has undoubtedly justified its existence and proved its usefulness. A scheme of training was organised with a view to a combination of that obtaining at the Paris Conservatoire with the old stock company system here. Some of the dramatic work has been conducted under the direction of an admirable staff of instructors, comprising Miss Rosina Filippi, Miss Gertrude Burnett, Mr. E. Lyall Swete, and Mr. J. Fisher White; while many performances have been given by the students without any tuition with a view of developing their self-reliance, and have been voluntarily criticised and corrected by Sir Squire and Lady Bancroft, Sir William Gilbert, Mr. Forbes-Robertson, Mr. E. S. Willard, Mr. Henry Ainley, Mr. Dion Boucicault, Mr. Gerald du Maurier, Mr. Norman Forbes, Mr. Lyn Harding, Mr. Martin Harvey, and Mr. H. B. Irving.

The outcome of this training has been that, to take an isolated case only, as many as sixty different characters of varied types have been played by one student during a period of fifty weeks' instruction. During Mr. Bancroft's five years' work in the Academy over 500 aspirants to the stage have passed through his hands, many of whom have already proved themselves valuable recruits to the theatrical profession. The council have lately decided to grant annually a limited number of certificates of two classes, to be signed by the president and two members of the council: (1) Certificate of Honour (being the highest prize given by the Academy) for general industry and distinguished merit; (2) Certificate of Merit for general industry and proficiency. Certificates of Honour have been awarded by the council to Mr. Reginald Owen, Miss Mary Barton, Mr. H. G. Bentley, and Miss Athene Seyler; and Certificates of Merit for 1908 to Miss Gladys Dale, Miss Sylvia Dryhurst, Miss Sibyl Mockett, Miss Pearl Timberlake, Mr. Lane Crauford, and Mr. Wilfred Fletcher

Mrs. Cooper, the late wife of Mr. Sidney Cooper, of the Lyceum Theatre, Newport, was buried on Tuesday at Christchurch Cemetery. The burial service was read by the Rev. D. J. Sproule, of St. Mark's, Newport. The mourners were Mr. Sidney Cooper, Miss Cooper (sister-in-law), Mr. Harry Surman and Mr. Frank Potter (nephews), Mr. E. H. Willey, Mr. George Ventom, Mr. George Gratton, Mr. E. H. Bull, and Mr. J. de Rees. The body was borne to the grave by four members of the theatre staff—Messrs. R. Gwynne, C. Gwynne, A. Smith, and T. Maggs. Amongst those who sent wreaths were Mr. Sidney Cooper, whose wreath was in the form of a lifebelt with the words "Good-bye" in violets; Martha and Alice (sisters-in-law), "With deepest sympathy"; Mr. and Mrs. Lyn Harding, "With deepest sympathy"; Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Willey, "With sincere sympathy"; The Flag Lieutenant Company; the William Mollison Shakespearean Company; Mrs. de Rees and family, "With deepest sympathy"; Mrs. Grattan and family, "R.I.P."; Grannie, the Lyceum stage staff, "With deepest sympathy"; the Lyceum Orchestra, "With deepest sympathy"; Florrie, "With deepest sympathy"; the Front Staff of the Lyceum, "With deep sympathy"; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Arthur (London), "With deepest sympathy"; and Major Gallagher and family, "With deepest sympathy."

Mr. George Graves is generously interesting himself on behalf of the chorus and stage-hands of Miss Dressler's company, who are suffering from the failure of the enterprise, subscriptions to the amount of £91 having already been raised chiefly through his exertions. Among the contributors to the fund are Mr. Brandon Thomas, Mr. Bransby Williams, Mr. H. G. Pélissier, Mr. Richard Golden, Mr. Paul Rubens, and Mr. Frank Curzon. The Eccentric Club, the members of which had already subscribed £45, also made a grant of 5 guineas from its benevolent fund.

A new theatre, to be called King Edward's Theatre, is to be erected in Shaftesbury-avenue. The site selected is at the Oxford-street end of the Avenue, and the house will be designed to hold between 2,000 and 3,000 people. At the head of the enterprise, which will be run on the principle of "popular prices," with romantic drama, is Mr. William Holles, who has had an extensive experience both in London and the provinces. He has secured a number of plays, one entitled The Queen of Sheba, by Messrs. Arthur Shirley and Ben Landeck, another by Mr. George R. Sims and Mr. Shirley, a third by Mr. Sims alone, a piece by the late Mr. Robert Buchanan, called Father Anthony, and one dealing with the career of Garibaldi, by Messrs. Sutton Vane and Arthur Shirley.

Miss Ethel Barrymore, the popular actress who is touring Lady Frederick in America, was married at the Church of the Most Precious Blood, near Boston, on Sunday, to Mr. R. Griswold Colt, son of Colonel Pomeroy Colt, a well-known millionaire. The bride, who was born in Philadelphia, made her first appearance on the stage in 1894 at the Empire Theatre, New York. She came to England in 1897, her first part in London being that of Miss Kittridge in Secret Service at the Adelphi. Later she appeared at the Lyceum with the late Sir Henry Irving, playing Euphrosine in Peter the Great. Her last part in London was that of Cynthia, in the play of that name, produced at Wyndham's, in the May of 1904.

Besides being popular with English audiences, Mrs. Colt has a claim upon the esteem of older London playgoers from the fact that she is the daughter of the late Maurice Barrymore, who appeared at the Haymarket during the period of 1884-6, playing Count Orloff in Diplomacy, Ernest Vane in Masks and Faces, Belvawney in Engaged, and Louis Percival in Jim the Penman; and creating Dr. Basil North in Dark Days and Paul Devereux in Najezda, of which he was the author. Later he went to America. Mrs. Colt is also the niece of the eminent American actor John Drew. As soon as her professional tour is completed, Mrs. Colt and her husband will leave for England, prior to embarking on a motor-car trip through Europe.

M. Adolphe Brisson, the well-known Parisian dramatic critic, is to deliver one of the Berlitz lectures in the Grafton Galleries on the afternoon of the 31st inst. Mr. Beerbohm Tree and Mr. T. P. O'Connor, M.P., are inviting the principal dramatic critics of London and leading representatives of the drama to meet M. Brisson at supper in the Garrick Club on the same night.

Mr. F. M. Paget, who, after a long and distinguished career on the stage, has retired and now lives in Windsor, delighted the audience at the Windsor Fire Brigade cinematograph entertainment the other evening by an excellent and appropriate recitation, "A Fireman's Love," his elocution and dramatic delivery being alike admirable. In response to an enthusiastic recall, Mr. Paget recited "The Portrait."

Mr. Edward Compton on Tuesday last entertained his company at the Globe Hotel, Paisley, to celebrate the twenty-eighth anniversary of the Compton Comedy company. During supper, at which Mr. Compton presided, and after he had proposed the health of "The King," Mr. J. H. Savile, who was many years ago Mr. Compton's manager, and, with his wife, is always present at the yearly supper, proposed, in his usual felicitous manner, the health of the host, "The Guv'nor," to which Mr. Compton responded at length and very wittily. After supper songs, recitations, &c., were indulged in by the members of the company, Mr. Compton himself contributing two songs and two exceedingly funny Irish character sketches, and Mr. Savile sang a clever parody on "A White Man" very complimentary to Mr. Compton's genius. The proceedings terminated at an early hour with "Auld Lang Syne."

The votes and interest of Masonic brethren in the May election are invited on behalf of John Fitzgerald, for many years musical director of the Strand and Toole's Theatres. Mr. Fitzgerald was a members of the Pythagorean Lodge (No. 79) from the year 1862 until 1900, and is a Life Governor of the institution with four votes. Among those by whom the case is strongly recommended are V.W. Bro. Edward Terry, P.G.T., V.W. Bro. W. S. Penley, P.G.T., W. Bro. Sir Squire Bancroft, P.G.D., W. Bro. Henry G. Neville, P.A.G.D.C., W. Bro. John H. Barnes, P.M., and W. Bro. W. Lestocq, P.M. Proxies may be forwarded to Mr. Thomas Fraser, 37, Threadneedle-street, E.C.; Mr. J. Percy Fitzgerald, "Lindacre," Balmoral-road, Cricklewood, N.W.; and to Mr. F. H. Pedgrift, c/o The Era Office.

Mr. Oscar Asche and Miss Lily Brayton achieved the distinction of breaking all records last week at the New Grand Opera House, Oldham, where they presented The Taming of the Shrew and (for one night only) Othello. At the finish of the performance on Saturday night, there were loud and continued cries of "Speech." Mr. Asche thanked the vast audience on behalf of his wife, Miss Lily Brayton, himself, and the members of the company, for the enthusiasm shown that night and during the week. It was his first visit to Oldham, and he hoped that in about 18 months, after his return from Australia, they would pay another. He would then present something entirely new which he hoped would please them as well as The Taming of the Shrew.

At the anniversary of the West Central Jewish Working Girls' Club, to be held at the New Royalty Theatre on Sunday, March 28, the members of the dramatic class, under the direction of Mr. Sivori Levey, will perform, in costume, Mahmud the Sultan, a tragedy adapted by Mr. Levey from "Hellas," by Shelley.

"The Ways of Men," a play in four acts, and Living in a Flat, a comedietta, both by Albert Ward, were produced for copyright purposes at the Grand Theatre and Opera House, West Hartlepool, on March 11.

"The Song of Liberty," a romantic drama in three acts by Mary C. Rowsell and H. A. Saintsbury, is in preparation for a trial performance during April at a West-End theatre. The drama is based on Lamartine's account of the composition of the "Marseillaise," by Rouget de l'Isle, and the recurring choruses of the air enhance the effect of the stirring details which take place during the height of the "Terror."

"Strife," John Galsworthy's fine play, now being successfully given at matinées at the Duke of York's, will this evening figure in the bill at the Haymarket, with the same cast. The piece will run until the end of the week, with special matinées on Wednesday and Saturday.

M. Auguste van Biene opens his new theatre at Blackpool on Easter Monday. The first contract signed was that with his son's company in Walter Howard's popular play Man and Wife, which Mr. Edward van Biene is touring in conjunction with Mr. John F. Traynor.

Miss Louie Adair has happily recovered from her serious illness lasting since January, and will take up the part of the heroine in The Heathen and the Christian on Monday next.

Miss Rose Moncrieff made her reappearance after her accident last Monday at the Opera House, Treherbert, but had to announce to the audience that she would have to go through her performance with her arm in splints.

"Another Man's Wife," recently produced at the Queen's, Liverpool, is to be toured by Mr. Fred Granville, owing to the success it achieved. The tour opens at the Star, Swansea, on Monday next, and will be under the direction of Mr. Leonard Aardale, who is retained for his original part. The scenery is being built at the Granville Studio, and includes five elaborate sets from the brush of Mr. A. Linton. A full plant of printing is being supplied by the leading firms.

General satisfaction will be given to the friends of Mr. Geo. T. Minshull and to the play-going public of Edinburgh on learning that he has been appointed a director of Messrs. Howard and Wyndham, Ltd. Mr. Minshull's wide experience, both as an actor and a manager, has been of the greatest value to the company, and during his many years' residence in Edinburgh he has endeared himself by his courtesy and his kindness in various philanthropic movements to all classes. At a special meeting of the Edinburgh Pen and Pencil Club on Tuesday last, the chairman, Dr. Cattanach, took occasion to congratulate Mr. Minshull on his well-deserved preferment.

"The Garden of the Gods," which is being played by Mr. George Lestocq and company, has proved such a success that the authors and composer have decided to write a two-act musical play dealing with Greek mythology. Mr. Lestocq has secured the first refusal of the rights in London and the provinces.

Mr. Philip Currie's rehearsal company will on the 4th prox. (Palm Sunday) perform at the Rehearsal Theatre, Maiden-lane, a new play by Ina Rozant entitled A Stage Name, and also The Taming of the Shrew, with which Mr. Currie made such a big hit at the West London Theatre last year. A string band will play some special music composed by J. Airlie Dix.

The 300th night of The Flag Lieutenant was celebrated at the Playhouse on Wednesday, when the clever play was received with enthusiasm by a crowded audience. As the event coincided with St. Patrick's Day, Mr. Cyril Maude presented each member of the audience with a sprig of shamrock intertwined with lilies of the valley.

Miss Julia James, who is appearing as Lady Sybil in Our Miss Gibbs at the Gaiety, was the victim of burglars on Tuesday, when her house in Bloomsbury-street was broken into and valuable jewellery and more than £30 in notes and gold stolen. Miss James lives with her mother and brother, who both went to a theatre on the evening in question, leaving only the servants in the house. The burglars broke open a bedroom door and carried away a safe, from which they took six diamond rings, eight brooches, three diamond pendants, diamond and emerald earrings, a gold watch, a ruby and enamel locket, £17 in gold, and a number of Bank of England notes.

The creditors of Miss Marie Dressler, the American comedienne, whose season at the Aldwych Theatre came to a disastrous end after ten days, held a private meeting on Monday at the offices of her solicitors, Messrs. Slark, Edwards, and Co., Southampton-row. Miss Dressler's liabilities were stated at the meeting to be, according to her own estimate, approximately £2,000. The assets were about £600, consisting of cash at the bank, money at libraries for seats booked, and £600 the estimated value of the production of Philopoena. The household furniture which she possessed was subject to a charge executed some time ago. Her jewellery she sold to raise money to pay salaries to the artists.

Several of the creditors said their claims were greater than the amounts stated. Certain of the artists had been engaged for some weeks, and a considerable claim for salaries might arise. The artists' claims had not been included in the estimated liabilities. There was also due £200 rent for the theatre. When Miss Dressler came to this country, it was also stated, she had several thousands of pounds, all of which had been lost. The solicitors said they were authorised to make the proposal that Miss Dressler, who was not well enough to attend, should set aside 25 per cent. of her future earnings up to £1,500, which with the assets would pay the creditors 20s. in the pound. The meeting was adjourned.

Messrs. Jay and Mann open their season at the Palace Theatre, Brighton, which has been redecorated and recarpeted, on Monday next, with the attractive engagement of Mr. Edward Terry and his répertoire company. The new management have made several innovations, the most important of which is that the pier toll is now free to theatre-goers. Matinées will be given five days in each week by the Will-o'-the-Wisps, an excellent company of vaudeville entertainers, for whom Mr. S. Sherrington Chinn is responsible. The Saturday matinée in each week is given over to the theatrical company performing at night.

Some of the best and latest combinations have been secured or are in negotiation. Miss Marie Lloyd appears for Goodwood week with her own company; and Butterflies, The Flag Lieutenant, Miss Hook of Holland, The Catch of the Season, The Country Girl, and other up-to-date attractions are included in the bookings. The Palace orchestra (in uniform), under the direction of Mr. Julian Rutt, will officiate at all performances. Mr. Herbert Austin has been appointed the business manager for Messrs. Jay and Mann.

The Eccentric Club annual ladies' afternoon concert will take place at the Hotel Cecil on Tuesday, April 6, when a most attractive programme will be presented. The function is always a pleasant one, and the Eccentrics are excellent caterers for the amusement of their guests.

Mr. Stephen Fiske, the doyen of American critics, who joined the Savage Club in 1867, when the late Andrew Halliday, the dramatist of Drury Lane, was president, has been re-elected to active membership.

Messrs. Jay and Mann will start their first company of An Englishman's Home, by special arrangement with Mr. Frank Curzon, on March 29. The demand for dates for this play is so large that it is impossible to reply individually at the moment. An important cast has been secured, and the piece goes out mounted and played with full effects, exactly as at Wyndham's Theatre.

Mr. T. Edward Ward's next big production is to be the latest work of Mr. Charles A. Clarke, that old and experienced playwright, among whose pieces may be reckoned some of the biggest money-makers ever toured, notably that called A Broken Heart. The title of the new play has not yet been definitely fixed upon, but it is provisionally called A Mother's Heart, which serves for booking purposes. The new drama, which is in four acts and thirteen scenes, will be produced at the Royal Court Theatre, Warrington, at Christmas next.

Mr. H. A. Freeman sends a guinea and "An Old Friend" 5s. for poor Charles E. Stevens, now lying in St. Bartholomew's Hospital.

Messrs. A. and S. Gatti and Charles Frohman will resume their managerial association at the Vaudeville on April 19. That date has been selected for the introduction to London of The Chorus Lady, which has had a prosperous career in America. The nucleus of the play is a sketch which has already been seen in London, Miss Rose Stahl, who will sustain the chief rôle at the Vaudeville, having appeared in it at the Palace, Shaftesbury-avenue, some years since.

In addition to Mr. George Alexander himself, the cast of Mr. A. E. W. Mason's new comedy, Colonel Smith, which will be produced at the St. James's Theatre at the termination of the run of The Prisoner of Zenda, will include Miss Irene Vanbrugh, Miss Stella Patrick-Campbell, Miss Dorothy Green, Miss Lydia Bilbrooke, Mr. William Farren, Mr. Evelyn Beerbohm, Mr. E. Vivian Reynolds, Mr. Vernon Steele, Mr. Reginald Owen, and Mr. Henry Kitts.

The distinguished company at the complimentary banquet given to Sir Douglas Straight at the Savoy Hotel on Thursday included Sir Squire Bancroft, Sir W. S. Gilbert, Sir Gilbert Parker, Mr. W. H. Kendal, Mr. A. W. Pinero, Mr. Alfred Sutro, Mr. H. B. Irving, Mr. T. P. O'Connor, and Mr. Maurice Farkoa. In his speech Sir Douglas made an affectionate reference to his "old and valued friend, Bancroft," and to Sir John Hare, who, he regretted to say, was kept away by illness.

The directors of the Crystal Palace are arranging a patriotic demonstration there next Saturday, when there will be a strong muster of Baden-Powell Scouts, under Captain Boyes, and who will be inspected by Major-General Sir John W. Campbell, Bart., C.B. They will afterwards go through some scout manœuvres, cooking meals, and sham fight in the Palace grounds. In the Crystal Palace Theatre Mr. Eric Williams will repeat his recital in aid of Lord Roberts' Veterans' Relief Fund, assisted by Miss Olive Rae and the Crystal Palace Band. The principal item of the recital on this occasion will be a new and original patriotic sketch, entitled An Old Warrior's Warning, expressly written for him by Mr. H. Chance-Newton, which was suggested by, and is intended to illustrate, the fine dramatic "Veteran's Warning" picture which appeared in the Christmas number of the Graphic.

An interesting wedding took place on Saturday, March 6, at St. Saviour's, Pimlico, the contracting parties being Mr. Charles Albert Tomkins (professionally known as Charles Manville) and that clever authoress, actress, and composer, Edith Leyland Clinton, widow of Mr. Dudley Clinton, who died last year at Perth, Western Australia. The bride was given away by Mr. Ambrose Hoskyns, the best man being Mr. Charles Gordon. Among the guests were Miss Tiny Wyndham, Miss Nellie Duval, Mrs. Ambrose Hoskyns, Miss May Cooper (daughter of the bride), Miss Maude Forrest, Mrs. Phasey (Miss Jennie Walton), Mrs., Master, and Miss Klieber, Mrs. Biddle (an old and esteemed friend of the bride's family), and many others. The reception was held at the house of Mrs. Benson, 9 and 11, Claverton-street, S.W., where the bride and bridegroom hope to permanently reside.

Mr. Charles Hawtrey, by arrangement with Mr. Tom B. Davis, commences his management at the New Royalty Theatre this evening with Mr. Somerset Maugham's new play, The Noble Spaniard. The chief attraction will be preceded by George Paston's Feed the Brute, in which Mr. Robert Whyte, Miss Gwynne Herbert, and Miss Mary Brough will appear.

Subscriptions to the Actors' Association were due on Jan. 1. The Articles of the Association state that unless subscriptions are paid within seventy days membership will cease; and the Council have decided that the rule shall be enforced.

"Boy Blue," at the Prince of Wales's Theatre, Birmingham, finishes its phenomenal career this evening. Mr. J. F. Graham is to be congratulated on the wonderful success of his present year's pantomime, which reached its 100th performance on the previous Thursday. Notwithstanding bad trade in the Midlands Boy Blue has been playing steadily to crowded houses, breaking all records at the theatre.

Mr. John Galsworthy, the author of that fine play Strife, himself a New College man, after the recent annual dinner of the New College Essay Society, read a paper on "Some Platitudes on the Drama." He pointed out that public interest in the drama comes upon a country in a manner somewhat similar to an epidemic of influenza, and disappears in the same way. When interest is aroused in this fashion the dramatist should not give in and pander to the preconceived notions of the public by pointing the obvious moral in a play containing the conventional interests. Mr. Galsworthy held that the dramatist should give the public life as he sees it, without drawing out any elaborate conclusions. Shakespeare, he said, fulfilled this function of the dramatist.

Mr. Charles A. Wenman has been doing big business with Miss Hook of Holland in Australia. The Belle of Mayfair was a tremendous success in Sydney; but his Cinderella pantomime has beaten all records.

Included in Mr. John Long's spring list of publications is a novel by Miss Marie Harvey, entitled "Satan, K.C." Miss Harvey is the eldest daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Frank Harvey, and having fulfilled many interesting engagements on the stage has finally abandoned this profession to devote herself to a literary career.

So pleased was Mr. Moss, of the New Theatre Royal, Edmonton, with Mr. W. V. Garrod's production, A Country Girl in London, that after witnessing the performance on Monday night, he immediately advertised it as "the finest show ever seen in his theatre."

Mr. Andrew Black, the eminent basso, was married on Jan. 31 to Mrs. Nellie Lichtscheindl, the popular hostess of Pfablert's Hotel, Sydney, N.S.W., where so many professional people have stayed.

Dramatic and variety funds have benefited appreciably as the result of the recent Belfast Theatrical Gala. Out of a total of £130, Mr. Fred W. Warden, the hon. treasurer, has distributed £10 each to the Actors' Benevolent Fund, the Actors' Orphanage, the Variety Artists' Benevolent Fund, and the Music Hall Home. Other amounts are thus allocated:—Royal Victoria Hospital, Belfast, £50; Mater Infirmorum Hospital, Belfast, £20; Maternity Hospital, Belfast, £5; Ragged School, Belfast, £5; Children's Hospital, Queen-street, Belfast, £5; Whiteabbey Sanatorium, £5.

The Revival Company has postponed the production of The Fool's Revenge. The next performance under the auspices of the society will take place about the middle of April, when they will produce Chatterton, a play in four acts, by Professor M. A. Gerothwohl, Litt. Dr. (of Trinity College, Dublin), founded on the French of Alfred de Vigny. The play is to be staged for a run in Dublin in the autumn.

At the Prince's Theatre, Preston, on Thursday, was produced for copyright purposes a domestic drama, by D. M. C. Granville, entitled An Old Man's Darling. The title, it may be stated, has been used for a dramatic piece more than once before.

The Belfast branch of the British Empire Shakespeare Society gave a reading of Antony and Cleopatra in the Central Hall on Wednesday evening, and proved most enjoyable. The tragedy was admirably presented, the members to whom the various parts had been allotted acquitting themselves with marked ability. The local branch of this society is to be congratulated upon the success achieved. Professor G. Gregory Smith, M.A., is the president, and Miss Erskine (Whitehouse) is the honorary secretary.

Miss Margaret Halstan will appear as Imogen in Mr. F. R. Benson's festival production of Cymbeline on Shakespeare's birthday at Stratford-on-Avon. She will also, for the first time, play Portia and Ophelia during Mr. Benson's Scotch tour.

Mr. Alfred Lester has been added to the cast of the new musical piece with which Mr. Robert Courtneidge reopens the Shaftesbury next month. A substantial increase in the humour of the production is secured by the engagement of the droll comedian, whose gravity adds so much to the gaiety of every audience.

The Crystal Palace Theatre will be visited next week by Mr. Murray King and company, who will present the droll comedy Toddles, which has enjoyed such prolonged success in the West End. Mr. Murray King himself will play the title-rôle, and will be supported by an efficient company. The original scenery, dresses, and appointments are carried.

The new copyright measure which was passed by the United States Senate on March 3, having already passed the House of Representatives, gives authors the exclusive right "to perform or represent the copyrighted work publicly if it be a drama or if it be a dramatic work and not reproduced in copies for sale; to vend any manuscripts or any record whatsoever thereof; to make or to procure the making of any transcription or record thereof by or from which, in whole or in part, it may in any manner or by any method be exhibited, performed, represented, produced or reproduced in any manner or by any method whatsoever."

It is enacted "that whenever the owner of a musical copyright has used or permitted or knowingly acquiesced in the use of the copyrighted work upon the parts of instruments serving to reproduce mechanically the musical works, any other person may make similar use of the copyrighted work upon the payment to the copyright proprietor of a royalty of two cents on each such part manufactured, to be paid by the manufacturer thereof."

Any person who wilfully and for profit shall infringe any copyright secured by this Act, or who shall knowingly and wilfully aid or abet such infringement, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanour, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by imprisonment for not exceeding one year or by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars, or both, in the discretion of the court.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

Too Much Fat.

MISS DECIMA MOORE has decidedly scored by the publication by Mr. William Heinemann of her account of her adventures in the Dark Continent, entitled "We Two in West Africa." It is a most amusing and interesting book. One of the drollest parts of it is Miss Moore's description of the native "boy" who acted as her servant. "He looked so small, quaint, and helpless," says the authoress, "in his miniature suit of khaki, with his comical sharp little eyes and white teeth, but he soon developed into a very smart 'maid.'" When Miss Moore wanted him to fetch her helmet he had to fetch James (the black servant) to translate. He did so thus: "You go catch Missus hat one time. Missus live for walk." This is pidgin-English for "Go and get Missus's hat at once. She is going for a walk." "William's introduction to my evening dress," says Miss Moore, "was most amusing. He insisted on calling the string the 'rope,' and tied it in weird knots. After struggling with the hooks of my dinner dress for about five minutes—I could see his compressed lips and worried looks in the glass—he suddenly stopped trying, and burst out with, 'Fat too much.'"

A Descriptive Bit.

MISS MOORE gives a graphic account of a gold mine which she visited. She says:—"The scene in these deep 'levels' was strange and bewildering. The natives, naked but for a loin cloth, looked in the gloomy galleries like huge black demons as they toiled and sweated with pick and shovel at the ore around them, a faint flicker of light from the candles flashing occasionally from their white eyeballs or shining from their white teeth. Indeed, I would have often stumbled headlong into a man if it had not been for those white teeth, gleaming like danger signals in the darkness. . . . Finally, what put a finishing touch to the fascination of this underground city was the fact that I was surrounded by gold, walking on it, touching it with my hands, sometimes accidentally and painfully ramming my helmet into it. It was not pure gold, of course, nor could one see it, but it was there, mixed up with the rock, being hewn out with drills and dynamite, rattling past me in the trucks—the gold that makes the world go round. I was fairly in it."

On the Accra Links.

"IT was entertaining," says Miss Moore, describing her golfing at Accra, "when 'putting' on the 'green' by the lines to see the Haussas getting into their cummerbunds. They tied one end to a tree and then solemnly and slowly turned round and round, winding themselves into it. And then the small black caddies, the golf-bags they were carrying almost their only clothing, the whites of their eyes and their teeth glittering with excitement—their shriek when one missed the ball—their yell of delight when one hit it true and far—but these were little habits which had to be discouraged, especially when occasion caused the shriek."

Startled by a Scorpion.

IN Accra Miss Moore noticed "an odd-looking thing something like a black lobster crawling along the ground. I gave it a prog and nearly picked it up, but on second thoughts called for James (a 'boy'). He gave a little cry when he saw it, and hurled a large stone at it, and again another and another, until he had battered it to pieces in furious anger, telling me that it was an animal 'God send down when He live for anger, and it kill you.' It turned out to be a scorpion."

Native Philosophy.

THE natives evidently know something about women. One of their folk stories, "Why Owea, the Sloth, cries Ma! Ma!! Ma!!!" proves this. This is why he does it:—"Owea got three fingers and no tail. He cry for night. 'Ma! Ma!! Ma!!! As for women! As for women!! As for women!!! They are no good!!!! It is woman that deceive me! It is woman that say if I cut two finger an' I cut my tail that she marry me!! An' time I cut my two finger an' my tail an' I catch her, she say I spoil for two finger an' my tail, an' she drive me!!!!! So I cry Ma! Ma!! Ma!!! as for women they be no good!!!'"

An Endowed Theatre.

"THE fatal thing about the London theatre as it is organised to-day," writes Mr. St. John Hankin in an article on "The Need for an Endowed Theatre in London," "is that plays must succeed at once. If they do not, they must be withdrawn. They may have solid qualities which would in time cause their merits to be recognised, which even might ultimately justify their inclusion in the repertory of the nation's dramatic literature, but unless they can achieve an immediate success, they must be taken off. Nay, more, unless the manager believes that they are practically sure to achieve that sort of success, they can never be put on. Plays must succeed, and must succeed at once, or they are useless. With an endowed theatre the case is different. Even at an endowed theatre the fate of a play will depend in the end on the verdict of the public, but here it will be on the public's deliberate and considered judgment, not upon its monetary whim.

An Advantage of Endowment.

"THE endowed theatre puts up a play for a few performances. It is not necessary that it should create an immediate furore and fill the theatre for a year. All that is required is that it should have a success with the more critical public who form its early audiences. If they like it, the piece goes into the general répertoire and is revived from time to time as that critical approval spreads to wider circles and the demand for further performances makes itself heard among the general public. This is the only way in which the best work ever can succeed on the stage. Good plays, as a rule, do not make an immediate appeal to large and uncritical audiences. Good art of any kind does not do so. Good plays, especially if they are at all original in technique or in subject matter, begin by appealing to the critical few. If they have any real artistic merit, and are not merely interesting because of their novelty or eccentricity, they will gradually win their way with a wider circle of admirers, until at last even the general public recognises their value, and clamours for admission.

Actress and Archbishop.

MISS OLGA NETHERSOLE, who has been working a play called The Writing on the Wall at the Century Theatre, St. Louis, has been crossing swords with a certain Archbishop Glennon, who, in an Ash Wednesday sermon in St. Louis, said:—"I have heard people say who go perhaps oftener than they should to the theatre that they rarely see what they call a decent performance. From top to bottom the whole thing is tainted. The trail of the serpent is over it all. Not that there may not be respectable people on the stage; not that there may not be respectable managers. There are both. I am talking of the mass of the productions."

MISS OLGA NETHERSOLE retorts:—"I would like to remind Archbishop Glennon that the inception of the drama took place in the church passion plays, and all know that those who took part in such plays were the monks. I cannot help expressing my surprise at finding so eminent a man as the Archbishop so prejudiced against the stage. It is interesting to remember that the greatest Englishman of letters, the greatest English poet, William Shakespeare, the immortal and divine, was an actor. I invite the Archbishop to a performance of my play."

The revival of Hamlet at the Lyceum Theatre on Saturday had many interesting points. The production positively bristled with new business. In the first place, Hamlet entered after his interview with Ophelia attired as she describes him in the text. Ophelia used a lute, on which she struck a few notes. The battlement scenes were snow-clad, and played in a fair amount of light, which was cut off on the entry of the Ghost, and white "limes" turned on him. Before one of the exits of Rosencrantz and Guildenstern, Hamlet slipped behind the throne, emerged behind the courtiers, and watched their departure. After the play scene, Hamlet fainted on the steps of the throne, and there was a "picture" of him in this position with Horatio bending over him anxiously. After the funeral scene, Hamlet returned, and knelt at Ophelia's grave. The production teemed with these ingenious novelties, which showed how carefully every scene of the play had been considered by Messrs. Smith and Carpenter, who have certainly triumphed, if the reception of the revival by the audience at the Lyceum on Saturday be any criterion of success.

The most important alteration, however, is the omission of the scene in which Hamlet sophistically refuses to kill the King after the latter's prayer, and the insertion of part of the explanation of Hamlet's sudden return to Elsinore. The first-named scene, while it illustrates Hamlet's aversion from assassination, delays the action of the drama; and, without the latter, the reappearance of Hamlet, unexpected and unexecuted, is unaccountable. So Mr. Carpenter's decision, in both cases, it quite defensible.

In the case of the revival of a famous play, and one of which so much has been written that there remains little to write, the acting is the thing which is most widely discussed. Mr. Matheson Lang's Hamlet had been eagerly looked forward to by the patrons of the Lyceum, and the postponement of his appearance in the part, from illness, was greatly deplored. There was little sign of indisposition, however, in his performance on Saturday. Mr. Lang introduces one striking novelty. He makes Hamlet imitate madness with a comicality which is frequently the concomitant of insanity. This view is strengthened by one of the sources from which Shakespeare derived his play. In Pavier's "History of Hamlet," the Prince, feigning lunacy, is described as entering the Queen's chamber "like a cock, beating with his arms, in such manner as cocks use to strike with their wings." In Shakespeare's text Hamlet is described as presenting himself to Ophelia with his doublet unbraced, and wearing dirty stockings, which hung about his heels like fetters. Mr. Lang does not literally reproduce this slovenly attire, but he gives a hint of it by turning down one of his hose and letting laces hang loose. There is a tricksy jauntiness about his replies to Polonius which supplies an agreeable comic relief to the serious passages of the play; and, in this interview with the players, Mr. Lang takes a bladder on a stick from a jester, and pats him on the head while lecturing him on the liberties taken by clowns. Mr. Lang's elocution is excellent, and he gives a poetic, Byronic, mystery to the Prince of Denmark, which is very effective in creating interest and sympathy. Despite his recent illness, his acting in the energetic scenes was full of vigour, and he completely won the suffrages of his audience by a reading which was as popular as it was original and artistic. The delivery of the blank verse was excellent all round, and Shakespeare's lines had every chance of appealing to the audience, who took the points very keenly. Mr. Eric Mayne gave to the treacherous Claudius just the elastic audacity which would win the heart of a susceptible Queen, and acted with fire and force in the scenes in which Claudius reveals his active and inventive wickedness. He delivered the King's soliliquy, too, with admirable distinctness and discretion. Mr. George Fitzgerald not only endowed Polonius with picturesque self-importance, but spoke the lines of the part in a mellow, sonorous voice, and with fine elocution and expression. Mr. Halliwell Hobbes's Horatio was manly, steady, sympathetic, and sincere, and must be praised for its earnestness and ease. Mr. Lauderdale Maitland was a vigorous and appropriately violent Laertes, and was particularly affecting in his expression of Laertes' sorrow at his sister's suicide. Mr. Sidney Vautier and Mr. Cowley Wright gave cleverly differentiated readings of the rôles of Rosencrantz and Guildenstern; and Mr. Richard Andean made a good Osric. Mr. Ernest Griffin lent a pleasant touch of character to the First Player, and delivered the "Hecuba" speech with power and expression; and Mr. Douglas Burton and Miss Dora Clements were bright and alert as the other players, Miss Rita Tomkins distinguishing herself by her strong and spirited recitation of the protests of the Player Queen. Mr. Henry Armstrong was efficient as a Lord; and Mr. R. W. Westerman spoke his lines well as the Priest. The parts of Marcellus, Bernardo, and Francisco had excellent exponents in Mr. George Relph, Mr. Wilfred Edmunds, and Mr. Charles L. Ludlow; and Mr. S. Major Jones was particularly good as the First Grave Digger, endowing the character with a burly self-confidence and a blunt geniality that were warmly commendable. Mr. H. K. Ayliff gave a sharp and quaint reading of the Second Grave Digger; and Mr. J. H. Hodson and Mr. John Beamish were satisfactory as the Captain and the Servant. Mr. Charles Terric made the First Sailor a thorough "tarpaulin"—rough, big, and free; and Mr. Ernest Cresfan did what was required as the Second Sailor, Mr. Russell Davis doing good work as the Messenger. The lines allotted to the Ghost have seldom been spoken more beautifully than by Mr. Frederick Ross, whose rendering was full of gentle and benevolent dignity; and Miss Mary Allestree depicted the Queen's distress and remorse with dramatic intensity. Miss Hutin Britton as Ophelia gave realistic prominence to the mad scene, her acting in which was very graphic, especially thrilling being the wild scream with which she made her exit. Mr. H. Sullivan Brooke's incidental music was very appropriate; and Mr. E. C. Nicholls's scenery was broadly effective. The revival was rapturously received, and there can be little doubt that it will draw full houses at the Lyceum for many months to come.

FIFTY-EIGHT YEARS ON THE STAGE.

CHAT WITH MR. HERMANN VEZIN.

If testimony were needed as to the profession of an actor being a healthy one and conducive to long life, it would surely be furnished in the case and person of Mr. Hermann Vezin, who celebrated the eightieth anniversary of his birthday on the 2nd inst., and who has experienced more than half a century of stage work. It is a significant commentary on fifty-eight years' strenuous stage labours, with their concomitant exercise of travelling from place to place, and with the mental and physical strain inseparable from such an existence and from such a calling, that one whose courses have run in such wise and for such time should find himself, when advanced to the honour of octogenarian years, not lacking in keen mental acumen and possessing the virility, so far as the aptitude for pursuing his professional calling is concerned, of a man half his age. Truly, Nature in a well-preserved old age hath its glories! The joys of youth may have departed, never to return, but if the eye be bright, the intellect unimpaired, and the physical organs in good working order, the man of eighty, with his abundant store of accumulated knowledge, should be transcendentally happy! And, perhaps, we should not be far wrong did we refer to Mr. Vezin as the Nestor of the stage.

Mr. Vezin's clear-cut features suggest shrewdness and perception, and these qualities were fully manifested during the brief conversation the interviewer of The Era had with him the other day. Asked as to his opinion of the drama of the present day, Mr. Vezin said: "I think that the drama is in a rather quiescent state. Fedora was the nearest approach to tragedy in modern clothes, and for a good many years nobody has been writing plays containing much tragic passion such as the works of Sheridan Knowles and Lord Lytton. Of recent years the authors have been writing plays dealing with the everyday life of the time. Some people may say that the actors who played these intensely tragic rôles have died out. That is quite true, but you must remember that the actor cannot show himself to be a great tragedian unless he gets the chance. Strange as the statement may seem, there is nowhere in the world a great actor or actress. When I speak of 'great,' I mean a great actor of great parts. I believe that Edmund Kean was the only man who played Othello as the part should be played. We would all like to appear in such a rôle, but if we have any modesty in us we know very well we cannot attain the required heights."

Speaking as to some of his last appearances in public, Mr. Vezin went on: "I played Apemantus in Timon of Athens at the Court Theatre in 1904, but whether I played since then I cannot for the life of me remember. I have been doing recitals in Hamlet, Othello, Macbeth, and The Merchant of Venice, not merely taking one part, but all. It seems to me that the only chance one gets of playing really good parts is when one takes a theatre. You have to be a manager and run your own seasons, and, of course, that means that you must have a lot of money. Very few of the great actors ever became great without going into management. Edmund Kean, George Frederick Cooke, Garrick, the Kembles, and Irving were able to arrive at a big position by being managers of their own theatres. That is, perhaps, why so many people are clamouring for a national theatre in England. They are always holding up the Théâtre Française as a model; but that has its faults, and in it certain actors are allowed an exclusive right to certain parts or lines of 'business.' Other actors may be better—you cannot tell until they are tried. I do not really object to the actor-manager system. The actor-managers have done very good work for the stage."

We understand that a movement is on foot to organise a benefit performance on behalf of Mr. Vezin, who, by the way, has been engaged by Mr. Tree to play the part of Rowley, in the forthcoming revival of The School for Scandal.

AMUSEMENTS IN AUSTRALIA.

SYDNEY, FEB. 9.—There has been no change at any of the theatres save at the Criterion, where Mr. William Anderson's company has revived the successful Australian drama The Squatter's Daughter. Miss Eugenie Duggan, Mr. Edmund Duggan (one of the authors), Mr. George Cass, and Mr. G. P. Carey have the leading parts.

AT Her Majesty's the phenomenal success of Miss Florence Young has resulted in record booking for The Duchess of Dantzic. The return to the cast of Mr. Higginson after his illness has strengthened the performance. Miss Nellie Wilson has made a hit at matinées as Mme. Sans Gêne in place of Miss Young, and Mr. O'Connor laudably replaced Mr. Higginson.

MR. J. C. WILLIAMSON'S other theatre, the Royal, sees the end of The Breed of the Treshams on the 14th to permit of a revival of The Scarlet Pimpernel, with Miss Beatrice Day as female lead. Mr. Williamson has purchased the Australian rights of An Englishman's Home, to be produced by his company with Mr. Julius Knight, Miss Day, and Miss Guildford Quin in the bill.

THE Palace will be occupied next week by the Meynell and Gunn dramatic company.

THE Tivoli has a big bill. Last week Mr. Harry Rickards added Honey and Cherry to his already long list, and this week sees the return of Cinquevalli, who was a great draw here years ago. Lawson and Namon, the Scottish Meisters, Nellie Maunsell, Basil and Leslie Thomas, the Three Rosebuds, and Amalia and Lenora are all prime favourites.

MR. CHARLES TERRY, brother to Miss Ellen Terry and Mr. Fred Terry, has been appointed manager of the Theatre Royal, Dublin.

"THE HOUSE OF BONDAGE."

Play, in Three Acts, by Seymour Obermer, Produced at His Majesty's Theatre on Tuesday, March 16.

Sir Vincent Meredith	MR. HERBERT WARING
Paul Bertrand, F.R.C.S.	MR. AUBREY SMITH
Dr. Roland	MR. MICHAEL SHERBROOKE
Cairns	MR. COMPTON COUTTS
Lady Joan Meredith	MISS EVA MOORE
Duchess of Banff	MISS BERYL FABER
Lady Carlington	MISS SARAH BROOKE

The productions at the Afternoon Theatre are always interesting, and The House of Bondage is a play with many good points. It is irritating, however, by its complexity, and by the mixture of dramatic effect with propagandism. Some of the situations are, nevertheless, intellectually, if not theatrically, effective, and the piece is capitally written. We start with a quartette of mismated people. Sir Vincent Meredith, an ambitious politician, has become indifferent to his wife, Lady Joan, and is carrying on a liaison with the Duchess of Banff, who has helped him greatly in his career. Lady Joan, disgusted with her husband's behaviour, has fallen in love with an eminent physician, Paul Bertrand, the greatest living expert in operations on the brain. In the first act, Lady Joan has been "making people talk" by frequent visits to the doctor's consulting-room, and his friend, Lady Carlington, warns him that he is endangering his position by giving food for scandal. When Lady Joan comes, Bertrand tells her that these visits must cease, lest they should injure her reputation. Lady Joan is less solicitous about this than he is; but Bertrand, after telling her that he loves her, says that for that very reason their meetings are dangerous, and must cease. He has just prescribed for her a visit to Switzerland, when Sir Vincent, a stern, pale personage, enters, and, after satirically explaining to Lady Joan that her conduct is the "talk of the town," puts the plain question to Bertrand, "Do you love my wife?" "Yes," says the doctor. Sir Vincent then says that he has a "growth on the brain" which will have to be removed, and that Bertrand must perform the operation. After some very natural objection, the latter consents to do so.

In the second act, we find the trio in Switzerland, preparing for the operation. Sir Vincent argues the point with Lady Joan, but, of course, finds her unanswerable. As she says, what sort of a life is she to lead if she obtains a judicial separation? Bertrand refuses to elope with her, and so give Sir Vincent a chance of getting a divorce; and Sir Vincent does not offer to strike her, and so give her the plea of "cruelty" for divorcing him. If the law of divorce were the same for the husband as for the wife, Lady Joan's course would be clear. As it is, the parties are at a deadlock. The position is further complicated by the question of the operation. Lady Carlington comes from England to protest against Bertrand's performing it. She does not question his professional loyalty; but she says that the critical position will affect his nerve. Bertrand himself is worried by it, and tells Lady Joan that he will throw up the case, and call in another doctor. But she encourages him to go through with what he has undertaken, and on his decision to do so the act-drop descends.

In the interval between the second and third acts the operation has been successfully performed, and Sir Vincent is on his legs again, apparently quite well. The duchess comes to Chamonix to renew the liaison, and the two women meet. Lady Joan reproaches the duchess bitterly for her conduct. "If you had been brave enough," she says, "to elope with my husband and live with him in the face of the world, I could have forgiven you; but your secret liaison is contemptible." The duchess is at first remorseful; but finally resumes her unrepentant attitude. Sir Vincent, however, is stricken with a sense of his sin, and promises, as he is likely to be a Cabinet Minister, to work night and day for a reform of the Law of Divorce.

The House of Bondage had every advantage in the way of acting. Mr. Aubrey Smith had a very trying ordeal in the portrayal of Paul Bertrand, especially in the first act, in which the doctor protects the exasperated and almost reckless wife against herself; but he played the part with a strength and intensity of expression which riveted the attention of the audience completely. The agony of mind of Bertrand in the second act was shown with poignant energy, and, altogether, Mr. Aubrey Smith may be congratulated on the successful performance of a most difficult task. Mr. Herbert Waring was exactly suited to the character of Sir Vincent Meredith, and his appearance—pale, hollow-cheeked, and irreproachably clothed—was a great assistance to the effect of his embodiment. He managed to make Sir Vincent thoroughly objectionable, while winning the respect of the audience for his masterful self-control and keen intellectual force. In the later acts there was much fervour in some of Sir Vincent's utterances, and of these opportunities Mr. Waring took the fullest advantage. Miss Eva Moore as the justly indignant Lady Joan Meredith acted with vivid expression and passionate dramatic power, her thrilling delivery of Lady Joan's protests against the present state of the Divorce Law being very impressive. She depicted the injured wife most pathetically, and looked remarkably well in some very becoming dresses. Miss Beryl Faber, as the unscrupulous Duchess of Banff, hit off exactly the half-cynical, half-amiable, but wholly unmoral character of the personage, and played the part, which had many phases, and called for much tact and appreciation for its adequate interpretation, with great skill and spirit. It was a clever, clear, and consistent creation. Miss Sarah Brooke might at times have been more distinct in delivery, but she made a charming Lady Carlington, full of spontaneous friendliness and bright, effusive amiability. Mr. Michael Sherbrooke did good work as Dr. Roland. The play was well mounted, the Swiss scene being exceedingly pretty.

"THE SCHOOL FOR SCANDAL."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—With reference to the renewed interest which is now being taken in The School for Scandal in consequence of the forthcoming production at His Majesty's, perhaps the following point may be of interest to your readers.

Although Sheridan did not alter very much in the development of his plays, yet the difference of the opening of The School for Scandal in the original manuscript to what it now is seems somewhat striking.

We all know the opening—"Lady Sneerwell's dressing-room. Snake drinking chocolate." Now, in the original manuscript it reads thus: "Lady Sneerwell's House. Lady Sneerwell at her dressing-table with Lappet. Miss Verjuice drinking chocolate."

The lines now given to Snake were thus originally given to a spiteful old maid, with the inimitable name of "Verjuice." She it was who inserted all the scandalous paragraphs for Lady Sneerwell, and did her dirty work in Bath society for her. When we come to think of it it does truly seem work more suited to an old maid than to a man.

My apology for taking up your valuable space is that this interesting alternative reading may not be altogether generally known, and may possibly be of interest to many readers of The Era.—Yours faithfully, PATRICK KIRWAN.

"THE MASTER BUILDER" REVIVED.

Play, in Three Acts, by Henrik Ibsen, Translated from the Norwegian by Edmund Gosse and William Archer, and Reproduced at the Court Theatre on Tuesday, March 16, under the direction of Charles Charrington.

Halvard Solness	MR. RATHMELL WILSON
Ragnar Brovik	MR. A. E. FILMER
Dr. Herdal	MR. ROSS SHORE
Knut Brovik	MR. CAMPBELL CARGILL
Hilda Wangel	MISS JESSICA SALOMON
Mrs. Solness	MISS WINEFRIDE BORROW
Kaia Fosli	MISS BEATRICE FILMER

When produced at the matinée on Feb. 20, 1893, at the Trafalgar-square Theatre Ibsen's Master Builder was regarded by the cultured as a mere vehicle for the self-communings of the great dramatist, who, as Mr. Edmund Gosse, one of the translators, asserts, "gives expression, in the pathetic and erratic confessions of Solness, to his doubts, his craven timidities, his selfish secrets, and his terror of the uniformity of his luck." As far as the play tells its story on the stage, Solness is intensely apprehensive of the younger generation "knocking at the door," and is vastly afraid of his reputation being eclipsed by a youth in his service, whose genius he can but acknowledge, but whose ambition he does his best to baulk. A strange creature indeed is Solness, with his high falutin, his constantly recurring hysteria, and his colossal conceit. He has become a master builder because he has willed it so. Whatever he wills or wishes comes to pass. He wished that his house should be burned down, and because of that wish, and not through the crack in the flue, it was reduced to ashes.

The burning of that house has literally cleared the ground for the advancement of his fortune, for he has put up many pretty and comfortable villas, and has let them to highly-respectable tenants, who have put money in his purse, but seem to have added much to the sorrows of Mrs. Solness by looking out of their windows into hers. No wonder that melancholy has seized Mrs. Solness for its own. When the house was burnt down she had just become the mother of twins. The fright brought on fever, which affected the natural nourishment of the babes, who died at the age of three weeks. The conflagration had destroyed all her cherished family heirlooms; and the husband, just by way of comfort, talks to her occasionally as if demented. Poor Mrs. Solness, too, should have cause for jealousy in the attentions paid by her spouse to Kaia Fosli, his bookkeeper, who, although engaged to his pupil, Ragnar Brovik, is as devoted to her master as the master seems to be to her. But an even more dangerous rival to Mrs. Solness is Hilda Wangel, who quarters herself unceremoniously on the Solness household. She has not seen the "master builder" for ten years; but remembers his passionate kisses when he promised her—a girl of thirteen—that she should be his princess. There is much conversation between the two, and there are sentences that suggest Hilda's willingness to take possession of her "kingdom"—i.e., the love of Solness. Mr. Gosse tells us that Hilda is attractive and genial, exquisitely refreshing, and yet cruel and superficial. Miss Jessica Salomon, who played the part on Tuesday in the revival, managed to make it effective by her mere downrightness of speech. Hilda, after thrusting herself on the Solness ménage, ought to have had the decency to depart on the morrow; but instead she "pierces the armour of the master builder's self-conceit," and displays "the inherent hardness of youth." Mrs. Grundy, even in her indulgent mood, would call it "the inherent wickedness of Delilah," and label Hilda as a brazen-faced hussy; but then Mrs. Grundy may not understand the "strange and haunting beauty of the old imaginative pieces," to which Mr. Gosse compares The Master Builder. Mr. Rathmell Wilson presented a highly intelligent study of the title-rôle; Mr. A. E. Filmer was earnest and ardent as Ragnar Brovik; Mr. Ross Shore most effective as Dr. Herdal; Miss Winefride Borrow did not forget to emphasise the deep-rooted sorrow of Mrs. Solness; Miss Beatrice Filmer made a sympathetic Kaia; and Mr. Campbell Cargill was adequate as Knut Brovik. The play was produced by Mr. Charles Charrington, who is well versed in Ibsen traditions.

"MEYER AND SON."

Drama, in Three Acts, by Thomas Addison, Produced at the Garden Theatre, New York, on March 1.

(FROM OUR NEW YORK CORRESPONDENT.)

According to the announcements, this play "shows the Jew as he is, and not as he has been caricatured." The scene is a large city in the West. Nathan Meyer, a banker, and the members of his household have been on excellent terms with Major Gray and his family for some years, but a break occurs in their cordial relations when Meyer seeks to obtain a franchise for a new telephone corporation in opposition to the established company, of which Major Gray is the head. To make matters worse, Max Meyer, the banker's son, and Doris Gray, the Major's daughter, have grown to love each other, and while the enmity of their parents causes no difference between them, it creates obstacles to their happiness which they find it hard to overcome. Meyer learns that Paul Gray, the Major's son, has forged his father's name to a note, but his own son, Max Meyer, buys the note in order to save Paul, who went to college with him. Moreover, as he loves Paul's sister, Max is doubly anxious to save the Gray family from being disgraced. The play is supposed to be an impartial presentment of the virtues and failings of the Jews and the Gentiles, but the Jews appear to be possessed of all the virtues, and the Gentiles of all the failings. In other words, the animosity and bitterness is entirely one-sided. The magnanimous Meyers heap coals of fire on the heads of their enemies, but fail to conciliate them. Max Meyer even tries to save young Gray from being blackmailed by a girl to whom he has written compromising letters, and almost loses his own sweetheart in so doing.

Finally, in an effort to clear up the misunderstanding, Nathan Meyer induces Major Gray to visit his home and to overhear without being seen an exposure of his own son's wrong-doing. What he hears convinces him that the Meyers have acted as friends instead of enemies, and he admits his error, and is willing to accept young Meyer as his son-in-law. But while Nathan Meyer disclaims all prejudice, and desires to live in harmony with all men, he believes that a Jew should not marry a Gentile. And as Doris Gray is reluctant to marry Max without his father's consent, a deadlock occurs at the last moment. Nor does the dramatist solve the problem. For Max Meyer finally agrees to take two years in which to think it over, while Doris Gray agrees to wait, so the question of whether the elder Meyer is right or wrong remains unanswered.

There is more dialogue than action in this play, but the conversations between the various characters are decidedly interesting, touching, as they do, upon the vital problems of race prejudice and mixed marriages. Moreover, the characters that the dramatist has truthfully drawn are as faithfully interpreted. The Nathan Meyer of Mr. William Humphrey is true to life, and Mr. Franklin Ritchie impersonates his son, Max, with convincing sincerity. Mr. H. G. Carlton as Jacob Strauss gives an excellent portrayal of an aged Hebrew, who is nothing if not orthodox, and Mr. George C. Staley admirably realises the character of Major Gray. Miss Irene Moore, Miss Ethel Browning, Mr. Charles Morrison, and Mr. Kenneth Hill play their parts well.

LONDON VARIETY THEATRES.

PECKHAM HIPPODROME.

In spite of the influenza fiend, which is, unfortunately, greatly thinning the audiences at various places of entertainment just now, the bill at the above popular South London house is attracting ample audiences. The first turn is that dainty comedienne Miss Alice Digby, who is rewarded with generous applause. The Four Rosebuds, tastefully attired young ladies, score well with their song and dance, "I'm looking for a nice boy."

A smart quick-change sketch is presented by "Charlie," an alert French protean artist, in which he impersonates nine distinct characters. The little piece is a drama of Parisian conjugal unfaithfulness, with its consequences, and "Charlie" impersonates very cleverly, among other rôles, the wife, the husband, the lover, and, finally, an officer of the law, who takes the wrongdoers into custody. The genial Irish comedian Joe O'Gorman is excellently received, and his songs, "The Duchess," "Molly McQuene," and his "Wedding bells" ditty, together with his smart patter, are much appreciated.

We were sorry to note the absence of Mr. Joe Elvin through serious indisposition, his place being taken by Leo Morode, an intrepid Spanish cyclist, who twice performed the dangerous feat of looping the loop round a gigantic wheel amid much enthusiasm. Paletto's monkeys, who are most intelligent animals, caused roars of laughter by a grotesque shaving act and by chariot races in which they are driven by dogs, one of the monkeys meanwhile acting as judge of the course, mounting a chair, and ringing a bell. Two monkeys also play "Way down upon the Swanee River" upon the bells. Miss Elsie Clare sings most acceptably "I never knew till now I loved you so," and is deservedly applauded. Mooney and Holbein, assisted by two other unnamed artists, are successful in a comedy act. Mr. Joe Archer scores well with his seasonable and topical song, "An Englishman's home"; and Mr. Fred Eustace and an able company appear in their latest success The Family Name. The little piece savours more of the society play than of melodrama, but it thoroughly grips the audience, and, being admirably presented, makes an excellent impression. Some humorous films upon Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope bring a most enjoyable two hours' entertainment to a successful conclusion.

ROYAL STANDARD.

Mr. T. S. Dickie can be always relied upon to give his patrons good value for their money, and in his list of attractions this week there is a big show in the military episode, entitled Territorials, written by Mr. Fred Maxwell, and presented by him and Miss Lois du Cane and company. Possibly this sketch, which is of a highly-sensational character, may conduce to recruiting. In any case, the sentiment of the playlet is most enthusiastically accepted by the audience at the Standard. There are many thrilling situations, and, of course, the "Terriers" are the heroes of the hour. We doubt not that, after the admiration which the local ladies have bestowed upon the gallant heroes who have appeared before the footlights of this establishment, many Pimlico youths will have thought fit to present themselves as candidates for admission to Mr. Haldane's citizen army. The part of the hero, Lieut. Fred Waring, in Territorials, is played with boldness and vigour by Mr. Fred Maxwell; and Miss Lois du Cane is a most acceptable heroine as Jess Hamilton. Mr. P. Barry Lewers is a dignified and courageous Colonel Hamilton; and Mr. Murray Yorke and Mr. Fred Bailey are good as Captain Fortescue and Charles Manley respectively.

The lovely and lively Lily Burnand, the popular burlesque artist, delights the house immensely with her numbers, "The Widow," "The French Maid," and "Cheek," and the reception of these is most flattering. Hughes and Carney, comedians, have an entertaining little act, including some smart boxing; and Miss Hetty Lee gives a pleasing rendering of her song on the subject of "Girls," and dances prettily. Mr. Bruce Green has a "dame" song which is intensely amusing, and his imitations of concert singers find much favour with his hearers. Carr and Carr appear in an exceedingly agreeable "drawing-room interlude," and their patter and dancing win hearty applause. The Society Quartette are capable singers and dancers, and their ditty, "Is there another girl at home like Mary?" is delivered with vivacity and tunefulness.

Miss Eva Lumley and Miss Freda Ettrick and company submit a laughable comedy skit, Jimmy All-of-a-Twist, written by Mr. George de Lara, in which the two ladies mentioned, assisted by Mr. C. F. Lloyd, do some excellent acting. Mr. Frank Lennard is most successful as a descriptive vocalist; and Mr. Albert Whelan, who describes himself as "the Australian entertainer," treats the house to characteristic imitations of well-known music-hall artists, including Chirgwin, Harry Lauder, and Albert Chevalier. Miss Maud Esmond has everybody with her in her song, "I don't care," which is vociferously chorussed by the audience; and the same remark applies to her other number, "I've been out with Charley Brown"; and Mr George Porter proves his artistic versatility by rendering in excellent style a Dutch jödel song and appearing as a Hebrew character, his patter as the latter being very funny. An attractive series of pictures is projected by the Edisonograph.

HOLLOWAY EMPIRE.

The bill at this very popular North London hall is capitally diversified, attraction following attraction with unfailing regularity, and large and appreciative audiences being the natural result. The place of honour is taken by the Elliott-Savonas, who are presenting their well-known musical act. It cannot be gainsaid that their whole production is one of the very finest now making a bid for success in the country, the very striking and beautiful costumes worn by the troupe adding in no small measure to the gorgeous effect of the whole. Their selections this week include the intermezzo by Mascagni, and the overture to William Tell, the latter with some very novel storm effects. All their items are rendered in a most artistic manner, and they are, it is needless to say, accorded enthusiastic receptions nightly.

Frank Bertram and company are presenting their well-known sketch, The Chaperone, which scores its customary hit, Mr. Bertram as the spurious woman playing the part for all that it is worth. The marvellous Craggs, in their well-known absurdity Billy, give a smart and clever act, their balancing, acrobatic work, and tumbling being very skilfully done, a special word being due to the gentleman who plays Billy for some smart knockabout business. They met with a great reception. Rose Cabani, a very attractive young lady, made a good impression in her song "Absence makes the heart grow fonder." Burley and Burley, in an act that comprised singing, dancing, and acrobatics, were very successful, causing plenty of laughter. Larola, a silent comedian, presented a novel act, in which trick scenery plays a large part. His facial business is certainly very amusing, and his dancing capital. Larola is a very humorous entertainer, who, in addition, performs some smart tricks, perhaps the best one being the feat of balancing six tumblers and a lighted lamp on his head whilst passing hoops over his body. He secured a well-deserved call. Amy Marsden, a low comedy artist, sang "The mocking birds were singing on the trees," which scarcely serves to display this artist's abilities. Marriott Edgar, "the man in red," is a good comedian. He has a good song, "That's why I dress in red," and his second, "I lit a match," also took the fancy of the audience, some good stories causing a good deal of mirth. Altogether, his turn was clever, and he gained a good reception. The Bioscope is interesting in The Story of William Tell. The orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Fred Camp, maintains its high reputation, and Mr. Bertie Ralland, the acting-manager, is very courteous in the front of the house.

SHEPHERD'S BUSH EMPIRE.

A programme containing so brilliant and popular an artist as Miss Vesta Tilley would be certain of success anywhere, and at the Shepherd's Bush Empire this week, where this clever lady heads the bill, large and enthusiastic audiences are the rule. Miss Tilley is singing a couple of new songs, one entitled "That's the time a fellow wants his Ma," the other, "Sidney's holidays are in September." Both are typical Vesta Tilley lyrics, and quite up to the high standard of merit that one always associates with this most artistic comedienne. In addition, Miss Tilley sings once again the famous "Jolly good luck to the girl who loves a soldier," and, for an encore, a little number, which was, in effect, an appeal on behalf of the Territorial Army. The simple dignity with which Miss Tilley sang the item made a very direct appeal to the patriotism of the audience.

St. George Sylvesta, wizard and illusionist, assisted by Miss Vera de Courtney, performs some most effective tricks, his business with a small bag and an egg being most puzzling and amusing. Frank Cass goes very well, particularly with his song "Which is the sinner and which is the sainf?" Florence Burns and James Danvers achieve much success in a vocal burlesque, Miss Burns singing well and Mr. Danvers acting in comic fashion, and showing himself very much at home at the piano.

One of the best turns of the evening is that provided by the Schenk Brothers, a couple of equilibrists who, for neatness, dexterity, originality, and all-round excellence, would be hard to excel. Rita Rhylle proves a dainty performer in "song and dance," attired in a "Bubbles" costume, and Adams and Ward contribute a turn very much to the taste of the audience, to which was given the title "a miscellaneous mixture of mirthful movements." Wood, Wells, and Wilkins appear in a vocal comedy sketch called The Piano Tuner, in which there is some good fooling and excellent singing. At the bottom of the bill is the La Scala Opera Company, giving a selection from Cavalleria Rusticana. The company consists of Mrs. Arthur Rousbey, Miss Alice Rene, Mr. Edward Arthur, and Mr. Robert Burns. The selection is well mounted and well performed, and makes a most acceptable item. A word of praise must be given to the orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Henry W. May, which is this week playing a selection of Irish melodies. Mr. E. P. Morgan is the courteous acting-manager, and Mr. Herbert Mack his energetic assistant.

THE FORESTERS'.

The patrons of this cosy East End establishment, being naturally fond of drama, are generally provided with a good item of this description, and in the current programme their likes are gratified by a military sketch, exceedingly well played by Miss Dolly Elsworthy and company, viz., A Soldier of the King. There is nothing particularly original about the plot, and the characters are composed of the usual hero, heroine, and villain. Mr. A. Howard, Miss Dolly Elsworthy, and Mr. L. Monti, the principals, are ably supported by Mr. M. Maud as Captain Dantry, Mr. C. Stanbridge as General Mazinoff, and Miss A. Pinto as the drummer boy.

Mr. Ernest Rees, a droll comedian who has now quite established himself amongst the top-liners, rolls off endless quips and gags which are very amusing, some of his stories being particularly good. He sings also three snatches of songs, the one "Father's photograph is hanging on the wall" being no doubt the best, after which he retires to rounds of applause. Miss Nellie Farrell, a bright and dainty little Irish comedienne, has a couple of smart songs in "Molly" and "Matilda McGee," concluding with a neat quick-time dance.

The Phydoras in a comedy musical act entertain with several novelties and legmania business. Farr and Farland, who deputised for Barrett and Knowles, are most unusual in their style, which is refined, yet extremely funny. They engage in some distinctly bright repartee, their finale being the overture to "Poet and Peasant," a cleverly-rendered duet on banjoes. Miss Edna Barrett, a young lady full of vim and vigour, dashes off two songs—"I do like to be where the money is" and "An actor lady"—in which she displays plenty of "go," her dance being also well executed. Messrs. Bowman and Morton, comedy artists, are two tip-top entertainers, their gifts in comedy being greatly enjoyed. Other items are Miss Madge Field, a dainty comedienne in song and dance; and the Fordyces, comedy artists. Many excellent films are displayed on Raymond's Bio-Tableaux. Mr. Carl Hamlin leads a capital orchestra, and our old friend Mr. Faithfull looks well to everyone's comfort.

RICHMOND HIPPODROME.

Despite the vagaries of the weather, business here throughout the week has been satisfactory, thanks to the excellent bill provided at Mr. George Dance's dainty theatre. Marie Empress is, above all things, up to date, and she sings quite prettily of the new beehive hat, which, in her own words, "is knocking the fellows flat"; Marie "dresses" her songs in good style. Her second contribution, "It's the same old tale," proves quite an amusing contribution. Trick cycling is cleverly exemplified by Harry and Paul. There is a lot of fun as well as talent in connection with their "show," and they met with a particularly hearty welcome. Will Lytton causes endless fun made out of a recital of his own miseries. As a juvenile comedian Cliff Diamond does remarkably well, and details the troubles of Beau Brummel, junior.

For a turn bubbling with merriment and provocative of shrieks of joy, commend us to The Drowsy Town Junction episode. The sketch is capitally interpreted by Farley, Rennie, and Farley. There is a battle royal between the stationmaster and a passenger that proved irresistible, the house literally screaming with merriment. Fred Shepherd adds his contribution to the evening's successes. His first ditty "Can I help you?" touched on a variety of subjects, all of which seemed to amuse the audience highly. Later in the evening the comedian won further applause with a topical ditty "Look at that."

Valazzi's tricks are deft, clean-cut, and interesting; his wonderful balancing feats amazed everyone. Velazzi's "boy" is not without a sense of humour. The difficulties that may follow the extinguishing of the gas were told in his own peculiar vein of humour by Harry Champion, whose claim to the description of lightning comedian is perfectly valid. Mrs. John Lawson and company do excellent work in the sketch Vanity, in which some of Mrs. Lawson's finest qualities of acting are revealed. In front of the house Mr. Frederick H. Terrell is ever courteous and hard-working.

THE GRANVILLE.

Crowded houses have been the rule this week at this popular little home of vaudeville at Walham Green, so ably managed by the astute and always courteous Mr. R. W. Duce. The bill is headed by Mr. Charles Austin, who presents that concise concoction of comedy and comicalities written by himself and Charles Ridgwell entitled Parker, P.C. This diverting playlet is in three scenes, and it is "absolutely, positively, and decidedly" a scream of laughter from start to finish. The genial Charles Austin as Parker, P.C., works with untiring energy from start to finish; his spirits never flag, and his versatility is remarkable. He receives adequate support from Mr. Charles Neville as Superintendent Hardman, Mr. Harry Lennox as Sergeant Sloman, and Mr. W. Kellson as Mullins.

Foreman and Fannan, the millionaire comedians (Percy and Harold), are another big draw in an exceptionally strong programme, and their drawling dialogue and quaint mannerisms keep everybody well amused. Their satirical ditty "At Portland-by-the-Sea" is full of sly humour and jests. Johnson and Bert are seen to advantage in a scena entitled A Queer Customer, which affords them ample opportunities to display their skill as acrobatic dancers. Miss Olga Dore is aptly billed as an operatic actress, for she is the fortunate possessor of a well-trained voice of wide range and compass. Perhaps her best contribution was a pretty ballad, "Nightingale," which she trilled in a manner closely approaching the feathered songster after which the song is named.

Miss Mabel Bright is a vivacious and sparkling novelty entertainer, and her representation of the various characters in an imaginary Aladdin pantomime is decidedly new and novel. Fresh from their triumphs in the Lyceum pantomime, the Espinosas gain rounds of applause for their celebrated dances, and, beyond doubt, we have here two of the most agile interpreters of the art of terpsichore on the music hall stage to-day. Mr. Larry Lewis is a comedian with an exceedingly dry style peculiarly his own, which appeals to any class of audience, and in "A silly remark to make" the laughable Larry has a song that is quite above the average. The programme, to which Miss Violet Stockelle also pleasingly contributes, is brought to a close by some funny pictures on the Bioscope. Mr. James White is an efficient stage-manager, and the band, under the bâton of Mr. Frank Thomas, discourse some pleasant music in faultless style.

"MYSTERY NO. 1."

A Ventriloquial Protean Act, written by Randolph King, Produced at the Bedford on Monday, March 15.

Mr. Randolph King produced a novelty at the Bedford on Monday last, when he appeared in a sketch from his own pen, in which he played several different characters, and also introduced others as figures, and used his ventriloquial powers to make them play their parts. There is a little story of an old professor who has got into league with a man who goes in for fine art robbery, and uses the professor's skill to make the keys necessary for his work. The detectives get on the professor's track for the thief, but the old man's accomplice commits suicide by jumping from a Channel steamer, and leaves the professor with his secret, and the old man decides to give up such work for the future. Mr. Randolph King is an accomplished actor, and the rapidity of his changes of costume are most clever; as a ventriloquist, too, he also shines. The novelty of the little sketch, which is most completely staged, cannot fail to prove a big attraction wherever it goes, and the most cordial reception it received augurs well for its future.

"JANE ANN'S PROPHECY."

Sketch, Produced at the Zoo-Hippodrome, Glasgow, on Monday, March 15.

This new sketch, which was produced for copyright purposes at the Grand Theatre, Glasgow, during the run of the pantomime, provides Mr. Tom Conway with an excellent part in the character of a militant suffragette who is a firm believer in the prophecies of an ancestor of hers, Jane Ann Pancake by name, an historical supporter of woman's rights who is said to have lived about 100 years ago. The other two characters in the sketch are the suffragette's niece and her lover, neither of whom shares Aunty's admiration for the prophetic ancestor. They are preparing for a fancy dress ball, in which they mean to appear as Marguerite and Mephistopheles, and by way of a joke alter the date of Jane Ann's prophecy as to the end of the world from the year 2010 to the present day, with the result that Aunty firmly believes the end to be at hand. The appearance of the young lover in the garb of Mephistopheles throws her into a fearful state of excitement, and the fun provided by the suffragette's lamentations over her wasted life cause roars of laughter. The appearance of the niece as Marguerite, who is mistaken for an angel, gives a ray of hope to the erring aunt, and then the young people declare themselves, and all ends happily. Mr. Tom Conway was very amusing as the Suffragette. The names of the other two artists were not given in the programme.

A notice of a new sketch entitled The Irony of Fate, produced at the Middlesex on Monday, has been unavoidably held over until next week.

The first tickets sold at the theatre box-office of Messrs. Selfridge and Co., Oxford-street, were three stalls for the London Coliseum.

Mr. Frank Glenister has secured the Three Cunards to return to the London Pavilion for a number of dates through Pacey's Agency.

Miss Patty Yole has just put on a good comedy number from the pen of Alf. Ellerton, entitled "Father hasn't spoke to mother since."

Mr. Mayor Cooke has been retained by Mr. Sydney Bacon as manager for the production of The Duchess of Tooting, which was presented last Monday at the Palace, East Ham.

The little sketch produced by Mrs. Paul Courtney at the Battersea Palace on Monday at the matinée, was so great a success that it was immediately retained for the remainder of the week by Mr. Fred Baugh. The item deals largely with child interest, and introduces one of the talented "Courtney" children. It is from the pen of the well-known comic singer, Johnny Dwyer.

Miss Nellie Norway, "the Queen of the Silver Bells," although not yet in the "halls," is making rapid successes on every concert platform where she has been appearing. To-night she is displaying her undoubted talents at Belfast, and to-morrow night will be heard at the Criterion at the Ladies' Annual Dinner of the O.P. Club.

Lew and May, who were to have appeared at the Hippodrome, Crouch End, this week in a smart musical comedy act, entitled A Flowery Flirtation, owing to the lady contracting a severe attack of influenza and laryngitis have been prevented from doing so, but Mr. Lew Towers, "The Man in the Cinnamon-brown Suit," is deputising successfully.

Mr. Bert Byrne, "the Dame" of the successful pantomime Red Riding Hood at the Prince's Theatre, Bradford, had his benefit on Friday evening, the 12th, when he was the recipient of a heavy gold ring presented by Miss Florrie Forde, the principal boy of the pantomime, and a leather travelling-case, a handsome gold watch and Albert, and gold sleeve-links from the members of the company and admirers in front.

Mr. G. Cornelius O'Kelly, the famous Hull police-fireman wrestler, is the holder of the Marathon Heavyweight Championship of the World, won at the Olympic Games—held at the Stadium, in the White City, 1908—on which occasion he was presented with the gold medal by Her Majesty Queen Alexandra. He is making his first appearances on the music-hall stage this week as Hermanus, the Gladiator, under the direction of Mr. Charles March, the author of the sketch, which has been specially written round Mr. O'Kelly, and is entitled The Gladiator

RINKING GOSSIP.

A pearl and platinum ring, valued at £100, was lost by the owner, Miss Edith Neville, of Knightsbridge, at the skating rink at Olympia on Friday week. The offer of a reward of £50 proved ineffective, but on Friday John Glover, 36, a labourer, of Greyhound-road, Hammersmith, was arrested, as it is alleged he was trying to pledge the ring at a pawnbroker's shop in Norland-road. Glover's explanation to the police was that he picked the ring up at Olympia, where he was an attendant. Charged on Saturday at the West London Police Court with the theft, the prisoner told the magistrate that it was a boy who found the ring on the floor, and sold it to him for 4d. He did not think there was any value in it, and kept it for a week. Then he thought he would see what he could get on it, and so he went to the pawnbroker's. The magistrate committed Glover for trial.

Mr. H. F. Blackwell, the manager of the Rinkeries Company (the American syndicate which has transformed the Royal Concert Hall into the American Roller Skating Palace), and Mr. Elvey Thomas, manager of St. Leonards Pier, are taking over St. Leonards Pier for a term of years. The pier is in future to be the American Palace Pier, and the intention of the syndicate is to build it on the lines of their best piers in America. It is intended to build a large open-air pavilion at the sea end of the pier, which will be run as an open-air roller skating rink. There will be a new floor of the same class as at the American Roller Skating Palace, but about twice the size.

The Swanage police are threatening to arrest anyone found skating on the Esplanade. This action has been taken by the local force at the request of the Council, as it has been found that the granolithic surface on the front has been badly cut up by roller-skate wheels.

We have pleasure in pointing out that the Brampton roller skate is British made throughout, and is manufactured by the celebrated firm of the same name in Birmingham, the world-renowned cycle fitting and chain manufacturers. All the bearings in Messrs. Brampton's skates are made with the same accuracy and subjected to the same tests as a high-class cycle hub. They are claimed to be in consequence the smoothest and fastest roller skates on the market.

"Skate, and the world skates with you" is blazoned on the bills of the big 10,500 square feet skating rink at Catford. A knowing small boy added to one of them this week: "Yes; but fall, and you sit alone." Even think it may be judged that he wrote from sad experience. This rink is always crowded, and we believe we are correct in stating that it is the only one, in London, at any rate, at which the are four sessions daily.

Carnival news comes from all parts of the country. There has been an evening dress function at Glasgow, and Edinburgh gives one on the 25th. A "yokel night" will be given at Brighton Olympia on the 24th, and on the same evening "a skating Cinderella" takes place at the Leeds American Rink. On March 25 a "Barnyard Carnival" takes place at Bradford.

News of novelties comes from Portsmouth and Sunderland. Last Wednesday at the Naval station a "St. Patrick's Skating Festival" was held, and prizes given for national English, Scotch, Irish, and Welsh costumes. They had a hockey match on rollers at the Tyneside rink, the local club meeting a team from Newcastle. There was the greatest excitement when the visitors came off victorious.

Professor G. S. Monohan has captured the hearts of the Belfast rinkers by the dexterity he has shown this week. One of his feats is entitled "Threading the Forest Maze." This is a very poor and ill-chosen description for a very difficult task. A number of lighted candles are arranged on the floor a few inches apart, and Monohan skates among them without knocking a single one over of flicking out the lights. Another of his noteworthy feats consists in skating on the top of a revolving barrel.

The speed roller-skating championships of Great Britain will be held at the Crystal Palace on Saturday next. The items include one mile and a half Amateur Championship for the Benetfink Perpetual Challenge Cup and gold, silver, and bronze medals, and the one mile and a half Professional Championship: first prize £10, second £3, and third £2. The manager of the rink has now secured a large number of new up-to-date skates, as since the closing of the Olympia rink the attendance at the Palace has enormously increased.

Leith is to have its rink, and Messrs. C. Heathcote and Sons, of London, are negotiating with the Town Clerk as to the site.

The popular skating comedians, the Miltons, who have been running competitions at the Surrey, Empire, Camberwell, and Palace, Bow, are now in the provinces for five weeks, when they again return to London, where they will again introduce their novelty skating act and competition.

St. Leonards Pier has been let to an American syndicate, and is to be transformed into the American Palace Pier. The scheme includes the erection of a large open-air pavilion at the sea end of the pier, which will be run as an open-air roller skating rink. There will be a new maple floor and a large number of kiosks.

The present pavilion at the land end of the pier will be retained and enlarged, and made a dancing and entertainment hall. There will be a temporary stage somewhere about the centre of the pier for variety and other entertainments, and a large military band will play during the season. Electric coloured lights—8,000 in number—will form an illumination all round the pier.

Messrs. Bostock and Fitt's new rink is to be in a position near Thorpe railway station. The main approach will be at Rose-lane corner, and within a few feet of Prince of Wales's-road. It will measure 200ft. by 160ft. The whole of the skating area will be laid with American maple.

The Empress Skating Rink at Leicester is now in the full tide of popularity, and deservedly so, as in every department care is taken to give entire satisfaction to its many hundreds of rinking devotees. The patrons have included noble lords and ladies, but on Wednesday afternoon the most remarkable visitor of all put in an appearance in Consul the Great, who is making quite a stir at the Leicester Pavilion Theatre this week. This learned chimpanzee can add to his many other accomplishments the art of skating, as, accompanied by Mr. Joseph Lawrence, the manager of the Pavilion, he gave a very fair exhibition on the rollers. He can skate "on his own," and made a very good attempt on one occasion to catch Mr. Lawrence, who is an adept at the sport. Consul, who seemed quite unconcerned by the attention that was bestowed on him, was accompanied to the rink by Mr. Harold Hilliard (Consul's manager for Mr. Frank C. Bostock) and Mrs. Hilliard, Mr. Derowski (his attendant), and Mr. Joseph Lawrence (manager, Pavilion). A number of snapshots of Consul while skating were taken by Mr. Walter H. Pallister, of Bioscope fame.

(For other "Rinking Gossip," see page 26.)

AN ARTIST'S LIBEL ACTION.

The part-heard libel action by Miss Minni Letta, a music-hall artist, against the Dangerfield Printing Co., again came before his Honour, Judge Woodfall, in the Westminster County Court, on Tuesday. Miss Minni Letta is the stage name of Mrs. Albert Smith, who did a walk to Brighton, and then performed a walking act at music halls, called "The Sporting Girls." Her husband, according to her case, gave defendants an order for posters, to be sold at 1s. each to the management of music halls where she was to perform. Defendants, it was said, later sold some of the posters to advertise a performance of "The New York Walking Girls," in defiance of an objection lodged by Mr. Smith, and Miss Letta alleged that she being a "star," and pre-eminent in her troupe, whilst the other troupe were all on a level, she was libelled by her poster being used.

When the case was called on, Judge Woodfall suggested a private consultation with counsel, and this was agreed to, but the case proceeded.

Plaintiff's husband, in answer to the Judge, said that the use of his wife's poster had damaged her name. It was her picture, from her photograph, in the centre panel of the poster.

In cross-examination he stated that his wife was the leader in her line throughout the world, having beaten every competitor.

William T. Haycock, a printer of forty years' experience, gave evidence that printers had no right to sell an artist's posters to other artists.

William Herman, a juggler, stated that he had performed at the same halls as Miss Letta, and she had always been the "star" turn. He had never heard of an artist's poster being sold to advertise another artist. There were stock posters for that purpose.

George Purcell deposed to visiting the Hammersmith Theatre of Varieties to witness the performance of Miss Letta, whose picture poster he saw there. He had seen her perform at Olympia, and wanted to see her again, but he found that she was not performing there.

Judge Woodfall: How is this a libel?

Mr. Valetta put it that it was a disparagement of plaintiff in her profession, and it affected her prestige in her work. She was receiving a large salary, and anything that tended to derogate from her as a "star" turn was a libel.

His Honour considered that plaintiff had suffered, but a libel action was not the remedy. He gave judgment for the defendants, with costs, and granted a stay of execution.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL LAW.

BY A. A. STRONG, LL.B. (LOND.), SOLICITOR.

Your book will, I am sure, be a valuable aid to all managers and actors.—Sir Henry Irving.

Mr. Strong states the whole case very clearly.—Illustrated London News.

Should be found very useful.—Pelican.

Should prove perfectly invaluable.—Weekly Sun.

Furnishes useful information.—Daily News.

The work succeeds in making plain the thorny legal path that every manager and artist must tread, and by a timely consultation of its pages they may avoid much misapprehension and trouble.—Star.

Mr. Willie and Miss Ethel D'Arc, of D'Arc's Marionettes, have both been confined to the house in consequence of an attack of influenza, which is just now very prevalent among members of the profession.

Mr. Paul Grant, for his novel and original act, entitled The Days of Yore; or, Parts I Have Played, has special scenery, transparencies, and lighting effects. The costumes, too, are historically correct.

Mr. Peter Adair, the veteran athlete and walker, telegraphed to us on Friday midday from Worthing as follows:—"Tell the readers of The Era that I shall reach Amesbury, Wiltshire, to-night, and arrive at Exeter on Monday."

Mr. W. Lovell Hurt, at one time a well-known variety agent, and sometime manager of the Tivoli, Bristol, and proprietor of the Palace, Swansea, has entered the lists again as a V.A.F. agent, and has opened offices at Churchgate House, Stockport.

Mr. Harry Mack, who died at Castleford recently in his seventieth year from cerebral hæmorrhage, was a performer better known in the provinces and abroad than in London. His loss is severely felt by his widow and his adopted daughters, Texas Hattie, the well-known funambulist, and Tiger Lily.

The Town Council of Broughty Ferry will at their meeting on April 5 next be prepared to receive offers for the right to provide alfresco entertainments on the promenade and beach for the summer season of 1909. Particulars can be had from Mr. Douglas Winning, F.S.I., Burgh Surveyor.

Mr. Harry Marlow and Miss May Manton return to town on Monday after a successful ten weeks in the provinces, opening at the Camberwell Empire and Standard, Pimlico. They will present, for the first time to London audiences, their new and clever comedy duologue, Winning a Wife, which has met with gratifying receptions in the country.

The Pier Pavilion, New Brighton, of which the managers are Messrs. Adeler and Sutton, has been entirely reconstructed internally, and a stage, with scenery and other accessories, has been built; while the seating has been all rearranged. A good band now takes the place of piano only, and the style of entertainment is changed, variety and animated pictures being included in the programme. On Monday Mr. Theo Bouwmeester, the Dutch protean actor, in his quick-change sketch Who is Guilty? was a success, and Mr. Kenna Lawson had a good reception for his refined items, the singing of "Put me on an island" causing much laughter and applause. Other items were contributed by Messrs. Hanlon and Le Fre, Dollie and Blanche, Mr. Charles Bestie (sleight-of-hand), Mlle. Patty Roberts, and Mr. Tom Smith.

Mr. W. Pratt, who since the opening of the Portsmouth Empire has acted as manager in front of the house in addition to fulfilling his duties as secretary, has lately relinquished the managerial post, being succeeded by Mr. R. A. Maddox.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

[We cannot undertake to answer the inquiries of correspondents by post. In all letters names and addresses must be given as a guarantee of good faith. Initials only or pseudonyms will be used in the replies if so desired.]

J. R. L. (Manchester).—Yes. The Coronet Theatre, Notting-hill Gate, London, W.

DRAMATICUS.—It is not necessary to obtain the Censor's licence for a sketch produced and played in the music halls.

A. W. H.—We cannot discover his address. Write care of Fred Harrison, Esq., Haymarket Theatre, to be forwarded.

THE DUCHESS.—Stationers' Hall, London, E.C., is quite sufficient. They will send you the necessary forms on application for registration both of performing right and copyright. The fee is 5s. in respect of each registration.

H. W. GREW.—The duration of copyright is for 42 years from first publication or for the term of the author's life and seven years from his death, whichever is longer. We believe the play in question was produced in 1866, but as the author died only in 1905 the copyright in it would still be existing.

ORLANDO.—The Happy Land, a burlesque version of The Wicked World, by F. Tomline and Gilbert A'Beckett, was produced at the Royal Court Theatre, under Miss Litton's management, on March 3, 1873, and prohibited by the Lord Chamberlain on March 7, 1873. It owed any success that it attained to the introduction of a dance by three male fairies—Mr. W. H. Fisher as Ethais; Mr. W. J. Hill as Phyllon, and Mr. Edward Righton as Lutin—who were severally made up to represent three Cabinet Ministers—Mr. Gladstone, Mr. Lowe, and Mr. Ayrton. The Lord Chamberlain intervened after the third performance.

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, & DEATHS.

The charge for inserting in "The Era" an announcement of a Birth, a Marriage, or a Death, or an "In Memoriam" notice, not exceeding twenty-four words, is One Shilling and Sixpence.

As a guarantee of good faith, the name and address of the sender must accompany each notice.

BIRTHS.

BATTYE.—March 17, at 44, North-street, Lambeth, S.E., Mrs. Oswald Battye (Miss May Fayre), of a daughter. Both well.

LENA.—March 10, at Dublin, Gertie, the wife of Roberto Lena, of a daughter.

PAUL.—On March 15, at Liverpool, Florrie, wife of Sam Paul, of a fine daughter. Both doing well.

PAUL.—March 15, at Liverpool, Florrie, the wife of Sam Paul, of a daughter. Both doing well.

SATURDAY, MARCH 20, 1909.

A NATIONAL THEATRE.

A momentous decision has been come to by the Executive Committee of the Shakespeare Memorial Scheme—including the Lord Mayor, Lord LYTTON, Sir JOHN HARE, Mr. PINERO, Mr. FORBES ROBERTSON, and Mr. BEERBOHM TREE—who have reported in favour of a National Theatre, and are of opinion that it should be proceeded with. We may now consider the theatre a fait accompli. The objects of the proposed playhouse will be: To keep the plays of SHAKESPEARE in its repertory; to revive whatever else is vital in English classical drama; to prevent recent plays of great merit from falling into the oblivion to which the present theatrical system is apt to consign them; to produce new plays, and to further the development of the modern drama; to produce translations of representative works of foreign drama, ancient and modern; and to stimulate the art of acting through the varied opportunities which it will offer to the members of its company.

The National Theatre will be upon a true repertory system. The theatre will be able to present, and will present, at least two different plays of full length at evening performances in each week, and at least three different plays at evening performances and matinées taken together. One at least of such weekly performances will be an English classical play; SHAKESPEARE'S plays will be given on an average of at least one a week; and the number of works presented in a year will be not less than twenty-five plays of full length. The repertory will consist of pieces in which the dramatic and not the musical element is predominant. The productions, while simple, will be efficient and beautiful. The estimates provide for such a liberal endowment as shall free the directorate from all temptation to sacrifice its artistic policy to the making of large and immediate profits. The sum required to build, equip, and endow a National Theatre will be about £500,000, and that this amount will be thus distributed: Site, £100,000; building, £100,000; stage and equipment, £50,000; endowment, £250,000. The name of the theatre will be "The National Shakespeare Theatre," and in order to provide for the legal ownership of the structure and of the endowment fund, steps will be taken for the incorporation of the governing body, either by Royal charter or by license of the Board of Trade. The supreme controlling authority of the theatre will be a body of governors, to be appointed by the Crown, the Universities, the Royal Academy, the British Academy, the L.C.C., the City Corporation, the municipalities of a number of cities, and the self-governing colonies. The Ambassador of the United States, the President of the Board of Education, the President of the Academy of Dramatic Art will be "governors." The managing staff will consist of a director, a treasurer, and a literary manager, all of whom are to be nominated by the Standing Committee, subject to confirmation by the governors.

Arrangements will be made for the National Shakespeare Theatre to give performances in the country as well as in London; and provision will be made for conferring some form of honorary distinction on actors who have completed a certain term of association with the National Theatre.

The establishment of the National Shakespeare Theatre shows the irresistible force of practical and experienced power when applied to any object. We all remember the great meeting at the Lyceum Theatre in favour of a National Theatre, and how the matter lingered on until men like Sir JOHN HARE, Mr. PINERO, Mr. FORBES ROBERTSON, and Mr. BEERBOHM TREE took it up seriously. And now the thing is "as good as" done. In a country like this—and may we not add America, with its millionaires and its intense admiration for SHAKESPEARE?—the raising of £500,000 will be easy. It will be pleasant and interesting to watch the progress of the scheme—the selection of the site, the choice of the architect or perhaps a competition amongst architects for the design, the gradual rising of the walls, the appointment of the governors and the managing staff, and the selection of the "honorary distinction" to be conferred on actors who shall have completed their service at the National Shakespeare Theatre. The rapidity with which building operations are carried on at present has been shown in the erection of SELFRIDGE'S superb establishment in Oxford Street; and almost before we are prepared for its completion the National Theatre may rise from its hoardings like Venus from the sea, and overcome us like a summer cloud without our special wonder. This is the age of wireless telegraphy, of flying machines, and old-age pensions; and the faculty of wonder is almost extinguished in us. Admiration, however, still remains; and because we shall not be surprised at the work done by the eminent actors above mentioned, it does not follow that we shall not appreciate the power which has attained this great and goodly result. On the contrary, the absence of wonder will only be a tribute to their established reputations for ability, energy, and skill.

ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.

A matinée in aid of the Messina Earthquake Fund was held on Thursday afternoon at the St. James's Theatre, kindly lent for the occasion by Mr. George Alexander. The principal item on the programme was a little play by Miss Bessie Hatton, bearing the title

"THE VILLAGE OF YOUTH."

King Lycian .....MR. E. HARCOURT WILLIAMS
Prince Winfred .....MR. L. RACE DUNROBIN
Old Basil .....MR. ALFRED BRYDONE
Time .....MISS BEATRICE FORBES-ROBERTSON
Beryl .....MISS JEAN STERLING MACKINLAY
Rowena .....MISS HILDA AUSTIN

The poetic flavour of this phantasy is well in accordance with its altogether enchanting setting, the scene being a very pretty garden "surrounding the Castle of Stars." Here we listen to the conversation of King Lycian and his betrothed, Rowena, who have arranged to be married at sunset. Lycian dreads the thought or the anticipation of becoming an old man. He yearns for a condition of things which would render human life an eternal spring-time and the evenings and nights a never-changing afternoon of sunshine. With Omar Khayyám he would join in the lament—

"Yet, ah, that spring should vanish with the rose!
That youth's sweet-scented manuscript should close!"

And his mental attitude towards age is such that he banishes from his kingdom the aged Basil. Rowena's sister, Beryl, sets herself the task of bringing about a fulfilment of the King's desire. She awaits the coming of the Spirit of Time, and she receives what all at the moment believe to be a favourable answer to her prayers. And so Time remains, and there is no sunset and no night in the Village of Youth, for the sun and all things stand still. But the monotony of a year of summer brightness palls upon the King and his court; he admits that he has made a mistake; he admits that the process of change and progression is a beneficient one after all, and that even old age has its joys. Besides, his marriage was to be celebrated at sunset, and there has been no sunset! Henceforth he will be satisfied, and the Village of Youth shall be the Village of Content. And so old Basil comes back at the invitation of this romantic-minded monarch, and the Spirit of Time is bidden to proceed upon his way, for he is no longer a welcome guest.

The dialogue becomes rather wearisome at times, and some of it strikes one as being insincere, the authoress having, no doubt, laboured some of her phrases instead of waiting for the mood which would bring them with easy naturalness. All the same, the little piece, taken as a whole, is quite a charming dramatic effort. Mr. E. Harcourt Williams made an imposing figure as the King—though now and again he seemed to lack dignity—and he spoke his lines with much expression. Miss Jean Sterling Mackinlay as Beryl and Miss Beatrice Forbes-Robertson as the Spirit of Time were delightfully graceful and effective in their rôles; Miss Hilda Austin was an engaging Rowena, Mr. Alfred Brydone a characteristic old man as Basil, and Mr. L. Race Dunrobin a loverlike Prince Winfred.

There were several other contributions to the programme. Mlle. Leonora and Miss Julia Seale entertained the audience with the first scene of La Petite Bohemienne, and Miss Beatrice Collier and Mr. Fred Farren won considérable applause for their "Danse des Apaches." Mr. Leon Quartermaine, Miss Amy Ravenscroft, and Mr. Stafford Hilliard appeared in Miss Edith A. Browne's one-act piece, A Maker of Women; and others whose names figured on the programme where Miss Constance Collier, Señor Léon de Souza, Miss Dorothy Lemarchand, Miss Edith Kirkwood, Señor Rubio, Mr. Lawrence Rea, Miss Mary Grey, Mr. Gordon Cleather, Mme. Jeanne Darlays, Master Max Darewski, Miss Clara Evelyn, Mr. Albert Archdeacon, Platt's Child Trio, and Mr. Norman A. Blume.

Two tariff reform plays, entitled respectively The German Plot and What Free Trade Did for Bill, were given at a gathering of the Women's Unionist and Tariff Reform Association at 5, Great Stanhope-street on Tuesday.

SIR ALEXANDER MACKENZIE, to the regret of all, has been suffering from yet another attack of influenza. He leaves London this week for Florence, and it is hoped that he will speedily be restored to health. The popular principal of the Royal Academy of Music will be accompanied by Lady Mackenzie and Miss Mary Mackenzie.

FIVE prizes for a composition piece specially designed for performance by a full military band are offered by the Worshipful Company of Musicians. The piece may take the form of a concert overture, a march, a phantasie in one movement with changes of tempo and key, or a suite. The competition is open only to British subjects, and scores must be sent in before the end of March.

THE Keats-Shelley Memorial was discussed at a meeting of the British committee of the Memorial Association held on Monday at Crewe House, the Earl of Crewe presiding. The arrangements for the opening of the Keats-Shelley house in Rome on April 5, when the King of Italy will be present, were considered. The offer of Mr. Frederick Harrison to give a matinée at the Haymarket Theatre was gratefully accepted.

A TELEGRAM from Los Angeles states that Mme. Modjeska, the famous Polish actress, is lying dangerously ill at her residence in Orange County, California. Mme. Modjeska made her début at Bochnia, Poland, at the age of seventeen, and speedily became the leading actress in her native country. She made her first appearance in an English play at San Francisco, in 1877, and since then has played leading rôles both in England and America. She is in her sixty-fifth year.

"A WOMAN OF IMPULSE."

Drama, in Four Acts, by Louis Anspacher, Produced at the Herald Square Theatre, New York, on March 1.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Leonora de Valera, known as La Vecci, is the "woman of impulse." She is a grand opera singer, who has had a brilliant career, and has married Count Nerval de Valera, an attaché of the Spanish Embassy at Washington. The Count has given up his diplomatic post, and is now supported by his wife. Leonora is devoted to her art, and its exacting demands frequently clash with the wishes and inclinations of her husband, whom she really loves. It is this conflict which causes her motives and actions to be misunderstood, her sudden impulses involving her in difficulties, not only with her husband, but her aunt, Mrs. Gardineer. Count Nerval resents being placed in a subordinate position as the singer's husband, and chafes under the reflection that he is an insignificant entity so far as the public that pays homage to his wife is concerned. Furthermore, he is jealous of his cousin, Philip Gaudineer, who misses no opportunity of making himself agreeable to Leonora. Leonora has a younger sister, Nina, whom she regards with a watchful eye. Wishing to end the estrangement which exists between his aunt and his wife, Nerval persuades Mrs. Gaudineer to invite Leonora to visit her in the country. Much against her will Leonora accepts, and takes her sister with her. Cousin Philip also joins the family reunion, thereby aggravating Nerval's jealousy and suspicion.

Leonora's democratic tendencies and generous impulses clash with every inherited instinct of aristocratic reserve in the Gaudineer household. Situation after situation of misunderstanding develops, and the insulting misinterpretation of all her motives and actions enrages the singer. Mrs. Gaudineer poisons her nephew's mind against his wife; while Philip, by his every action, tries to compromise her in the eyes of her jealous husband. At last, finding her alone, he makes insulting proposals, and Leonora repulses him in a very forcible manner. Then he tries to make love to the inexperienced Nina, and Leonora saves her sister at the cost of her own happiness. Nerval decides to return to New York, and simply announces his intention to do so without asking his wife to accompany him. To his surprise she is overjoyed at the prospect of leaving, and his jealousy dies in a moment. It is quickly revived though, for an incident occurs which makes it impossible for her to leave her sister in the same house with Philip, and without explaining her reasons, she tells her husband that she cannot accompany him. Furious with jealousy, he leaves the house after a violent scene, in which he openly accuses her of being untrue to him.

In the meantime, Nina has gone to her sister's room to write a letter, and Philip, seeing a light there from the garden, conceives the idea of surprising the unprotected girl. The windows of the room open on to a balcony, which can be reached without going through the house. He comes upon her suddenly and tries to embrace her. In the struggle that follows she stabs him with a small dagger, inflicting merely a slight wound, and he makes his escape by the window. On the balcony, however, he is felled by a terrible blow. Nerval has returned, and seeing his cousin in his wife's room, has satisfied himself that his belief in her infidelity is justified. Philip is killed by the blow, and Nerval disappears.

Nina, having stabbed Philip, and knowing nothing of the encounter outside, naturally supposes when the corpse is discovered that it was she who killed him. Leonora receives this version of the affair, and accuses herself in order to shield her sister. Nerval returns, however, whilst the coroner is trying to elicit the facts, and confesses that he killed Philip just outside the window. Then Leonora, to save her husband from being convicted of murder, takes upon herself the stigma of faithlessness in order that he may claim justification under the "unwritten law." Eventually, however, the truth comes out, and Leonora, unable to forget that her husband has believed her faithless, repulses him when he would be the same to her as before. For two years they live apart. Then they meet by accident at the home of the happily-married Nina, and inspect the baby. Which doing, they experience the fellow feeling that makes us wondrous kind, and are brought together again.

Miss Kathryn Kidder assumes the title-rôle of this play, and witnessing her performance one cannot fail to note the authoritative ease and finish that mark the truly artistic portrayal. It is a long time since Miss Kidder's name appeared above the portals of a Broadway theatre, and it is to be hoped that her future engagements in this city will not be so few and far between, for while the critics are by no means enthusiastic over her play, the impression certainly prevails that the lengthy absence of such an accomplished player means a distinct loss to the local stage.

THE football match, Fulham v. Clapton Orient, this afternoon at Fulham, will be the occasion of Fryer's benefit. The kick-off is at 3.30. The home team consists of Fryer, Lindsay, Sharp, Collins, Suart, Mouncher, Smith, Dalrymple, Harrison or Freeman, McCourt, and Lipsham. Fulham Reserves v. Tottenham Reserves contend at Tottenham this afternoon.

THE Annual Ladies' Concert of the Playgoers' Club will take place on Sunday evening, March 28, at the Playhouse. Among the artists who have already accepted invitations to be present are Miss Jean Aylwin, Miss Phyllis Bedells, Miss Maudi Darrell, Miss Marie George, Miss Ida René, Mr. Randell Jackson, Mr. Frank Lawton, Little Tich, Mr. Arthur Prince, and Mr. H. Scott Russell.

THE last of the Glasgow pantomimes, Diccory Dok, at the Royal Princess's, finished on Saturday. Cheers greeted the entrance of each of the principals, and flowers and chocolates galore were showered upon Misses Flora Cromer, Ella Retford, Edith Haley, Maggie Fraser, Ivy Proudfoot, and the Sisters Bartholomew. The comedians were not forgotten, and numerous tokens of friendship were given to Messrs. Peter Bermingham, Syd Walker, Harry A. Gribben, Ainslie Burton, Cliff Lake, and Walter Dale. Speeches were demanded from everyone at the close, and gracefully responded to.

"CINDERELLA," at the Theatre Royal, Melbourne, Australia, is in a fair way to break all records. It is now in its thirteenth week, and still playing to packed business. The Girl Behind the Counter, in consequence of the success of the pantomime, had to be postponed, but is now in full rehearsal for production shortly. Mr. C. St. John Denton, who, in conjunction with Messrs. Denton, Bode, and McKenzie, Ltd., are responsible with Messrs. Meynell and Gunn for these productions, has just secured the option for the Australian rights on two forthcoming West End musical productions, which will be sent out early in February next.

A PACKED audience on Saturday evening witnessed the final performance of the successful pantomime of Red Riding Hood, which has established a record at the Prince's Theatre, Bradford. Speeches were the order of the evening, and showers of flowers and sweets greeted the ladies and the bright little children of the company, one of whom presented Mr. Harry Butler, the stage-manager, with a little testimonial which had been subscribed for amongst the juveniles themselves. Mr. Butler was also the recipient of a handsome diamond ring from the members of the company, and the proceedings terminated with the singing of "Auld Lang Syne," in which the audience and the company joined.

THE TERRITORIAL QUESTION.

Thanks to the patriotic spirit of Mr. Ernest Mansell, the lessee of the Royal Palace Theatre, Ramsgate, to the indomitable energy of Captain H. S. Page, of the 3rd Kent Battery of the R.F.A. (T.), and the hard work of Mr. Jos. Porter, secretary to the Territorial Night Committee, Ramsgate has had a grand recruiting march. Mr. Mansell offered the theatre to the local officers, and they accepted the use of it for one night in order to appeal for men for the Buffs and the newly-formed Kent Cyclist Battalion, of which no fewer than eight companies have to be raised. The patronage of the Mayor and Mayoress was obtained.

The arrangements within the theatre were, thanks to Mr. Mansell's foresight and watchfulness, admirable. Mrs. Mansell received the Deputy Mayor and the Mayoress, and shortly after General Mackinnon arrived, attended by Captain Page and other officers, and Mr. E. J. Large (ex-Royal Household personal service). The duty of receiving other notable residents was shared by Mr. E. Mansell, Mr. Bert Atkinson, and Mr. J. H. W. Porter, secretary. As the first item of the entertainment Mr. Sam Weller sang in good voice "The Yeomen of England." The next item was a picture show, illustrating Life in the King's Service, which were specially taken for Mr. Mansell, who has shown them in every corner of England. These were loudly applauded, and were followed by a number of local photographic lantern slides prepared by Mr. Short, photographer, of Ramsgate, and photos of her late Majesty Queen Victoria, the former illustrating camp life with local units. An exhibition of sword exercise and pursuing practice was given by men of the Royal East Kent Yeomanry, under Sergt.-Major A. Ducker. Next came more animated pictures specially prepared by Mr. Mansell, entitled Our Territorial Forces in the Field, which proved interesting and instructive and highly popular. Miss Julia Barnes was loudly applauded for her splendid rendering of Elgar's "Land of hope and glory," and then men of the 4th Buffs and Kent Cyclist Battalion, combined with signallers of the Artillery in A Skirmish at an Outpost, which proved to be the most realistic and best-appreciated tableau of the evening. The men worked splendidly, their proceedings being vociferously applauded. The whole scene was realistic, and the setting reflected great credit on Mr. Mansell, who was enabled, by kind permission of Mr. Leo Stormont and Mr. McManns, to show the invasion picture An Englishman's Home, direct from the Coliseum. The Bivouac was the next tableau of the evening, and this was supplied by the Boy Scouts, under the direction of General Sir Chas. Warren, K.C.M.G., K.C.B. It was invented specially for the occasion by Mr. R. Partridge, of the Pretoria, High-street, Ramsgate, and the music was splendidly sung by Mr. Sutton.

The final item represented Britannia (Miss Treadway) surrounded by her sons, and was most effectively staged. Big guns were included, and the spectacular effect was considerably heightened by the flashing sabres of the Yeomanry, the cutlasses of the Navy men, and the bristling bayonets of the Buffs.

After the entertainment Mr. Ernest Mansell, who was received with rounds of applause, said it had all been only a labour of love to him; he hoped the audience had attentively listened to the officers, and he hoped they would profit by what they had heard, and come forward and join the ranks.

The marching of 750 khaki-clad Territorials from the Belle Vue and Valley Parade Barracks to the Empire Theatre, Bradford, on Monday, created great interest. Lieut.-Col. R. A. Bottomley, commanding the 6th Battalion the Prince of Wales' Own (West Yorkshire Regiment) had sought the co-operation of the proprietors of the Empire, and their business-like and energetic local manager, Mr. Percival Craig, to provide an entertainment calculated to stimulate the interest of the citizens and their duty towards the Territorial Army. The Empire management gladly acquiesced, with the result that the scheme was carried to a successful conclusion. The programme had quite a patriotic flavour about it. Mr. Frederic Villiers, the well-known war correspondent, who is at present on a tour of the Empire theatres, had been transferred to Bradford in order to be present at the performance. Mr. Villiers, wearing as many medals as generally adorn the breast of a British General, gave a short lantern illustrated sketch of some of the scenes he had witnessed in actual warfare. Mr. Percival Craig presented some patriotic pictures on the screen and recited a couple of verses from "The Call to Arms," and Pat Rafferty, one of the artists, added to the military flavour by singing "The Boys of the Territorial Army." The audience was thoroughly enthusiastic. The "Territorial Night" was a complete success.

ABOUT 300 Territorials visited the Castle Theatre, Stockton-on-Tees, to witness the performance of The Thief, on Monday last, by the kind invitation of the proprietor (Mr. Chas. Imeson) and Mr. George Alexander. The entertainment was under the patronage of the Mayor, Sir Samuel Sadler, and a number of officers and civil dignitaries.

MISS VIOLET LEY will conclude on Saturday her fourth starring engagement as Lady Mary in Peter's Mother.

THE close of the Bristol Prince's pantomime has been marked by proof of the regard from the artists to the staff. Mr. F. S. Green was the recipient of a kit-bag, Mr. G. R. Chapman and Mr. D. Fisher a silver cigar-case, and Mr. Henry Turner a gold-mounted umbrella. Accompanying the gifts was a little note, signed by Ouida Macdermott, Topsy Sinden, Deborah Volar, Daisy Wood, Flo Foster, Bransby Williams, Alfred Clark, W. H. Powell, and Arthur Sutcliffe. It read: "A little memento of a happy ten weeks' panto. We trust that you may find it useful, and that it will accompany you on many a pleasant journey. Wishing you the best of luck."

AN agreeable vocal and instrumental concert, in aid of the funds of the West-end Ladies' Benevolent Society for the Relief of the Poor in the West-end of London, was given at the St. James's Hall on Saturday. Amongst the artists who contributed to the attractive and interesting programme were Miss Constance Jenkins, Mr. and Mrs. Van Lachterap, Miss Florence Holderness, Mr. Sidney Hamilton, Miss Marion Spindler, Mr. Walk D. Fearse, Herr Dezsö Kordy, Miss Cissie Freedman, Miss Shena Desmond, Mr. Frederic Irving, Miss Florence Clarke, Mr T. Kinniburg, Mr. Charles Coborn, and Mr. Arthur Chenery. Herr Adolf Voorzanger, who conducted, played a solo on the saxophone in excellent style; and his clever daughter, Miss Haidee Voorzanger, gave two solos on the violin with skill and taste. Mr. T. Presburg was the accompanist.

MR. BERT WILSON'S fraternity, humorously designated the "Tin-Cans," paid their annual visit to the Alexandra Theatre, Birmingham, last Tuesday, overflowing the stalls with their numbers, and adding to the public diversion considerably. Presents were bestowed on the proprietor of the theatre, Mr. Lester Collingwood, whom they seemed delighted to honour; Mr. Fred Bernardo, business-manager; Mr. W. T. Guest, acting-manager; Miss Ellaline Thorne, the principal boy; Miss Dollie Denton, the principal girl; and Miss Maudie Olmar, who plays the title-rôle, Little Red Riding Hood, &c., including the comedians, Messrs. Stephens and Rennior, George Penn, Albert Schafer, and Frank Blythe. The house was bedecked for the occasion.

TESTIMONIAL TO MAURICE DE FRECE.

TO COMMEMORATE HIS FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY OF THE DRAMATIC AND VARIETY AGENCY.

President, MR. ARTHUR COLLINS, T.R., Drury-lane.

Several mutual friends, well-wishers, and members of the profession have suggested that a testimonial should be given to Mr. Maurice de Frece, who will shortly enter upon his fiftieth year of the variety agency business. For half of this period Mr. de Frece has been connected with the firm of Richard Warner and Co., with whom he is no longer associated. Mr. de Frece's friends deem this a most fitting opportunity of expressing their esteem and appreciation of his sterling good qualities in business and his straightforward conduct and extreme courtesy to one and all with whom he has come in contact during his career as the oldest-established variety agent in the world.

The following gentlemen form the Committee, with power to add to their number:—

Mr. Frederick Abrahams	Mr. Sydney Hyman
Mr. Harry Barnett	Mr. Johnny Jacobs
Mr. Natt Behrens	Mr. E. J. Leamy
Mr. J. W. Boughton	Mr. Jack Lotto

MASKELYNE AND DEVANT'S.

The mysteries of Maskelyne and Devant's are more profound than ever. The newest surprise which is presented at the home of enchantment in Langham-place is called "Trans-lucidation," and is the outcome of the combined ingenuity of Mr. David Devant and Mr. Nevil Maskelyne. Mr. Devant has the assistance of his sister, Miss Dora Devant, who undergoes the process of mesmerism. Members of the audience are invited to write a quotation, or any phrase that may occur to them, on blank visiting cards which are distributed in different parts of the house, each one depositing his or her card in an envelope provided for the purpose, which they are asked to seal and inscribe with a private mark. Meanwhile Mr. Devant has assembled on the stage several volunteers from the audience to form a committee of inspection. The envelopes are then collected in a black bag by a member of the committee and handed to Miss Devant, who is seated blindfolded on the stage. One by one the lady picks out an envelope, and placing it to her forehead, makes a "mental picture" of its contents, reading off the inscription on the card inside with scrupulous accuracy. All suggestion of trickery or mechanical aid is disclaimed by Mr. Devant, who declares the feat to be due to quite normal and natural methods. The mystery is a remarkable elaboration of the "second sight" principle, and seems to be more impenetrable than any that has hitherto been propounded at the far-famed hall of magic.

The services of the committee are also enlisted in the "mental magnetism" experiments performed by Mr. Devant and his sister, who remains on the stage, and without a word being spoken, goes through various actions suggested to her brother by the ladies and gentlemen drawn from the audience. A great improvement is secured by the experiments being carried out on the platform, everyone in the house being thus enabled to follow the interesting interlude. Mr. Devant's magical problems are also included in the programme, of which he furnishes a most appreciable part, the illusion "Beau Brocade," the egg-hatching feat, and the various assortment of sleight-of-hand tricks all commanding the greatest admiration. His humour is as spontaneous as ever, and does much towards causing his clever devices to go off with éclat.

The celestial conjuring by Houston still gains admiration, and the levitation feat by which he causes the inanimate form of his assistant to rise unaided from a box and remain suspended in the air is neatly done. Mr. Ernest Hastings also introduces new items, the song "Baby No. 1" being very diverting, and the rendering of Romeo and Juliet in the latest modern style provoking mirth. His brilliant improvisation on the piano of a theme in the styles of various famous composers proves as effective as ever. Mr. Harry May Hemsley's crayon sketches and imitations of children give the greatest satisfaction. Musical effects are furnished by F. Cramer's capital orchestra, and a well-chosen series of animated photographs make up a programme of good things ever to be expected at the Home of Mystery.

A SILLY young woman of fashion having inscribed on a pane of glass, at the inn at Staines, the following words: "Dear Lord D—— has the softest lips of any man in England, Foote, coming into the room soon after, wrote underneath:—

"Then as like as two chips
Are his head and his lips."

A CONCEITED young man asking Foote what apology he should make for not being one of the party the day before to which he had a card of invitation. "Oh, my dear sir!" replied the wit; "say nothing about it: you were never missed."

VARIETY GOSSIP.

The premises of the Edison Bell Phonograph Company in Charing Cross-road have been acquired for the purpose of carrying on the business of the London, Provincial, and Continental Combination. Possession will be taken on April 16 next, when Messrs. Gibbons and Barrasford and their respective staffs will enter into possession.

As to the position that Mr. Barrasford occupies in this combination all doubts are set at rest by the statement of Mr. Walter Gibbons, who writes that Mr. Barrasford will continue to act as the managing-director of Barrasford, Ltd., and control the work in connection with his halls as heretofore.

Mr. Joe Wilson, the popular manager of the Tivoli, is laid up with influenza, and the assistant-manager, Mr. James Howell, is suffering from the effects of a chill. In these circumstances Mr. Leon Zeitlin has been representing the syndicate "in front" of that house during their absence, and is also temporarily filling a vacancy caused by the resignation of Mr. Will Collins.

Mr. Seymour Hicks, the alert comedian, is following the example of Mr. Louis Calvert by playing both at music hall and theatre. On Saturday he took up the part of the Dashing Little Duke at the Hicks Theatre matinées as deputy for his wife, Miss Ellaline Terriss, and during an interval played in Papa's Wife at the Coliseum.

Miss Vesta Victoria returns to the London Pavilion on Monday, after an absence of a week in Edinburgh, where she has created a furore among the hardy Norsemen of Scotland's beautiful city. Messrs. Beecham and Wheeler, her enterprising agents, are kept pretty busy in answering inquiries for this popular comedienne, who has made the hemispheres laugh at her domestic comedy.

According to a New York correspondent, Mr. Frank Isitt, of London, has reached St. Louis, Missouri, where Miss Adeline Genée is now appearing, and his marriage to the Empire danseuse will probably take place in June, 1910, by which time Miss Genée's contracts will have expired.

The late Harry Lundy, both during his management of the Oxford and the Royal, was exceedingly popular with the profession, and one is glad to hear that the Water Rats are arranging a benefit matinée for the widow and children. It will be given at the Oxford on Thursday, April 1. Messrs. Eugene Stratton, Joe Elvin, Jack Lotto, and Fred McAvoy are working heartily in the good cause.

Miss Marie Lloyd will appear with her own company at the Palace (Pier) Theatre, Brighton, during Goodwood week, the queen of comediennes having been secured by Messrs. Jay and Mann, the new lessees, who are putting plenty of vigour into their campaign, which they commence on Monday. Miss Lloyd is an immense favourite with the Brighton folk.

Miss Rose Stahl, who was secured by Mr. Alfred Butt some two years since, to play the title-rôle in The Chorus Lady sketch, will be appearing at the Vaudeville Theatre in an expanded version of that playlet on April 19. The "expansion" has been done by the author, Mr. James Forbes, who has humorously yet earnestly analysed the question of stage morality.

The Music Hall Artists' Railway Association, which announces its 600th committee meeting on Wednesday next, will hold its annual dinner and dance at the Criterion Restaurant on Sunday, April 25. The function will be in aid of the Variety Artists' Benevolent Fund. Mr. Joe Elvin will be in the chair, and Mr. G. H. Chirgwin, president, in the vice-chair. Tickets are 10s. 6d.

The V.A.B.F. is the chief charity of the profession, to whom it makes a special appeal by reason of its entire management and almost its entire support being by artists. Last year over £1,000 was realised in connection with the M.H.A.R.A. dance and dinner, and in answer to Mr. Joe Elvin's special appeal. This popular sportsman and artist, we regret to hear, is unable to fulfil his engagements this week, owing to indisposition. With his host of friends we wish him a speedy recovery.

Miss Florrie Forde, who has just concluded a triumphantly successful engagement at the Prince's Theatre, Bradford, in a pantomime which has had the remarkable run of eleven and a half weeks, has had a most delightful experience of the warmth of Yorkshire audiences, and is to be congratulated on the prospect of a further experience of the enthusiastic friendliness of the Tykes when she goes to Leeds Theatre Royal at Christmas to play principal boy in Mr. Francis Laidler's pantomime The Babes in the Wood.

Mr. Johnny Danvers late on Wednesday night was heard to say to an acquaintance, "I don't know if it is due to the opening of Selfridge's, but one big London stores has just put up the shutters for the last time." "Whose are they?" asked the friend, incautiously. "Alderman Fitzwarren's, in Cheapside," replied the comedian; "Dick Whittington finished to-night."

Tongue-twisters are becoming the order of the day, and Mr. Wilkie Bard with his "She sells sea shells" has something to answer for. Here is an evening contemporary gravely heading a column "Tsar's Tars See Stars." Should the practice become general there should be some interesting contests in trams, trains, and places where they talk.

At the complimentary dinner to Mr. Harry Lauder at the Café Monico on Sunday night Sir Thomas Dewar presided, and invited the assembly to drink to the health of the King of Jesters and the Jester of Kings. Mr. Lauder, in reply, said Mrs. Lauder (who was present) had been the great mainspring in his professional career, and was his best critic.

Queen, Le Brun, and company in The Cockney Huntsman, made their first appearance in London last Monday after two years' engagement with J. C. Williamson in Australia. Their new sporting absurdity, which has been presented to large audiences at the Olympia, Shoreditch, during the week, has kept the Shoreditchers in roars of laughter. Here we have, indeed, versatile farceurs—genuine masters of practical fun, with a nice "derangement" of droll tricks, quaint antics, and exhilarating business. The key phrase to their entertainment is "general jollity," an excellent commander of the forces arrayed against dulness.

Dr. Walford Bodie, the man of marvellous gifts and modern miracle worker, appears at Hackney Empire next Monday. Originally intended for the Church, Dr. Bodie kicked over the ecclesiastical traces, and embraced the study of medicine, the desire to alleviate the sufferings of others by the introduction of new and little-known methods and the annihilation of old-fashioned theories and grandmotherly nostrums being his incentive. No one can deny that success unparalleled has been his reward. He has been upbraided for ignoring the traditions of so-called medical etiquette, but for that he cares not one jot, his motto being, as he says, "Do the greatest good to the greatest number."

During an evening performance at Colchester Hippodrome, on Wednesday, a bullock entered the theatre and, making for the orchestra, scattered the instrumentalists.

Mr. Robert E. Goffin, the courteous and enterprising assistant manager of the Empire Theatre, Liverpool, has been offered and accepted a similar position at the New Brighton Tower. Mr. Goffin has been with Moss' Empires, Ltd., upwards of twelve years, and takes up his duties at the Tower on Monday, March 29.

Dr. Walford Bodie broke all records again at the New Cross Empire last week, and this week he is creating a furore nightly at the Portsmouth Empire, where is is playing to overflow houses, although it is his third visit.

The proprietors of the Palace Theatre, Carlisle, give notice that as they will cease to be in occupation and possession of that theatre after May 10, 1909, all contracts with artists for subsequent dates are cancelled.

The Hippodrome, Middlesbrough, is to be sold by auction by Messrs. W. G. Stansfield and Co., of Bridge-street, Bradford, at the Grand Hotel, Middlesbrough, at an early date. The establishment is situate in Wilson-street and Bolckow-street, Middlesbrough. Further particulars can be obtained from Mr. James M. McIntosh (the Receiver), 5 Cherry-street, Birmingham; or from Messrs. Firth and Firth, Solicitors, Craven Bank-chambers, Bradford.

The Chester Watch Committee considered on the 12th inst. the application of Mr. C. B. Fountaine, on behalf of Messrs. Milton Bode and Edward Compton, proprietors of the Royalty Theatre, for a dramatic licence for the Hippodrome proposed to be erected in City-road, Chester. Opposition was tendered on behalf of the temperance party and the Chester Licensed Victuallers' Association. The committee decided to refuse the application.

Messrs. Bode and Compton have decided now to erect a first-class skating rink on the site of the proposed hippodrome. The matter is already in hand, the preparation of the plans having commenced. The rink will be conducted on up-to-date lines, and for the convenience of patrons the provision of a cosy cafe is contemplated.

At the same meeting the Watch Committee passed the plans for another new skating rink to be erected on a site off Upper Northgate-street.

The refusal is mainly on the ground that the population of Chester (38,309) is too small to support a large variety music hall, in addition to the theatre. It is distinctly understood, however, that although a licence for the proposed hippodrome has been refused to Messrs. Milton Bode and Edward Compton, a licence will not be granted to anyone else

We understand that War Office sanction for the purchase of the Clarendon Hall, Watford, from a company, by the local Territorials has been received. The "Terriers," however, propose to continue to let the hall for entertainments, and Mr. G. W. Bowes has arranged for a tenancy of eight weeks, during which cinematograph shows and pierrot performances will be relied upon.

M. Auguste Van Biene has taken the Theatre Royal, Blackpool, and is opening it at Easter as Van Biene's New Tivoli Theatre. The building has been entirely remodelled, redecorated, and reseated, and is to all intents and purposes a new theatre, up to date in every respect. Mr. Van Biene does not wish to compete with the already existing attractions in Blackpool, but intends to run his New Tivoli on entirely novel lines. Mr. Gilbert Heron is to be the resident-manager.

We regret to announce the death, on Thursday in last week, at the age of sixty-three, of Mr. William Joseph Allan, a well-known Southport composer and musician, after a short illness. He had published many pieces with firms of eminence, and his "Jolly comrades" march, "Sweetest of all" valse, and "Auld Reekie" barn dance will be remembered.

The interment took place at Southport Cemetery on Monday. The Rev. Robert Sinker (vicar of St Paul's) officiated, and among the principal mourners were Mrs. W. J. Allan (widow), Messrs. Albert, Frederick, and Reginald Allan (sons), Mrs. Gill, several members of the Southport Opera House Orchestra (with which for many years deceased was identified), Mr. R. Singleton (secretary of the Southport Winter Gardens Company), and Mr J. H. Mertz (acting-manager of the Empire, Southport).

The question of a licence to sell intoxicants in Dewsbury's new Empire Palace and Theatre of Varieties, now in the course of construction, was recently discussed. Mr. Willey, who represented Mr. Edgar Fox, of Leeds, said that through a misapprehension plans of the new building had not been deposited the required period with the magistrates' clerk, and if the application for adjournment was not acceded to they would have to wait another twelve months. The venture would entail an expenditure of anything up to £30,000, and the work was now in progress. The Bench adjourned the application.

Dramatic and variety funds have benefited appreciably as the result of the recent Belfast Theatrical Gala. Out of a total of £130, Mr. Fred W. Warden, the hon. treasurer, has distributed £10 each to the Actors' Benevolent Fund, the Actors' Orphanage, the Variety Artists' Benevolent Fund, and the Music Hall Home. Other amounts are thus allocated:—Royal Victoria Hospital, Belfast, £50; Mater Infirmorum Hospital, Belfast, £20; Maternity Hospital, Belfast, £5; Ragged School, Belfast, £5; Children's Hospital, Queen-street, Belfast, £5; Whiteabbey Sanatorium, £5.

Mr. Fred Wood, of the Mariner's Arms, Marketplace, South Shields, was, at the annual meeting of the North and South Shields Licensed Victuallers' Association, held on Thursday, March 11, at the Criterion Hotel in the latter town, unanimously elected president for the ensuing year. Mr. Wood is well known to the profession as being the local agent for the M.H.A.R.A. and V.A.F.

That magnificent "pitch" for outdoor entertainments, the Happy Valley at Southend, now boasts the presence of the bandstand formerly on the summit of the cliff. On Tuesday, at a meeting of the Borough Council, the tender of Mr. Lyell Johnston, of Streatham, for its occupancy for the next three seasons at a rental of £750 per season was recommended for acceptance and agreed to.

An action arising out of a breach of contract came up in Greenock Sheriff Court on Tuesday afternoon, pursuers being the Greenock Empire Syndicate Company, and the defender Miss Madge Allen, comedienne and dancer, who had been interdicted from appearing at the Greenock Hippodrome this week. Damages were claimed in respect that Miss Allen had failed to implement her agreement with pursuers, and there was a counter claim for £50 damages. After a debate by parties' agents a settlement was agreed upon, Miss Allen agreeing to pay expenses. The Sheriff accordingly recalled the interim interdict, and granted two guineas expenses.

Mr. Gus Elen, the coster comedian, who has much benefited by his stay at Brighton, returns to the Coliseum on Monday.

Mr. Henri Gros, we regret to hear, is still confined to his house at 1, Taviton-street, Gordon-square, and we are informed he is likely to be absent from business for another three weeks at least.

The Stockham Ladies' Grecian Band will be seen and heard at the London Hippodrome on Monday. The band includes fifteen performers, among whom are the celebrated Stockham harp trio.

The anniversary of the Queen's, Poplar, will be held on Friday, April 16, when there will be one house only. Artists who will oblige the management on this occasion are asked to kindly send in their names at once.

Miss Ethel Arden and Mr. George Abel, who have provided amusement by the productions of The Lady and the Parson and Three of a Kind will shortly produce at one of the West End halls their new American sketch, entitled Town Hall, Tonight, written by Mr. Wm. M. Cressy.

Mr. W. H. McCarthy, secretary of the Water Rats, and accountant of the V.A.F., M.H.A.R.A., &c., is progressing favourably, after a rather serious operation, which took place early this week. He will be having the best of care for two or three weeks at a private nursing home at 2, Nottingham-place, W.

Sardou's famous drama La Tosca is being presented in cinematograph form at the Alhambra this week, the characters being sustained by M. Le Bargy, M. Alexandre, M. Mosnier, and Mme. Cecile Sorel, of the Comédie-Française and Odéon Theatre.

Mr. Herbert Shelley's company is producing a new one-act comedy at the Crouch End Hippodrome on March 29, entitled Apples and Pairs. The principal parts will be played by Mr. Harry Buss and Miss Nannie Neil.

Diamond and Beatrice carried their collecting card for the Music Hall Home Fund with them during their recent continental tour. They found their foreign brother and sister artists quite willing to subscribe when asked, and many francs were collected by them. Other English artists on the Continent might follow their example.

The production of For Love and My Country, the new war episode, expressly written for Mr. and Mrs. Jno. D. Saunders (Miss Dora de Winton), will necessarily have to be postponed for a few weeks. Miss de Winton and Mr. Saunders will appear at the London Pavilion for a short season in The Power of Music from Monday next.

We have already drawn attention in our Gossip columns to the action of the Music Hall Artists' Railway Association in expelling certain members on account of offensive behaviour to railway officials, and there is no need, therefore, to comment further on the facts or to mention the persons concerned. An unpleasant incident is closed.

Little Thomas, the veteran burnt-cork artist, had a great audience on Tuesday night at Stanley Hall, Junction-road, N., on the occasion of his golden wedding Bohemian Concert, and had a tremendous ovation when late in the evening—after singing with all his well-known power "I carry my sunshine with me" and "The wild man from Borneo"—he brought his wife on the platform, and made a humorous speech.

Earlier, he was presented with a magnificent loving-cup of precious metal, the gift of the chairman, Mr. George A. Touche. A capital programme was got through, the stage being managed by Messrs. Arthur and Harry Thomas. The chair was occupied during the earlier part of the evening by Mr. Richard Dawe, and Mr. Frank Flanigan was vice-chairman.

"What's Charles Worth?" which was produced by Mr. Jesse Sparrow at the Empire, Camberwell, on Feb. 15, has since been on the Stoll tour, at Birmingham, New Cross, Liverpool, Dublin, &c. In each place the salient points and hits of the skit, its comical situations and pertinent humour have been received with the warmest applause and general merriment. The cast includes Miss Sylvia Cavalho, Mr. Clifford Pembroke, Mr. Edmund Gurney, Mr. Alf. Donohoe, and Mr. Geo. Edwards.

Mr. Justice Swinfen Eady on Tuesday made an order for the winding-up of Camberwell Palace. Counsel said that petitioners, who were the directors, had decided that the company should be wound up compulsorily. The premises had been sold, and nothing was left in the possession of the company but a third mortgage and a small sum of cash. His Lordship, in making the order, directed the petition to be amended to make it appear that the petitioners were shareholders of the company.

Miss Ethel Dunbar and Miss Maude Shelton, assisted by Mr. Horace Sinclair, very successfully and appropriately produced on St. Patrick's Day their new Irish musical scena, The Carneys of Killarney at the Middlesex. The scena, which has been specially written for them by Mr. C. Fordwych, contains some bright dialogue and several excellent songs, duets, and dances. The reception was very flattering, and the scena, now being rapidly booked for town, will shortly be toured.

Mr. Neil Kenyon, who has been winning such high eulogium in the provinces with his "kail-yard cameos," has returned to town, and is this week giving delight to audiences at the Empress, Brixton, where a hearty welcome is reserved for him. The clever Scotch comedian is relying on his "posty" song with which to divert his audiences, and that he achieves his purpose to the fullest extent is demonstrated by successive roars of laughter. His creation of the old postman who so autocratically controls the correspondence of the village of Dunrobin is a masterpiece of make-up, and the witticisms which flow unceasingly are racy and piquant. The skill of the artist is further emphasised by the daring touch of pathos at the conclusion, which moves the audience to cheers.

Humour is also present in endless quantity in his song "Is that a fac'?" wherein Mr. Kenyon, in the character of a farm labourer with a wheelbarrow, "patters" to any extent, but still fails to satisfy the demands of the audience, who recall him enthusiastically.

Mr. Ben Woodger, secretary Music-hall Home, desires to thank Frank Weston, Empire Palace Co., Wolverhampton, for 12s. 6d., Percival Craig, Empire Theatre, Bradford, £1 6s., R. W. Duce, Granville, Walham Green, 15s., and H. Cole, Empire Theatre, Liverpool, £1 15s. 2½d., box collections at their halls. Also Fred Leighton (per Fred Neiman), King's Theatre, Gransborough, for taking a Home box. Will any other manager kindly do the same? A post card to the Secretary, 31, Wilson-road, London, S.E., will secure a box. Ladies and gentlemen who still have collecting cards for The Era Fund, should kindly send them along to the Hon. Treasurer, Mr. F. H. Pedgrift, The Era Office, 5, Tavistock-street, W.C.

We have pleasure in announcing the engagement of Mr. Ernst Warner to Miss Florence Warner (daughter of Mr. Richard Warner).

The revue to be written by Mr. George Grossmith, jun., for the Empire will be of a topical character, but will in no way interfere with the run of the successful ballet A Day in Paris, which is as popular as ever. Important engagements are being made for the novelty.

Tom Jones, Welsh comedian, has secured an excellent number from the pen of S. Handel Lancaster, entitled "Llewellyn in London," and is scoring heavily with it at the Palace, Reading, this week.

We regret to learn that Dr. Bodie's daughter is still lying seriously ill at Southport. She is being carefully nursed by her mother, Princess Rubie, who has hardly left her bedside since she was taken ill. She is also having the special attendance of two Liverpool medical specialists. We hope to hear of her speedy recovery.

Mr. K. Scott-Barrie will be making his first London appearance on Monday at the Tivoli, where he will be assisted by Wilmott Fowler at the piano.

Last week what might have proved a most serious accident to Miss Issa Steele was averted by the prompt action of Miss Maude May Murray. Whilst reading a letter by the dressing-room gas Miss Steele's large hat of feathers caught fire. Miss Murray instantly threw a wrapper over her friend and extinguished the flame. No injury was sustained beyond a severe shock.

Miss Maude May Murray, the beautiful electrical aerial dancer, after two weeks in Scotland, made her reappearance at the Empire, Middlesbrough, and met with a great reception from a crowded house. On her last night she was presented with a silver-mounted bag.

At the 599th meeting of the Executive Committee of the Music Hall Artistes and Railway Association on Wednesday, with Mr. J. W. Cragg (trustee) in the chair, Dr. W. Gorrie, of 12, King-street, Dundee, was appointed medical officer of the Association for that town. There were present Messrs. Harry Blake, T. C. Callaghan, J. Miller Northern, Sid Bandon, Alf. Herald, H. Herald, F. W. Millis, and Lieutenant Albini.

The greatest interest will attach to the immediate inclusion in "Urbanora" at the Palace Theatre of a complete record, expressly taken by the Urban Company for Mr. Alfred Butt, of "The Relief of Hastings" by motor-car on St. Patrick's Day. From the parade of the Guards at Chelsea Barracks at eight in the morning to the arrival of the flying columns of the Grenadiers, the Coldstreams, and the Scots at St. Leonards every phase of this picturesque and unprecedented military experiment will be shown.

A second item of paramount interest to patrons of the Palace will be the presentation on Monday next of a second series of the wonderful "Kinemacolor" animated scenes in the actual hues and delicate tints of nature—an amazing achievement in bioscopics which has been only three weeks before the public.

Mr. George Fuller has passed peacefully away at his residence in Delancey-street, Regent's Park, from cancer of the throat. Day and night nurses have been in attendance during the last four weeks, and death came as a happy release on Friday morning, after much suffering, at the age of thirty-nine. In professional, sporting, and athletic circles the deceased gentleman's passing away in the prime of his manhood will be sincerely regretted, and much sympathy will be felt for his widow, Miss Katie Lawrence.

The deceased was born at Hammersmith, and became associated with the business of the halls under the ægis of Mr. George Ware, who did so much to bring Miss Marie Lloyd to the front. Mr. Fuller was barely of age when he married Miss Lawrence, whom he met during her first engagement at the Oxford. Mr. Harry Rickards was at the wedding to give her away, and Mr. Eugene Stratton acted as best man. Some ten or twelve years since Mr. Fuller started in agency with Mr. David Hart, and later worked on his own.

Among his oldest friends were Mr. Pony Moore, and at the many festive gatherings at Moore House, Finchley-road, where the profession are always welcome, George Fuller was an honoured guest. The writer remembers a very pleasant function one Sunday evening, when the veteran minstrel, surrounded by some of the principal stars of the variety firmament, was presented with a handsome liqueur cabinet. The master of the ceremonies on that occasion was George Fuller. The remains of the deceased gentleman will be interred in Highgate Cemetery at 2 o'clock on Tuesday.

Mr. Charles W. Adams, who will become identified with the Gibbons-Barrasford interests when he takes up the position of manager of the Metropolitan circuit of the London, Provincial, and Continental Vaudeville Combination, received on Wednesday night a purse of gold, presented to him on behalf of the Canterbury staff and his friends on his relinquishing the position of manager at that house. Mr. Adams acknowledged, in a few happily expressed sentences, the kindness and thoughtfulness of the gift, which was handed to him by Mr. Robins.

The Music Hall Home Fund Committee meeting was held at the Empire, Camberwell, on Thursday. Amongst those present were Percy Ford (chairman), Harry Gage, C. Cornish, J. Traynor, Jesse Sparrow, John Brandon, W. S. Bassett, McDowell, and Benj. Woodger (secretary) who reported the receipt from Tom Branson, Queen's Saloon, Hastings, of 10s.; T. Hargreaves, Empire, Rochdale, 5s. 4d.; Mr. Hooper, The Artichoke, Peckham-road, 5s. 2d.; and Walter Norman's card for £1 10s.

Barney Armstrong entertained a few friends after the show on Wednesday night in honour of St. Patrick, and presented each guest with a "sprig" of shamrock, which he gathered himself while playing pantomime at the Gaiety Theatre, Dublin. A most enjoyable musical time was spent with Irish songs and selections until three in the morning, when the company finished up by singing "God Save Ireland and the King." The guests were all from the Hippodrome, Boscombe, and included Arthur H. Burdett (manager), F. Shackleton, (conductor), Cissie and Emme Ford, Cliff, Dixo, Beau and Belle, and Jimmy Steel.

Mr. Bury Shepard was in the chair at the Vaudeville Club smoking concert on Sunday night, when an excellent programme kept the guests until an early hour on Monday morning. Wilkie Bard, besides "An Idea for a Song," gave the popular "Sea Shells." From Old Drury he brought Mr. Aubrey Fitzgerald, who contributed amusing parodies in "There are tears in my eyes, Marguerite" and "I had a lovely garden." Marriott Edgar had "everybody" with him in the song of that name; Allan Shaw and Leipzig gave excellent exhibitions of legerdemain; and Wood, Wells, and Wilkins, Harry Latimer, Charles Austin, Robert Dennant, Hal Forde, Percy Yorke, the Ritter Brothers, and Dusty Rhodes also entertained. Mr. W. H. Clemart proposed a vote of thanks to the chairman, and Mr. Shepard suitably responded.

Mr. Harry Rickards hopes to arrive in England about the end of May, and is looking forward to seeing his many old friends, to whom he sends all good wishes.

Mr. Harry Rickards desires to warn proprietors against certain persons who have been presenting cards and stating that they represent his enterprises. No one has any right to use his name for the purpose of securing admittance to any theatre or music hall during his absence from England.

Mr. Cayley Calvert, that versatile and industrious sketch writer and author, has secured Mr. Horace Corbyn, baritone, and Mr. Edward Noble, tenor, for his new military scena "Come and join the Territorials."

Dr. Walford Bodie, who has appointed Messrs. Beecham and Wheeler his sole and exclusive agents, has evidently a keen appreciation of the business abilities of this young firm.

A waste-paper merchant, named Gottfried Martin, of Baroness-road, Shoreditch, was on Thursday remanded at the North London Police-court on the charge of having 32,173 copies of pirated music in his possession.

The marriage by special licence of Mr. Richard Cronin (Corbin and his dogs) to Miss Alice Brown, daughter of Mr. Harry Brown, of the Red Lion Hotel, Walsall, took place on March 12, in Manchester.

The Grays Thurrock Urban District Council invite tenders for the right to give performances in their public recreation ground known as the "Beach," from May 28 to Sept. 30. Full particulars and forms of tender may be obtained from the Council's Surveyor at his offices, High-street, Grays.

Mr. Cyrus Walling is very ill and in great need, and Mr. Harry Wright has collected for him the following sums:—Harry Wright, 2s.; Napier, 2s.; Whisper, 1s.; Ted E. Box, 1s.; Harry Kent, 1s.; Ugo Nap, 1s.; and Cedar and Elgar, 2s. Further subscriptions may be sent direct to the sufferer, who is living at 16, Sackville-street, Shambles-street, Barnsley.

Signor de Caro's Sicilian singers, who will make their first appearance in England at the Empire Theatre on Monday next, are the leading members of the grand opera company which was appearing at Messina at the time of the earthquake. They suffered many privations, and are visiting England to retrieve their fortunes.

The Welsh Miners are singing themselves into great public favour. They give their act in a picturesque reproduction of a Welsh mine, and have been introduced by Mr. Charles Beecham. They are meeting with great success this week at East Ham, where they have been selling copies of F. V. St. Clair's touching ballad, "Down in the mine," for the benefit of the widows and orphans of the victims of the West Stanley disaster. Last week they realised £9 for that most deserving fund.

We noticed a very familiar name on the bills and programmes at the Hippodrome, Hastings, last week, and if observations do not deceive us the young lady who styles herself Lena Pinaud, with her fine appearance, good singing and dancing, and extraordinary grotesque high kicking, is a chip of the old block of that ilk. We predict a great future for this young lady.

There was an invasion of Hastings last week, and almost as successful as the one by the Guards. There was, however, no excitement amongst the inhabitants—only at the Hippodrome, where it ran to fever-heat nightly over the bright and sparkling performance of the English Rose, Florrie Robina, who made such a success that after the second night she was not only booked to return at an early date, but was highly complimented by Mr. Fred Higham.

Mr. F. V. St. Clair gave his long-promised services in aid of the Church Lads' Brigade at the Town Hall, Whitchurch, on Wednesday (10th). The hall was packed, the lowest admission price being a shilling, and the élite of the county attended in large numbers. Mr. St. Clair was accorded a terrific reception, as was Fred Pullan. Fox and Melville illustrated several of St. Clair's patriotic songs, and the Misses Charlton gave a delightful little sketch, which created roars of laughter.

Captain Lambert, D.S.O., and the Rev. E. Veale have written Mr. St. Clair most complimentary letters, the reverend gentleman writing: "May I add that I much appreciate your songs and the excellent items rendered by your kind friends, and I feel sure that you are doing a great work in raising the tone of the public taste in providing for them so high-class a stamp of entertainment."

On behalf of the committee of the Music Hall Ladies' Guild, 61, New Oxford-street, W.C., Miss Melinda May (secretary) most gratefully begs to thank Miss Maggie Bowman, donation of 5s.; Mr. Micki Damala, donation of 2s. 6d.; Miss Bella Elmore (collecting), 17s.; Mrs. James Horne (collecting), 15s.; Miss Ettie Albert (collecting), 2s. 6d.; Mrs. Keen (Keen and Waller) (collecting), 3s.; Mr. Frank Harwood (collecting), 2s. 6d.; Miss Nora Stockelle (collecting), 2s. 6d.; Miss Lottie Albert, pair of new boots; Miss Blanche Glave (Mayoress of Holborn), box of new babies' clothing (through Miss Lottie Albert); Mrs Edward Laurie, box of very useful clothing; Miss Flo Banks, clothing; and Mrs. Smith (Smith and Johnson), for clothing.

Miss Flora Lington is still at the National Sanatorium, Bournemouth, by doctor's orders, and will be glad of any further contributions if posted direct to the Guild. All friends of the charity are heartily welcome to tea and receptions, held every Wednesday, four to five o'clock. Boots and clothing of every description urgently needed.

Miss May would like very much to thank Miss Lottie Albert, who has kindly interested herself in subscribing and bringing about the presentation of a handsome cheque. Miss May heartily thanks all the committee who have contributed towards the same, and fully appreciates their goodness.

At the weekly meeting of the committee of the Music Hall Ladies' Guild, held on Wednesday, March 10, the following letter, with an enclosed cheque, was handed to Miss Melinda May, the hard-working and energetic secretary of that excellent charity:—

"Dear Miss May,—We, the undersigned, members of the executive committee of the Ladies' Music Hall Guild, ask your acceptance of the enclosed cheque as a small token of appreciation of the interest displayed by you in your arduous duties. This mark of esteem is accompanied by the kindest thoughts of each member, and we are unanimous in the hope that you may be with us for many years to come to continue your duties in the interests of this charity which has certainly made rapid progress under your care:—Lottie Albert, Mrs. Ginnett, Mrs. Eugene Stratton, Marie Loftus, Belle Elmore, Louie Davis, Maude Mortimer, Sophie Shelly, Mrs. Smythson, G. E. Clarke, Lily Bradgate, Victoria Monks, Irene Ross, Mrs. Petit, Ray Wallace, Kate Vulcana, Maude Dunedin, Millie Payne, Mrs. Cowper."

SONGS, WRITERS, AND SINGERS

MR. C. R. WHITTLE has recently produced with the greatest success his comic song, "I'm Dunn—Mr. Dunn," by Charles Ridgwell, who wrote his celebrated "Billy Muggins." The number has been already placed on the market by Messrs. Francis and Day.

MESSRS. FRANCIS AND DAY have secured for publication Mr. Joe Archer's humorous number, "That is an Englishman's Home," by George Arthurs and A. J. Lawrance.

"ARE YOU SINCERE?" the popular American success, is reserved to Miss Daisy Dormer by Messrs. Francis, Day, and Hunter, who beg to notify managers and artists that anyone else performing the same is doing so without their authority.

MISS FLORRIE GALLIMORE produced a new number written and composed by Bert H. Delmar, at the Hippodrome, Stockton, on Monday. It made an immediate hit. So pleased was Miss Gallimore that she wired the author-composer her congratulations, and has arranged for another new number from the same pen.

MISS GRACIE GRAHAME has secured another winner from the author of most of her late successes, Bert H. Delmar. The words and music of "Jim, Jim," are in the usual original vein so successfully penned by this writer.

MISS MARIE BLYTHE has a new song entitled "Don't worry," with a most haunting refrain, written and composed by Bert H. Delmar.

MISS MADGE TEMPLE, who looks the essence of smartness, scored another triumph on Monday at the Tivoli, Crouch End Hippodrome, and Paragon, with her new song, "I'm looking for Mr. Wright," which should become the rage of 1909.

MRS. ARTHUR BEARLE has sold the performing and publishing rights of her late husband's famous song, "I think I'll be going home now," to Messrs. Price and Reynolds.

MISS GERTIE GITANA is making a hit on the Stoll tour with "When the harvest moon is shining, sweet Eileen," and "In the evening by the moonlight, dear Louise," and Von Tilzer's report record sales in Wales.

VON TILZER'S are experiencing an overflowing demand for their annual pierrot book, which includes all the latest popular successes of Sam Mayo, Harry Ford, Wilkie Bard, Harry Champion, Bernard Russell, George Formby, Fred Earle, T. E. Dunville, Whit Cunliffe, and Arthur Lennard. Such an excellent selection should meet the requirements of all types of comedians.

A NEW slide-song has just been issued by the Von Tilzer Co., entitled "Daddy, please come home again," with a set of twelve beautifully finished slides. Miss Hanid Alexander has just secured from these publishers a dainty little song, entitled "Rosemary," which she has produced this week with instant success.

IN spite of the wintry weather of the current month, the pierrots, alfresco, and seaside entertainers are making their preparations for the coming season. In another column M. Witmark and Sons announce a list of special numbers which are suitable for this purpose.

MISS TRULY SHATTUCK, who finished her engagement at Drury Lane Theatre on Wednesday last, opens at the Coliseum on Monday next. She includes in her répertoire the Lane's successes, "To the end of the world with you" and "As long as the world rolls on."

MISS EDITH COURTNEY, who is making a feature of the charming ballad "Some day you'll come back to me," opens at the Royal Hippodrome, Dublin, on Monday. Miss Courtney will return to London at the Coliseum on Easter Monday.

MISS DOROTHY ELLIOTT, the young daughter of the London's favourite contralto, Lucy Clarke, has shown great talent as a song-writer. M. Witmark and Sons have taken up her numbers, and have recently published one, entitled "Underneath the bright blue moon," which has achieved success in both England and America.

MISS DEBORAH VOLAR finished her pantomime engagement at the Prince's Theatre, Bristol, and this week is presenting her pantomime success, "I do, I do, I do," at the Empire in that city.

THE EUSTON.

The general scheme of amusement at this popular house does not boast of a comic star of the first magnitude, but the varied nature of the entertainment directed by Mr. Fred McAvoy brings forth much appreciation. One of the novelties of the week is the turn presented by the Four Mexicans, lariat throwers, whose skill with the lasso brings to mind the thrilling stories of the prairie told by Fenimore Cooper and Mayne Reid. There are two ladies in the troupe—one of them a finely-built and handsome girl, who makes a rope of considerable length circle round her body with remarkable celerity and in most bewildering fashion. As a tour de force she whirls a rope 56ft. in length, with an ever-increasing circumference, and with wonderful nicety and precision lassoes hand and foot the head of the troupe, whose bonds are increased with every undulation of the skilfully cast rope. The other members of the quartet are only a degree less skilful than this picturesque and comely girl.

Miss Hanid Alexander, at the piano, plays a transcription of the well-known ballad, "For all eternity," and sings a song that may be called "Hippopotamus." She is also an excellent step-dancer—an art that is shown to perfection by Mr. Frank Leon, a champion clog-dancer. Mr. Dusty Rhodes introduces himself with a number of gags, and then sings with considerable power the popular number, "Love me, and the world is mine." Mr. Harry Grey in his burlesque of a lady ballad singer considers an aggressive padding of the seat of honour to be within the legitimate bounds of humorous character-acting. Selbo, a clever club juggler, presents a turn that is the acme of refinement and skill, and his manipulation of plates thrown to great heights and caught with unerring accuracy behind his back, brings down the house. Miss Yolande Noble, an attractive burlesque actress, sings pleasantly of the advantages of health and wealth; and Miss Queenie Essex asserts her right to the title of dainty comedienne. Mr. Percy Honri's production of Concordia, which we recently noticed at the Oxford, is an original dream conception, invented, written, produced, and played by that artist, and the conglomeration of surprising transformations are significant of the imaginative power of the inventor, who has pressed into his service some versatile people, who give due effect to the eight scenes. Mr. Percy Honri wears the cap and bells of the jester, and in the demon wood—a clever and artistic piece of brushwork—he plays the concertina and heads the topsy-turvy revels of song and dance. Incidentally, in more prosaic surroundings, he plays the coster with considerable effect, and the romance of the "Man in the Moon" scene is dainty and captivating. Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope, with its interesting pictures, and Fred Land are other attractions in a bill that is heartily enjoyed. Mr. Victor Opferman is a capital musical-director, and the orchestra under him play con amore.

MUSIC-HALL CELEBRITIES.

MR. G. H. ELLIOTT.

(FROM A BIRMINGHAM CORRESPONDENT.)

Of the pantomime successes of recent years in Birmingham, none has been so striking as that of Mr. G. H. Elliott, the famous chocolate-coloured coon. The rapid rise of this clever young man in the profession has been most remarkable. From a comparatively unknown boy vocalist he has sprung into a proud position of fame. Although he has won the hearts of the public, however, Mr. Elliott does not mean to rest on his laurels. He believes in advertisement of the straightforward kind, whether a man is going up or down the ladder. If he is falling, advertisement will grip him and lift him back, and if he is rising, it will help him along quicker.

During his pantomime engagement in Birmingham he has carried out two clever ideas of his own. He purchased one thousand packets of chocolate, and sent them round to half a dozen charitable institutions for children. In acknowledgment he received some delightful letters of thanks, and it was very gratifying to him during a matinée performance to hear wild acclamations of delight from sixty or seventy deaf and dumb children who attended the theatre. They recognised in Mr. Elliott "Chocolate" of the pantomime, and they had had a taste of the good things he provided.

Mr. Elliott's latest is a "staggerer." Truly he gets home this time. The Prince of Wales's Theatre pantomime at Birmingham ends to-day, but it is very evident that Mr. Elliott's popularity does not end with it. He leaves an impression, as the following letterpress which appears on a huge orange-coloured poster on every hoarding in the city to-day shows:—

"Prince of Wales's Theatre, Birmingham.

"To the Public of Birmingham and District.

"Please accept my warmest thanks for the enthusiastic receptions accorded me during my pantomime engagement at the above theatre. Will be back shortly at a music-hall, and I am looking forward to renewing happy acquaintance.—Yours very truly,

"G. H. ELLIOTT,

"(Chocolate-coloured coon)."

A few particulars about the career of this "live," go-ahead entertainer will be read with considerable interest.

G. H. Elliott made his bow to the footlights when quite young, and played in the United States of America and Canada with Agnes Hearndon, and with Marguerite Marther (well-known American actresses at that time). He played Little Lord Fauntleroy in America, and besides musical plays, he appeareerd in The Pulse of New York, The Police Patrol, and various others, to be followed by successful appearances in the celebrated Primrose and West's Minstrel company. The latter was evidently where he found his metier, and he conceived straightaway an ardent affection for the coon busines, in fact, so much so that he began to literally live the life of a real coon, getting the while an innate knowledge of their individualities and making a complete study of them and their peculiarities. It is to this knowledge that he owes his present remarkable popularity. Favoured with an exceptionally pleasant voice and unusual dancing abilities, he could not fail to become a favourite of the first rank. He is beloved by all classes of audiences, and in most theatres the "gods" worship him. His work always bears a clean finish, and leaves a pleasing impression.

Columns could be written in praise of G. H. Elliott. As a dancer he is the poetry of motion personified, his steps being as original as they are graceful. As a coon vocalist he is the genuine article, and as a showman he could scarcely be beaten. It is seldom that such a number of talents are found under one hat, and they have made Elliott one of the most popular idols of the halls.

A star of no inconsiderable magnitude, Mr. Elliott enjoys the distinction of "topping the bill" in all parts of the kingdom. Naturally he is much sought after, but his services cannot be had for a long time to come, as he has been booked up solid till 1917 by Mr. Tom Pacey, who has acted as his agent for the past twelve years.

MISS VESTA VICTORIA.

A chat with Mr. Charles Beecham, the representative of Miss Vesta Victoria, reveals the fact that at the London Pavilion Miss Vesta Victoria has taken by storm the hearts of the patrons of this fashionable rendezvous, and the sequel to this success has been an offer by Mr. Frank Glenister for a return visit for an extended period after Miss Victoria has fulfilled a six nights' engagement in Edinburgh. Success breeds success, and offers have been made from the big circuits for Miss Victoria's services. Someone has written that the cause of this success is genius—that high mental endowment, that creative or inventive faculty, which is at once a law and model unto itself; that special intellectual capability that no training can give, and but few possess. Miss Victoria has been written about in the New York Evening Journal by the famous Nell Brinkley in her usual racy American style:—"Vesta Victoria is the Prince of jesters of the English music halls. So many you see that crack their jokes and caper in her trail, but Vesta trills the whistle, swings the big bâton, sports the bearskin shako, and walks backward at the head of the squad. She's the raggiest ragtime song. She the best verse in the whole blessed pome. She's like the taper-faced girl that wore a Buster Brown collar—and all the little Bettys that we see framed up in Buster Browns, too; but none of 'em ever look like the taper-faced girl looks in her Buster Brown. It's like that with Vesta Victoria and the other little Britonese music hall Bettinas. They grin, in grotesque absurdities of frock and hat. They skip and simper in white baby-dress with pale pink ribbons. They warble songs with bashfully naughty and funny titles. And we like them bullee! But they don't do any of these three things as Vesta Victoria does. She's the Hurdy-Gurdy that first plinked out "Waiting at the church." And now she has some others. "Is anybody looking for a widow?" with a big white bow chucked under her chin; with her hands shyly folded, and sometimes flapping like Dutch windmills. And then "Now I have to call him father," with an aching face, "in more senses than one," and an uncanny flannel skating frock. Vesta Victoria isn't pretty—not very much pretty—but she sports the bearskin shako and sways the big bâton in the English squad."

Miss Victoria will be seen at all the principal London halls during the next few months; some entirely new character studies and sings will be forthcoming from one who has been too long away from the old country.

FRANCIS, DAY, & HUNTER, 142, Charing Cross Rd., London, W.C.

OPENING OF THE KING'S THEATRE AND HIPPODROME, DUNDEE.

This magnificent and most up-to-date theatre, the lessees of which are the United County Theatres, Ltd., was most auspiciously opened on Monday afternoon, the 15th inst., by Lady Dunedin, of Stenton, amidst scenes of the greatest enthusiasm, the huge building being packed to its utmost capacity. Lady Dunedin was accompanied by Lord Dunedin (who wore Highland dress), Mrs. Redford, Colonel Bannerman, Colonel Ferguson Buchanan, and Mrs. and Miss Ferguson Buchanan. Amongst the others who took a prominent part in the proceedings were Mr. G. B. Paul (who has been largely instrumental in the erection of the new enterprise), Mrs. Paul and Miss Paul, ex-Lord Provost McGrady and Mrs. McGrady, Mr. Alfred Moul (London, Chairman of the United County Theatres, Ltd.), Mr. Gardiner Sinclair, and others.

Lady Dunedin laid the memorial stone of the new theatre in the wall of the main entrance hall. She was presented by the architects, Messrs. H. and F. Thomson, with a silver trowel, and Mr. Peter McLauchlan, the representative of the builders, presented her ladyship with an ivory mallet. Lady Dunedin then declared the stone "well and truly laid," and wished the King's Theatre every success.

Mr. James Lockhart, of Maxwell, Sons, and Co., asked Lady Dunedin to accept a silver standard lamp, which she employed to switch on the whole of the electric lights in the theatre. On this being done the great audience in the building cheered loudly. Lady Dunedin and party then made their way to the stage, which was decorated with palms and flowers. Mr. G. B. Paul presided, and introduced Lady Dunedin, who finished up a capital speech by wishing every success to the beautiful King's Theatre and the flourishing city which it adorned. A handsome bouquet was presented to Lady Dunedin by Miss Paul. Lord Dunedin also spoke a few words, after which Mr. Alfred Moul, in proposing a vote of thanks to Lady Dunedin, stated on behalf of the lessees of the King's Theatre that it would be their duty to instruct and amuse as much as they possibly could. He was perfectly sure the audiences would enjoy the programmes to be submitted in that house, whether they were tragedy, drama, or the best and cleanest of variety entertainment. Under the direction of Mr. Ernest G. Summerfield, the magnificent orchestra discoursed splendid music. A banquet was afterwards held.

The site, which is the most central obtainable in the city, is an ideal one, being practically isolated, with frontages to two of the main thoroughfares. The building is a structure worthy of the town in every respect, and will form an outstanding feature of the architecture of the city.

The entrances for stalls and circle are from the front in Cowgate, while the pit entrance is from St. Andrew's-street, and the "gallery" enter from the back lane off St. Andrew's-street, the entrances and exits being so arranged that the two performances a night can be housed with the greatest facility. The seating accommodation is over 2,000, the distribution of seats being in the following proportion:—Stalls 315, circle 403, pit 600, gallery 700, total 2,019; but by the utilisation of the promenades about 2,500 persons can be entertained at the same time.

A special feature of this theatre—a new one in Dundee—is the spacious waiting halls for early-door patrons, and smoking lounges are provided for the different parts of the house. The whole building is elaborately furnished and decorated, and all fittings are of the most modern type. The building itself is constructed in red stone of a pleasing tint. The main entrance, as stated, is from Cowgate. Entering thereat, the visitor finds himself in a beautiful vestibule, marble-paved and artistically decorated. An adjunct to the vestibule is a waiting-room for those who seek early admission to the pit. A broad flight of marble steps leads to a spacious hall, the ante-chamber to the stalls, access to which in turn is obtained by passages on the left and right. From the vestibule upwards a spacious staircase leads to the grand circle. The staircase from the vestibule upwards and downwards to the stalls is intersected by an ornamental barrier with hand-rail. The first house empties by one passage; the second enters by the other. Hence there will be no crushing, and the interval will be of the briefest possible duration. The auditorium is in the French Renaissance style. Mural ornamentation in delicate cream is delicately picked out in gold in effective contrast to the rich crimson of the papering and hangings. But the chef-d'œuvre of internal embellishment is the treatment of the dome, which towers 60ft. above the stalls. Its great expanse is filled in with allegorical paintings, bold in outline, warm in colour, and effective in the extreme. Above the proscenium the curving front is similarly decorated. This work is by F. De Jong and Co., London. The proscenium is flanked by rouge marble beautifully variegated. The stage, which is one of the most commodious of provincial stages, measures 60ft. wide and 48ft. deep.

The inaugural programme was an exceedingly strong and enjoyable one. At the head of affairs was Bransby Williams, who received a perfect ovation for his masterly impersonations from Charles Dickens; the Four Royal Scots introduced some delightful harmonising and tricky dancing into their musical sketch entitled When the Cat's Away; Geo. Auger and company presented their playlet, Jack, the Giant-Killer, treating it in a humorous manner; Grahame and Harrington evoked applause for their rendering of A Daughter of Pleasure; Sidy Nirvanah and her posing white horse proved an artistic turn; Victor and Louis were humorous in their comedy act, The Golfer and the Caddie; Hamilton Hill sang in his best style "She was a grand old lady"; Wallon performed remarkable juggling feats; and the Kingscope completed the bill of fare.

During the evening Mr. Alfred Moul, chairman and managing-director of the United County Theatres, Ltd., appeared on the stage, and thanked the audience for their patronage, and promised that no effort would be wanting on the part of the lessees to bring to the King's artists such as the public wanted and were entitled to expect in a city like Dundee. Mr. C. W. Young, late assistant manager of the New Cross Empire, is the manager of the new house.

LONDON VARIETY THEATRES.

THE OXFORD.

The Price of a Girl, a domestic drama, in four acts, which was produced for the first time in the West End on Monday at the Oxford, might be developed with three hours' traffic of the stage into a melodrama that would be tolerable at a minor provincial theatre; but the process of compression rendered necessary by the "compromise" limits, has resulted only in incoherence and absurdity, and so crude a production has rarely been seen in a variety theatre. Mr. Augustus Moore's company did their very best with poor material. They included:

Rev. James Palmer .....Mr. J. H. Clynds
Letty Palmer .....Miss G. Le Sage
Lady Castle .....Miss Ivy Williams
Frank Hailston .....Mr. Courtney Foote
Dr. Hugh Weyman ..Mr. Stephens Wentworth
Polly Clay .....Miss Polly Emery

The "girl" is Letty Palmer, the daughter of a clergyman, who, by the machinations of the villain, Frank Hailston, is persuaded by specious promises to enter the employment of a lady milliner, Lady Castle. Letty, notwithstanding that her salary is £100 a year (living in)—a sum that should have raised the suspicions of her friends—has a most extraordinary desire to get into debt, and is very soon presented with a bill of £125, with a request for immediate payment from Lady Castle, who suggests that so pretty a girl can easily find a man to discharge such a trifling obligation. Frank Hailston offers the money, but insists that Letty shall come to his rooms to fetch it. She escapes from his clutches, only to find that she is locked out by the crafty Lady Castle. The villain still pursues her; but has to reckon with the hero, Dr. Hugh Weyman. The two men meet in Bond-street, and after a round or two Hailston is knocked out, Letty is rescued, and appears in full wedding costume in the last scene, wherein her father is saved from the brokers by the £50 saved up, and placed at his service just in the nick of time by a poor work-girl. The old man gives his blessing to the hero and heroine, and protects the villain from the villagers, who have doused him in the horse pond.

Mr. J. H. Clynds is a model of dignity and fatherly solicitude as the Rev. James Palmer; Miss G. Le Sage shows promise as Letty Palmer; Miss Ivy Williams is effective as Lady Castle; Mr. Courtney Foote as the villain foiled is at his best in the final scene; Mr. Stephen Wentworth makes good use of slender opportunity as the hero; and Miss Polly Emery puts plenty of life into the part of Polly Clay.

Mrs. Lewis Waller, who was announced to appear in the well-known sketch The Admiral's Lady, was prevented from doing so on Monday.

Early in the evening is seen the extraordinary dancing turn of the Marquards, who, in their wild whirlings, upset the whole of the furniture in an apartment, and finally roll themselves up in the carpet. Mendel, with his delightful music, is a strong attraction on any programme, and his improvising on a theme supplied by a member of the audience shows him to be not only a master of composition, but a pianist of exceptional skill. There are many other entertaining turns in Mr. Blyth Pratt's exceptionally strong programme, which is most artistically accompanied throughout by the orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Leon Bassett.

THE BEDFORD.

Mr. Gilbert Heron is presenting at the Bedford this week the sketch Saved by Wireless, which is bound to make its mark on account of its novelty. It is suggested by a recent occurrence, when the use of the Marconi system by the brave Binns undoubtedly saved the lives of a liner's passengers. The scene is a Marconi station, and there is a set of Marconi wireless instruments, which are most interesting, and give the touch of realism which cannot fail to impress an audience. The instruments are cleverly handled, and give a clear demonstration of the working of this modern marvel. The story told is but a brief one, but nevertheless dramatic. Dick Medway is an operator, and an old friend of his, Harry Grant, comes to see him. Grant is employed by one, Lancaster, a rogue, who, using Grant's knowledge of wireless telegraphy, has induced him to get Medway away from his post for a while and take charge of the station, and once having command of the instruments, he first obtains results of horse races in Paris and then bets on them in New York, for by this trickery he outpaces the usual channel for results, and so hopes to win a fortune. They start their scheme, but at that moment a message comes from the ocean that the ship on which Grant's wife and child are sailing is in danger and burning. Grant is in despair, and refuses to go on with Lancaster's dirty work, which leads to a quarrel; but Grant gets Lancaster in his power, and orders him away. Medway returns, and by a master stroke gets into touch with another vessel, and sends her to the rescue, and amidst breathless excitement Grant learns that his wife and child are safe. It is a thrilling little play and splendidly acted. Mr. Gilbert Heron is very fine as Grant, while Mr. G. Belmore makes a capital Medway. Mr. Arthur Ross depicts the scheming Lancaster in an admirable manner. A clever little sketch of an old Irishwoman is given by Miss Jessie Dennis, who supplies the lighter side. A most hearty reception was given to this novel and interesting production.

In addition to the above production, Mr. B. P. Lucas has an interesting bill this week. Miss Lily Burnand is doing very well with her "Merry Widow" song, which is very amusing. Mr. Randolph King gives a clever quick-change sketch, into which he introduces ventriloquism, which helps it considerably, and makes it quite a fresh style of quick-change business. Mr. King received a very flattering reception for his clever turn. The Violet Shelley Trio appear in a most diverting scena, The Ideal Woman, which keeps all in a shout of laughter, and scores a marked success. The Three Alskarnos are clever risley acrobatic comedians, while the Seabornes give a neat display of equilibristic feats and acrobatic acts, which are performed in a most finished manner. Nora Stockelle is a clever comedienne, who is rapidly coming to the front, and she charms all by her dainty manner and clever dancing. Billy McClain and Carlisle and Baker are a trio of lively coloured comedians, who sing and dance to the delight of all. Two of the performers are excellent pianists, and their clever playing of the same piece on two pianos earned terrific applause for them. The Two Jays are a couple of diverting cross-talk comedians, who raise many laughs with their witticisms. Ida Brophy is a very fetching young lady, who sings of her "Old French bonnet" in the most captivating manner possible, and also gives a capital step-dance to conclude. Mr. Geo. Shurley, comedian, appears early in the evening, and scores with his song, "Father give us back to me"; and Harry Bland, another comic fellow, puts all in a good humour with his number, "Oh, what a face!" Henshall and Foster, in their scena Cabby Knows His Fare, and the Bioscope complete the programme. Mr. Donald Brown is, as usual, at his post to welcome his patrons and study their comforts at this cosy little hall.

HACKNEY EMPIRE.

The programme at this popular hall is, as usual, capitally varied, and business continues to be exceptionally good. Bellew and Stock's company, who form the attraction at the bottom of the bill, are presenting a sketch, entitled An Outside Chance, with Master Edward Garratt in the principal part. The plot, which deals with a supposititious infant in arms taking the place of a drugged jockey, enables Master Garratt to enact a similar rôle to that which he made famous in A Little Stranger. He is, beyond doubt, an exceptionally clever and amusing young comedian, and his success was never for a moment in doubt. Very efficient support was accorded by Mr. C. F. Howard as Dick Herriott, Mr. W. R. Percival as Slim Jim, Mr. H. Johnson as Jorkins, Mr. Charles J. Barber as Anna Higgins, and Mr. H. Bell as Malsom. The fall of the curtain was the signal for great applause.

Carlos Menard, in imitations, proved himself a skilful violinist, with a good sense of the humorous; Roze and Calvert, in comedy business, made a good impression, the gentleman being a good comedian. On the evening of our visit Sam Mayo was unable to appear, Fred Earle taking his place, with such acceptance that he sang three songs. Fred Barnes, a light comedian, made a distinct hit. This artist has a good voice and an excellent stage presence, and his turn was quite to the taste of the audience. His first song was the popular "I don't care if there's a girl there," which he gave with plenty of go. His second was a descriptive number, "The black sheep of the family," which he rendered with good effect. Altogether, he is to be congratulated.

Guyer and Valli, in a comedy act, gained applause. The lady is a clever dancer and the gentleman a smart comedian. Their act, which finishes with an extraordinary dance, in the course of which all the stage furniture is upset, was very smartly performed, and created a good deal of amusement. Henriette de Serris presents a charming series of art reproductions. These comprise tableaux vivants, statuary, and bas-reliefs. Altogether, they are very beautiful, particularly faithful being Millet's well-known painting "The Angelus" and another entitled "A Summer Evening." The last reproduction, "Forward," was also very effective, and it is needless to say the act was received with well-merited applause. May Edouin, a musical comedy artist, submits a protean performance that is distinctly good, her studies of the Chinaman, Spanish girl, and ballad vocalist being very faithful. The laughing song which concludes her turn deserves especial commendation. The Brothers St. Clair are a couple of skilful trick cyclists, whose business amused the house, the game of football which they introduced being very interesting. The Bioscope is, as usual, excellent, and is greatly appreciated. Mr. Greco's fine orchestra is a prominent feature of the evening; and Mr. Percival and Mr. Trussell, the acting and assistant acting-manager respectively, are attentive in the front of the house.

We are sorry to hear of the serious illness of Mr. George Barclay, who is confined to his bed with a complication of pleurisy and pneumonia.

Mr. Jack Woolf has acquired the Empire Hall, at the rear of Wonderland. After the necessary alterations and reconstruction he will open it with a novel entertainment.

FLORRIE FORDE'S BENEFIT.

GREAT ENTHUSIASM AT THE PRINCE'S.
BOUQUETS AND PRESENTS GALORE.

The popularity of Miss Florrie Forde was never so manifest as it was last night, when, on the occasion of her benefit performance, a crowd that thronged every part of the Prince's Theatre cheered her every song and greeted her every appearance with boisterous applause. At the end of almost every act there were bouquets to hand up from the orchestra. There were large bouquets, small bouquets, spray bouquets, and shower bouquets of every description, but all showing the admiration in which she is held. Nor was she alone favoured, for there were also gifts for many of the other artists.

The performance itself was specially attractive. James Elvio was given a well-deserved rest, his place being taken for the occasion by Mr. Nathaniel Hepworth, the genial acting-manager, who is shortly leaving to take up the managership of the Leeds Royal Theatre. In addition, a large number of artists had come from the music halls in Bradford, Leeds, and Halifax to add to the evening's enjoyment.

The more serious and, from some aspects, the most pleasing, portion of the entertainment was during the seventh scene, when a number of interesting presentations were made. Mr. Francis Laidler, the proprietor-manager, stepped on to the stage and delivered a happy little speech. He commenced by saying that, as was well known, the pantomime had been a record so far as the Prince's Theatre was concerned. They had still to run one week, making eleven and a half weeks in all, which, so far as he was able to gather, was the longest run of any pantomime in the kingdom, with the exception of Drury Lane. Every member of the company would agree with him when he said that much of the success was due to his principal boy, Miss Florrie Forde. Not only was she an able artist, but her personal charm had endeared her to all. She was held in the highest esteem by every member of the company, and was simply worshipped by the children. "It is artists of the character and disposition of Miss Florrie Forde," he concluded, "who have raised the tone of the theatre and the music halls to such a high level as it is to-day."

With a few appropriate words, Mr. James Elvio, on behalf of the company, then presented Miss Forde with a handsome silver electric centre lamp, suitably inscribed; and Mr. Bert Byrne was chosen to give her a fine picture of herself by a local artist from an anonymous donor. Many other gifts were then presented from private friends.

Miss Forde was loudly cheered on coming forward to respond. She thanked the company and the public generally for the kind way they had treated her. As regarded any work she might have been able to do for the charities, she was glad to say that next year she was to be in pantomime not far from Bradford, and she would no doubt be able to continue the work which had made her so happy.

At the request of Mr. Laidler, the audience sang "For she's a jolly good fellow," which he said was quite in keeping, as she was principal boy.

Mr. H. T. Butler, the stage-manager, and Mr. Henry Rushworth, the musical-director, were the recipients of a gold pencil-case and a box of silver-backed brushes respectively, the gifts of Miss Forde.

Both replied happily, Mr. Rushworth mentioning the interesting fact that he would also be connected with Miss Forde during the next pantomime season as musical-director. This was afterwards explained by Mr. Laidler. Miss Forde is to be his principal boy in The Babes in the Wood at the Leeds Royal, which he has lately acquired, and where Mr. H. Rushworth is to go as musical-director in a week or so.

After the performance the presents and bouquets were shown on the stage. They completely covered the tops of two large tables.—Daily Telegraph, Bradford, March 3, 1909.

ABRIDGMENTS OF SPECIFICATIONS.

21,359.—Roundabouts. Taylor, J. M., of Omaha, Nebraska, U.S.A.

Two series of cars are run in opposite directions in sinuous courses, that continually cross and recross one another. One set of cars are attached by chain-engaging devices to a chain (26) (Fig. 1.), and the others to a chain (27), which runs slightly above the first. The chains are driven by sprocket-wheels (24, 25, 24', 25') connected with a driving-shaft (20). Various guide and tightening wheels are arranged, as shown. The cars (Figs. 2 and 3) are mounted on axles (53) pivoted and running in guides (55). Arms (58) attached to the axles run in guides (54) and carry chain-engaging devices (58, Fig. 2). These devices are provided with rollers (65, 69), and are made telescopic, so that on reaching a releasing-device (34) they are lifted up, so as to cross the chain (27). A slot (30) is bridged by two spring-pressed pieces (38, Fig. 15) on either side, which are pushed apart when an engaging device passes on the chain (27). By thus employing two chain-engaging devices, one is always in use, and the cars keep their places on the chain. Special links

FIG.15.

UNITED STATES AMERICAN PATENTS.

Advice to hand informs us that Mr. J. L. Plimpton, of Boston, Mass., has recently secured the grant of an American patent, in addition to an English one, for his improved roller-skate. The invention relates to guidable curved-running roller-skates, and in this class the rollers are applied to the stock or foot-stand of the skate, so that the said rollers may be cramped or turned, so as to cause the skate to run in curved lines, either to the right or left by the turning, canting, or tilting of the stock or foot-stand. That a great boom in the pastime of roller-skating, both here and in the United States, has set in is amply evidenced of late, and British inventors should not be slow in availing themselves of the rights conferred by American patents for their invention, equally as the 'cute Yankee promptly makes unto himself the privileges of the English patent. Readers of this column desiring information as to cost and procedure cannot do better than put themselves in communication with the manager of this department, as above.

To Stage Machinists and Electricians.—The Manager will be pleased to receive particulars of any new stage appliances or ideas for same for illustration in this column.

At the Hippodrome, Margate, this week's all-round excellent programme is contributed to by Bayne and Hope in a pleasing and well-acted scena An Emperor's Divorce, dealing with the well-known story of Napoleon and Josephine; Herbert Rule, the eccentric comedian; Amy Lloyd, comedienne; Harry Lawson, comedian; Owen McDiveney, in character sketches from Dickens' works; Marie Stroud, comedienne; and Randolph Slater, comedian. The Hippodrome pictures include two good films, one depicting the Land of the Midnight Sun, and the other the dramatic story of The Hump-backed Man.

A return to variety entertainment is meeting with generous support this week at the Royal, Worcester. The Havanas troupe of acrobats are the star turn, and they justify their reputation; Abel and Welsh are wonderfully clever contortionists; and Fred Carey, a talented comedian, always finds a welcome at Worcester. He has some new songs, and his patter is funnier than ever. Wilson Blackledge is also a successful comedian, and he finds music a useful aid; Walter Buxton has a baritone voice of nice quality; the Sisters Hamfel are amusing comediennes, and Willie Hicks a funny vocalist.

The latest quotations for music-hall shares are as follow: Alhambra, 1 7-16; Canterbury, ⅞; Electric Theatres, 24s. 6d.; Empire, 15s. paid, 1⅛; Empire, 10s. paid, 1⅛; London Pavilion Ordinary, 3⅛; London Pavilion Preference, 5; Metropolitan, 21-22; Moss' Empires, 5⅛; Moss' Empires 5 per cent. Preference, 4⅛; Oxford, 5⅛; Palace, 19s. 6d.; Tivoli, 6⅛; Variety Consolidated Theatres, 9-16.

SHILLING COLLECTION FOR THE MUSIC HALL HOME.

3,304 SHILLINGS.

In again directing the attention of our readers to The Era's Shilling Fund on behalf of the Music Hall Home we are in the happy position of being able to associate with the appeal thus being made the name of the foremost music hall comedienne—Miss Marie Lloyd. It seems scarcely necessary to remind our readers of the deep interest Miss Lloyd has ever taken in matters affecting the welfare of her brothers and sisters of the variety profession. It is her desire that her "year" will be marked by a considerable increase in the subscriptions of previous years, and she therefore, through The Era, commends the Music Hall Home to the charitably-minded. Mr. Thomas Barrasford, the President of the Fund, is again this year exerting himself in its behalf, and this fact is sufficient indication that he is satisfied as to the way in which the institution is being conducted, and that he considers it worthy of support.

Mr. Ben Woodger, the secretary of the Music Hall Home, tells us that in 1907 the inmates averaged ten, but that in 1908 there have been as many as twelve. The address of the Home is 31, Wilson-road, Camberwell, and there the matron (Mrs. Frain) busies herself for the comfort and convenience of her "family." At present there are eleven of these, and the desire is to increase the number, which can only be done when sufficient funds for the purpose are collected. During the past twelve months three or four of the inmates have recovered their health and strength sufficiently to enable them to look for engagements. These secured, they left the Home, and the vacancies thereby created were immediately filled up. Now, this Home requires keeping up, and it cannot be kept up on air. There is no need for us to refer to all the good work which has been performed by the institution in the past, as that must for the most part be within the recollection of our readers. The ages of the inmates range from fifty to seventy-six. In all probability these men will be maintained in the Home until the day of their death, and their funeral expenses paid for out of the funds of the Home.

The Era's* Shilling Fund is the main source of income to the Home, and this means of sustenance is added to by the donations of artists, either given directly, or through the collecting boxes through which many managers of variety theatres collect pennies from "dead-heads" and from artists who desire free admission.

Anyone can be supplied with a collecting-card by sending a postcard to Mr. Woodger.

Briefly, we may once more repeat that the objects of the Music Hall Home Fund are to provide shelter for deserving members of the variety profession who have been stricken with poverty or illness in their declining years, or who have in other ways fallen on evil times. Mr. F. H. Pedgrift, the hon. treasurer, will be pleased to receive filled-up collecting cards addressed to him at The Era, 5, Tavistock-street, Strand, W.C., and to acknowledge them in these columns.

THE SHOWMAN WORLD.

Penzance Fair.

We are glad to announce that the Penzance Fair dispute has been settled by mutual consent, all parties now being in perfect accord. The agreement as drawn up after the conference at the Penzance Town Hall on Jan. 26 last has been accepted by all the defendants, and judgment by consent will be now recorded in the High Court of Chancery and most costly litigation avoided. This end of the matter is one the Showmen's Guild has sought to ensure since the dispute began. It is highly gratifying to the Rev. T. Horne, who has been the peacemaker all through the long and difficult negotiations, to know that he has not laboured in vain. Great praise is due to Messrs. Hancock, Anderton and Rowland, and Brewer, the showmen defendants, for the loyal manner in which they supported the Guild Chaplain in the matter. Mr. Norton, hon. Guild agent for the West of England, also deserves recognition and hearty thanks for able and important work done, as the man on the spot, with inside knowledge of the Guild plan for a peaceful solution of the questions in dispute between the showmen and the Corporation.

Fellow Workers for Peace.

The Mayor of Penzance (Mr. A. K. Barnett) and the Town Clerk (Mr. T. H. Cornish) have in every way (consistent with their responsibilities to the ancient borough they so sedulously serve) aided the Guild Chaplain to settle the points at issue on broad and fair lines with justice to both sides. Again we say, "All's well that ends well," and we gladly chronicle the triumph of peace at Penzance.

The Defence of Bedford Fair.

The organising chaplain reported to the committee the steps taken by the Guild Executive Committee to defend Bedford Fair, now threatened with abolition. A discussion took place on the chaplain's report, in which Messrs. Ball, Turner, Wilson, Forrest, F. Gray, W. Le Neve, and F. Wilson took part. The outcome of the discussion was that the secretary was instructed to communicate with Messrs. Thurston and Sons, Biddall Bros., and other showmen directly interested in the preservation of Bedford Fair as to the necessary steps to be taken locally to rally the people of Bedford to defend their fair rights, threatened with extinction.

The Gipsy Crusade in Surrey.

On the secretary's report upon this matter, the vigilance of the Executive officials of the Guild was warmly approved. The necessity for still maintaining this attitude of watchfulness was insisted upon by the meeting, and the Executive officers were instructed to continue their precautionary work.

Guild subscriptions, 1909: Mr. C. Cain, 10s.; Mr. E. Searson, 5s.

Sinclair's Portable Theatre.

The Victoria Theatre, now in the third month of its visit to Bridgend, is doing excellent business, and among the most popular of the plays have been those of local origin, such as The Maid of Cefn Ydfa, Twm Shon Catti, and The Cardiff Criminal. Mrs. M. C. Sinclair, the proprietress, occasionally appears, and is always a favourite.

Guild members enrolled at Stockport Fair by Messrs. Hurst and Mercer: Messrs. Wm. Smith, M. Whatmore, A. Whatmore, J. Middlebrook, E. Whatmore, and C. Murphy. From Stockport the greater number of these entertainers will attend the Spring Fair at Palncroft and Hillkirk Street, Beswick, Manchester.

The Chittock Fund.

We acknowledge additional subscriptions to hand: Chiappi and Sons, £1; Mr. Roche, 2s. 6d. We have been informed that the generous help accorded to Mr. and Mrs. Chittock in their distress has enabled them to meet the difficult position in which they found themselves involved, owing to unfortunate circumstances, at the beginning of the year. It is a satisfaction to us to know that the response of their friends has been adequate and that Mr. and Mrs. Chittock, so highly esteemed in the showman world, have found so many sympathetic hearts ready to assist them in the time of their necessity.

Particular reference must be made to Mrs. E. J. Panton, of Torrington-square, W.C., who has taken so much pains, and of her kindly charity given so much time, to so deserving a cause.

We are quite sure the many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Chittock in the showman world will wish them, as we do, a successful season in the coming London pleasure fair round.

Notes from Wales.

The new skating-rink at Neath promises to be a good investment to the proprietors, Messrs. Mansel Griffiths, Mr. John Lloyd, Mr. B. P. Rees, and Mr. Chas. Reed. The management should try and arrange balcony seats for spectators at a nominal charge, which should prove a good asset.

The Late Mlle. Royal.

The funeral of the lady professionally known as "Mlle. Royal," described as the biggest woman in the world, weighing upwards of 32st., took place on the 11th inst., thousands of townspeople and others witnessing the procession as it left the residence of the deceased, 3, Caroline-street, and wended its way to the New Cemetery, where the interment took place. The coffin was of extraordinary dimensions, probably the largest ever seen in Cardiff. It was 6½ft. in length, 3ft. in breadth, and nearly 2ft. in depth, and the weight of the coffin and body—which were carried out of the house to the funeral car by fully a dozen employees of Messrs. Bostock and Wombwell and Mr. John Lloyd, who acted as bearers—was nearly 6cwt.

The chief mourners were Mr. J. H. Laubender (husband of the deceased), Mr. and Mrs. J. Priest, Mr. J. Lloyd, Mrs. Cousins, Mrs. Gaze, and Mr and Mrs. Scott, and amongst those who followed the remains to their last resting-place were a number of show-people from Bostock and Wombwell's Circus and other exhibitions in the town. The lid of the coffin was covered with handsome floral wreaths, placed thereon, amongst others, by Mr. Laubender, Mr. and Mrs. Grimple, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd, Mrs. Cousins, Mrs. Scott, Mrs. and Miss Gaze, Mr. and Mrs. J. Priest, and Mrs. Cohen.

The officiating clergyman at the cemetery was the Rev. Gilbert Heaton, M.A., vicar of St. Mary's. To receive the coffin, which was lowered into its last resting-place by means of eight pairs of strong webs, the grave had to be made practically double its usual size.

The deceased, who was a native of Birmingham, was about 48 years of age, and was described by Messrs. Barnum and Bailey, of whose great show she was one of the chief attractions for a considerable time, as the stoutest lady they had ever seen.

From the Midland Round.

Our Midland correspondent sends us news of the fair at Cradley Heath. The concerns are: P. Collins's great wonderland show, with up-to-date films and variety programme; the same firm's motor-car machine, the steam yachts, and the haunted house. The other entertainers are: Mrs. Hayes, with steam swings and overboats; variety stalls and throwing games by Messrs. Walton, Whyall, Harris, Wagstaffe, Cullin, Birch, Hayes, Dobson, Ford, and Humphries; and other minor amusements by various caterers.

RINKING GOSSIP.

It is now the fashion, the Sunday Times points out, for a smart young married hostess to collect her guests together for a skating party. At Earl's Court last week Lady Clementina Waring's guests included Hon. Mrs. Edward Stonor and her daughter, Miss Menda Ralli, who is likewise an adept either on the ordinary or the roller skate. Other frequenters of these now ultra-fashionable "rinks" are all the Crichton family, including Viscount and Lady Mary Crichton, Captain Hon. George Crichton, Hon. Gerald and Lady Evelyn Ward, and Lord and Lady Hugh Grosvenor. Lord Algernon Gordon Lennox may be seen in the fashionable crowd, always with his only daughter, Miss Ivy Gordon Lennox. Hon. Captain and Mrs. Wyndham are of the young married couples who skate much together. Lord and Lady Curzon during the short time they were up also patronised the roller rink. And others to be seen there have been the Hon. Walter and Lady Evelyn Guinness, Lord John Hamilton, Lord and Lady Guernsey, and Hon. Misses Fellowes, and Captain Duberly, the Earl of Gifford, and Captain Hon. George Monckton, with many other young officers in the Household Brigade.

As an indication of the popularity of the celebrated Richardson ball-bearing roller-skates, we learn from the manufacturers that they have equipped the following rinks recently with their skates:—Olympia (Manchester), Ltd., Manchester; White City, Manchester; Bostock's Hippodrome, Ipswich; the Pavilion, Wishaw, N.B.; Dudley Skating Rink, Dudley; Olympia Skating Rink, Scarborough; the Skating Rink, Harrogate; York-street Rink, Belfast; Lyric Hall, Morecambe; Victoria Hall, Lancaster; Central Pier, Blackpool; "Switzerland," Blackpool; Warrington Skating Rink, Warrington; Skating Rink, Blackburn; Skating Rink, Bury; Skating Rink, Burnley; Imperial Rink, Hanley, Staffs; Skating Rink, Wolverhampton.

The Empress Rink, Preston, is still increasing in popularity. Messrs. Broadhead keep adding new attractions, and on Friday last a most successful Cinderella was given, at which many of the "Bon Ton" were present. A Fancy Dress Carnival was to be given on the 19th inst., when unique prizes were to be presented, comprising books of tickets to the rink and promenade, &c.

"Carrie Nation," "David Garrick," and "The Heavenly Twins" got prizes at the Cromer Pier Skating Carnival last week. At Newcastle a costume described as "Half a man and half a woman" got an award.

Roller-skating has been commandeered for the relief of the rates at Bournemouth. The Town Council is considering several suggested sites for an open-air rink, the one at present finding most favour being on the Horse Shoe Common.

Rinkeries, Ltd., controlling the skateries at Aldwych, are operating rinks at St. Leonards, and will soon be opening places at Croydon, Leeds, Sheffield, Southampton, Exeter, Portsmouth, and Plymouth.

Messrs. Crawford and Wilkins will also build at Croydon. The site they have secured is immediately outside the main line L. B. and S. C. Railway Station at East Croydon. The building will be completed in a month from now.

The American Roller Skating Syndicate have entered into an agreement with the South-Eastern Railway Company to take over the St. Leonards Pier for a term of twenty-five years. A large open-air rink at the end of the Pier is now being built, and it is anticipated will be opened on May 15.

Earle Reynolds and Nellie Donegan are on their way to this country, and it is safe to say that their marvellous work on roller-skates will simply astound variety theatre audiences. Nothing like the turn presented by this team has ever before been seen in Britain. The two are beautifully costumed—the man in royal blue and gold, the lady in pale blue and silver.

Nothing seems too difficult for this couple, and dancing on roller-skates seems like A B C to them. Their programme includes:—"The Yankee Prince Waltz," "The Red Mill Schottische," "The Waltz Dream," "The Soul Kiss," "The Genee Waltz," "The Love Spell," and "The Tourbillon," concluding the act with what they term "The Human Musical Top," in which Miss Donegan plays a banjo whilst dancing on rollers, and finishes by a lightning whirl on her toes, playing all the time. Reynolds and Donegan were for eighteen months the great feature of Anna Held's Parisian Model musical comedy, which had such a vogue in the States.

Fifteen hundred skaters are often to be found on the rinking area at Whitworth Park, Manchester. This rink is to be taken to pieces and transferred to Weston-super-Mare for the summer. In the interval a handsome building is to be placed on the vacated site, and will be opened early in October.

The American Press speak of them in big headliners as two of the most marvellous performers America has ever produced. They perform all the Musical Comedy Dance Hits as Gracefully on the Tricky Ball-bearing Rollers as most Dancers can execute them on the wooden shoes.

Quite the most popular rinking function of the many which have taken place this week was announced to be held at the Empress Hall, Earl's Court, last night, the occasion being the benefit of the popular and hustling manager, Mr. A. E. Court. The huge rink and annexes were specially and lavishly decorated for the occasion, and many well-known members of the variety world promised to be there.

The racing committee consisted of Messrs. Fred Ginnett, Hermann Darewski, Lester Barrett, Chas. Wilmott, Alfred Dove, Lloyd Langdon, Paul

MR. A. E. COURT.

Murray, Jesse Freeman, Bertie Shelton, Henry Gait, and Alfred Davies. Mr. F. H. Pedgrift acted as starter, the Sporting Life took the time, and Valentine Wallace, of the Weekly Dispatch, was referee.

It is said that the British take their pleasures sadly. However true it may be in some respects, it cannot truthfully be written about roller-skating carnivals, for in whatever part of the country one attends them they are far from being gloomy affairs. A brilliant function of its kind held recently was the one at the Palace, Blackpool, where, by the way, many members of "the profession" are always to be found. Nearly 300 revellers took part in this carnival, under the superintendence of Messrs. George Harrop and Fred Waller.

The judges were Messrs. Cyril Chantler, C. Furness, and G. J. Beaton, and Mmes. Ireland, Pickup, and Tomlinson, and their tasks of selection were far from being sinecures, as anyone who scans the list of fancy dresses present may judge. Who, for instance, shall say that a D'Artagnan is superior to a Captain Kettle, and who would wager even a bad shilling as to the chances of a Servian brigand against a bushranger, to say nothing about the time when the charms of a Schoolgirl are pitted against a Daughter of the Regiment?

Seven weeks ago an old residence stood on the site which is now known as Olympia, Rusholme Rink, Manchester. There are 23,000ft. of floor space in this rink. It will remain open until Whitsuntide.

Forty years ago roller skating was first introduced to Taunton at the London Hotel Assembly Rooms. Last week the Victoria Rooms were opened by Mr. Ernest Claridge as an up-to-date rink. At Leicester the rink is managed by the world's chmpion figure skater, R. J. Aginton. This gentleman was, when roller skating was so popular some years since, the manager of the old Floral Hall in the town.

Exeter is to fall into line with other big and small centres, and have its rink. Rinkeries, Ltd., has taken over the Victoria Hall for three seasons, and the "Baltimore Flyer" skate will be used by frequenters there.

The new Harrogate Skating Rink was completed thirty days after the first brick was laid, and twenty-six after the ironwork arrived. It was opened last Saturday, and has been thronged at every session held since. The rapidity with which this rink was built far exceeds anything previously done in the district, and the Harrogate folk have not quite recovered from their astonishment yet. It is intended to keep the rink open continuously, no matter what the season or the weather.

The American Roller Rink Company have acquired a site at the corner of Addiscombe and Cherry Orchard-roads, Croydon, for the erection of a hall to be used for roller-skating. This same company were the promoters of the successful skating season at Olympia, and have no fewer than thirty-two halls in England devoted to this sport. The hall to be erected in Croydon will have a skating surface of about 100ft. by 300ft., and the floor will be of maple wood laid down in narrow strips, this having been found to make a perfect rink. Building will be started almost immediately, and the hall will be in readiness for the anticipated thousands on Sept. 1.

It is some years since we have seen Chevalier Crowther, the skater, in England. Since 1875 he has spent most time on the Continent, and he has appeared before most crowned heads of Europe, and quite recently he received a charming gift and sympathetic letter from our gracious Queen. He has been a model to other skaters for some years, and is now booked for an extensive rinking tour in England before returning to Mexico and South America.

On the evening of the 14th inst. about 3,000 guests accepted the invitation of the Huddersfield Rinking Company to attend the opening of their new Roller Skating Rink, which is a fine example of what may be called "hustling." In three weeks the building has been built, completed, and opened to the waiting public. On the opening night the scene was really brilliant, the enormous skating surface, covering, as it does, nearly 15,000 square feet, being thronged with rinkers, expert and otherwise, who showed the keenest enjoyment in the exercise.

Roller-skating is likely to prove a great attraction at Bath, as elsewhere, Rinking, Ltd., having fitted up the large Drill Hall for the purpose, a start being made last Wednesday, with every token of success.

The fifth rink has been opened in Blackpool, and the sixth is in course of construction.

The new rink at Portobello covers the site of an old open-air real-ice skating rink, which was in use twenty-four years ago. This rink, privately owned, consisted of a shallow pond into which an inch or so of water was introduced and allowed to freeze.

Mr. John Davidson's exhibition of trick and fancy skating is undoubtedly the finest ever seen in this country. Nothing seems too difficult for him to do. He pirouettes upon his toes as easily as a Genée, waltzes and schottisches and polkas, and then does a running jump over a hurdle.

"Jawn" belongs to a family of skaters, and not one of them remembers the day he or she learned the pastime. He has two sisters and three brothers—all-round athletes all. What one can do the other can also accomplish. "Jawn" includes in his list of accomplishments boxing, cycling rowing, golfing, horseriding, shooting, swimming, and ice and roller skating. His sister Mabel is the champion lady skater of America Papa Davidson was a journalist of St. Paul, Minnesota, and owned rinks himself.

PALACE, BLACKPOOL, SKATING RINK.

"Jawn's" coat is smothered in medals—gold silver, bronze, and even diamond-studded ones. One has great difficulty, in fact, in getting a glimpse of the cloth, so closely pinned together are these records of victory in all parts of the world, for be it known he has raced since he was ten years of age. "Jawn" has 163 separate figures in his répertoire, is the only man in the world who does figure-skating on stilts, and his wonderful jump (of which we publish a snapshot photograph) of 3ft. 9½in. on skates over a horizontal bar constitutes a world's record.

THE GUILD AND THE MITCHAM UNEMPLOYED.

The Guild Divisional Committees.

In accordance with the scheme for popularising the Showmen's Guild, inaugurated two years ago, divisional committees were formed. The intention of the Executive Council in thus delegating part of their powers to local committees was a twofold one. First, as we have said, to popularise the Guild by inducing the showmen in the different centres of show life in Great Britain to take part in and to thus understand its work better. The second object was to give local autonomy with full responsibility to the divisional committees for the carrying through of local defence work, this, of course, meaning the necessary financing of such movements by the people immediately concerned. In this way the central Executive Council would be relieved of a great deal of purely local business, and could devote itself more thoroughly to the constantly increasing branch of Guild work—the vindication of the show business whenever assailed by Corporations or by private Bill legislation.

The London Divisional Committee.

For the past three years a great deal of the Guild work has been concerned with the defence of Mitcham Fair, and looking after the interests, wherever threatened, of the show business of the Metropolitan district. The present committee for London is a very strong and representative one. A meeting to discuss extremely important business took place at The Era offices (in a room kindly lent for that purpose by the manager, Mr. F. H. Pedgrift, hon. treasurer for the London district), and was numerously attended. Amongst those present were Messrs. Alf. Ball (chairman), F. H. Pedgrift, F. Turner, S. Forrest, H. Forrest, W. Wilson, J. Manders, F. Gray, R. Clasper, T. Knighton, W. Le Neve, G. Saunders, F. Wilson, J. Chittock, Mrs. Chittock, Mrs. W. Taylor, and Miss Taylor.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved. The hon. chaplain and organiser, the Rev. T. Horne, reported his work with regard to the defence of Mitcham Fair. He referred to the lengthy correspondence he had had with the Conservators of the Mitcham Commons (fully reported in the "Showman World" columns of The Era week by week). He briefly outlined the fighting policy of the Guild to preserve the popular rights of Mitcham people in their ancient fair. He expressed a confident hope that the fair would be saved, and that either on its old site—the Fair Green—it would be continued, or, by consent of the authorities concerned, it would be removed to a more commodious site on the people's commons.

The Last Fight for one of London's Ancient Fairs.

It was perfectly true, he told them, that the great fairs of London had been abolished. But since the abolition of these great fairs London had spread out in ever-widening circles and had absorbed many ancient towns and villages. This was particularly so of London on the Surrey border. London had stretched out to Mitcham, and Mitcham had become an interesting and popular suburb of the Metropolis. Had the showmen of Great Britain been organised forty or fifty years earlier there is no doubt that London would have preserved many of its great fairs. The fight for Mitcham Fair was more than a local trouble: it had become the battlefield for the indication of the rights of London showpeople, and upon the issue of the fight there matters of great moment to the permanence of the show business in London depended. He therefore appealed to that committee—representing in a certain degree the tenants of Mitcham Fair, yet in the larger degree representing the whole of the interests of the Metropolitan district—to rally to the support of the Mitcham tenants, for a defeat at Mitcham would, in his opinion, be the signal for the objectors to fairs in the London district to take further steps to hamper and hinder the amusement caterers of London in carrying on their business, whether at local fairs at present recognised or on private ground organised by the enterprises of individual showmen lessees.

At the end of the committee's proceedings, the Rev. T. Horne warmly commended to the generous consideration of the showmen present the very hard case of the unemployed of Mitcham. He pointed out that owing to the limitations of the Unemployment Act, districts like Mitcham, that were not as yet absorbed within the boundaries of their greater neighbours, were excluded by the wording of the Act from receiving a single penny from the large sum of money granted a year ago to the Local Government Board to relieve the distress of the unemployed.

His various visits to Mitcham, his own personal observation of the distress there, and his intercourse with a number of its public men, had put him in possession of the proof of the great distress and the urgency for help from other than merely local sources. It was a matter of extreme regret to him that the poor people of Mitcham, who had so enthusiastically fought for the maintenance of their fair, should be suffering (from no fault of their own) keen distress from lack of employment.

A typical instance of the dire distress in the district has come to our knowledge. A man applied for relief. He had just buried one child, and had two other children lying dead in the house, and had no means of burying them, the causes of death being inability of the poor fellow to provide food and proper necessaries for his children.

He ventured to ask the chairman to move that a benevolent grant of five guineas be given to the Mitcham committee dealing with the distress. He was quite confident that the showmen present (proverbially responsive to every appeal for sweet charity's sake) would subscribe to the fund thus started by the Guild for the benefit of the poor out-of-works of Mitcham.

The Subscription Started.

In commendatory speeches, Mr. Ball moved, and Mr. Wm. Wilson seconded, a grant of five guineas from the Benevolent Fund to head the subscription list. The following is the total amount subscribed before the meeting separated:—Grant from the Guild, £5 5s.; Mr. J. Manders, £3 3s.; Rev. T. Horne, £1 1s.; Mr. F. H. Pedgrift, £1 1s.; Mr. A. Ball, £1 1s.; Mr. R. Clasper, £1 1s.; Messrs. Forrest Bros., £1 1s.; Mr. Wm. Wilson, £1 1s.; Mr. F. Gray, £1 1s.; Mr. T. Knighton, 10s. 6d.; Mr. G. Saunders, 10s. 6d.

Mr. F. H. Pedgrift, of The Era, kindly undertook to act as treasurer to the Guild fund for the unemployed of Mitcham. He will gladly receive further subscriptions, which will be acknowledged in the Showman's World page of The Era. We draw particular attention to the words of the Guild Chaplain given above, and we commend this extremely deserving fund to the generous support of our readers.

Another Booming Success.

The Secretary to the British Roundabout Proprietors and Showmen's Union, Mr. T. Hurst, has scored another managerial triumph at Stockport Spring Fair, held under the full control of the Union. The big shows included Kemp's cinematograph theatre, Sedgwick's mammoth menagerie, Bennett's exhibition, Prof. Vallo's booth, and P. Collins's haunted castle. The high-class machine novelties were the sets of the local showmen, Messrs. Hibbert and Sons, racing birds and hurdle leapers, John Green's motor-cars, Mitchell's prime porkers, and John Collins's Brooklyn cake-walk machine. Juvenile machine sets by S. Mercer, J. Cordwell, and Humphreys. Hoop-la circles by H. J. Wallis, Sedgwick, J. White, and W. Smith. Swings by Hibbert and Sons and Moore.

Varieties, throwing games, and other attractions in great display, were provided by (amongst others) Messrs. Clough, Cordwell, E. Brennan, the Whatmore Family, the Cordwell Family, the Middlebrook Family, and Lynch.

FILM GOSSIP.

Showmen and Managers throughout the United Kingdom, and in every English-speaking country, will find in this column particulars of some of the best and newest Films in the Market. Many of these Films we have seen ourselves, and can confidently recommend showmen to add them to their list of attractions.

Pathé Frères.

TOT AT THE MASKED BALL.—This is a very amusing film. Tot is a big chimpanzee, very independent and good-natured. After the performance, Tot breaks away from the booth at the fair, bent on enjoyment. Meeting a policeman, he thinks he would like to put on his uniform, and in a wink he has taken from the constable what parts of his attire he requires and puts them on. Then he resumes his walk, and arriving in front of a house which he sees several masked people enter, he follows suit. His appearance in the drawing-room is very much noticed and commented upon. His behaviour is so shocking, however, for he throws things about and breaks the crockery, after jumping on the furniture, that he is shown the door. Chased by the guests, he takes refuge in the bed of an old lady in a neighbouring house, who covers herself up in her blankets in her fear. Tot, seeing that his enemies are coming after him, escapes through the chimney flue, while the distracted old woman, having been mistaken for the miscreant, is dragged out into the street, where she would have been lynched had not somebody spied Tot peacefully enjoying the show from his high position on the roof.

THE MULE-DRIVER'S DAUGHTER.—The mule-driver's daughter and her sweetheart are standing at the foot of the Calvary, where the girl tries to make him promise to be faithful to her for ever and anon. He laughs, jokes, and at last consents to pledge his faith, which, after all, can be broken when he likes. After seeing her home he goes to the inn where the mule-driver is busy counting his money. At sight of the gold, the young man's eyes glisten with envy, and his face shows plainly that his thoughts are not good. When the mule-driver rides away, the lad runs through short cuts to a place the elder man is sure to pass, and lies in wait there for his victim. A shot is heard, and the traveller, thrown from his saddle, falls on the ground, the murderer taking his purse from him and jumping over his prostrate body, disappears behind a rock. The mule, arriving home alone, makes the driver's daughter very anxious, and she starts at once with the ostler in search of her father, whom they find just in time for him to denounce his murderer before expiring. The murderer is surprised in the operation of counting his booty in front of his hut by his former sweetheart, who, taking justice into her own hands, shoots him.

THE BLUE LEGEND.—Maryvonne, the Breton wife of Fantec, the fiddler, whose fame spreads from Brest to Quimper, is going to market. She walks briskly in the lovely country air. Suddenly she is assaulted by two tramps, who throw her on the ground and leave her senseless, after first robbing her. A peasant woman seeing her thus prostrate, goes to a stone quarry, not far off, where Fantec is working, and acquaints him with the accident. The poor husband has his dear wife conveyed home, and he sits in her room, playing to her his sweetest and most harmonious tunes. This awakens the patient from her semi-torpor, and she lifts herself up a little, her arms stretched out to the musician. This last effort is too much for her, however, and she falls back dead. Fantec, a madman by now, wanders about the moor, playing his violin. Sometimes the vision of Maryvonne appears to him among fantastic surroundings, till at last he expires while playing one of his most doleful tunes.

IT IS SANDY'S FAULT.—Drythroat asks his friend Sandy to come and choose a bouquet for him to give to his wife for her birthday. They select a superb palm-tree, and in order to thank his friend for his trouble Drythroat offers him a glass of wine at the next café. One politeness calls for another, so they drink a second glass. At last, when they resume their walk, they are very unsteady indeed, and the plant rocks to and fro in their hands. Drythroat tumbles down on top of the palm-tree, half dead with liquor. Seeing this, his friend goes and warns the "missus," who pushes her incorrigible husband into the pool, whose cold water is likely to sober him immediately.

HARRY WISHES TO BE A HOOLIGAN.—Harry has tried his hand at every trade, without success, it must be said, for he has a strong disposition to laziness, which causes him to be thrown out of employment every other day or so. He is now walking on the outskirts of a large city, and the sight of two hooligans counting their money makes him wish to join them. The rascals accept him as a recruit and put him to the test. Harry receives a well-earned thrashing from a civilian whom he tries to rob, and goes back to his accomplices empty-handed. The two give him four pounds in advance on the money he must now steal from a safe in a certain house. The would-be hooligan sneaks inside the building, but just as he is beginning his work he is disturbed by the arrival of a man who comes to cash a bill for four pounds. In order to get rid of the intruder Harry pays the bill with his own money, then he sets to work in earnest. The safe only yields a pair of boots. Harry, scared by a noise coming from the next room, exits through the chimney, and then from the roof down into a servant's room. Seeing a bundle in the corner, he throws it down to his accomplices lying in wait outside, and is preparing to make a second bundle when approaching footsteps on the landing make him start violently. Not knowing what to do, he wraps himself up in the sheet he has spread on the floor and waits. The maid enters with a porter, whom she instructs to take away the bundle; the man lifts it, and makes it go the quickest way—through the window. Harry, bruised and repentant, goes back to his former master.

THE GENERAL'S FIANCÉE.—General Bombardo summons his family to his house in order to acquaint them with the fact that he is going to marry the charming Baroness Uglyt; but Herbert, his nephew, wishes to inherit, and while his parents retire, very disappointed it must be said, Herbert hides behind a curtain in order to think out his plan. Cuckoo, the orderly, is now blacking his master's boots, and while he turns his back Herbert fills them with paper. The General, after several attempts, succeeds in putting them on, but they feel very tight indeed. Limping very uncomfortably, he repairs to the house of his beloved, followed by Cuckoo and the bouquet bought for her. On the way, however, he is obliged to take off his boots, sitting on Cuckoo on all fours. But just before he reaches his goal he does his best to put them on again; a dreadful pain in his toes stops him at every step. Herbert, after skirting a bush, places himself behind the Baroness's easy-chair, and drives a fish-hook into her wig. Then, just as the General is offering his flowers as graciously as he can, Herbert pulls the string attached to the hook, and the wig disappears behind the bush. The astounded General leaves as quickly as his sore feet will allow, whereas his fiancée has a fit of hysterics. Herbert finds himself at the door, and, bidding his uncle take off his boots, he examines them carefully, and triumphantly produces the crumpled paper. The General is furious, and his rage is turned against the orderly, while Herbert is assured by his uncle himself that he will be his sole heir.

Gaumont Company.

GUARDS' MOTOR RUN.—The Gaumont Co.'s operators secured the use of a racing motor-car for this journey, so that they should have had no difficulty in keeping up with the "fleet" of cars conveying the forces. Pictures from high-speed motor-cars, as we know from those taken on the Brooklands track, are always interesting, and the Gaumont views appear not unlikely to include some exciting incidents.

THE LANDLADY'S PORTRAIT.—In the ranks of those who strive for the advancement of art, the lot of the poor artist is generally one of trials and tribulations. Signor Daub, an Italian artist, has neglected to pay his room rent for some weeks. How he has evaded payment for so long a period, considering the feline instincts of his landlady, can only be conjectured. His long road of successful evasion has its turn when she suddenly appears and demands payment. A tramp, who is hiding behind a screen, sees the artist's dilemma, and suggests behind the landlady's back that the artist paint her picture in lieu of rent. The landlady, flattered at the artist's admiration of her beauty, agrees to an immediate sitting, to the discomfiture of the tramp. The disgusted artist sticks manfully to his task. The minister calls. The maid announces him. The landlady, after admiring her portrait, leaves the room, while the buxom servant girl lingers. The jubilant artist enters and hugs and kisses her. The tramp attempts to join in, only to find himself sprawling on the floor. Not satisfied, she chases him with a paint-brush. He hides behind the easel. She makes a lunge at him and daubs the landlady's portrait. The picture is ruined. The artist is in despair. The landlady is coming with the minister, and the artist and tramp find refuge on the roof. The landlady sees her damaged portrait, and breathes vengeance. She follows the others, and appears over the ledge with a club. The artist falls through the skylight into the studio, and hides in the chimney-place. The tramp falls down the chimney, and both roll out on the floor. The landlady enters the studio, and is captured, tied, and placed in the chimney, and the artist and tramp then make good their escape.

THE JANITOR'S BOTTLE.—"I wish him luck and happiness," said the janitor, as he opened the bottle of "Old Rye" sent as a present from his brother Jerry. As he is about to drink the maid warns him of the mistress's approach, and he hides the bottle in a desk drawer. Much to his disgust he is sent out to post a letter, and in his absence Mr. Biggs, while looking for a paper, finds the bottle, and thinks it is one he has forgotten. While partaking of a nip his little daughter surprises him, and asks what he is doing. He tells her he takes it for gout, and he illustrates the malady by limping around. Getting rid of her, he tries again, but this time he is interrupted by a poet, who wants to marry his daughter. Biggs, upset, uses little ceremony, and soon gets rid of him. The bottle, however, has to be hidden rather hurriedly owing to the entrance of Mrs. Biggs and gouty grandpa. Going for a ride, Mr. and Mrs. Biggs leave their little daughter, who, while playing battledore, falls on grandpapa's gouty leg, and, feeling sorry, brings him papa's medicine. The remedy suits grandpapa, and he decides to keep it for himself. Labelling it "poison," he hides it behind Miss Biggs' picture, and goes off to sleep. The poet enters, and before ending his existence he goes to take a long last look at his beloved one's picture, when he discovers the poison. This is a better way to die; but Miss Biggs discovers him, and her screams bring help. The janitor recognises his bottle, goes for the poet, down comes the chandelier on grandpapa's leg, and the poet is hustled out of the house rather roughly.

W. Butcher and Sons, Ltd.

This firm is about to issue film subjects of their own production. Large and extensive grounds have been procured at Lee, in Kent, on which spacious dark-room accommodation has been erected, fitted with an up-to-date plant capable of an output of 40,000 feet per day. The grounds are particularly suitable for the taking of film subjects, there being a variety of natural scenery already at hand covering a large area of which Messrs. W. Butcher and Sons, Ltd., have secured exclusive possession.

Day and electric light studios and dressing-rooms are in course of erection, and will be completed in about two weeks, every convenience being provided for the taking of cinematograph subjects of every possible description. In addition to subjects of their own production, accommodation is available for the rapid output of industrial and advertising films and the developing and publishing of customers' own negatives.

During the past few months valuable and unique subjects have been procured in readiness for early publication upon completion of the works, and particulars will be issued in due course. All subjects produced will be known as the "Empire" films, and every effort will be made to maintain the high quality of work of which Messrs. Butcher and Sons have already secured recognition in other branches of the industry.

A FINE selection of pictures is shown at the Picture Hall, Willenhall, this week. The most interesting are Western Justice, A Roman Campaign, and The Hunchback's Vengeance.

MISS ENA RICHARDS, writing from Great Yarmouth, complains, very justly, of the muddle made with her luggage while she was travelling from Warrington to Great Yarmouth. Worse than all, when she eventually received her two baskets at about 1.30 on Monday she found that one had been tampered with. A bundle of letters had been scattered, a work-basket ransacked, and four rings taken. The baggage was left behind at Manchester.

THERE was a gala performance at the Palace on Wednesday afternoon in honour of the officers and men of the Russian squadron now lying off Portsmouth. The theatre was decorated inside and out with trophies of flags, in which the Russian colours of red, black, and white were contrasted effectively with the red, white, and blue of the Union Jack. In the audience were Prince Georges Chirvochidze, Prince Mirski, the Baron and Baroness Menzendorff, Countess Olga Heiden, Major-General Termoloff (military attaché), Captain Behr, C.V.O. (naval attaché), and the Russian Chargé d'Affaires. Admiral Litvizoff and Sir John Fisher were in one of the boxes. The entertainment included the performances of Howard and Harris, in The Adventures of a Happy Tramp; the Palace Girls, with their spirited skipping-rope dance; Carlton, the comic card manipulator, with his droll and clever tricks; Miss Maud Allan, with dances illustrating Chopin's (a) Valse in A minor, (b) Mazurka in B flat, Mendelssohn's "Spring Song," Chopin's "Marche Funèbre," Rubinstein's "Valse Caprice," and the famous "Vision of Salomé"; the wonderful "Kinemacolour" films, with incidental music by Herman Finck; Laroche, with his grotesque juggling performance; Arthur Prince and his sailor boy "Jim"; and the Urbanora Bioscope, with its beautiful pictures of interesting and topical events.

MORE PRESS PLAUDITS.

The Glasgow Evening Times, March 9, says:—"The films are quite the finest ever exhibited in the city, showing in a realistic manner every phase in the great contest; so realistic are they that the spectators are constrained to mark their appreciation just as if the actual contest were in progress. The pictures, as was to be expected, attracted packed houses."

The Glasgow Daily Record, March 9, says:—"The enterprise of the management in securing such an expensive attraction was amply rewarded last night, for there were crowded audiences at both performances."

Glasgow Daily Herald, March 9, says:—"There were remarkable audiences at both houses last night."

Liverpool Evening Express says:—"Audience large and enthusiastic."

Encore says:—"Drawing great crowds at the Coliseum, Glasgow."

Bradford Telegraph.—"Many will be glad of a second visit."

Western Daily Press, Bristol.—"The interest it attracts is evidenced by the large audiences to be seen at the hall."

THE NEXT BOOM—CANVAS CITIES.

We have received the following from a Birmingham correspondent: The warm-weather season will soon be here, and no doubt entertainment caterers are wondering where the new "money-making" venture is coming from. Who can compare with the man who has the courage of his own convictions? Americans threaten to go to the front because when they have the conviction that a thing will go they do not hesitate to risk. Who, then, is prepared to seize the golden opportunity for commencing a new boom in England?

There are thousands of Territorial recruits who have never been under canvas, and they crave for a preparatory experience of camp life; and there are thousands of young men fascinated with the simple life in the country. But where are the camps on an extensive scale near our big industrial centres to appeal to the thousands of young men during the spring and summer? Seeing that the holiday camps at several seaside resorts have proved such profitable investments, it is safe to assume that there is great scope for development of the scheme inland, particularly in the Midlands. Within seven miles of Birmingham Town Hall there is an excellently-situated camp in its infancy, and the time is ripe for extending it. Twenty up-to-date tents are on the ground, together with specially-laid bowling-greens, four tennis courts, cricket pitches, and an open-air bath, through which there is a continual flow of fresh water. In addition, there are an institute and a big, splendidly-ventilated room suitable for a gymnasium. In short, the groundwork for a big concern has been laid, and the prospects are bright. The Territorial boom alone justifies a great development; but operations must be commenced while the iron is hot. The co-operation of a "live" man with a small capital is necessary.

MISS JEANNIE HOLMES, who has been dangerously ill for some weeks, is on the road to recovery, and hopes to be at work again shortly.

BY special request of Miss Margaret Cooper, Miss Florry Cooper henceforth will be known as Florence Cooper.

BEATIE AND BABS, two young artists, have made a decided hit at the Palace Theatre with their entertainment, in which they display much versatility and cleverness.

THE Great John Clempert is still continuing to enjoy his London success. His escape from a locked tank into a boiler of hot water, from which he escapes after being padlocked with eight locks and two lids, is one of the most thrilling feats that has been produced during the twentieth century. He stages his act as a military episode, showing an escape and surrender from a condemned cell, taken from his life's experience in Russia about ten years ago. The escape from the Siberian torture jacket takes him just about twenty seconds. He has a fine fit-up, and all his assistants are dressed in Russian uniforms.

THE Liverpool music halls are being frequently used on behalf of charity. Only recently a big benefit was held at the Olympia to aid the funds of the Food and Betterment Association, and now the announcement is made that the sum of £330 was realised. On Tuesday a great matinée took place in the Hippodrome for the benefit of the theatrical and other charities among which the funds of the annual football gala are divided. Since its inauguration twenty years ago the theatrical gala has raised over £14,000. The Tuesday event was on a large scale, and scores of variety artists came forward and offered their services. Among these was Billy Merson, the new comedian from the Pavilion, whose work aroused such enthusiasm that he found some difficulty in leaving the stage. General thanks were passed to the management, staff, orchestra, and all who had given their services.

270 Replies.

WANTED, Wanted, Known,
Sir,—
I inserted an advertisement, asking for Music Hall Artists in the last week's issue of "The Era." May I say that I am absolutely astounded at the number of replies I received to my small advertisement, no less than 270 Artists favouring me with applications. May I by this means thank the many artists who sent in their terms, as it is impossible for me to reply to each individual. I thank all for their very kind promptitude in responding to my advertisement.
I remain, yours faithfully,
ALFRED BALL.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

RE APPLICATIONS FOR ENGAGEMENTS.

All applications by either Artists or their Agents must be made to the Head Office. Lowest terms must be stated, and distinction made between salaries required for larger and smaller towns. Vacant dates should be stated. If a list of existing bookings be sent, it will render selection easier.

Artists employing Agents should accredit one only at one time, as the friction arising when several Agents are employed at the same time, all expecting the one booking to go through each of them, often renders it expedient to avoid that booking altogether rather than give undeserved offence to several Agents.

New Acts seeking Engagements, or turns not rebooked (possibly because they have played a series of dates without introducing new business), will facilitate matters by having their acts seen by our District Managers. Their Districts and Postal Addresses are as follow:—

EDINBURGH, GLASGOW, NEWCASTLE, AND DISTRICT.
MR. S. GETHING, Empire Theatre, Glasgow.

BIRMINGHAM, NOTTINGHAM, LEICESTER, AND DISTRICT.
MR. HATTON WHARTON, Empire Theatre, Nottingham.

SOUTH WALES DISTRICT.
MR. ALBERT MITCHELL, Empire Theatre, Cardiff.

LEEDS, SHEFFIELD, HULL, BRADFORD, AND DISTRICT.
MR. T. GERALD MORTON, Empire Palace, Leeds.

LIVERPOOL, MANCHESTER, AND DISTRICT.
MR. ALBERT BULMER, The Empire, Liverpool.

LONDON DISTRICT.
MR. J. CHRISTIE, Empire Theatre, Shepherd's Bush, W.

N.B.—Mr. OSWALD STOLL or Mr. FRANK ALLEN can be seen by appointment on all matters arising out of the above, and for the discussion of entirely new Numbers.

All Artists or Agents who communicate with our District Representatives must have made definite applications, in accordance with above directions, to the Head Office, at the same time, or just previously.

Artists and Agents are requested to note that the Standard Theatre, Shoreditch, and the Terriss Theatre, Rotherhithe, come within the areas absolutely barred by us. Artists and Agents are also requested to note that the Hippodrome, Aston, Birmingham, comes within the area absolutely barred by the Grand Theatre and Empire Palace, Birmingham.

INSTRUCTIONS TO ARTISTS.

Artists must have at least Fourteen Band Parts for English Orchestrations, and Seventeen Band Parts for Foreign Orchestrations. Matter of Bill, Blocks, and Specimens of Pictorials FOR THE ABOVE THEATRES must be sent to Co-operative Offices, at above address, THREE WEEKS before Opening, failing which Artists will run the risk of having their Engagements cancelled. It is important that separate bill-matter, blocks, pictorials, &c., for Dublin, Belfast, and South Shields, be sent direct to Mr. Frank Allen at the Co-operative Offices.

IMPORTANT.—Artists must forward Copies of Songs to the STAGE DEPARTMENT, ABOVE ADDRESS, TWO WEEKS previous to opening, with Assignments for same, which will be returned. Artists are requested to note carefully that the clause in their contracts relating to rehearsals will in future be strictly enforced. Artists' Scenery, Properties, &c., MUST be fireproofed in accordance with the regulations of the Licensing Authorities.

ARTISTS WILL CLEARLY UNDERSTAND THAT THEIR BUSINESS MUST BE FREE FROM ALL VULGARITY.

No order or contract for goods or services must be accepted for any of the foregoing theatres except upon receipt of an Official Form, issued from the Co-operative Offices, London, and signed by either Mr. Oswald Stoll, Mr. Frank Allen, or the Chief Accountant, otherwise the Company concerned will not be responsible for same, and will refuse payment. In special cases, where goods are required at once, suppliers must look to the individual placing the order, who will be personally liable, unless an official confirmatory order, signed as above, is received within forty-eight hours. Invoices must be sent to the Theatre, but monthly statements should be sent to the Co-operative Offices. The individual Company on whose behalf orders are signed is solely responsible for payment. The Management will not hold themselves responsible in the event of loss of or damage to any MSS., Songs, &c., submitted for consideration.

TURTLE CATCHING AT SOURABAYA

Code Word, "GLACE."

The natives spring from the boat, plunge into the water, and visit the trap from which the imprisoned turtles are carried on shore. Turtle flesh is good to eat, and its shell furnishes the tortoiseshell. The last picture of this film shows a heavy turtle slowly driving a small carriage containing two children.

215ft. The Subject, £3 11s. 8d.

IT IS SANDY'S FAULT.

Code Word, "GEOMETRIE."

Drythroat wishes to give his wife a bouquet on her birthday, and asks his friend Sandy to help him in his choice. They select a palm-tree, and then enter a café for a glass of wine. They have a second, which makes them walk home very unsteadily. Drythroat falls down on the tree. Sandy then informs the "missus," who gives her husband a dip in the pool, in order to cool him the more quickly.

330ft. The Subject, £5 10s

ON THE GOTA CANAL, SWEDEN.

Code Word, "GLAIVE."

The steamer "Ceres," leaving Stockholm, glides on the Malar Lake, and ploughs her way through the small Gota Canal to the seventeen locks. Then come the seething Trollhattan Falls, and further on stands the old fortress of Vadstena.

460ft. The Subject, £7 13s. 4d. Toning, £1 5s.

THE SCHOOLBOY'S REVENGE.

Code Word, "GLU."

Edgar's school-teacher mentions to the boy's mother that he is a naughty boy at school, for which she punishes him. Then the cobbler and the butcher, as well as all the tradesmen, to whom his conduct has been explained, punish Edgar severely. This he resents, and determines to have his revenge, so he ties the porter's bell to the teacher's chair, and glues all the chairs of his persecutors. The teacher tries to get up, but sticks to his chair, and the bell rings loudly, while everybody appears with their chairs fastened to their clothes. It is now Edgar's turn to laugh.

346ft. The Subject, £5 15s. 4d.

THE BLUE LEGEND.

Code Word, "GOBELET."

Maryvonne, the Breton wife of Fantec, the fiddler, is going to market when she is assaulted by two tramps, who leave her senseless after robbing her. A peasant woman acquaints her husband of the accident, and he has her conveyed home, and plays tunes for her till she dies. Becoming a madman after this, he wanders about playing his violin, and at last expires playing a doleful tune.

412ft. The Subject, £6 17s. 4d. Colouring, £4.

THE GENERAL'S FIANCÉE.

Code Word, "GIBERNE."

Herbert, who has lost his inheritance through his uncle's announcement that he is going to marry a baroness, determines to have his revenge. While the servant is blacking his uncle's boots Herbert fills them with paper, and after a time the general succeeds in getting them on. Limping very uncomfortably, he repairs to the house of his beloved. Herbert arrives first, and drives a fish-hook into the baroness's wig. As the general is offering a bouquet to the lady Herbert pulls the string and the wig disappears. This causes the fiancée to have a fit of hysterics, while the general makes his escape. Herbert now has his uncle's assurance that he will be his sole heir.

460ft. The Subject, £7 13s. 4d. Toning, £1 5s. 0d.

HARRY WISHES TO BE A HOOLIGAN

Code Word, "GIBUS."

Harry is rather inclined to be lazy, and cannot keep any work. Seeing two hooligans counting their money, he envies them, and they accept him as a recruit. After various fruitless attempts to rob different people, he is told to rob a safe in a certain house, but as he is just about to wrap up a bundle he is disturbed, and hides himself in the sheet he has spread out. The maid enters, and orders the bundle to be thrown out of the window. Poor Harry now returns to his former employers and promises to work properly in future.

495ft. The Subject, £8 5s.

THE MULE-DRIVER'S DAUGHTER.

Code Word, "GEOLIER."

The mule-driver's daughter tries to make her sweetheart promise to be faithful to her always, which he at last does, knowing he can break it when he likes. After seeing the girl home, he goes to the inn, where her father is counting his money, which makes the young man envious. Seeing the mule-driver ride away, the lad hurries to a place where the elder man must pass, and waits for his victim. A shot is heard, the murderer takes the purse from the mule-driver, and disappears. The mule, arriving home alone, makes the daughter anxious, and she hurries off in search of her father, whom she finds just in time to denounce his murderer before expiring. Finding the murderer counting his booty in front of his hut, the girl shoots him mercilessly.

330ft. The Subject, £5 10s. 0d. Toning £1.

TOT AT THE MASKED BALL.

Code Word, "GENET."

Tot, the chimpanzee, is very independent, and taking a policeman's uniform follows some people into a masked ball, where his behaviour is so shocking that he is shown the door. Chased by the guests, he takes refuge in the house of an old lady, who covers herself up in her blankets for fear. He then escapes through the chimney flue, while the poor old lady is taken for the miscreant and dragged into the street. Somebody sees Tot on the roof just in time to save the old lady from being lynched.

FILMS FOR HIRE

THE

NOTICE.

Gentlemen, — It having come to our hearing that certain members of the Trade, whose special object is to raise the price of hire of films nearly double, are sending their agents round telling people that if they will sign an agreement immediately they will supply at the old price, and that WE shall not be able to supply them if these prices are enforced, let us tell you that, come what may, we shall be able to supply you with the

FINEST PROGRAMMES IT IS POSSIBLE TO OBTAIN, AS WE HAVE DONE IN THE PAST.

Whatever occurs, we are prepared for any emergency. We have been preparing for nearly a year, and have some of the finest programmes on our shelves, ready for use, which, have never yet been heard of. We have told you to sleep easy. We are keeping awake, and when the invasion does really commence you will be surprised the effect the Dreadnought and the first-class ammunition will have on the invaders.

BUSINESS MANAGERS.

How the Affairs of a Theatre can be Most Efficiently Controlled by the Adoption of Systems of Internal Check.

BY CUTHBERT E. SMEDLEY, A.C.A.

Price 3/6. Post free, 3/9.

All concerned with the business side of a theatre will find much useful information and many valuable hints in "Theatrical Accounts for Business Managers," by Mr. Cuthbert E. Smedley, published at The Era office.—Referee, Jan. 31, 1909.

"Theatrical Accounts for Business Managers," by Cuthbert E. Smedley, A.C.A. (The Era, Ltd., London, 3s. 6d.), is a most concise and comprehensive little work, calculated to prove of assistance to the theatre-manager. It shows how the affairs of a theatre can be most efficiently controlled by the adoption of systems of internal check. Specimen pages of the books to be kept are given, and the chapters treating of receipts, tours, book-keeping, and accounts, and audit will be found to contain much useful information. In the appendix is given "a form of agreement with artists for touring engagements."—Liverpool Daily Post and Mercury, Feb. 3, 1909.

"Theatrical Accounts" ("The Era," Ltd., 5, Tavistock-street, W.C.), we should say, is a very useful compilation for business managers of our places of amusement. It is practical, exact, and analytical; it should stop leakages, and needs only good houses to keep it fully employed.—Sportsman, Feb. 8, 1909.

"Theatrical Accounts." By Cuthbert E. Smedley (The Era, Ltd., 3s. 6d.). Shows how the affairs of a theatre can be most efficiently controlled by the adoption of systems of internal check. Specimen pages of the books to be kept are given. Receipts, tours, book-keeping, and accounts, audit—each is allotted a separate chapter. In the appendix is given "a form of agreement with artists for touring engagements."—Morning Post, Jan. 27, 1909.

"Theatrical Accounts for Business Managers." By Cuthbert E. Smedley, A.C.A. 3s. 6d. The Era, Ltd., 5, Tavistock-street, W.C. The work of accountants has now been brought to a fine art, and in almost every branch of business a different system has been elaborated. The present work deals in a small compass fully and clearly with all the special features of theatrical management on the business side.—Financial Times, Feb. 1, 1909.

Skeleton schemes of book-keeping, &c., with explanations, showing how the affairs of a theatre can be efficiently managed by the adoption of systems of internal check in all departments. Contains also a draft agreement as between manager and artist.—Birmingham Daily Post, Jan. 27 1909.

Adair Nelson.—The Compton Comedy company pays a welcome visit this week, A Reformed Rake being staged on Monday. Mr. Compton dominated the stage as Harry Jasper, his endeavours to show how a drunken roysterer may at the same time remain a gentleman being artistically effected. Mr. Henry Crocker was an admirable Mr. Thornton; Mr. Ivan Leslie was delightfully ingenuous as Adolphus Thornton; Mr. Henry Worrall made a skilful villain; Mr. Wallace Johnston showed conspicuous talent as the moneylender, Andrew Wylie; and Mr. Philip Gordon looked and acted the part of a portly butler to perfection. Miss Constance Merton played sympathetically as Mrs. Thornton; Miss Kathleen Leigh was a charming Joyce; and Miss Viola Compton gave a convincing portraiture of the adventuress, Arabella Mountstuart. Davy Garrick was presented on Tuesday.

Palace Theatre.—Lessees, The United County Theatres, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Walter Gilbert.—Charcot and his automatic man tops the bill. The turn is very bewildering and wholly interesting; Mr. Ben Brown and Mr. George Le Clerq appear with much success in Black Justice; Miss Sidy Nirvanah and her white horse provide a series of highly artistic tableaux; the Woodwards give a dexterous balancing act; Spangles and Sawdust show grace and skill in their gymnastic turn; Mr. Hamilton Hill, the Australian baritone, possesses a fine, highly-cultivated voice; Walker and May, coloured comedians and dancers, are warmly applauded; and an intensely dramatic sketch The Hypocrite is very well played by Mr. Fred S. Peake and company.

Empire and Alhambra Music Halls.—Managers, Messrs K. Calder and J. Montague.—The principal artists are Sterling and Cashen, clever singers and dancers; Mr. Harry Lamb, a comedian of originality and resource; Mr. Jack Marson, vocalist and raconteur; Miss Marie Rose and Mr. Archie Murray delight the audiences. Mr. Montague, the joint manager, who is very popular in the city, took a benefit on Wednesday, when the house was crammed in every part.

ABERTILLERY.—Theatre Metropole.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. C. J. Seaborn.—The great military play, Under Two Flags, was excellently presented on Monday for three nights. Bertie Cecil Royellieu was well sustained by Mr. Austin Milroy; Mr. Harley West is a capable Barklie Royellieu; Colonel Chanteroy finds a clever exponent in Mr. Roy Jackson; Miss Agnes Verity is a spirited Cigarette; Miss Florence Last portrays Princess Venetia in quite a realistic manner; Mr. George Hanbury is a success as Lord Rockingham; and Mr. Will Hook is an excellent Rake.

Pavilion.—Lessees, Messrs. E. and H. Tilney; Manager, Mr. E. Pryce.—Bostock's baboons are performing marvellous feats here; the Three American Bouncing Pattersons are skilful acrobats; a successful sketch, presented by Messrs. Ford and Webb's company, is entitled The Seal of Confession; Souplessi shows strength and agility on the rings; E. W. Selman has some funny sayings and pleasing songs; Ivy Gallan is an admirable comedienne and dancer; and Percy Maye sings capitally.

ACCRINGTON.—Prince's Theatre.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. B. Ormerod; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. E. Barnes.—Mr. C. Watson Mills' company is paying a welcome return visit here with A Warning to Women. Mr. Harry C. Robinson handles the difficult part of Dr. Marcus Dread with discretion and success; Mr. Charles O'Connor displays earnestness as Fergus McNaughton; and Mr. Edward Warden ably fills the part of Shaun. Mr. William Lockhart gives a capital study of Squire Kennion, and Mr. Leicester Jackson is a richly humorous Lord Eversleigh; as the Frenchman, Ferdinand de Joules; Mr. W. Pallister Acock is conspicuously successful; and Mr. Oscar Power is much in evidence as Mike McQuade. Miss Blanche St. Albans plays Moira with grace and power; Miss Gertrude Vickers submits a good portrayal of Sheila, and Miss Myra Egton supplies a faithful study of the crippled lad Myles O'Moore. The scenery and staging are excellent.

New Hippodrome.—Proprietors, The Accrington Hippodrome Co.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Walter Mould.—Messrs. Cullen and Carthy's pantomime, Babes in the Wood, is being presented here at two houses nightly. Miss Bessie Cohen makes an ideal Robin Hood; Miss Ruby Royal is a charming Maid Marion; and the Babes have capital representatives in Miss Dolly Cullen and Miss Elsie Jordison. Mr. Arthur Stratton is well placed as the Baron, and Mr. Tom Drew displays genuine ability as the Dame; Messrs. Cullen and Carthy as Bill Morgan and Dick Rockyfellow cause much amusement, and are ably assisted by the mirth-provoking little fellow Cluley as Bantam. Some excellent dances are executed, and specialities are given by Cullen and Carthy, the Melbahs, Les Belles Americaines, and Dolly and Elsie.

ALDERSHOT.—Royal and Hippodrome.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Clarence Sounes; Resident-Manager, Mr. Jack Gladwin.—The Assassin, the drama being produced twice nightly, is out of the ordinary run of dramatic sensationalism, and, as played by Mr. Augustine Knight's company, is greatly appreciated. Prince Demetri is cleverly impersonated by Mr. Augustine Knight. Mr. Knight's previous appearance in The Face at the Window is well remembered here. Miss Ella Vane gives a successful enactment of the name-rôle; whilst Ivan is a rôle acceptably filled by Mr. John Worth. Mr. Wilson Summers is capital as Chief of Police. The lighter vein in the drama is ably sustained by Miss Eva Trevanna as the Yankee girl, Mr. Edwin Jenner as the English captain, Mr. Murray Hathorne as the fussy Frenchman, and Mr. J. P. Dellson and Miss Kate Lever in their respective parts. Miss Maude Steeple makes a pathetic Nita. The drama is elaborately dressed and finely staged. The Bioscope shows several capital pictures.

ASHINGTON.—Miners' Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Fred Gould.—Mr. Fred Granville's company is here this week with The Better Land. Mr. Edgar G. Noble gives a powerful rendering of the part of Philip Radcliffe; Mr. Stanley Radcliffe is well suited to the rôle of Hubert, Philip's brother; Mr. Leonard Marshall as George Grant and Mr. J. F. Hughes as Bill Bones are both excellent in their respective parts; Mr. Gray P. Ellis appears in a creditable study of the detective, William White; Mr. Bert Dench humorously represents Tom Tadpole; and Miss Bella Moody as Polly Perkins proves herself a comedienne of originality, her songs being particularly well received. As Doris, Philip's wife, Miss Maud Stewart Drewry is excellent, and the same must be said of Miss Marguerite Trevosper as Mercedes. Miss Violet Vivian is amusing as Aunt Jemima; Miss Gerty Moody as Harry and Miss Emily Entwistle as Tessa are clever child actresses, who show promise.

ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE.—Theatre Royal.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Chas. Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr. Chas. Revill, jun.—Messrs. Bateman and Conquest's company is here with The Crimes of Paris. Mr. Clavering Craig vividly depicts the detective, Pepin Cardel; Mr. Alfred D. Adams as the Demon, Viscount de Vismes, the fiend in human shape, "terrorises" truculently; Mr. Kendrew Milson as Jules Martel does good work; Mr. H. J. Walton is prominent as Pierre Pelport; the moneylender; and Mr. Roy Hylton as Joshua Johnson, the Cockney clerk on his wedding tour, introduces some diverting humour. Miss Marie Barrett portrays with power the complex personality of Angèle; as La Belle Hélène Miss Flora Hastings exercises to advantage her powers of fascination; and Miss Christine Bickerstaff as Lisette is effective.

Empire Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr W. Leech; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Jesse Burslem.—Heading the "bill" for the week here is Miss Kitty Colyer, a smart comedienne, whose dancing is expert; Lidden and Haywood, as Cecil and Elsie, give a good double performance of music and dialogue; Adela Crispin is a refined musical comedy artist; and one of the chief features of the programme is the "turn" given by Charles Baldwin's company in the sketch Merry Wives. Vanando is a clever ventriloquist; Rezene and Rezene are a clever couple; Britain's Military Heroes are portrayed by L. and R. Edmond; Jim Cheetham (a good whistler), and H. O. Wills (in song and patter), with the Bioscope, complete.

New Pavilion.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Leech; Assistant-Manager, Mr. C. F. Wilson.—The vaudeville artists for the week are Lillie Le Main, a Lilliputian artist; and Lambeth and Robertson (Flo and Robert), clever impersonators of the Scots' Folk. The pictures are attractive.

The Picturedrome.—Lessees, Messrs. Welsker Bros.; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. Marks.—Some good animated films are again the attraction here. A series of views shows Military Evolutions and Manœuvres of Our Battleships. There are also some topical photos.

ATTERCLIFFE.—Theatre Royal, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Resident-Manageress, Miss Ethel J. Hope.—A varied and interesting selection of moving pictures, the Cinephone, and popular illustrated chorus songs, ably rendered by Mr. Cyril Yorke, baritone vocalist, provide a combination which is drawing crowded houses at every performance.

Palace Theatre of Varieties.—Proprietor, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Acting-Manager, Mr. Bert Dent.—The programme here this week is well sustained by Mr. Chris. Van Bern in a highly amusing and smart comedy act; Mlle. Du Roche and her Two College Boys in pleasing vocal items; the Oimars, acrobats, in Roman statuary tableaux; Zimpa, clever farmyard mimic; the Four Burnells, musical and comedy artists; Miss Sybil Lister, vocalist; the Ramlos, in a humorous triple bar performance. The Attergraph pictures complete.

BACUP.—New Court Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Frank Denman-Wood.—Miss Lena Stanton and Harry Joseph's pantomime, Robinson Crusoe, is here this week. Miss Stanton makes a pleasing figure of the title-rôle, and earns considerable applause for all her songs; Miss Gertie Lovedale fulfils the requirements of the part of Polly Perkins; the good fairy queen Britannia is agreeably taken by Miss Rena Wills; Miss Marie Gerard makees a smart Captain Billie Tailor, and her singing is fully appreciated; Mr. Melville-Page as Will Atkins acts the bold bad man with due emphasis; and Mr. F. Forms as Davy Jones is a success; Mr. T. Leglere as McCross and Mr. F. Leglere as McBones are good in the comic scenes. As Mrs. Crusoe Mr. Sidney Dean is excellent. Among the laughter-makers Little Keeno as Sunny Jim Crusoe provokes much merriment; an excellent Friday is found in Mr. E. Floyd Gwyne. The specialities include the Leglere Troupe of acrobats and the Alhambra Girls.

BARNSLEY. — Theatre Royal. — Proprietors, Barnsley Theatre Royal Co., Ltd; Manager, Mr. A. C. Mitchell.—Mr. Fred Melville's company is appearing here this week in Her Forbidden Marriage. Mr. Henry Lonsdale as George Madison gives a fine performance; Mr. Louis Hector as the villain, Chas. Devereux, submits a finished portrayal of a villainous part; Mr. C. Davidson as Geoffrey Broughton is good; Mr. Fred De Vere as Timothy Tuttut provides amusement; Miss Isla Garnet Vayne as Lucy, Sir George Lancaster's ward, acts in good style.

Empire Palace.—Managing-Director, Mr. Will Smithson; Assistant-Manager, Mr. J. J. Tennant.—The Mezzettis give a fine triple-bar performance; Denby and Dent are interesting in a new comedy act; Leo Carle appears in a fine quick-change scena, and proves himself a good musician; Smarte Bros. are, as their name suggests, smart in a funny acrobatic act; the Carlyles submit a capital whirlwind dancing performance; Body and Johnson company present a screamingly funny sketch, entitled Turning the Tables; Bijou Juvenile Troupe are attractive in a refined musical scena, Pansy's Birthday. The Palacescope shows fine pictures.

Public Hall.—Proprietors, Mayor and Corporation of Barnsley; Manager, Mr. E. Cheesman.—Mr. Jasper Redfern's company is here again this week. The great Johnson and Burns' Fight is the chief attraction, and is drawing great houses; Chant and Chant are extremely funny in a comedy duologue; Sisters Albert are pleasing duettists; Harry Leaton, a character comedian; J. W. Burnett, a ballad vocalist, make up the bill.

BARROW-IN-FURNESS.—Royalty Theatre and Opera House.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Stone.—Mr. Harry Foxwell's company, in Mother, is here. Mr. J. O. Stewart is natural and commanding as Duncan Fairweather; and Mr. Alex Alexander is good as Frank Rodney; Mr. Jasper Garth acts the villain well as Stephen Carrington; and is ably assisted by Mr. Evan Barinland as Jasper Randon; Miss Blumenthal does well as Mrs. Fairweather; Miss Lara Leigh is admirable as Vesta L'Estrange; and Miss M. Thorne Hallam acts with charm as Nellie; while Mr. Teddy Myles as Tommy Novlets and Miss Grace Stafford as Polly Crumpet are very humorous.

His Majesty's Theatre.—Lessees and Managers, Mr. and Mrs. Calvert Routledge.—Miss Lena Ashwell's company, in Grit is here. Mr. Leslie Carter gives a particularly fine presentment of James Barr; and Edith Winter is beautifully done by Miss Gladys Purnell; Dick Travers is well played by Mr. T. A. Shannon; Miss Elspeth Dudgeon does well as Mrs. Winter; and Mr. Philip Sanders is a capital Mr. Winter. Mr. Ralph W. Hutton is an admirable Mr. Norreys.

Tivoli.—Lessee and Manager, Signor R. Pepi; Acting-Manager, Mr. Edgar G. Laban.—The Four Holloways give a most remarkable cyclist act on the tight wire, performing tricks in a masterly fashion; Carlotta Levey once more proves that she is a clever comedienne, and possesses a splendid voice; Chris. Bakes has some quaint patter; Marie Reeve is a very pleasing comedienne; Vernon's Bioscope adds considerably to the entertainment, with some capital pictures.

New Hippodrome.—Owners and Managers, Mr. and Mrs. Calvert Routledge; Acting-Manager, Mr. Ralph D. Fenton.—Some really interesting pictures, including An Englishman's Home, are here.

BARRY DOCK.—New Theatre and Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. Arthur Carlton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Brogden.—The Girl Who Lost Her Character is presented here this week by Mr. Douglas Bruce's company.—Mr. Ed. McLean submits a fine representation of the Rev. Robert Everton, and Mr. C. W. Standing displays undoubted ability as Jack England. Mr. Richard Ferris plays with conspicuous skill the heavy part of Captain Caversham. The comedy rôles are successfully played by Miss Mamie Thorpe and Mr. G. H. Asquin (Punch); Miss Doris Brookes depicts Molly Vernon with considerable skill; and as Marian Franklyn Miss Lydia Mannington is very successful; Miss Cherry Vebeyne charmingly enacts Rose Seymour; the embodiment of Detective Wetherby by Mr. Augustus Bowerman leaves nothing to be desired; Mr. Geo. Mitchell played James Sutton in excellent style. The production is elaborately mounted.

BELFAST.—Grand Opera House.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fred W. Warden; Acting-Manager, Mr. James M. McCann.—Mr. George Lestocq and company opened here on Monday (under the direction of Mr. Charles H. Williams) in the farcical comedy The Sportsman. The rôle of Mr. Harry Briscoe was portrayed in most excellent manner by Mr. George Lestocq; and the acting of Mr. Wilfred Compton as Dr. Holroyd was irreproachable. Miss H. Duval must be congratulated on her clever impersonation of Mr. Harry Briscoe; and Mr. Sidney Bransgrove played the rôle of Mr. Perkins in truly humorous style. Mrs. Critchley and Emily were adequately presented by Miss Miriam Hold and Miss Pauline Emeric; and Mr. Gordon Smythe (who is also responsible for stage-management) appeared as Bob Briscoe. Miss M. V. Charlesworth was a charming Ada; and the cast was completed by Messrs. T. Dennis, R Wyman, and G. Hutchison. The Sportsman was followed by an amusing one-act musical play, entitled The Garden of the Gods.

Theatre Royal.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fred W. Warden; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. A. Salmond. A Noble Mother is presented by Mr. Herbert Fuller's company. Chief honours must be accorded Miss Agnes Collier, who, in the title-rôle, achieves a gratifying success; and Mr. J. Hibberd Mansell appears to much advantage as William Lingham. Mr. Clifton Earle would be difficult to excel as the English farmer, Harry Gilbey; and Mr. Basil Mitchell furnishes a good impersonation of Jim Darkley. The author of the piece, Mr. Herbert Fuller, furnishes a clever impersonation of the Irish servant, Charlie Kelly; and Miss Phena Powell is charming as Clarissa Bringer. The iniquities of Silas Grindstone are done full justice to by Mr. Richard Webb; and Miss Lizzie Lennon is a vivacious Teresa Hobbs.

Royal Hippodrome.—Managing-Directors, Messrs. Will Sley and Fred Willmot; Resident-Manager, Mr. Henry T. Downs.—Clarke and Hamilton top the bill, and this clever comedy duo have been most successful. Maud Rochez introduces her marvellously trained monkeys; the Smart Set (including Miss Georgie Martin) have a refined entertainment, consisting of songs and dances; and Hillman and Russell appear in their vocal comedy act. The Somnambulist. Miss Lollie Seymour, vocalist and violin soloist, gains much approval; and also here are August, September, and May, eccentric comedians; Miller Bros., wrestlers; Ray and Ross, speciality artists; and the Hipposcope.

Empire Theatre of Varieties, Limited.—General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Acting-Manager, Mr. John A. Walker.—Howell and Scott. Hebrew comedians, head the list, and cause much amusement; the clever cycling feats of the Selbinis create quite a sensation; and the sketch of Semi-Detached, presented by Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Meynott evokes roars of laughter. O'Malley and Brown, the popular pantomime comdians, gain a reception to be proud of; and Mr. George Young is aptly described as an expert fluid musician and concertina soloist. Idento Bros., comedy jugglers; Miss Lily Esplin, character comedienne; and the bioscope complete.

New Alhambra Theatre.—General-Manager, Mr. Will White.—A fine series of pictures has been exhibited here. Also appearing are Ryde and Pelman, grotesque eccentrics; and Mr. J. H. Carney, a clever character comedian.

St. George's Hall.—General-Manager, Mr. Herbert Rogers.—Films of a varied character have been exhibited this week. Mr. Stewart McCaughey, a local comedian, appears with success; and Matthews' Minstrels furnish a most enjoyable entertainment.

Clifton ville Hall.—General-Manager, Mr. O. E. Laumann.—The success of the skating rink here continues to be unabated, the pastime being indulged in by old and young. The great Linen Carnival came off on Wednesday, with the most gratifying success. Twelve handsome prizes were presented to the lucky winners, and twenty-five per cent. of the receipts were given to Belfast charities.

BIRKENHEAD.—New Theatre Royal.—Sole Lessee, Mr. W. W. Kelly; Acting-Manager, Mr. Reginald Grant; Secretary, Miss Isabel Morris.—Mr. Charles M. Bestic's company, in the musical comedy The Flower Girl, is fulfilling a return engagement here. On the present occasion the title-rôle is successfully assumed by Miss Eva Nelson, who gives a delightful and charming performance, singing her various numbers with much skill and effect; Mr. John T. MacCallum, a comedian of exceptional merit, is easily first favourite as Joe Wheeler; Reginald Rackit could hardly be better represented than it is by Mr. Louis Du Cane; Mr. Robert Cranny is a splendid Hon. Billy Greenhill; Mr. John Latham is an excellent Johnny Wheeler; and Mr. Henry Adnes as Alphonse de Racquet and Miss Lillian Drake as Lizette de Racquet are most diverting. Miss Georgie De Lara extracts much fun out of the part of Miss Greenhill, a Suffragette; Mr. G. Brailsford is an amusing Bertie; Miss Elsie Loir is well suited as Miss Masie Flirtington. Other parts are adequately filled, the scenic effects are first-class, there is a full chorus, and the augmented orchestra is under the direction of Mr. Louis Beaufort.

Argyle Theatre of Varieties.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. D. J. Clarke.—Mr. Mark Sheridan, a sterling comedian, and an immense favourite here, heads an excellent combination; the Four Jumels are prominent in a clever musical act; and the Eighteen Lancashire Singers furnish a most agreeable turn. The New Macs are on a welcome return visit; Poole and Maguire are well received in a vocal comedy act; and Miss May B. Brilliant, comedienne, the Sisters Dorrell, duettists and dancers, Miss Rachel Lowe, comedienne, Mr. Will Musgrave, comedian, are also favourites. Brown's Royal Bioscope finishes.

Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. Frank Weston.—The Zenery Brothers, acrobats and balancers, give a clever and imposing show; Sinclair and Whitehead, in their sketch, Getting Even, have made a hit; and the Mars Trio, in their military act, are an acquisition. The strong company also comprises Mr. Albert McKelvie, Scotch comedian; Mr. Jas. Basnett, with some capital chorus songs; Miss Marie Francis, comedienne; the Twin Sisters Elmore, duettists and dancers; Vardon, ventriloquist; Zelda, instrumentalist; Wal Owens, the silent comedian; and the Hippo. pictures.

BIRMINGHAM.—Theatre Royal.—Managing-Director, Mr. Tom B. Davis; Acting-Manager, Mr. Philip Rodway.—Butterflies is responsible for the "rush" this week, the house being crowded at every performance. Miss Ada Reeve's personality is the prime factor in this success, her portrayal of Rhodanthe being distinguished by all her characteristic point and piquancy, while her reception is one that she might well feel proud of; Mr. Richard Green sings and acts as Max Riadore with capital expression and effect; Mr. W. Louis Bradfield's Puck is enacted in the true spirit of comedy and with an air of mischief which is irresistible; Mr. Blake Adams as the irascible Podmore makes him eminently interesting and amusing; Mr. Lauri De Freece keeps the fun going fast and furious as the chauffeur Yarker; Miss Stella St. Andrie as Nora Podmore and Miss Constance Clive as the daughter Elsie, both act well; and the Misses Alice Sands and Elsie Aston shine; Miss Phyllis Monkman scores in the dance La Naissance du Papillon.

Prince of Wales's Theatre. — Lessees, Messrs. Rodgers, Limited; Manager, Mr. J. F. Graham; Acting-Manager, Mr. Henry Johnston.—The D'Oyly Carte Opera company opened here for a two weeks' season on Monday with The Gondoliers. Each and all received a cordial welcome. Mr. Henry A. Lytton was applauded repeatedly for his admirable representation of the Duke of Plaza-Tora; Mr. Fred Billington was encored frequently in his cleverly though-out presentment of Don Alhambra; Mr. Leicester Tunks gave a light touch to the rôle of Guiseppe, which was much appreciated; Mr. Strafford Moss was a melodious Marco; Miss Clara Dow sang delightfully as Gianetta; Miss Ethel Morrison made a fine Duchess of Plaza-Tora; Miss Mabel Graham was quite equal to the rôle of Casilda; Miss Beatrice Meredith was well placed as Tessa; Mr. Sydney Granville shone as Luiz; and the chorus was thoroughly good. Iolanthe and the other favourites have followed.

Alexandra Theatre.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Leslie-Collingwood; Business-Manager, Mr. Fred Bernardo; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. T. Guest. Little Red Riding Hood, which has enjoyed the utmost popularity all along, continues in full favour, and has yet another week to run. Last night, Miss Maudie Olmar, the clever child actress who has made the title-rôle so interesting and popular, was accorded a benefit.

Metropole Theatre.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Andrew Melville; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Hindle Taylor.—A Little Vagrant attracts very well here, with Miss Lillie Monckton and company. Miss Monckton's acting as Mary Harris shows all the resource of a practised actress; Mr. Wallace Campbell as Jim Harris submits a telling impersonation; Mr. Clifton Earle brings the part of Eric Arden skilfully into prominence; Mr. Sydney Ernest acts in a bright and happy way as Slideaway Bates; the little vagrant, Arthur Arden, has a clever young representative in Master Howe-Thessler; and further successes are made by Mr. James Coleman as Ebenezer Johnson, Mr. Tom Breen as the Snatcher, Miss Adelaide Clare as Hannah Smithers, and Miss Ade Izacke as Julia Philbeam.

Carlton Theatre, Saltley.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. James Alexander.—A Life for a Life was given here the first part of the week, Siberia being in the bill for the latter end. Mr. Chas. H. Lester's company was responsible, and in the former Mr. Lester impressed his personality on the audience indelibly as Josh Harker; Mr. Chas. Felton was highly interesting as Petro Li Celci; Mr. W. Carr's portrayal of the Sheriff lacked nothing in detail or skill; Miss Dorothy Riddell played Kate Evelyn with consummate charm and ability; Miss Lydia Hart scored cleverly as the wicked and designing Eulalie; Mr. Harry T. Wood's rousing acting brought Kit Oswald, the hero, into great favour; Mr. E. O'Grady continued in his highly humorous role of Tim McCarthy, and the other support was good.

Theatre Royal, Aston.—Lessee, Mr. Charles Barnard; General-Manager, Mr. E. Hewitson; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. J. Robertson.—The Lancashire Lad is enjoying crowded houses here, with Mr. G. Carlton Wallace's company. Mr. Jos. Millane plays Mr. Wallace's old part, David Elmore, and gains admiration for his spirited and clever rendition; Mr. Ernest Vaughan plays Max Carlton in a manner that leaves no room to doubt the villainy of the character; Miss Mabel Rose is a sympathetic and prepossessing heroine as Jessie Wincote; Miss Nell Oliver stirs the sensibilities of the audience duly in the undesirable character of Lorna Wincote; Mr. Hugh Wallace makes a strong part of Jem Wincote, and Mr. Bob Anderson succeeds well as Wardle. The play is well mounted.

Palace Theatre, Bordesley.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Goodwin Woodward.—A Country Girl was the attraction here on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, since when The Catch of the Season has prevailed, both being presented by Messrs. Dudley Bennett and T. C. Wray, but with two distinct companies. In the former, Miss Annie Hickisch, in the titular rôle, Nan, displays the arts and wiles of the fair hoyden to perfection, while her singing is really superb; Mr. Coningsby Brierley wins hearty laughter and applause with his smart and amusing study of Barry, the midshipman; Mr. Hardy Jackson gives a fine impersonation of the young officer, Geoffrey Challoner; and Messrs. W. O. Billington, H. Besley Beltram, Frank Seeley, and the Misses Victoria Sievers, Lucie Lever, Florence Hylton, Hilda Darrell, and Florence Gilbert adorn the production with their talents.

Grand Theatre of Varieties.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Edward Foster.—This week's bill is headed by A. C. Lilly and company in the military episode Drummed Out, which is well played throughout; Frederick Melville's Moto Girl is a clever masterpiece—by the means of electricity the doll goes through life-like motions; Ray Wallace is always a popular turn, her impersonations being loudly applauded; another clever impersonator is Tom Stuart, whose character studies of Uriah Heap and Gaspard are decidedly good; Harry Frisky, Rosie Sylvester, Frances Letty, George Doughty, and Molly Lancy, Wood, Wells and Wilkins, and the Avolos are prominent.

Empire Palace.—Resident-Manager, Mr. A. W. Matcham.—The programme here is exceptionally good. Whit Cunliffe and Gertie Gitana were both loudly encored for their songs; H. J. Crane and company have a clever musical episode, entitled Truth in Absence; Leonard Mortimer and company also have bright sketch, The Little Captain. Other popular turns are the Sisters Iris, the Soho Trio, Tom Parker, Barlee and Smith, and Lux and his performing dogs.

Hippodrome. — Resident-Manager, Mr. Harry Lyons.—The Duchess of Tooting is being presented here by Sidney Bacon's company. The sketch is bright, amusing, and cleverly played, while the mounting is excellent. Hampton and Bauman have a novel scena Down in Kentucky; while another comedy turn of a good order is Astronomy, presented by W. Fullbrook and company; Kartelli is expert on the wire; while Harry and Paul are decidedly clever trick cyclists; Belrose and De Velin are applauded for their duets and solos; Jack Barker, Harry Nelson, Tod Lowen, and the Firmans complete the bill.

Gaiety Theatre.—General-Manager, Mr. Albert Bushell.—The management of this hall are to be congratulated upon the excellence of the programme provided here this week. Miss May Moore Duprez, described as "the jolly Dutch girl," provides the star turn. She certainly justifies that description, and is well applauded for several songs given in her own quaint and merry style; Sandford and Lyons are clever comedians and expert dancers; Hayman and Franklin, delineators of Hebrew comedy, appear in a duologue In the Hotel Lobby, which provokes much amusement; Ernest Montefiore and company present a touching dramatic sketch entitled The Little Colonel, which proves popular. Other very acceptable items are given by Harry Pleon, extremely funny comedian, the Three Sisters Kilner (vocalists and dancers), Irene Rose (comedienne), the Sisters Hall (duettists), Ethel Dunford (vocalist), and a Trip Through Canada on the Bioscope completes the bill.

King's Hall.—Sole Owners and Managers, Messrs. S. P. Moore and B. Kennedy.—Pictures again form the chief attraction, and continue to prove very popular. They include The Lighthouse Keeper and a host of others equally as entertaining. In addition James Day, handcuff expert, performs some clever feats; Miss Mable Kington contributes several songs with much favour; while the Victorias complete the programme.

Curzon Hall.—Lessee, Mr. Waller Jeffs.—The animated pictures continue to attract large and appreciative audiences. One of the principal films is entitled The Three Musketeers, adapted from Alexandre Dumas' famous novel. Pleasing relief is afforded by Miss Ducie Saunderson in her popular répertoire of illustrated songs.

Queen's Hall.—Sole Owners and Managers, Messrs. S. P. Moore and B. Kennedy.—Prominent among an excellent series of animated pictures are those entitled The Land of Sunshine and Love and the Vendetta, which prove interesting. Variety turns are submitted by Ivy Dene, comedienne and dancer, and the Gelders, society entertainers, who won the competition held here last week.

Aston Hippodrome.—Resident-Manager, Mr. T. Middleton.—The Four Vagabonds are entertaining large houses here with their amusing vocal act, which won loud applause; Gerard, the Herculean juggler, skilfully manipulates heavy weights, while his partner brightens up the turn; King Lius also has a partner in his acrobatic act; Leonard Teel speaks on the Suffragist movement, and is really funny. There is a long programme, including Clark and Clark, Clara Greta, Selby and Myers, George Reeves, and Francis Drew, who are all popular turns.

American Roller Skating Rink.—Managing-Directors, Messrs. C. P. Crawford and F. A. Wilkins; Manager, Mr. Weaver.—This magnificent rink continues to maintain its popularity as the fashionable attendance each session proves. On Thursday of last week a "barn-yard carnival" was introduced, which resulted in a long and merry evening being spent. The scene was essentially rural, the costumes of those participating presenting a novel spectacle. The habiliments worn by the ladies were mostly those peculiar to the dairy-maid, while the gentlemen appeared in smocks and hats of the wide-awake type, some representing milkmen, others as farmers, &c. The rink was also decorated tastefully, and pretty colour effects were obtained by the use of the limelight.

BISHOP AUCKLAND. — Eden Theatre. — Lessees, Messrs. R. Addison, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. J. Huntley.—Messrs. Levy and Cardwell's juvenile company is here in The Babes in the Wood. The title-rôles were well filled by Miss Peggy McDonnell and Miss Cissie Wyse; Mr. Neil Hardy (Baron), Mr. J. G. Aitken (Sandy Simple), and Messrs. Graham and Barron (Willing and Weary) provoked roars of laughter; Mr. Jimmie Watson was good as Lucinda Lovejoy; a charming principal boy was that of Miss Daisie Wood; and Miss Dolly Dodds played Marion excellently.

BLACKPOOL.—Her Majesty's Opera House.—General-Manager, Mr. J. R. Huddlestone.—Messrs. Sutton and Raynor's répertoire company is paying another visit here this week. Moths was the attraction on Monday night, when Mr. Raynor gave a good account of Lord Jura and Mr. Cecil Wynne appeared with complete success as Prince Zouroff; the Duchess de Sonnaz of Miss Cecilia Dare and Miss Henrietta Schrier's impersonation of Fuchsia Leach were also worthy of favourable mention. On Tuesday Camille was played with Miss Schrier in the title-rôle, and Mr. Raynor as M. Gaston de Rieux. The Second Mrs. Tanqueray and Called Back are also in the week's programme.

Grand Theatre.—Owner and Manager, Mr. T. Sergenson.—The top of the bill here this week is Ivan Coherney's company in a dramatic episode, entitled The Tempter. T. H. Playfair and company also contribute a good sketch; Bernard and Benson, comedians; Cissie Scott, a clever serio and dancer; Alice Hope, a capital vocalist; Sam Leroy, a clever Hebrew delineator; Celia Larron, dancer; Louis Heron, baritone vocalist, and the Musical Morellis also provide good entertainment.

Palace.—General-Manager, Mr. G. H. Harrop; acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Waller.—Zona Vevey has won all hearts here this week in a very dainty turn in the shape of a musical scena, entitled My Lady's Bower; the Primrose Quartette are amusing and clever vocalists; Julian Ross finds favour as a light comedian; Maxford and O'Neil contribute a musical medley; Frank E. Ford is an extraordinary dancer; Harry Marte is a capital singer; Ida Dorrie compels applause by her taking songs; Lee and Roland are expert equilibrists.

BLYTH.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Arthur C. Moody.—Mr. W. W. Kelly's company has presented The New East Lynne with unqualified success, the play having attracted large audiences at each performance. As Archibald Carlyle Mr. Fred Terriss gave an impressive performance; whilst the dual rôle of Lady Isabel and Madame Vine was realistically enacted by Miss Marion Lynd. Mr. Leonard Booker in the character of Francis Levison gave a carefully-studied embodiment of the gentlemanly stage-villain; Miss Madge Beresford as Joyce was praiseworthy; the Willie Carlyle of Miss Doris Denville won the sympathy of the audience.

Hippodrome.—The films shown during the week have included Marie's First Communion, a beautiful pictorial story; The Anonymous Letter, A Good Tip, and several comic items that have proved attractive to numerous patrons.

BOSCOMBE.—Hippodrome, Ltd.—Joint-Managing-Directors, Messrs. Fredk. Mouillot and Walter de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. A. H. Burdett; Musical-Director, Mr. F. Shackleton.—A capital bill is presented here this week, the most prominent turn being Claude Duval, a spectacular romantic story in three chapters, enacted by a first-class London company, including the equine wonder of the world, the cream gelding Roi; Daisy James, a chic comedienne, is very successful, as also is L. W. Harris as a light comedian; Texas Hattie presents an extraordinary wire act; the Schiavonys Troupe of Acrobats are extremely clever; Ted Curtis and Pices, in a vocal and dancing act, are pleasing; Slippére, the blind musician, comes in for applause; and Tiger Lily, speciality acrobatic dancer, also deserves mention. The Hippodrome Pictures conclude the bill.

BOSTON.—Palace Theatre.—Manager, Mr. E Cass.—Mr. Ernest Dare's company is here with Camille, the drama adapted from the French of Alexandre Dumas. The title-rôle is ably played by Miss M. Lowe-Dare. The acting throughout the piece is very good. The farcical comedy, In the Soup, is to be played during the latter part of the week.

BRADFORD.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee, Mr. John Hart; General Manager, Mr. T. F. Doyle; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Richardson.—The Carl Rosa Opera Company is here. A large audience has greeted a fine representation of Carmen with hearty applause. The opera was staged admirably, and Miss Doris Woodall made a veritable success in the title-rôle, her vocalism and impassioned acting eliciting great applause; as José Mr. Edward Davies was also very fine; Mr. Dillon Shallard assumed the part of Escamillo at short notice, in place of Mr. Charles Victor, who is indisposed, and his effort was cordially appreciated. Miss Bessie Cartwright filled the part of Micaela well; and the other characters had able exponents. The work of the fine chorus and augmented band, under Mr. Walter Van Noorden's baton, was well done; and another large audience on Tuesday evening greeted a fine representation of Tannhäuser, when Mr. Eugene Goossens was the conductor. The Merry Wives of Windsor, Il Trovatore, Cavalleria Rusticana, Pagliacci, Faust, and The Bohemian Girl are the other operas billed for representation during the engagement.

Prince's Theatre.—Lessee, Councillor F. Laidler; Acting-Manager, Mr. N. Hepworth.—Claudian is being presented here this week by Mr. William Maclaren's capable company, and Mr. Maclaren himself in the complex character of Claudian Andiates acts with all the power and assertiveness the part demands; Power was eccentric as Captain Finch; Miss Lilias Waldegrave played Maggie Brown in convincing style; and other parts were satisfactorily taken by Mr. Ernest Graham, Mr. Walter Gay, Mr. George Ide, Mr. Richard Fielding, Mr. C. B. Vaughan, Mr. Alec Chumley, Miss Amy Willard, and Miss Evelyn Martheze. The play was staged well, and the bombardment was realistic. The performance commenced with a clever and amusing monologue by Miss Fanny Wentworth.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Ernest Carpenter; Resident-Manager, Mr. H. C. Alty.—This week we have Mr. Andrew Emm's company in the drama The Diver's Luck, the play being well staged and capitally acted. Mr. William Macready acts in convincing style as Martin Faber; Miss Dora Pass is pleasing and sympathetic as Helen Wyngate; Mr. Fred A. Marston is excellent as Barney Bawn; Mr. Richard Boxo presents a clever and realistic study of Tom Hall; Mr. Charles Osborn does well as Maurice Wyngate; and the remaining part are well played.

PALACE. — Local-Manager, Mr. Horace Livermore; Treasurer, Mr. F. J. V. Welchman.—The leading attraction here is a fine series of animated pictures, entitled England Invaded, the first set representing a hostile army landing on the coast, a country house assailed, and the Union Jack hauled down, the second set showing the repulse of the enemy by Territorials, &c. The pictures are clear, and much enthusiasm is displayed by the audience. The Ten Dark Knights, who appear to be real negroes, amuse with mirth, music, and minstrelsy, with special scenery and effects; May Mars is successful with her pretty song scena, "In the shadow of the Pyramids"; George French, comedian, obtains applause; the Singing Jockeys score in a novel racing act; Spry and Austin amuse as vaudeville artists; the Ramsey Trio are smart knockabouts; and Will English, coon comedian, is successful. Interesting animated pictures conclude the entertainment.

EMPIRE. — Managing-Director, Mr. B. Pearce Lucas; Resident-Manager, Mr. Sid Macaire.—An interesting sketch, Saved by Wireless, is presented in good style by Gilbert Heron and a competent company; the Schmettans present a fine exposition of classical posing, and also score in an equilibristic and juggling act; Eileen Douglas does a good turn of musical comedy; Bromley and Fontein do well with their speciality, "The man behind the music-stand"; Eddie and Ethel amuse with their interlude; Julie Gilbert is a pleasing and effective vocalist; Victor Courtney entertains with imitations, &c., at the piano; Tennis and Laune (two ladies) are charming vocalists and dancers; and Grogie, "the Sussex Yokel," is successful with his song, "I've got an old-age pension." Animated pictures conclude.

BROUGHTON.—VICTORIA THEATRE, LTD.—Manager and Licensee, Mr. J. Fred Watson.—Hardie and Von Leer's Two Little Vagabonds, under the general-management of Mr. E. P. Clift, has commanded good houses. Miss May Hart cleverly presents Dick; and Wally gains much sympathy as portrayed by Miss Josie Beltram. The much-tried Marion Thornton is impressively acted by Miss Leonora Castelle; Miss Florence Radcliffe ably sustains the part of Barbara Scarth; Sister Randall is charming in the hands of Miss Ida Drayton; Mr. George Denham is a worthy George Thornton; Captain Darville is ably sustained by Mr. Norman Yates; Mr. Joseph Brandon is a satisfactory John Scarth. Mr. James Skea as the Gaffer, Mr. Leo St. Clare (Dido Bunce), Mr. Fred Archer (the Coughdrop), Miss Marie Pritchard (Biddy Mullins) give excellent studies of their several parts. The scenery is of a high standard.

BURNLEY.—VICTORIA OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. W. C. Horner.—This week witnesses the performance here of Idols by Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison's clever company. Miss Edith Goodall as Irene Merriam gives a performance full of beautiful touches, and Miss Creegan is excellent as the disagreeable Moira Hart. Mr. Herbert Ford gives a clever study of the exacting rôle of Hugh Coleman, and another excellent presentation is that of Mr. A. B. Imeson as Gerard Merriam. The drama is preceded by Turning the Tables.

EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. W. C. Horner.—The chief place is taken here by Friend and Downing, a funny couple in patter and parodies; the Creo Bros., gipsy comedy acrobats, exhibit smartness; and the sweet singing of Princess Pocahuntas is greatly approved. Melia and Mozarabar on the slack wire introduce cleverly trained birds; Steele's Singing Shop Boys are good vocalists; George Gulliver, ventriloquist, is funny; and Harry Drew, basso, pleases with "The Wolf." George Antill, comedian, is full of humour, and the Empire Theatrescope displays a laughable film.

PALACE THEATRE AND HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. Badcoe.—The Ten Loonies in their musical sketch Dotty display much cleverness; Tom Rose (lightweight wrestler), the Cumberlands (four smart cyclists), A Ba-be's Picture Post Card Album, Norah Desmond (in illustrated songs), Sergt. Brennan (with a wonderful exhibition of diabolo throwing), Ruby Helder (tenor), and Raymond's Bio-Tableaux are other attractions.

BURSLEM.—HIPPODROME.—Lessee, Mr. R. Colin; Manager, Mr. Matt Hall.—Good business continues here, where an excellent series of films is shown. Cambo and Castelle, in a musical and acrobatic act; Miss Edie May, comedienne; and Rich and Rare, a clever comedy couple, also appear.

BURTON-ON-TRENT.—OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Bennett; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. de Hague Body.—Mr. Wentworth Croke's new version of The Christian is staged here this week. The striking personality of Glory Quayle is depicted with passion and pathos by Miss Margery Vane; the erring Polly Love has a capable representative in Miss Gladys Vernon; the womanly traits of Mrs. Callender's character are well brought out by Miss Alice Maude; Mr. E. R. Holloway (John Storm) champions the women's cause with eminent success; Mr. Edward Houston (Horatio Drake) and Mr. G. Montague Lane (Lord Robert Ure) capably portray the fast life of the "man about town"; the clerical profession in its broad and narrow sense has creditable exponents in Mr. John Hastings Batson, Mr. Wm. Mallalieu, and Mr. Hal Charlton. The play is well mounted.

CAMBRIDGE. — NEW THEATRE. — Managing-Director, Mr. W. B. Redfern, J.P., D.L.—When a Lass Loves is billed here for the week, with the exception of Friday, when Milky White is to be played. Mr. Tom Craven is responsible for the production, and the play is well mounted and performed. Miss Mona Hoffe gives a capital impersonation of Constance Lane; Mr. John Ditton is good as Caleb Crass, the son; Dr. Allan Crass is smartly played by Mr. Arthur Comere; Miss Janet Warden renders Cynthia Bridge with considerable skill; Mr. W. Riley (Bertram Bridge) is sufficiently cool and cynical; Mr. A. C. Thornhill made the most of the part of Anthony Greig; Miss P. Rickmound was much in evidence as Nina May; and Mr. Percy Cahill (Reggie Stapleton), Mr Louis Palgrave (Slack), provide amusing moments.

CARDIFF.—NEW THEATRE.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Robert Redford. — Brewster's Millions has proved an exceptional attraction here. Mr. Percy Hutchison is seen in the rôle of Monty Brewster, and it is difficult to imagine any previous character which has suited him better; Miss Lilias Earle, beautifully gowned, is particularly successful in the part of Mrs. Dan; Miss Cicely Stuckey proves a bewitching Peggy; Miss Francis Davie portrays Janice Armstrong with undoubted skill; Trixie Clayton has a charming impersonator in Miss Sybil Walsh; Barbara Drew is captivatingly delineated by Miss Betty Fairfax; Brewster's assistants are filled by several talented actors—Mr. Cyril Rawdon (Charlie Harrison), Mr. Henry Hampson (Archie Golding), Mr. Aubrey Mather (Joseph McLeod), Mr. Charles Esdale (Frank Brogden), and Mr. Otho Hazlewood (Horace Pettinghill); Mr. Robert Forsyth makes a commanding figure of Mr. Grant; Colonel Drew is safely entrusted to Mr. A. Andrews; and Mr. Frank Hill is seen to advantage as Rawles.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. H. S. Dring.—At the head of an exceptionally strong and talented programme this week we have a return visit of Bransby Williams, with selections from his répertoire; in the dramatic sketch, No. 99, presented by Fred Kitchen and Frank Lister's company Mr. Frank Lister gives a first-class rendering of the principal rôle; George Brooks, in a couple of humorous songs, repeats the success he made in last season's pantomime; in a refined equilibristic turn the Schenk Bros. perform some difficult feats; Foreman and Fannan, the millionaires (Percy and Harold), cause much fun; Hilda Jacobsen has two pathetic songs; a smart vocal comedian is Frank Cass; and Lizzie Daniels is a piquant comedienne and dancer. In a comedy act, That Frenchwoman, the Matt Wilkinson Trio put the audience in good humour; the Bioscope completes.

PALACE AND HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Burton. —Master George Wood is at the head of this week's bill; in a military scena, Lights Out, Leslie's Comedy Cadets provide a pleasing item; Johnny Holland and company, in The Boatbuilder, evoke laughter; in their musical comedy duologue Wanted a Typist Ward and Davis are distinctly diverting; and Pat Lynch is an expert dancer. Godfrey James, the singing collier, Jessie Wilton, character vocalist, and the usual Bioscope Pictures are other attractions.

CARLISLE.—H. M. THEATRE.—Lessees, Mr. Thos. Courtice and Mrs. R. Stewart McKim; Manager, Mr. Thos. Courtice.—The Moody-Manners Opera Company is paying its third annual visit here, and with Madame Butterfly billed for the opening night the house was packed. Miss Enriquita Crichton, already a big favourite here, added considerably to her reputation by her artistic and clever impersonation of the heroine; Mr. Charles Carter was seen to advantage as Lieut. Pinkerton; Mr. Marshall Vincent sang the music allotted to the baritone with rare skill and effect, and acted the part with excellent judgment; Miss Rosina Beynon worked hard and successfully as Suzaki. Il Trovatore, Carmen, Maritana, Lohengrin, and Faust are billed during the week.

THE PALACE.—Managing-Director, Signor Rino Pepi; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. F. Morgan.—Alexander and Hughes, who have pride of place here, provide something quite new in crisp witty patter and funny business. There's a laugh in every line of their smart gags, and in addition they give a very creditable performance on concertinas. Annie Schuberth has a fine voice and charming style; Fred Elton's clever entertainment goes bigger than ever; the Sisters Urma, trapeze artists, contribute a clever and refined act; Harry Leybourne proves himself a mimic of unusual ability; Chas. Rowen, comedian, pleases immensely, and H. Athalan, balancer and equilibrist, is clever.

CASTLEFORD.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Proprietor and Licensee, Mr. Chas. Gadsby; Business Manager, Councillor Hy. Masterman, J.P.—This week Mrs. Sam Duckworth's company is here with The Conscience of a Judge. Mr. Charles Whitlock presents Herbert Granstone with power; the Jessica Draycott of Miss Eva Moss is marked by emotional power; Mr. Frank Eaglesfield plays Sir Edward consistently and well; there is dry humour about Mr. Frank Eden's Horatio Winter; Mr. Price Evans and Miss Bessie Frank extract much fun from comic situations; Miss Mabel Coleman is a charming Ethel; Mr. Martin Pedler a smart and interesting Cecil; and Mr. Cecil Renton an effective Geoffrey.

QUEEN'S THEATRE OF VARIETIES. — Proprietors, Messrs. Chas. Beanland and W. H. Emerson; General-Manager, Mr. Will H. Emerson.—Lauri Wylie and his Mannikins, on a miniature stage, mimic several well-known artists; Frank Dunlop has a couple of good songs; the Three Royal Temples, operatic vocalists, well merit the applause showered upon them; the Three Clarks are smart and clever; Allen McAskell is a warm favourite; Jack North sings a couple of good songs; Wallie Gilbert, a descriptive vocalist, is also well worth knowing.

CHATHAM.—THEATRE ROYAL. — Proprietors, Messrs. C. and L. B. Barnard; Acting-Manager, Mr. Lionel Barnard.—Mr. Wentworth Croke's company in The Christian is here. Miss Daisy Scudamore is the Glory Quayle, and makes quite a success of the part; Mr. P. Gedge Trynam is convincing and popular as John Storm; Mr. Herbert Hewetson plays very naturally as Lord Robert Ure; Mr. Wilfred Noy finds much favour in the character of Horatio Drake; Miss Molly Hayden is very favourably received as the kindly Mrs. Callander; and Miss Cora Deane arouses everyone's sympathy as Polly Love.

BARNARD'S PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. L. B. Barnard.—Miss Carlotta de Yonson and company are here with The Case of Coiners. Miss de Yonson pleases the audience as Annette Conre, and as Sexton Blake Mr. C. Douglas Carlile makes the hit of the evening. Cyrus Dare scores strongly with his child mimicry; the Carney Bros. give an enjoyable vocal scena; Irma Orbassany's cockatoos are well in advance of any similar display hitherto witnessed here; Arthur Holland, vocal comedian, and Ida Brophy, a neat little dancer, complete the variety turns; and Lacey's Erascope has a cleverly faked film representing different Rulers of the World.

CHELTENHAM. — OPERA HOUSE.—General-Manager, Mr. H. Oswald Redford.—Mr. George Dance's company, in The Girls of Gottenberg, pays a welcome return visit this week. Mr. Bertie Wright is imitiable as Max Moddelkopf; Mr. Tom Shelford plays the part of Otto with great éclat; Miss Massie North is exceptionally smart as Elsa and dances brilliantly; and Miss May Marshall is also extremely capable as Clementine; and Miss Simeta Marsden as Mitzi displays unflagging vivacity, and is responsible for some of the best vocal numbers, which are encored repeatedly. Mr. Hugh Henson makes a prominent figure of Albrech; Mr. Charles Berkeley is prominent as Britti Bottl, his eccentric dancing being quite a hit; Mr. Morgan Rickards is amusing as the Burgomaster; and Mr. Tom Squire is sufficiently lugubrious as Adolph. Mr. Frank Delane does well as the General; Mr. David Miller plays the part of the fiery Colonel Finkhausen with much spirit, assisted ably by fellow-officers in Mr. Courtnay Cumber, Mr. C. F. Hewitt, Mr. Percy Russell, and Mr. W. Thorpe; Mr. Edwin Stanley is very natural as Kannenbier; Mr. James Cook a stalwart policeman; and the Misses Violet Romaine, Marian, Molly, and E. Gordon lead with success the several corps of military college girls in the large and well-drilled chorus. Minor parts are adequately filled by Messrs. Sidney Farrow and George Vaughan and Misses Susie Beardon and Ruby Carter.

CHESTER. — ROYALTY THEATRE. — Proprietors, Messrs. Milton Bode and Edward Compton; Resident-Manager, Mr. C. B. Fountaine.—This week the drama Sexton Blake is being played. Mr. Jack Fortescue, in the title-rôle, maintains the part with the requisite force and skill; the hero, Roger Blackburn, has a worthy exponent in Mr. Russel Barry; Mr. R. Heaton Grey as the villain, Randolph Lovell, is effective in his part, and is ably second in rascality by the Simon Faggas of Mr. William Stephens. Of the ladies, Miss Pauline E. Straus as the heroine, Marjorie Lovell, acts with power, pathos, and picturesqueness, and as the wicked villainess, Miss Cecile E. Anson gives vividness to the part of Philadelphia Kate. The necessary humour is imparted to the play by the Tinker of Mr. Mayo Stanley and the Euphemis Pattacake of Miss Lilla Norden.

MUSIC HALL.—Managers, Messrs. Phillipson and Golder.—Miss Lonie Freear, the celebrated comedienne, was billed to appear here for five nights, commencing March 23. Owing, however, to an unfortunate motor accident in London, the company, The Queer Quakers, which was to support her, had to give their entertainment alone. The following artists constitute the Q.Q.'s:—Mesdames Lily Pritchard, Isabel Oliver, Margery Barras, Messrs. Edward W. Pritchard, Michael Curnow, and McCall, and they deserve the highest praise for the beautiful programme of vocal and instrumental music, graceful dances, and smart but refined humour with which they delighted the audience. On Saturday afternoon Mr. George Robey is to appear.

COLCHESTER.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. Charles Macdona; Lessee and Manager, Mr. F. Graham Macdona.—This week drama is once more with us in the shape of Mr. Frank Pitt's A Victim of Villainy, with Mr. Pitt himself as hero. Mr. H. Creagh Hunt was powerful at times in the heavy part of Stephen Cavanagh; two good characters were the Alice of Miss Florence Halton and the Mary of Miss Kathryne Eckhart; Mr. Frank Dallas was bluff as P.C. Maloney; Mr. W. Roberts undertook the rôle of Dick Carson, and Mr. Fred Carroll that of Tom Leckie; and Miss Olive M. Pitt portrayed the part of Norah.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Colchester Hippodrome Company; Directors, Messrs. Fredk. Mouillot and Walter de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. Ben de Frece.—Mr. Joe Peterman's company is presenting The Belle of the Orient. Harry Carsdale, the farmyard linguist, proves an immensely popular turn; Ted Saunders also does well with his mimicries; and other turns are Michael Nolan's company, in Doyle's Nephews; Alec Olrac and Helen Beckett in The Jonah; and Josie Highland, comedienne.

CONSETT.—NEW THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Resident-Manager, Mr. Lloyd Clarance.—Mr. John Leopold's company is here in the musical absurdity New Frivolity. Oliver Buckwheat is ably presented by Mr. Watson Hume; Mr. John Leopold, jun., gives a good account of himself as Dan Teething; Professor Fumble, an amusing part, is well rendered by Mr. Tom Leopold; and Miss Amy Hall, Miss Girlie Winter, and Miss Gladys Somers contribute to the success.

CORK.—PALACE THEATRE, LTD.—Manager, Mr. Thomas F. O'Brien.—The programme here is excellent. Mme. La Tostia and quintette of lady troubadours are heard in solos, quartettes, and sextettes to exceptional advantage, their handsome dresses enhancing the scene; the Lovelaces, American song illustrators, give a couple of ballads in pleasant style; Mr. Fred Herbert, vocalist, achieves success in his songs; Ernesto, juggler and musical equilibrist; Miss E. Dancy, soprano; Miss Odeyne Spark, comedienne; and Mr. J. A. Wilson, comedian, with his marvellously trained dog "Towser," complete the bill.

CROYDON.—GRAND THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. Roland Daniel; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Ernest Archer.—Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison's company is presenting Mrs. Dot here, the performance on Monday being in aid of the L. B. and S. C. Railway Servants' Benevolent Fund. Miss Nancy Beresford makes a pleasing impression as the charming Mrs. Worthley; Miss Emma Hutchison is well placed as Lady Sellenger; Miss Ethel Grahame is delightful as Nellie Sellenger; and Miss Sybil Brooke is capital as Miss Eliza Macgregor. Mr. Frank Lacy is exceptionally good in the rôle of James Blenkinsop; Mr. Hugh Kennedy is quite satisfactory as Gerald Halstane; Mr. Charles A. Staite is commendable as Freddie Perkins; and Messrs. William Midgley, H. Allistoun Samson, K. Brandon, and Frank Leach are adequate as Charles, Mr. Rixon, Mason, and Mr. Wright.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Resident-Manager, Mr. G. Anthony.—The American Bioscope Company's pictures are a genuine success here. The Cinephone is introduced, and Mr. Arthur West's fine baritone voice is heard to advantage.

EMPIRE PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Managing-Directors, Messrs. Walter Gibbons and Thomas Barrasford; Manager, Mr. Eustace Jay.—The Merrills, cyclists, are very clever; Fred Karno's company, in The Yap Yaps, brings down the house; Primavesi is a smart juggler; Venie Clements, lately admired in the Crystal Palace pantomime, is a great favourite; Hal Forde is a clever comedian; Ella Shields, comedienne, creates a furore; Harry Zetter is a quaint comedian; Edward Lauri and May Beattie are well received in the sketch In Her Boudoir; Harry Cotton, comedian, is praiseworthy; and the Bioscope pictures conclude the show.

DERBY.—GRAND THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Proprietor and General-Manager, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Charles Denley.—At Duty's Call is being presented here this week by Mr. John Gerant's company. Mr. Gerant gives a clever study as Harold Alison, and as Captain George Alison Mr. Frank D. Powell proves himself a capable actor. The part of General Gordon is cleverly enacted by Mr. Ernest St. John; Miss Beatrice Western is charming as Dora Drummond; the Salema of Miss Ada Roscoe is a clever character study. The comedy element is cleverly introduced by Mr. Harry Ives as Jerry O'Hallaron; and Mr. Roy Denman (Jack Spencer), Mr. E. Larkins (Joey Trott), and Miss Laura O'Neill as Mary are also deserving of praise.

PALACE.—Lessee and General-Manager, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes.—The bill this week is headed by the Douglas Troupe of Risley acrobats, and their numerous clever feats are highly appreciated; Arthur Pier, actor vocalist, meets with a good reception; Purvis and Partner, in their duologue, The Postman's Knock, cause much amusement; Geo. Rapley is a clever comedian; Flo Warner is a pleasing comediefine; and Lise Rolland gives an acceptable equilibristic act. The Bioscope films continue to be an entertaining feature to the programme.

DEVONPORT. — HIPPODROME.—Manager, Mr. Herbert Taylor.—The Nine Courtiers are placed at the top of the bill, and their charming vocal selections are characterised by grace and accomplishment, and fully justify the generous applause bestowed; Maurice Hoffman, Ethel King, and company, retained from last week, reach a high plane of dramatic excellence with their sketch The Sorrows of Satan, which is followed with great interest; Ruby and Laws supply a musical scena, Laws' voice being excellent, whilst Ruby also did well though handicapped by a cold. Mr. and Mrs. George Leonard supply a diverting sketch entitled Coming Home; the Corcoran Bros. are heard to advantage in some smart cornet selections, accompanied by quick-change effects; Walter Munroe, the popular Irish comedian, dances excellently; and Josie Moonie, the remaining contributor, obliges with a couple of catchy songs.

METROPOLE THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. G. S. King.—The Empty Cradle, a pathetic drama, is doing good business at the Metropole this week, the staging, by Messrs. Battersby and Forbes's company, being all that could be desired. Miss Nancy Battersby as Ida Boswell makes an excellent gipsy girl, and is heartily applauded; Mr. St. Clair Forbes splendidly enacts the villainous Carnsby Bloodworth. The remaining principals are Messrs. E. Turner, F. Wells, Kenneth Scott, and W. Black.

DEWSBURY.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees, The Northern Theatres Co., Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. Herbert Asquith.—Mr. Robert Courtneidge's company in The Dairymaids is the attraction here, under the able management of Mr. Walter O'Sullivan. Peggy has a pretty exponent in Miss Clare Marsden, her efforts being highly appreciated; Mr. Nelson Keys gives an admirable portrayal of Lieutenant Sam Brudenell, his singing and dancing leaving little to be desired. The part of Eliza is in the very capable hands of Miss Gladys Silvani, her comicalities being enthusiasitcally received; signal success is achieved by Mr. Dan Agar as Joe Mivens, A.B., his funny antics and drolleries evoking hearty laughter; Miss Vera Crichton is a winsome Winifred, her singing and dancing being sweet and neat; Lieutenant Frank Meredith is well played by Mr. J. Herbert Willis, who is also responsible for the stage management; Mr. Percy Marshall is particularly effective as Dr. Byrne; Miss Penelope Pychase is represented by Miss Lucy Edwin in an efficient manner; Miss Dorothy Belmore makes the rôle of Lady Brudenell effective, and Mr. Albert Bartlett has charge of the full chorus and augmented orchestra.

THE HIPPODROME.—General-Manager, Mr. George Weldon; Stage-Manager, Mr. Jack Harris; Musical-Director, Mr. A. D. Willcox.—Tom Kelly's comedy company is here in The Silly Servant, their funny antics evoking laughter; a novel turn is done by the Lauri Bros, skilful and refined acrobats; the animated picture display given by Mr. Jack Harris is greatly appreciated, the pictures shown this week being much above the average; Wyotti is a clever juggler; the singing of the Bros. Ralston is exceedingly well received; the Sisters Henderson present an attractive musical turn; and other artists engaged are Rose Gower (ballad vocalist), Albert Williams (comedian), and Connie Mascot (comedienne and dancer).

DONCASTER.—NEW GRAND THEATRE AND EMPIRE.—Manager, Mr. J. W. Chapman.—The Prince of Monte Carlo, presented by Harry Roxbury's No. 1 company, including Tubby Edlin in the merry musical mélange, is assigned the premier position, and affords delight. The scenery is elaborate, and the company has the support of a full chorus. Special attention is deserved by R. A. Speedwell, the wizard painter; an enthusiastic reception greets the Lannons, duettists and champion high pedestal dancers; Mlle. De Rose, the lady Foli, assisted by Miss Hilda Claremont, provides a popular turn; Maud Bettison, ballad vocalist, has a cultured voice and a well-selected répertoire; Walter Aubrey, coon vocalist and "king of the wooden show," was applauded; and Mr. J. H. Hawtry had an appreciative reception.

DUBLIN.—GAIETY THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mrs. Michael Gunn; General-Manager and Secretary, Mr. Charles Hyland.—The Adventure of Lady Ursula is being presented by Mr. Norman V. Norman and Miss Beatrice Wilson's company. Mr. Norman appears as Sir George Sylvester, and displays considerable dramatic ability; Miss Beatrice Wilson is excellent in the title-rôle, and acts in a charming and artistic manner, which is warmly appreciated; Mr. Frederick Lock presents a very clever reading of the Earl of Hassenden; as the Rev. Mr. Blimboe Mr. Cyril Percy is particularly good, and Miss Hilda Forbes Phillips is an acceptable Dorothy Fenton. The other prominent characters admirably represented are the Mr. Dent of Mr. Reginald P. Lambe, the Mrs. Fenton of Miss Ethel Coleridge, and the Mr. Castleton of Mr. Norman Leslie. Under the Red Robe is announced to be played on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday nights.

THEATRE ROYAL—Managing-Director, Mr. Mouillot; Resident-Manager, Mr. Charles Terry.—Harry Fragson, described as the entente cordiale comedian at the piano, makes a return visit, and his songs are both clever and amusing; the Globe of Life performed by Wizard Stone and Irene Stone is a most sensational and interesting performance; Walter Barrett has a very pleasing baritone voice, and renders several numbers in a very effective manner; La Pia (the Enchantress) in a series of art dances, executed in artistic style, won hearty appreciation; Edith Courtney, vocalist, also appeared with success; Ritter and Foster in their eccentricities, and the Hippodrome Girls with the Royal pictures contribute agreeably to the bill.

EMPIRE — General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Acting-Manager and Secretary, Mr. George H. Marsh.—The star turn here this week is furnished by the great Ten Ka Troupe, whose clever and mystifying performance is warmly applauded; an amusing military sketch The Cuckoo presented by Kitts and Windrum (Charles and Rhoda), causes no end of laughter; the Three Sisters Grosvenor are awarded a flattering reception for their singing of popular melodies; as a comedian and comedy sifleur, Ted E. Box meets with hearty approval; Bonnie Goodwin's Apollo Piccaninnies, assisted by Miss Lily Vine, are received with rapturous applause; George Westland, Scotch comedian, provides an amusing turn; Baker and Balfe, alyophone experts, score a big success; Grace Langley, a dashing comedienne and dancer, and the Empire pictures complete an enjoyable programme.

TIVOLI.—General-Manager, Mr. Charles M. Jones; Assistant-Manager, Mr. H. A. Murphy.—The Martineks are the chief item in this week's programme, and create great merriment with their original act The Rag Doll; the Idania Troupe of lady gymnasts give a clever and graceful performance; in a refined duologue, Love Levels All, Leslie and Stephens win favour; Ethel Stephenson's vocal items have been heard with much pleasure; the Four Scoreys appear with success in a pleasing musical mélange; and Ray Maskell, comedienne and dancer, meets with a warm reception; Burns and Bentley, comedians and dancers, are much appreciated; Phinas and Aida on the revolving table are well received; Morrisey, musical equilibrist, is a smart turn, and the Bio. concludes.

WORLD'S FAIR AND MUSIC HALL.—Proprietor, Mr. C. A. James.—The programme this week includes the Akhurots, sketch artists; Edie D. Allwood, comedienne; Mick Selwyn, actor vocalist; Hetty Chapman, serio and dancer; Fred Richards, descriptive vocalist; Fay and Foy, musical comedy artists, and the cinematograph.

DUNDEE.—HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Manager, Mr. Louis Karpe.—Mr. Frank Curzon's company in My Mimosa Maid is here. Miss Marie Studholme as Paulette is irresistible, and her songs, cleverly rendered and perfectly enunciated, cause keen enjoyment; Mr. Charles McNaughton as the Sweep who wins the big prize in the lottery is a huge success, his droll antics keeping the house in a continual state of merriment; Mr. Charles E. Paton is funny as Max; and Master Archie McCaig deserves the heartiest congratulations on his smart performance of Bock. Miss Ruby Gray as Marcelle sings in good style; Miss Eva Sandford is a bright and engaging Popitte, her smart dancing being an enjoyable feature; Mr. Percy Carr sings impressively as Gerard; Mr. Powis Pinder displays his fine voice to much advantage as Captain of the Zouaves; Mr. Arthur Jackson is unusually good as the old waiter Grone; Miss May Garstang makes a prepossessing Mme. de Pilaine; and minor parts are capably filled.

KING'S THEATRE AND HIPPODROME.—Lessees, United County Theatres, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Alfred Moul; Manager, Mr. C. W. Young.—At the head of a varied and interesting bill of fare is Miss Violet Hope, who appears in a series of classical dances; an unusually interesting sketch, adapted from David Garrick, gives Frank Fenton an opportunity to display his talents as an actor; Leoni Clarke, with his 200 performing cats, rabbits, monkeys, rats, mice, &c., proves a very interesting and instructive turn which has to be seen to be believed; the Barton and Franklin Trio elicit applause for a clever instrumental, vocal, and dancing speciality; Victor Travers sings in captivating style; the Bros. Ford score in their clever concurrent dancing act; Louis Kerno's coon songs are finely rendered; Celest contributes a clever wire-walking and baton-juggling act; and the Kingscope with several interesting pictures completes. The band, under the direction of Mr. E. G. Summerfield, is an acquisition to the musical talent of the city.

PALACE THEATRE.—Lessees, The United County Theatres, Ltd.; Managing Director, Mr. Alfred Moul; Manager, Mr. S. McIntosh.—An exceptionally good programme of films is submitted here this week. Assassination of the Duc de Guise is a very interesting historical film, depicting the stirring scenes in Henry the Third's plot against the famous Duke. Many other pictures are exhibited, all of which meet with much approval. In addition to the pictures, J. H. Milburn repeats his former successes here; Jean Kram creates great merriment as an erratic juggler; Scotch Kriss proves a conjurer and ventriloquist of unusual ability; and the Arntes, a couple of coons, delight with their tricky dancing.

GAIETY THEATRE.—Lessee, Mrs. Lillie Williams; Licensee, Mr. W. E. Potts; Business-Manager, Mr. Frank Percival; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. E. Evans. —Topping a capital bill here are Cora Duncan and Albert Brasque, who create quite a furore with their new and original playlet, entitled A Society Butterfly; France and Stewart keep the house in roars of laughter at their racing comedy, The 100 to 1 Chance; Kremka Bros. perform some thrilling acrobatic feats, and cause much amusement by their eccentricities; Cummen and Seaham are a very comical couple; Connie and Dolly Clare have a fine budget of rollicking ditties; Harry Arnold upholds his reputation as a first-rate Scotch comedian; the Paul Hesse Trio receive an ovation for their graceful and daring pot-pourri act; Harry Maston imitates the cries of a host of animals and birds in realistic fashion; and the cinematograph with several new films completes the programme.

Empire Theatre.—Lessee and Manageress, Mrs. Lillie Williams; Business-Manager, Mr. Frank Percival; Acting-Manager, Mr. Alfred Ross.—Newman's pictures are drawing big houses at this popular hall. The theft by an avaricious European of the Brahma diamond from an American Temple, and its subsequent recovery by the uncanny and mysterious use of the black art, forms the subject for a thrilling series of pictures. Face to Face is a beautiful and dramatic picture, and amongst others shown are: Magic Eggs, The White-gloved Man, Unfounded Suspicions, The Suffragette's Dream, Under the Doctor, &c. Variety is lent by the performance of Alf Bishop a descriptive vocalist of much ability.

EASTBOURNE.—Devonshire Park Theatre.—Sole Lessees and Managers, Messrs. Murray King and Clark.—Mr. Reginald Dance and company are here in A Sense of Humour, a comedy which is being produced for the first time in the provinces. As Lady Hutton Miss Beryl Faber is charmingly natural; Miss May Brooke is an engaging and earnest Mrs. Hay; Mr. Reginald Dance is an easy and effective Sir William, and Mr. Edward Irwin as Major Hay contributes a performance meriting high praise; Mr. A. P. Bell does well as Meakin, and Miss Marguerite Unett is a pretty, bright maid Stanner. The Proof is the curtain-raiser.

The Royal Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. Sidney W. Winter; District-Manager, Mr. George Egbert; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Holloway.—In the bill here this week are Miss Ray Randall, a sprightly comedienne; the Brothers Jay, who patter and dance with equal facility; Miss Daisy Stratton, a dainty and pleasing dancer; the Three Alskarnos, risley acrobats and jugglers; the Glenvilles (three), who dance nimbly; Mr. George Rae, with original dances; and Tudor's well-trained ponies.

Pier Pavilion.—Manager Mr. George Hayes.—Mr. Fred Edwards and company are here in Confusion, followed by Kleptomaniacs. In the first Miss May Edouin as Maria is full of animation; Miss Gwendolen Logan is a decided success as Rose Mumpleford; Miss Mary Stuart makes an excellent Miss Lucretia; Miss Katie Yates is a bright Violet; Mr. Charles Steuart an able and natural Mortimer Mumpleford; Mr. St. John Hamund a rollicking Christopher; and Mr. S. B. Mayne a most amusing, happy James. Mr. C. Lyttleton-Rogers and Mr. George Martin help successfully as Rupert and Dr. Jones.

ECCLES.—Crown Theatre.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident-Acting-Manager, Mr. Albert Rogers.—Jennie Johns heads the bill, and her contribution proves of great interest; Mint and Mart are clever paper manipulators; Armiens, in musical scena, "Entertainments in Camp," please; Conan Dewson is a smart mimic at the piano; Nellie Rose, comedienne and dancer, is a favourite; Bradley, the cycling Jew, performs some unique antics; Walter Ellis and company, in sketch entitled The Sleepwalker, cause roars of laughter; Will Willis is responsible for a lot of fun. Western Justice and Uncle's Picnic are depicted on the Bioscope.

EDINBURGH.—Royal Lyceum Theatre.—Proprietors, Messrs. Howard and Wyndham, Ltd.; General-Manager, Mr. Geo. T. Minshull; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. M. Downie.—Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Benson and their Shakespearean company opened a fortnight's engagement here on Monday evening, with Macbeth. In the title-part Mr. Benson repeated a performance which, by its tragic intensity and scholarly insight, has already won for him widespread approval; and Mrs. Benson as Lady Macbeth brought into full relief the forceful activity and terrible undercurrent of mental suffering that chiefly mark the character. Mr. Edward A. Warburton played Macduff with all necessary passion and pathos; and admirable support was rendered by the Banquo of Mr. G. F. Hannam Clarke, as well as by Mr. Murray Carrington, who doubled the rôles of King Duncan and the Doctor. Mr. H. O. Nicholson as the Porter, and Messrs. F. G. Worlock and James Turnbull as Malcolm and Donalbain. The three Witches were tellingly acted by Mr. J. Moffat Johnston, Mr. Nicholson, and Miss Leah Hanman; and Miss Winifred Durie made an impressive Hecate. The Belle's Stratagem was produced with signal success on Tuesday evening, Mr. and Mrs. Benson appearing as Doricourt and Letitia Hardy, assisted by Mr. Warburton, Mr. Nicholson, Mr. Worlock, Mr. Hannam Clarke, Mr. Murray Carrington, and Mr. Guy Rathbone in the more important of the many male characters, with Miss Helen Haye, Miss Rita Salvage, and Miss Olive Noble prominent among the feminine rôles. The curtain-raiser, a version of A Midnight Bridal, dramatised by Mrs. Benson and Mr. H. O. Nicholson, gave that experienced actress, Miss Elinor Aickin, an opportunity of being greeted by many old friends. The week's programme has also included The Merry Wives of Windsor, The School for Scandal, Twelfth Night, and Richard III.

Theatre Royal.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. W. Wyndham; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. Whitehead.—A company under the direction of that experienced actor, Mr. Murray Carson, holds the stage here with a comedy, entitled Terence, adapted by Mrs. B. M. Croker from her novel of that name. The comedy is a pleasant one, containing much wit and many admirable sketches of character, and it is played by the members of the company with complete success. Mr. Murray Carson as Simeon Foulcher is not quite so well fitted with a part as he has often been, but he acts with some judgment and undoubted ability; Mr. Edgar Kent as a sprig of Irish nobility, who is forced to become a coachman, acts with marked excellence; and as Patrick Ryan Mr. J. R. La Fane gives a genuine character study; and Mr. Ernest A. Douglas as Sir Greville Fanshawe shows skill in the part he assumes. Miss Lilian Hallows is piquant and fresh as Maureen D'Arcy; Miss Gwladys Morris acts with much charm and spirit as Lady Nita Fanshawe; Miss Eugenie Vernie as Mrs. O'Hara contributes a highly meritorious impersonation; and Miss Hilda Dick as Mrs. Duckett gives a clever sketch. The comedy, which is well mounted, is preceded by the old-time farce A Silent Woman, in which Miss Elsie Wood and Mrs. T. N. Weguelin distinguish themselves.

King's Theatre.—General-Manager, Mr. Amand Mascard.—A musical comedy sketch, The Cruise of H.M.S. Victory, is the principal feature of a good programme here. Mr. Arthur Watson, Miss Flo Stanley, and company act this piece, which is full of humorous incidents, with unflagging spirit, and are loudly recalled; Sibb and Sibb are seen to much advantage in an exceedingly graceful act on the double trapeze; Miss Nellie Wigley, fresh from her engagement at the Grand Theatre, Glasgow, contributes a pleasant turn in song and dance; Mr. Arthur Croxon proves himself a comedian of excellent parts in his mimetic songs; and the Three Coopers give a clever comedy vocal sketch. The Brother Werds, American eccentrics, are exceedingly good in their entertainment; the Harvey Boys again show their smartness and ability in their boxing act, That Was Me; and Mr. Montague Biggs, a capital comedian, and view by the Bioscope are very good.

Empire Palace Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. Aynsley Cook.—A programme of much interest and variety is presented at the Empire this week. A strong dramatic episode, The Yellow Fang, is acted with real power by Miss Mary Mayfren and company. Miss Mayfren plays with notable force and pathos as Judith Peck, and she receives admirable support from Mr. Mark Paton as Hung Kow as a villainous Chinaman, in a capital make-up; Mr. Geo. Pickett as Sun-Kee, Mr. Francis Annesley as Jim Nares, and Mr. Cecil Kingsley as a "drunken sport." Miss Daisy Jerome sings, acts, and dances with great vigour, and is heartily applauded; Mr. Russell Wallett gives an amusing turn as "The Lady in Black," and sings with humour; Miss Alexandra Dagmar's imposing presence gives effect to a dramatic song, "The marriages of Mayfair," and she tells stories with point and fun; Mr. Arthur Aldridge, tenor vocalist, makes a hit by his expressive rendering of several delightful songs; the Achmed Ibrahim Troupe of gymnasts preform an exhilarating act of dashing somersault throwing and pyramidal balancing; and the bill is further strengthened by Spry and Monti, Mr. Billy French, an excellent clog dancer, Burke, Andrus, and Frisco, with their trained pony and donkey, and by a fine series of Bioscope views depicting the forging of a big gun at the works of Sir W. G. Armstrong, Whitworth, Ltd.

The Oriental Original Picture Palace.—General-Manager, Mr. W. C. Burns.—Another change of films here this week gives the audiences the opportunity of seeing what is freshest and most amusing in the pictures shown by the cinematograph. The vocal element has many pleasing features, and the houses are good.

EXETER.—Theatre Royal.—Chairman and Managing-Director, Mr. Edward J. Domville, J.P.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Percy M. Dunsford.—Miss Ida Molesworth and Mr. Mark Blow's company opened here on Monday in Under Two Flags. Mr. Robert Purdie submitted a capital portrayal of Bertie Royellieu; Mr. Clarence Ibbotson was an effectively humorous Rake; and Mr. Charles Johnstone was thoroughly capable as Colonel Chauteroy. Miss Olive Wilton won golden opinions for her successful delineation of Cigarette; Miss F. Melrose Millett was an artistic and interesting Princess Venetia; and Miss Jenny Clare proved a bright Lavinia.

New Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. Fred Karno and A. H. Edwards; Resident-Manager, Mr. Frederick Sandy.—Alfred Lester occupies the top of this week's bill, and, with the assistance of Miss Gwen Howard, delights the house in the funny burlesque skit A Restaurant Episode; another entertaining turn is that of the Jees, their sketch, The Musical Smithy, proving exceedingly attractive; the bewildering contribution of Mysticus has a gratifying reception; and the Imperial Russian Singers and Dancers, presented by Messrs. Seener and Fridkin, are deservedly popular. An enjoyable interlude is provided by Master Cliff Diamond, a clever young comedian and dancer; other excellent single-handed turns being those of Estrall, a smart barefoot sand-dancer, and Harry Clifford, an amusing vocal comedian.

FALKIRK.—Grand Theatre and Opera House.—The Girl Who Took the Wrong Turning—a four-act drama—holds the stage here this week. Miss Jessie Belmore as Sophie Coventry is seen to advantage in the title-rôle; as Willie Mason Mr. F. Ronald Adair is deserving of praise.

FOLKESTONE. — The Pleasure Gardens Theatre.—Manager, Mr. H. W. Rowland.—Mr. Hugh Arkwright's Niobe company is the attraction, with Mr. Harry Paulton as Peter Amos Dunn, backed up by a good all-round company. Needless to say, an excellent entertainment is the result. Mr. Paulton plays Peter as humorously as ever, and as Niobe Miss Agnes Imlay gives a very fine performance; Miss Rundell plays Hattie Griffin in excellent style, and Miss C. Nicholls and Miss Lilian Stafford as Helen Griffin and Caroline Dunn respectively act well; Mr. C. Lloyd is a first-rate Cornelius Griffin, and as Philip Innings Mr. Phil Cooper makes the most of a small part.

GATESHEAD. — King's Theatre. — Lessees, United County Theatres, Ltd.; Resident-Manager and Licensee, Mr. Harold Arnold.—Mr. John Tiller's extravaganza A Trip to Paris has been creating much diversion here; Harry Levaine tells funny stories; and the Sages are comic and artistic in a singing and dancing act. Will Sullivan, comedian, and Pictures by the Kingscope are other interesting turns on the bill.

Metropole Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. F. W. Bolam; General-Manager, Mr. Robert G. Elder; Acting-Manager, Mr. Ernest Dixon.—Mr. George D. Day's company in The Prodigal Son has drawn large audiences to this house. Mr. Albert Ward powerfully portrays Oscar Stephenson; Magnus is the subject of a thoughtful piece of acting by Mr. Alfred Goddard; Mr. Jackson Hayes ably fills the rôle of Stephen Magnusson; Mr. David Beattie faithfully impersonates Oscar Neilson; Miss Dorrie Roberts shows much ability in her renderings of Thora and Elin; Miss Florence Lovell cleverly depicts Anna Magnusson; Miss Maud Lockyer looks well after the cynical Margaret Neilson; and Miss Pearla Gardner is seen to advantage as Helga.

GLASGOW.—Theatre Royal, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. W. Wyndham; Acting-Manager, Mr. Percy Humphrys.—The Orpheus Club is producing The Mikado here, in aid of a deserving charity. The production is directed by Mr. Lindsay Harman, late of the D'Oyly Carte companies.

King's, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. W. Wyndham; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Macfarlane.—A well-filled house on Monday greeted Mr. Martin Harvey and company, in The Breed of the Treshams. Mr. Harvey's portrayal of Lieut. Keresby was greatly apreciated. Miss N. De Silva again played Batty with a pretty swagger; Mr. Charles Glenney maintained his reputation as Colonel Clement Hungerford; a careful study of Margaret Hungerford was presented by Miss Madge Fabina; the part of Cornet Francis Tresham was made prominent by Mr. Leonard Craske; Viscount Dorsington was well-sustained by Mr. Philip Hewland; and Mr. Fred Wright, sen., made a picturesque Colonel Bagshaw; Mr. Albert E. Raynor giving a good impersonation of Colonel Sir Henry Curwen. Captain Rashleigh was well looked after by Mr. Alfred Mansfield; Miss Bessie Elder did good work as Mrs. Bagshaw; and Miss Maud Rivers was well placed as Helena Pierrepoint. The Corsican Brothers, The House of Pierre, and The Conspiracy are also in the répertoire.

Royalty, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. W. Wyndham; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Carpenter.—Mr. Chas. Macdona's chief company is here, in Are You a Mason? As Amos Bloodgood Mr. E. H. Paterson is amusing; Mr. H. Langdon Bruce as George Fisher contributes a fine piece of burlesque; Mr. Stanley Groome is all that can be desired in the part of Frank Perry; Mr. G. P. Polson acts and looks the part of the rustic John Hatton to perfection; Mr. Erskholme E. Clive as Hamilton Travers is quite successful; Mr. F. Hughbert Dane as Ernest Morrison, is quietly effective; Miss Adelaide Grace's Mrs. Bloodgood and Miss Viola Garland as Mrs. Hatton also do well; and Miss Mary Kilpack as the domestic, Lottie, is amusingly dictatorial. A more than usually interesting playlet by Maude Thompson, entitled Old Maid's Corner, precedes.

Grand.—Proprietors Moss' Empires, Ltd.; District-Manager, Mr. B. S. Maclachlan; Resident-Manager, Mr. W. Christie Grant.—The Glasgow College of Music Operatic Society, under the conductorship of Mr. Allan Macbeth, are this week giving performances of Audran's tuneful opera, La Mascotte. The strength of the society is such that they have almost a double cast taking alternate nights, and the chorus work is particularly fine. Mr. Charles Graham stage manages with his usual ability, ably assisted by Mr. Don St. Clair.

Royal Princess's.—Proprietor, Mr. Rich. Waldon; Acting-Manager, Mr. Hugh Murdoch.—A crowded houses on Monday welcomed back Messrs. Armadale and Warren's company, in The Face at the Window. Mr. E. Hoggan-Armadale again gives his striking impersonation of Lucio Delgado, alias Le Loup; Miss Elsie Marriott-Watson was a charming and sympathetic Marie de Brisson; and her lover, Lucien Cortier, was played in manly style by Mr. Arthur Beverley; Mr. Scott Leighton acted particularly well as the detective, Paul Gouffet; Mr. Alfred Warne was well suited as the old banker, De Brisson. The humour of the play was never allowed to flag for an instant by Mr. Bert Ellis as Peter Pottlebury and Miss Lizzie Chambers as Babette.

Metropole, Ltd.—General-Manager, Mr. Arthur Jefferson; Acting-Manager, Mr. G. Gordon Jefferson.—Mr. Morton Powell's company, in the sensationally-named play, How Girls are Brought to Ruin, of which Mrs. Morton Powell is the author, has been transferred from the Lyceum to the Metropole, whose patrons follow with much interest, the dramatic and tragic plot.

Lyceum.—Proprietor, Mr. Rich. Waldon; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. H. Oakden.—Mr. Walter Melville's company, in A Girl's Cross Roads, after a successful week at the Princess's, have migrated to the Govan theatre, and are doing equally well there. Miss Hilda Beverley gives a specially strong picture from life as Barbara Wade.

Empire.—District-Manager, Mr. S. Gething; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Manners.—George Gilbey, the quaint comedian, tops the bill here, and as Spouty, the goalkeeper, keeps the audience in roars of laughter; his policeman song is also very good. Alice Pierce gives clever imitations of the leading lights of the theatrical world; one of the best turns on the programme is provided by the Griffiths Brothers, whose duel is intensely funny; Harry Herbert is a comedian with a droll and taking style; Henry Carlton and company contribute a lively sketch, The Window Cleaner; Madame Madelaine de Noce, French prima donna, sings the polonaise from Mignon and other items most artistically, and is well received. Alburtus and Millar provide much fun in their scene at the fair grounds; Virto and Venita's musical turn is most enjoyable; Sadie Simpson, comedienne and dancer; and the Bioscope complete a good bill.

Zoo-Hippodrome.—Proprietor, Councillor E. H. Bostock; Assistant-Manager, Mr. E. H. A. Bostock.—Edward Crossland's Melody Makers fully merit the position they hold here, in a novel musical act, entitled The Burglar's Dream; Syd Walker scores a hit with his sketch; Leivin and Pantzer, as acrobatic equilibrists, will be hard to beat; Frank and Free are always funny; the Tossing Austins are responsible for a comedy juggling act; Kurkamp, the singing conductor, has a pleasing voice; Steve Bartle's concertina selections are appreciated; Matthews and Brown, the unbleached eccentrics, are a clever pair; Ivy Prondfoot is a dainty comedienne; and the Bioscope concludes.

Pavilion, Ltd.—General-Manager, Mr. Samuel Lloyd; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Evan Good.—Peter Bermingham, from the Princess's pantomime, is as funny as ever in his own inimitable style, and gets an excellent reception; Esta Stella, the military maid, for her dainty songs and dances is heartily applauded; the Eight New Cocktails are dancers of special merit, and their business is much enjoyed; Reg. Boulton provides a novel and most humorous turn as the Editor's Imp, and his patter is very smart; Tom Clare, humorist at the piano, contributes a very taking batch of songs; W. T. Ellwanger and company, in a sketch, The Peacemaker, are responsible for a good many laughs; the Seven Merry Marvels as vocalists and novel violinists present a clever and enjoyable turn; Edna Latonne, male impersonator, goes strong with several smart songs; Wallan, the young juggler, proves as dexterous as of old, and takes well; Brull and Hemsley, in a scena, Fun in a Music Shop, score well.

Palace.—Proprietor, Mr. Rich. Waldon; General-Manager, Mr. Harry McKelvie.—Tom and Marie Motramo are starring here in their musical sketch, Do You Reverse? and their smart patter is enjoyed; Frank Elliston's company appear with much success in the romantic playlet, My Lady Betty, in which Miss Nellie Stevens acts well in the title-rôle; Flora Cromer, principal boy from the Princess's pantomime, give an enjoyable turn, including songs and impersonations; Beaty and Blanche are an attractive couple of duettists and dancers; Rose D'Aulby's chorus songs prove very enjoyable; G. H. Charlton is a smart conjuror, whose magic kettle item in particular was very mystifying; Stevens and Brett, comedians, from the Princess's pantomime, are accorded hearty applause for their clever turn; Andie Caine, comedian and dancer, takes well; as also does Walter Stanley, comedian. Much amusement is caused by a humorous Bioscope film showing a glove fight between "Wee Hughie" (Peter Bermingham) and Johnny Doyle, in which Mr. Arthur Fellowes, conductor at the Palace, figures as Hughie's trainer, and the fun is very well worked up all through.

Coliseum.—District-Manager, Mr. S. Gething; Resident-Manager, Mr. Harry Burdette.—Those old favourites, Carter Livesey and Lilian Rosebery, take well with their sketch, Rehearsing a Drama. In a humorous sketch, What's Charles Worth? Miss Sylvia Cavalho and company appear with much acceptance. The sketch is a motoring skit, and the artists do it full justice. De Gracia's Elephants always prove an amusing item; Adams and Ward maintain their high reputation in eccentric acrobatic feats; Miss Annette Hayward is a singer of whom Glasgow audiences are proud; Kittie Trewhett is a smart comedienne; and Bert Harow, "the rum comedian," is likewise successful. Tom Lloyd, well known locally, meets with a pleasing reception. The Britt and Summers contest is depicted on the Bioscope.

Gaiety.—General-Manager, Mr. Harry Bowerman.—Regan and Ryan, popular pantomimists, are the principals here, and have a hearty reception; Patty Yole, comedienne and dancer, contributes a good turn; R. C. Note sings popular chorus songs; Daisy Devonport is a smart comedienne and dancer; and the pictures are amusing.

Panopticon.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. A. E. Pickard.—The principal turn here is provided by Mons. Deloule, society gymnast; Annie Blanchard's songs are rendered in artistic style; D. A. Darrel and George Arnott are successful; and the pictures submitted are interesting.

GLOSSOP.—Theatre Royal.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Sydney Spenser.—Mr. Montague Beaudyn is presenting the powerful drama, Send Him Victorious. Mr. Frank Holyoake gives a brilliant exposition of The King of Ravonia; the Governor of the State Prison is ably portrayed by Mr. James Archer; as Colonel Kenrick Kaufman Mr. G. M. Montanini enacts the rôle with considerable skill; Mr. John Baxter maintains the high standard of the piece as Captain Frank Allison; Sergeant Mac and John Arany are in the capable hands of Mr. Ed. Lawrie and Mr. Oliver Birrell; Miss Isabella Hunt invests the part of Ethel Harding with the necessary sympathetic quality; as Gretchen Holtz Miss Madge Palmer is conspicuous; and Miss Lily Roselle, in the exacting part of Countess Kara Von Mechlinberg, is all that could be desired.

GREAT YARMOUTH.—Royal Aquarium.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. W. Nightingale; Assistant-Manager, Mr. W. H. Nightingale.—Mr. Fredk. Melville's company in Married to the Wrong Man is occupying the boards here. Mr. Oswald Cray gives a stirring impersonation of Jack Gladwin; Mr. H. Lane Bayliff ably depicts the villain Captain Deering; Miss Gertrude Boswell gives an artistic performance of Ruth; Mr. Arthur T. Lennard's fine military appearance and robust acting make the character of Sergeant Manners stand out; Mr. Charles Vivian gives a realistic character sketch of Jasper Skinner; Mr. Syd Claydon is a funny Timothy Clinker; Miss May Davis a vivacious Dolly Fritter; and Miss Dorothy Haigh appears to advantage as Rose O'Connor. An excellent display of Animated Pictures is given during the evening.

Hippodrome.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. George Gilbert.—E. V. Barr, a local comedian, is again topping the bill here. His songs and stories have made him an established favourite. Crissie Cross, a chic comedienne, contributes some catchy songs and dances; A. P. Boswell, furniture shifter, is much applauded; Howard and Thorn appear in an amusing comedietta entitled Merely Mary Ann; Dan Rodney is a good comedian; and good films are exhibited.

The Gem. — Lessees, The Yarmouth Amusement Centre, Ltd.; Resident-Director, Mr. C. B. Cochran; Manager, Mr. Sidney Lawrence.—The wireless telegraphy drama, in which Jack Binns was the hero, is pictorially described here, and a first-rate picture, illustrating a walk through the Zoo, is shown.

GREENOCK.—Alexandra Theatre, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Resident-Directors and Managers, Messrs. A. B. and J. J. Wright.—A highly appreciated change here is the production of The Gay Goddess, on a first visit. Mr. Julian Graham's talented company giving a praiseworthy rendering. Miss Kate Graham-Beck made a hit as Juno; Miss Leah Howard was an admirable Priscilla Strong, Miss Louie Mason a delightful Lottie, and the part of Mrs. Marie Strong was in the capable hands of Miss Amy Wood. Mr. Arthur Staples as Timothy Twinkle, happy as ever in his own fantastic style, compels continuous laughter whenever he is on the stage; Samuel Strong was amusingly represented by Mr. Fred Hammond; Mr. Richard Teasdale was effective as Sherlock Blake; and the remainder of the company interpret their parts satisfactorily.

Empire.—Lessees, the Greenock Empire Syndicate; Responsible-Manager, Mr. Edward McCormick; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. J. Colquhoun.—Mr. George Auger's company heads the bill, and presents with success the speciality entitled Jack the Giant-Killer. The Brothers Redmond are responsible for some clever acrobatic work; and others who do well are Jolly Jim Walker, chorus vocalist and dancer; Jack Henri, an entertaining Scotch comedian; Idalia Max, a sprightly dancer, who is well received; and the Samallis, a local combination of vocalists and dancers. Pictures conclude.

Hippodrome.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Harry L. Skivington.—Mr. Jack Haddon's company occupies the premier position on the bill with an intensely dramatic sketch, being a new version of the famous old play The Courier of Lyons. It is well presented. Charburn's troupe of young stars appear in a delightful song-scena; Michael Kemble, baritone vocalist, sings two songs in artistic manner; Tate and Tate, comedy acrobats, are particularly good; and the remaining items are the Two Lawsons, in a mimicry act; and Lindsay and Harte, who amuse greatly in the comedy sketch All Scotch.

GRIMSBY.—Prince of Wales Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. H Curry; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. W. North.—After an absence of some years The Sign of the Cross is again here. Mr. Cyril Austen-Lee in the character of Marcus gives a commanding representation; Miss Constance Little wins favour as Mercia; Miss Lily Ward instils deep feeling into her acting as Berenice; Mr. Charles Aldred as Tigellinus and Mr. J. Weatherall as Licinius well realise those characters; Mr. C. Yorke gives a capital study of Nero; Mr. Frank Wood is an amusing Glabrio; Miss Beryl Hamilton is good as the Empress Poppæa, and the same may be said of Miss Cissy Carlton as Dacia; Mr. Walter Fleet acts with dignity as Favius; and Miss Edith Drayson is especially successful in the interesting part of Stephanus.

The Palace.—General-Manager, Mr. G. Rhodes Parry.—A capital exposition of Hebrew humour is given by Jordan and Harvey, and they have a generous fund of amusing patter and business; the Brooklyn Comedy Four combine good comedy work with really excellent vocal harmony; Moon and Morris contribute an entertaining comedy and dancing act; Hicks and Hunter give a novel display of dancing on ice skates; Helen Martin is a pleasing vocalist; Boden and Bell have a singing and dancing speciality; and Decima Brooke is a charming comedienne and dancer.

HALIFAX.—Theatre Royal, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Robinson; General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling.—Charley's Aunt has proved a big attraction at the Royal this week. Mr. Brandon Thomas has selected an excellent company. Mr. Theo. McCausland-Stewart, aristocratic in demeanour and of soldierly bearing, gives an excellent portrayal of Colonel Chesney; Mr. Roy Byford's Stephen Spettigue is the bumptious overbearing lawyer to the life; Mr. Hastings Lynn and Mr. Robert Burnett as Jack Chesney and Charles Wykeham, the impetuous undergraduates, are full of boyish humour; as the boisterous Lord Fancourt Babberley Mr. Arthur Chesney is capital; Brasset is a small part admirably played by Mr. Sydney Compton; Miss Vere Gerald is dignified and lady-like as Donna Lucia; Miss Estelle Winwood and Miss Ethel Fifield act charmingly as Kitty Verdun and Amy Spettigue; Miss Sylvia Morris is a winning Ela Delahay.

Grand Theatre, Ltd. — Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Robinson; General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling; Resident-Manager, Mr. S. Winks.—Pictures are again proving a big attraction here.

Palace and Hippodrome, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Reg. H. Foster.—The old-time favourite, J. W Rowley, proves he is still a good card to play; Satani introduces marvellous illusions in a novel scena; George Lawrence, vocal entertainer, gains hearty applause; Fred Ginnett and Wal Pink's company appear in a well-acted sketch The Beacon Bell; the Tintoe, in African gambols; Sybil Montague, vocalist; Gladys Wilton, girl contralto; and Raymond's Bio-tableaux complete.

HAMILTON, N.B.—Hippodrome.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Bostock; General-Manager, Mr. René Clayton; Business-Manager, Mr. Jack Bostock.—The Harmony Four, in their clever and funny musical comedy act, are topping the bill here this week; Edith Chandler is a dainty singer; Mons. and Mme. Gailland introduce their wonderfully trained equestrian lion; Chorley and Connor, two local favourites, are warmly received; Jukes and Earl are agreeable singers and dancers; J. C. Maddock, the blind musician, is excellent; Shrillo, is an operatic whistler; Phern and Phern do a clever musical act; and the Bioscope concludes.

HANLEY.—Royal, Ltd. — Managing-Director, Mr. Chas. G. Elphinstone; Manager, Mr. Douglas Elphinstone.—Messrs. Smith and Carpenter's company this week produce Pete to large audiences. The play is received with great favour. Miss Marjorie Murray is really brilliant as Kate Cregeen, her elocution being excellent; Miss Amy Grace is capital as Nancy; Miss Ethel Gordon as Grannie is admirably suited; Mr. Frederick Victor as Pete Quilliam is effective, his fine stage presence and powerful acting winning loud plaudits; Mr. Percy Rhodes as Philip Christian is natural and dignified; Mr. Pennington Gush as Ross Christian is decidedly successful; Mr. Tom W. Ford as Cæsar Cregeen shows unmistakable skill; Mr. Ellis J. Preston is good as Black Tom; and Mr. W. Clement as Jonaique Jelly wins credit.

Grand, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. Chas. G. Elphinstone; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Rand.—Capt. Jos. Woodward's juggling sea lions and seals are proving a well-appreciated treat; Fred Poplar makes much merriment in humorous effusions; the Two Anartos are powerful comedians and instrumentalists; An Invasion is a fine film, and evokes great enthusiasm; Musical Sylvo scores effectively; Kitty Wager is pleasing; the Four Royal Scots make a hit with their original and clever act; Terola appears in a daring, sensational novelty, "Motoring the Whirling Cyclon," in which his automobile attains a speed of sixty miles an hour; Gracie Grahame, comedienne, is also billed.

King's.—Lessees, Messrs. Moore and Kennedy; Manager, Mr. H. Kennedy.—A fine set of art films is being shown here this week, audiences being large and appreciative. Miss Vesta Nixon pleasingly supplies the vaudeville items.

HARROGATE.—Grand Opera House.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Peacock; Acting-Manager, Mr. Eric Fielding-Smith.—For the first three nights of this week Mr. Eugene Strafford's company appeared in The Private Secretary. Mr. Donald Price Evans as the Rev. Mr. Spalding well maintained the traditions of the part, and Mr. Alex. Begbie was well placed as Harry Marsland; Mr. Herbert Garthorne was excellent as Douglas Cattermole, and Mr. W. Hargreaves repeated his well-known and clever impersonation of Mr. Cattermole; Mr. Fred Tyrrel was very good as Mr. Gibson, Miss Nan Macrae was all that could be desired in the part of Edith, and Mrs. Alfred Davis was seen to advantage as Miss Ashford.

St. James's Hall.—Managing-Director, Mr. S. Carter; Resident-Manager, Mr. Fred A. Parker.—Harrogate's favourite entertainers, "The Players," are here again this week, including Miss Susie Belmore, the popular principal girl from the Prince's Theatre, Bradford. They give a clever and bright little show. Some beautiful pictures are on view.

HARTLEPOOL.—Empress.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Albert Mathams.—Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope pictures have become exceedingly popular. The Streets and Industries of Naples delighted everyone, and An Arabian Pilgrimage was particularly interesting. There is plenty to interest and amuse in the pictures of Bobby Sportsman, The Convict's Revenge, The Deadly Plant, Ghosts in the House, An Importunate Neighbour, and Evil Spirits in a Girl's School. In addition to the pictures Caryll and Dean, comedy duo; Tom Duncan, tenor vocalist; and Queenie Swift, soubrette, are entertaining.

HASTINGS.—Gaiety Theatre.—Manager, Mr. H. W. Rowland; Resident-Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles E. Scutt.—Mr. Stanley James's company opened on Monday in the comedy My Wife. Miss Mary Carnegy gives a charming impersonation of Beatrice Dupre; a clever portrayal of Gerald Eversleigh is submitted by Mr. C. H. Croker-King; effective character contrasts are provided by Mr. Cecil Brooking and Miss Winifred Beadnell as M. et Mme. Dupre; and Gibby is amusingly presented by Mr. James Gelderd. Miss Katharine Harrington is finely suited as Miriam Hawthorne, and played the part well; good assistance is given by Mr. Franc Stoney as the Butler, Mr. F. Hartley as Crocker, Mr. Reginald W. Fry as Head Waiter, and Mr. Vernon O. Crabtree as Réné Falandras. The comedy is preceded by The Vengeance of Jim, effectively played by Mr. C. B. Brooking, Miss K. Harrington, and little Miss Beryl St. Leger. For Thursday and remaining nights Her Father is billed.

Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. Harry Boyd; General-Manager, Mr. Walter Norman.—A strong programme is opened by the attractive character vocalist Miss Nellie la Rose. Some novel pictures are shown by the Alhambra Bioscope. A realistic picture is submitted by Mr. Scott Alexander of the seamy side of London life. A little band of waifs and strays, of whom the juvenile Kittie Anen is the principal, sing a pathetic appeal entitled "The cry of the children whilst London is sleeping." Lance Grove has an excellent baritone voice; an exciting sketch, The Bank Robbery, is produced by Edward Ranier and his company; Miss Mabel Thorne is a versatile vocalist and comedienne; Mr. Alexander produces a fine military episode, extremely well acted, entitled Napoleon at Waterloo.

Pier Pavilion.—General-Manager, Mr. J. D. Hunter.—The Bioscope shows a series of new pictures. An amusing farce is played with much spirit by Messrs. Joseph Cowell, Mat Melrose, Ernest Tubbs, and the Misses Joan Earle and Laila Melrose; Mr. Henry A. Moore, in his imitations of actors and comedians, exhibits great skill; the musical sketches by the Melroses are appreciated.

Public Hall.—Manager, Mr. W. Slade.—The St. Louis Animated Picture Company (business managers, Messrs. Allen and Vincent) concludes its visit here to-day (Saturday). The entertainments throughout have been of a high order of merit and the pictures up-to-date. On Friday, in addition to the pictures, a baby show was billed, the management providing handsome prizes for local competition.

St. Leonards Pier Pavilion.—General-Manager, Mr. Elvey Thomas.—A cinematograph entertainment is occupying the boards here, animated pictures of nearly every country and their principal cities being shown. Humorous pictures are included.

HUDDERSFIELD. — Hippodrome, Ltd.—Resident-Manager, Mr. N. M. Robinson.—At the top is Reano, with his wonderful band; their brilliant playing of well-known pieces fairly takes the house by storm. Also appearing are Miss Hamid Alexander, in her clever and unusually versatile performance at the piano; Fred Hallam, comedian; the Gladenbecks, acrobats; Wisper, comedy juggler; Miss Beattie Bloom, comedienne; and Dennis Drew, in a smart military scena entitled Back to Barracks, in which he is assisted by a well-drilled squad of lads. The pictures on the bioscope complete the list.

HULL.—Grand Theatre and Opera House.—Morton's, Ltd.—Manager, Mr. W. F. Morton.—After far too long an absence, Mr. Forbes Robertson pays a visit to Hull, and, accompanied by his wife and his London company, is giving a delightful representation of Jerome's play-sermon, The Passing of the Third Floor Back. This story, with its Bloomsbury boarding house milieu, is beautifully played, and Mr. Forbes Robertson in the rôle of the Stranger has a part in which his fine temperamental gifts, his splendid elocutionary powers, and his glorious voice have all their charm. Such fine acting is rarely seen, and without doubt Mr. Robertson is to-day without a compeer on the English stage. As Major Tompkins Mr. Ian Robertson has a pleasing part; nothing could be better than that talented artist, Mr. Edward Sass's Jake Samuels; Mr. Ernest Hendrie, last seen here with the Kendals, has an equally good rôle; as Stasia Miss Gertrude Elliott gives proof of her fine powers; Miss Haidee Wright, a charming artist, is well cast as the painted lady. The Madge Blundell and Miss Cissie Hastings; and also by Messrs. Alvin Sawyer, Edwin Firth, Bernard Mostyn, Will J. Spencer, and others.

LINCOLN.—ROYAL.—Lessees, Messrs. Payne Seddon and Ernest Pope; Resident-Manager, Mr. Ernest Pope.—Mr. Ernest Bodkin's company give a fine performance of The Thief. Mr. Paul Lovett and Miss Kathryn Stocks thrilled the house on Monday in the magnificent second act, and were enthusiastically recalled at the close. Mr. Ernest Bodkin as Raymond is also highly successful; and Mr. A. Taylor-Vinson gives a very clean-cut portrayal of the detective. Mr. C. W. Lindsey's Harry and Miss Mary Forrester's Isabel are excellent studies. The Man in the Street, with Mr. Ernest Bodkin as the outcast, precedes.

PALACE.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. A. E. Dobney.—Consul, the "almost human," is paying his first visit to Lincoln and greatly astonishing packed race-week audiences. Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Wilde, Nellie Walton, the Milton Trio, Master Day, the Melbournes, and Harwood's Juveniles, also win favour.

LIVERPOOL.—ROYAL COURT THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Lawrence.—The always-popular Moody-Manners Opera Company paid a return visit here this week and gave some of the choicest selections from their extensive répertoire. On Monday a large and appreciative audience witnessed Cavalleria Rusticana, with Miss Toni Seiter as Santuzza, a part in which she excelled herself, gaining much applause for her charming vocalisation; Mr. John Child, who was in particularly good form, lent great support with his Turriddu; Mr. Lewys James creditably interpreted the character of Alfio; and Miss N. Stuart made a striking Lola. The work was followed by Pagliacci, the principals in which were Mr. Philip Brozel, who earned a flattering reception for his fine rendering of Canio; Mr. William Dever, who was excellent as Tonio; Mr. Lewys James, an able Silvio; and Miss Kate Anderson, who delighted everybody with her exquisite rendering of the numbers allotted to Nedda. Other works presented during the week were The Meistersingers, Faust, Aida, Madame Butterfly, Lohengrin, and Maritana.

SHAKESPEARE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wentworth Croke; Manager and Secretary, Mr. John Gaffney. Peter Pan was given here for a second week to large and delighted audiences, Miss Pauline Chase charming everybody as the boy who would not grow up.

ROTUNDA THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. M. Montgomery.—That pleasing Melville drama, The Soldier's Wedding, met with great acceptance here this week, and public support was good. Mr. Wingold Lawrence infused a deal of manly spirit into the rôle of Jack Brown, gaining the sympathies of his audience; Miss Dorothy Richardson proved delightful as Nancy Lee, acting with grace and discretion; Miss Mabel Lowe pleased in the rôle of Peggy Munroe; capital comedy was provided by Mr. Johnny Chippendale (Tommy Spratt), Mr. Frederick Biron (David Munroe) and Miss Mattie Everett (Lizzie Walker); the part of Colonel Graham was well handled by Mr. Beresford Whitcomb; a powerful Charles Courtney came from Mr. Gerald Jordan; and good support was also given by Mr. Fred Yarnold (Nathaniel Lee) and Miss Marie McAuley (Julie Beauvrais).

STAR THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Harris Fineberg.—Mr. Allan Wilkie and company are here in a round of Shakespeare. Monday saw Hamlet put forward, Mr. Wilkie giving a fine and artistic rendering of the title-part; Miss Haidee Gunn made an impression with her carefully-played Ophelia; Mr. Alexander Marsh was the Ghost; Mr. Frank Royde acquitted himself ably as Laertes; the Claudius of Mr. John Paley did that actor credit; and Mr. Houston Meharry was satisfactory as Polonius. Mr. Wilkie, who staged everything in excellent style, also included in his week's programme Othello, Macbeth, Romeo and Juliet, The Merchant of Venice, Richard III., Sleigh Bells, and Garrick.

EMPIRE.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Horace Cole.—The inimitable George Robey has been convulsing audiences with laughter throughout the week, his Shakespearian skit and comic imitation of a lion-tamer being particularly rich. Henriette De Serris' reproductions of works of art, statuary, &c., were greatly admired; Fred Ginnett's Hunting Morn sketch was approved in hearty fashion; Verno and Voyce, the singing comedians, have an excellent racing scena in A True Story of the Turf; the Glenroy Troupe gave a pretty military scena, The 17th Lancers; Percival proved exceedingly funny with his peculiar imitations on the piano; Tambo and Tambo showed remarkable skill as tambourine spinners; some popular tenor songs were rendered in good style by Tom Child; and Frank Lynne, the funny-mantlegraph, also appeared.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fred Granville.—Here this week we have Mr. and Mrs. Charles Draycott's company in a number of popular dramas. On Monday A Modern Adventuress was played, others being The Shaughraun, The Colleen Bawn, Heart of a Hero, The Octoroon, and Stolen Birthright.

LYRIC.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Henry C. Arnold.—A principal item here this week is the film showing the Summers-Britt fight. Starr and Leslie provided some capital juggling and singing; the Fauldy Troupe of acrobats were loudly applauded for their talented efforts; Diana Hope gave a delightful society episode. Her Good Name; Zeta Grey and company paid a welcome return with The Lancashire Lass; Harley and Melton are a couple of lively patter comedians and dancers; Fielding and Hull pleased with their musical comedy sketches; and Sam Spira, entertainer, was likewise in the list.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford; Manager, Mr. Walter Hassan.—Top of the bill here this week is an American sketch entitled The Star Bout, which made its first appearance in England. The idea, which is worked in one act, with three scenes, deals with a love incident in which the leading lights are two prize-fighters and a girl. The battle in the ring was of a most exciting character, and the audience followed it with keen attention. Mr. Taylor Granville's sketch should prove a draw. The variety part of the programme has some capital turns. The merry Harry Ford proved as funny as ever; Lalla Selbini, with her comic little Chinese assistant, proved a most pleasing turn; Wright and Lawson, a smart pair of eccentrics, were responsible for much laughter; Dorothy Gould sang with taste; Bliss and Bliss had plenty of humorous patter, and danced in good style; Brent Hayes proved himself an expert banjo manipulator; Winifred Ward scored a success as the "immaculate boy"; and Charles F. Best, comedian, also appeared.

ROYAL PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. M. Montgomery; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank O'Toole.—The Three Musketeers, given here this week by the stock company has proved a big attraction. The principal parts were ably undertaken by Messrs. Sydney Grant (Richelieu), Cecil Ravenswood, E. D. Allen, and Charles Townsend (the Musketeers), and Harry Tresham (D'Artagnan); Miss Lillian Radbourne (Miladi) and Miss Gwynne Warren (Ann of Austria). Mr. Anthony Brown's bioscope showed the latest films.

WESTMINSTER.—Lessee, Mr. Fred E. Weisker; Acting-Manager, Mr. G. Montgomery.—In addition to a series of animated pictures given here during the week, the following artists appeared:—The Tschinmaa band of Chinese performers; Austin and Mottramo, comedy and vocal artists; and the Godfreys, with the sketch, The Slave and the Coon.

OLYMPIA.—District-Manager, Mr. Albert Bulmer; Acting-Manger, Mr. Ernest Wighton.—Principal here this week is Mlle. Liane D'Eve, whose character-changes in view of the audience were watched with attention, while her singing and dancing evoked loud applause; Tom Foy and company gave their lively sketch, The Yorkshire Lad in London; some clever juggling was performed by Walter Bellonini; Guyer and Valli had a funny American trifle, Wait for the Finish; Rich and Rich were as amusing as ever; and contributions also came from Elsie Roby, the slavey at the piano; Victoria Carmen, vocalist; Annie Casey, comedienne; and Charles Chard, comedian. A film showed the Johnson-Burns fight.

PAVILION.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Manager, Mr. Henry Hearn.—Nat Clifford puts his audience into shouts of laughter with his "Bullfighter," "Living Pictures," &c.; La Belle Duchess provides an interesting turn with her cleverly-trained stallions, ponies, and dogs; the Friere troupe of Risley acrobats give a clean and accomplished show; the Three Whirlwind Girl Dancers certainly move about in quick time; Nellie Moore, an accomplished character impersonator, affords satisfaction with her able excerpt from Les Cloches de Corneville; Fred Maitland causes roars of laughter by his altercation with a Suffragette; Mabel Roberts, possessed of a rich voice, has some pleasing illustrated songs; the Sarony Sisters give a smart exhibition of wooden clog dancing; Angus Strong renders several ballads in capital manner; and others in the bill are Tom Morris, whistler; and Will Nosam, vocalist.

GRAND TIVOLI.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Jasper Redfern.—Here this week a pantomime, entitled Beauty and the Beast, sent by the London Pantomime Syndicate, afforded much enjoyment to large audiences. Mr. Leslie Austin, the beast, sang a stirring song, "There's a foe at the gates of England," which caught on; Miss Dollie Barrie was the Beauty, and showed much versatility; Miss Hilda de Grey made a dashing Prince, and rendered Tyrolean songs to the general satisfaction; and the Kibbles' dancing and singing earned great applause. Mr. M. Madden proved a very humorous Dame, and Daleno and Stream helped immensely with the fun as the two bailiffs. The production is well put on.

PARK PALACE.—Lessee, Mr. Jasper Redfern.—The cinematographic pictures shown here continue to attract. During the week the following variety artists appeared:—Frank Coyne, vocal comedian; the Draycott Belles of Harmony; the Lydamore Brothers, comedians; J. H. Carroll, comedian and dancer; Bessie Willows, with chorus songs; and the Denora Boys, juvenile acrobats.

NEW CENTURY PICTURE HALL.—Proprietors, the New Century Animated Picture Co., Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Walter W. Hook.—Excellent films and illustrated songs are given this week.

LOWESTOFT.—MARINA.—Manager, Mr. E. A. Smith.—The drama Love Rules the World is being staged here for the first time locally.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. Geo. Gilbert; Manager, Mr. Frank Freeland.—Messrs. Surrey and Carlton's talented company continue here, and are this week presenting a military sketch, Two Little Soldier Boys, which is received with the greatest enthusiasm. Barry Gilmore, "a great little comedian," scores heavily, and shows undoubted ability as a vocal comedian and tumbler; Ena Richards and Beanland, in female character, also meets with great success; the Biograph pictures include a remarkable "Invasion" film which is cleverly done; while The Coastguard, another effective picture, is thoroughly appropriate and hugely enjoyed by local sons of the sea.

LUTON.—GRAND THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. E. Graham Falcon; Resident-Manager, Mr. Louis J. Beard.—Mr. Wentworth Croke's company in The Prodigal Son is here. Magnus is exceedingly well portrayed by Mr. Hugh Montgomery; Oscar is effectively delineated by Mr. Gordon Macintosh; the dual parts of Thora and Elin is quite a success in the capable hands of Miss Valerie Crespin; Miss Barbara Gott as Anna and Miss Marie Harcourt as the factor's sister are good. Miss Mildred Cottell does full justice to Helga Neilson; and the parts of the Governor of Iceland by Mr. Bellenden Clarke, Oscar Neilson by Mr. Philip Renouf, and Dr. Olsen by Mr. Bruce Lindley, help the success.

MACCLESFIELD.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. W. K. Gatley.—The Honeymoon is being presented by Mr. Gilbert Payne and company. As Nathaniel Noodle Mr. Gilbert Payne proves himself a clever comedian and keeps the audience in the heartiest of laughter; Col. Vandyke Brown is cleverly depicted by Mr. H. F. Housden; Mr. James Hawkes gives a good account of himself as Jack Armstrong; and Mr. Leslie Digby does ample justice to the part of Archie Mashington; as Stella Le Brunn Miss Nellie Dyson is quite competent; Miss Ethyl Errol distinguishes herself as Eneretta Noodle; and Miss B. Erle gives a pleasing Madge Armstrong.

MANCHESTER.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees, the United Theatres Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Edmondstone Shirra.—Mr. Seymour Hicks's principal company is here this week in The Gay Gordons. Mr. Stanley Brett proves a capital substitute for the original Angus Graeme, and as Peggy Quainton Miss Maie Ash is quite equal to the many opportunities provided by the part; Mr. Fred Rolph as Nervy Nat, the showman, is well placed; and so is Mr. George Carroll as Edmund Siddons; while as Charlotte Siddons Miss Nellie Dade shows herself to be a smart and resourceful comedienne. Other parts are adequately filled, and the dressing and staging are, of course, excellent.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietors, the United Theatres Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. George Lee.—A good performance of Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch was given here on Monday by Mr. W. Gaston Mayer's company. Miss Gertrude Irving's depiction of the title-part was very intelligently done, and is sure to find favour even with those who have seen her predecessor, Mrs. Madge Carr Cook; Miss Rita Carlyle as Miss Hazy provoked roars of laughter, which were supplemented by the comic doings and sayings of Miss Maud Townsend and Miss Amy Fanchette as Mrs. Eichorn and Mrs. Schultz; to say nothing of the fine work of Mr. Frederick Forrest as Mr. Stubbins, and the humours of quite a number of other quaint and unusual characters; nicely rendered also was the Lovey Mary of Miss Margaret Shelley; and, indeed, the pathos and humour of the entire performance left nothing to be desired.

ROYAL OSBORNE THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Mason.—Miss Ethel Van Praagh and Mr. J. Edward Whitty's company won success here on Monday with their first local performance of The Eyes of the World. Miss Van Praagh in the rôle of Helene de L'Orme plays artistically and in convincing style; as her wayward husband, Hector, Mr. George D. Daiper acquits himself creditably, his paramour, Esme de Carnac, being cleverly portrayed by Miss Beatrice Fitzhugh; while Mr. Will Casey makes the most of the character of Gaston de Carnac; Mr. J. Edward Whitty is amusing as the lovesick lawyer, ably assisted by Miss Nellie Garside; and other parts are well rendered by Miss Elsie Capell and Mr. Charles Sewell. One would have liked to see more of Mr. Charles Stirling, who as Octave was exceptionally strong in speech and action.

METROPOLE THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Day.—Prominent here this week is Sig. Arvi's mysterious reproduction of pictorial phenomena. Edwin Garth in his new comedy scena is very humorous; Bains and Reed (who top the bill) are clever tumblers; Ethel Loftus, in her song, "Father," makes a great hit; Fred Walmsley, as the Dotty Poet, is amusing; and other good turns are Cecilia Gold, burlesque artist; Jack Waller, violinist; Major Moss, an old singer of old songs; and Charters and Clare, comedians.

GRAND JUNCTION THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Brearley.—Mr. J. A. Campbell's successful drama, The Old Folks at Home, though well known to local audiences, is always sure of a welcome. Miss Mary Fulton gives a fine rendering of Dorothy Robin; while as Andrew Ross, the yeoman farmer, Mr. H. E. Herberte plays admirably; the dissolute Lord Kenilworth is capitally depicted by Mr. Frank Liston, and Miss Kate Froud has opportunities as Patricia Bathurst; good also are Mr. Eugene Santley as Christopher Robin; Mr. Fred Lillywhite as the hunchback Jock, Miss Clara Santley as Martha; and Miss Lillian Francis as Dinah. Messrs. Frank Caffrey and Leslie Crowther are capable in humorous rôles.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Hall.—Eli Hudson and Olga and Elgar give a fine star turn here this week in their refined musical act. Marie Kendall, the popular favourite, captures the house with her vivacious songs; Casey's Court is another large and entertaining item; Arthur Kenney is well described as a sensational cyclist; Walter King, the doleful comedian, is quite effective in a style of his own; Andrew McManus, tenor vocalist, has a voice of unusual quality; and other pleasing turns are the Lyric Mummers, vocal duologue artists; Steve McCarthy, comedian and dancer; and Alice Maple, an engaging comedienne and dancer.

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Manager, Mr. Nelson Barry.—That clever, versatile actor, Albert Chevalier, is to the front here, excellently supported in a pocket version of The First Night, entitled Behind the Scenes, in which he scores a big success. Kaufmann's Troupe of Twelve charming Cycling Beauties go through a wonderfully neat performance; the Stein-Eretto Troupe are marvellous hand-jumping acrobats; Nellie Coleman, the well-known female comedian, makes her usual hit; Ian Colquhoun is excellent in national character songs; and other smart turns are offered by Harry Lickson and his balancing dogs; St. George Sylvesta, society illusionist; Harvey's American Boys and Girls in pleasing songs and dances; and the St. Johns, musicians and dancers.

PALACE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter de Frece; Manager, Mr. A. J. Carter.—Margaret Cooper, the well-known entertainer, tops the bill here this week, and meets with a deserved good reception; Jake Friedman and company score a success, as usual, in that delightful Dutch operetta Happy Holland; and the Six Albyns are exceedingly good singers. Ernie Mayne, of "Cupid" fame, is a capital comedian; Frank Maura goes through his really marvellous foot equilibristic act; Owen McGiveney is clever in his Dickens' character studies; the Max Milian Trio of equilibrists give a wonderfully clever performance; and Allan Shaw is a smart coin and card manipulator. The Palace Pictures complete.

KING'S, LONGSIGHT.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. James R. Trippett.—The bill is topped here this week by the Lyons Trio, who are highly amusing as pantomimists and dancers; Coram makes his usual hit as a ventriloquist; Marie Blythe, comedienne and dancer, has some taking songs; and the Days are exceptionally smart second-sight seers. Other capital turns are given by Jack Crawley, in novel act, "Lights Out"; Edwards and Ward, comedy entertainers; Milner and Storey, comedy artists; J. W. Gallagher, comedian; Herma, in weight-lifting act; and Little Tichbourne, a very funny comedian. A Catching Dance is a vastly amusing film shown on the Bioscope.

TIVOLI.—Managing-Director, Mr. Charles A. Wilkes; Manager, Mr. Arthur B. Wilkes.—A clever and refined turn is given here this week by Millie Legarde, the popular musical comedy artist, who meets with a big reception; Luna Love, a capital comedienne, scores with pleasing songs and dances; and Ray and Calden, in their novel comedy act, are loudly applauded. Zeta Russell, a charming youthful comedienne, gives a delightful turn, singing nicely and dancing gracefully; and E. Babouschka, the Anglo-Austrian comedian, is well received. Other enjoyable items are those of the Sisters Clarette, expert dancers; Alpho, ventriloquist; Rose Tilley, comedienne; and Amritsa, the Mystic. Ruffell's pictures are excellent.

QUEEN'S PARK HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. W. Meek.—A first-rate performance of that favourite drama, A Soldier's Honour, is given here twice nightly by Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Kimberley's company. Miss Lilla Wilde scores well as Cora Lee, and Miss Edie Macklin as Jemima Eliza shows herself to be a very clever comedienne. As Captain Dene Mr. T. Arthur Ellis is particularly good; and Mr. Harry Lyndon and Miss Iza Lyndon as Percy Brattle and Gwendoline Temple respectively are very pleasing. Praise should also be accorded the following for their excellent work:—Messrs. William Vane, Henry Rutland, Andrew Money, and the Misses Norah Bedford and Violet Langley; whilst the remaining parts are all in good hands.

HULME HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. Thomas Baker.—Billy Merson, a thorough comedian, tops the bill here this week, and scores a big success; whilst Ted Waite, the spasmodic comedian, bottoms the bill, and is equally successful. The Twin Sisters Tiny and Mite, child vocalists and dancers, are excellent and well received; and Shirly Liggins and company in a farmyard scena sing well; the Rangers are clever trick cyclists; Marie Kay, juvenile comedienne and expert dancer, is good; Phillips and Bristow are smart wooden shoe dancers; and Flo Hilton is a popular male impersonator. Bioscope Pictures complete.

MARGATE.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. E. Michael; General-Manager, Mr. W. W. Keene.—Mr. James Bell and Miss Annie Bell's company has this week secured a cordial welcome in the drama The Idol of Paris. Miss Annie Bell, in the title-rôle, as a variety star, has a part to which she adapts herself successfully; Mr. Gordon Robey essays the difficult rôle of Prince Sergius Zoresky in a capable manner; Mr. Charles Stafford displays ability as Philippe D'Esterre; Mr. C. St. John Medley successfully undertakes the rôle of Gustave Langlois; Mr. Sidney Arnold does well as Victor Cashelle; Mr. Chris Roberts does justice to the part of Theo Decline; and Mr. Frank H. Dale is amusing as Tatave. Miss Frances Bruce supplies a good study as Mme. Sancterre; the part of Olympe Sosage, the dresser, is ably portrayed by Miss Grace Noble; Miss Pharo Anderson offers an acceptable characterisation of Rachel Bernhardt, a lady desirous of getting on the stage; and as Ann Miss Annie Megson is good.

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Directors, Messrs. Fredk. Mouillot and Walter de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. C. F. Bawtree.—The week's programme includes the Four Mexicans, champion lassoists; Fynn and Fayne, eccentric comedians; Millie Wolfgang, in her scena, "My Moonlight Girl"; Alf Davis, actor-vocalist; Lily Edwardes, comedienne; Potts, the newsboy, in his song-scena; and the Whitworth Girls, in their novelty cycle turn. The evening's programme also includes a series of interesting bioscopic pictures.

MERTHYR TYDFIL.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessees, The South Wales Entertainments, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Albert Jackson.—Mr. F. R. Benson's company (South) is paying a welcome return visit with Julius Cæsar, Twelfth Night, Othello, The Merry Wives of Windsor, She Stoops to Conquer, and The Merchant of Venice. On Monday Julius Cæsar was staged, with Mr. Baliol Holloway as Marc Antony, Mr. John Cairns as Brutus, Miss Emil Leslie as Portia, supported by an excellent company.

TEMPERANCE HALL.—Manager, Mr. Israel Price.—This week Chas. M. Daley and company are prominent in the miniature farcical comedy, I Must Have It; Bradshaw Brothers score as eccentric acrobats; and a pretty musical scena is introduced by the Four Musical Watsons. Also contributing to the programme are the Selwyns in a refined vocal and dancing act; Ferris and Farnley, patter comedians; Donatos, one-legged clowns; Elton and Elma, in a knockabout triple bar-act; the Haverleys, American song illustrators; and the Biograph.

MIDDLESBROUGH.—GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—Manager, Mr. W. Chatto; Managing-Director, Mr. J. Jowsey.—Playgoers in Middlesbrough and district have this week the opportunity of witnessing legitimate plays presented by Mr. Ian Maclaren and company. Mr. Maclaren on Monday gave a flawless portrayal of the part of Marcus Antonius in Julius Cæsar, and he thoroughly deserved the plaudits showered upon him.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Manager, Mr. J. Chas. Imeson; Managing-Director, Mr. E. D. Bonarius.—Mr. George Alexander's success The Thief is being played here. Mr. Grendon Bentley and Miss May Longden are quite equal to the demands of the second act, and their dramatic interview is fine in its restraint. Mr. Gerald Ames in the part of Raymond Leyton is all that can be desired; and Alfred Lugg as Harry and Miss May Dibley as Isobel Leyton are also successful. The play is preceded each evening by The Nursery Governess.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. John Brill; Manager, Mr. Charles Rembges.—Bella and Bijou are in high favour here with The Suffragette; the Ormesby Quartette win well-merited praise; and Bijou Russell is a dainty dancer. Herman Melot in his conjuring act, Frank Boyce, comedian, Harry Brayne and Bert Lloyd, in their latest absurdity, and the Three Orleans, in wooden-shoe dancing, are all acceptable.

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. A. E. Nichols; Manager, Signor Rino Pepi.—Fred Lindsay makes a favourable impression in his interesting feats. Other enjoyable turns are contributed by Stanley, the Scottish singing collier; Tom Joy, comedian; Vere and Royal, Arthur Stacey, Damerall and Rutland, Vincent, Lily Arthur, vocal comedienne and dancer, and Raglus, eccentric juggler.

MOTHERWELL.—NEW CENTURY THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Resident-Manager, Mr. Arthur Hales.—Messrs. G. F. Watson and Ernest Owen present the new emotional drama How Women Are Slandered. Miss Beatrice Hone is tender and pathetic as Maud Warburton; Miss Phyllis Elton aptly embodies the unscrupulous Madge Gilroy, and Miss Mollie Hackett is bright and merry as the maid Patty. Major Sterling is capitally rendered by Mr. Courtney Robinson; Bob Warburton has a suitable exponent in Mr. Bert Oates, Mr. Templar being well suited as Jimmy Chips.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Resident-Manager, Mr. F. Teale Lingham.—On Monday Mr. George Edwardes's company presented The Dollar Princess. In the principal rôle Miss Hilda Moody finds ample scope for her charming voice and clever acting, and scores heavily throughout the piece. In the absence of Miss Kitty Gordon on Monday evening Miss Phyllis Le Grand undertook the rôle of Olga, a lion queen, and was an undoubted success, being encored again and again for her delightful singing, especially in the "Lion Queen" song, whilst Miss Alice Pollard made a dainty and sufficiently coquettish Daisy. As Freddy Fairfax Mr. Robert Michaelis was seen and heard to great advantage, his spirited acting and cultured singing being one of the features of the production; Mr. Fred Winn imparted any amount of quaint dry humour to his interpretation of the part of Phineas Q. Conder, and Mr. Vernon Davidson was well suited in John, Earl of Quorn. Other leading rôles were ably filled by Mr. Howard Cridland, Mr. Harry Parker, Mr. Willie Warde, Miss Maude Duncan, and Miss Alice Moffat.

TYNE THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Lessees, Messrs. Howard and Wyndham; Manager, Mr. Fred C. Sutcliffe.—Mr. Wentworth Croke's company opened on Monday in The Bondman. Mr. R. Scrope Quinton scored a notable personal success as Jason, his acting being both vigorous and effective; Mr. W. Henry Hargreaves presented a convincing study of the part of Michael Sunlocks; Mr. Oswald Lingard was excellent as Adam Fairbrother; in the dual rôles of Father Ferrati and Grandfather Mr. W. H. Rotheram was very successful. Miss Madge Lanerton's portrayal of Mrs. Fairbrother was a capital piece of acting; Miss Georgina Wynter's rendering of Greeba was most sympathetic; while Miss Lilian Mayne did well in the part of the housekeeper.

PALACE THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. T. W. Rowe.—The Little Breadwinner is being presented by Mr. G. A. Campbell's company. Mr. Reginald Brown gives a fine impersonation of the hero, Richard Lawrence; Mr. Alfred Maurice, as the villainous schemer, Joseph Prior, plays his part well; humorous diversion of an excellent kind is ably provided by Mr. Sydney Lynn as Charles Prior; Mr. J. Monkhouse as Lord Dorrington (the Quaker) acts with much dignity; Margaret Daventry is sympathetically portrayed by Miss Josephine Richards; while Miss Millie Ford gives a good account of herself as Kate Cherry. The success of the evening is Little Irene in the title-rôle, her singing and dancing being well applauded; Miss Lissa Young makes the best of Bobby Trott.

GRAND THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. F. W. Bolam; Manager, Mr. Chas. E. Linney.—The Heathen and the Christian was presented here on Monday evening. The play is of intense interest, and the principal parts are capably represented by Mr. Herbert Robinson, Mr. Dudley Winton, Mr. Frank Adair, Miss Louie Adair, and Miss Eva Reed.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—Resident-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; Manager, Mr. W. P. Wells; Assistant-Manager, Mr. J. W. Kilgour.—Mr. George Lashwood's appearance is greeted each evening with outbursts of applause. Mr. Lashwood is more entertaining than ever, and keeps the house in great good humour with his cleverly-rendered songs and excellent patter. Another noteworthy turn is provided by Hubert Carter, in an abbreviated version of David Garrick, in which he is supported by Mrs. Calhaem, Miss H. Russell, Mr. A. Crighton, Mr. F. Norman, and Mr. H. A. Stafford. Miss Edie King proves a versatile comedienne and dancer, and Van Allen, a musical comedian of rare ability; the irrepressible Austin Rudd evokes much laughter with his experiences as a policeman at a Suffragettes' meeting, and the Trentanovi Sisters inspire plenty of applause with their daring gymnastic performance; whilst other artists contributing to an all-round excellent programme are Boyd and Gilfain, De Ganty's Water Grotto, J. H. Scotland, Arthur Gill, the man of many voices, and La Danseuse; also the Bioscope.

PAVILION THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Thos. Barrasford; Manager, Mr. W. H. Boardman.—The Six Brothers Luck had a capital bill here this week, and others appearing are Violet Lloyd and Horace Lane, Lloyd Morgan, The Camplins, Horace Jones, Doris Dean, Josie Delaine, Lieut. Travis, and Capt. Woodward's Sea Lions.

NEWPORT.—LYCEUM.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Sidney Cooper.—Miss Emma and Mr. Percy Hutchison's company is here in Lady Frederick. Miss Eleanor Delaporte appears as Lady Frederick Berroles, and is specially good in the Dressing-room scene; Mr. W. Barnett acts well the part of Sir Gerald O'Mara; and Miss Celia Gordon plays Lady Mereston with great power. Mr. Vivian Gilbert makes a very charming Lord Mereston; Mr. Edward Bonfield plays Captain Montgomery with force and consistency; and Mr. Gerald Gambier is a bluff and natural Admiral Carlisle. Miss Lynn Fountanne is sweet and charming as Rose; and Mr. John Orme and Mr. Bruce Smith are satisfactory as Thompson and Albert, Mr. Harry Winton as Pierre being natural as a waiter. Miss Phyllis Manners is effective as Mme. Claude. The great success of the production is undoubtedly the Paradine Fouldes of Mr. Robert Minster. The piece is preceded by The Peacemaker, a humorous one-act play.

EMPIRE.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. O. Stoll.—La Milo heads the programme here with an exhibition of living statuary, and on Monday evening she was accorded a very hearty reception in her various poses. Cruickshank gives a number of freehand sketches; a very pleasing turn is provided by Miss Marquis's stud of eight trained cobs; and Orpheus, in a clever instrumental act, furnishes a treat. Bertha Stuart, a Scottish character comedienne, finds much favour; the Three Welsh Girls supply a good vocal turn; and Frank Hartley performs some original feats in juggling. Walter Wade in song and patter is acceptable; Marjorie Lawrence is an accomplished dancer; and the Bioscope shows some interesting pictures.

NORWICH.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessee, Mr. Fred Morgan.—The Vedrenne-Barker company in Bernard Shaw's You Never Can Tell occupies the boards this week. Miss Lena Halliday performs excellently the part of Mrs. Clandon, Miss Muriel Nurse knows what's good for her exhausted Patients.

THE INCOMPARABLE WINE TONIC

"Wincarnis"—at once a Perfect Food, a Powerful Stimulant, and a Potential Restorative. An absolute necessity for the Sick and Convalescent. A most desirable "Pick-me-up" for those who, though entirely free of any specific ailment, yet need a stimulating invigorant to counteract Wear, Tear, and Worry.

AT YOUR SERVICE. "Wincarnis" is at all times a delicious treat even as an ordinary beverage, but when taken as a medicinal tonic restorative the sensation of agreeable comfort is considerably enhanced.

Never in the history of the world has thorough healthy efficiency of the nervous system been so much needed as now. We all know that weakness and debility are engendered by excess of work and worry. We all know that work which involves a strain on the nerves is exceptionally damaging. Hence the greater need for something to counteract deterioration of stamina and nerve force.

It is a matter for general satisfaction that a perfect tonic has at last been placed at the service of all who need invigoration. "Wincarnis" has been pronounced by over 8000 members of the medical profession to be the finest restorative of the age. It enables a delicate stomach to assimilate all the nourishment contained in ordinary food.

GOOD OPINION VERIFIED. Miss L. Foreman, The Vicarage, Fairford, Gloucestershire, writes:—"Feb. 7th. Dear Sirs,—Some time ago I took a quantity of 'Wincarnis' and derived great benefit. I have again taken it, and it has now quite set me up in health and strength. I consider your Wine Tonic perfect in flavour and clearness of colour. It is meat and drink combined, and cannot be praised too highly as a nutritious restorative."

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. E. H. Bostock and F. W. Fitt; Manager, Mr. Councillor F. W. Fitt.—The famous Kellinos, in their dancing and acrobatic speciality act, entitled A Fête in Venice, give a pleasing performance and are enthusiastically greeted; Gold and Sterling, in The Maid and the Artist, are very entertaining; Howard and St. Clare are successful in their singing and dancing act; and the Polio Trio are clever xylophone artists. George James, comedian, Little Zola, comedian, Miss Ethel Walker, pianist and vocalist, and Charles J. Johnson, "the black diamond," and the Hippo's bioscope complete an excellent programme.

AGRICULTURAL HALL ASSEMBLY ROOMS.—The new Era pictures are good, and well patronised.

BANK PLAIN ASSEMBLY ROOMS.—The Franco-British pictures are doing well, giving an attractive entertainment.

CENTRAL HALL, UPPER MARKET.—This is a new place of entertainment, which has only recently been licensed and is now opened by the East Anglian Bioscope Company. The building has been converted into an elegantly-fitted place of amusement, provided with excellent seating accommodation and large entrance. The first show was given on Monday evening, and the pictures were of excellent character, enlivened with a pianoforte accompaniment. There are two performances nightly with a matinée on Saturday.

NOTTINGHAM. — THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. Howard Finney.—A capital company, touring under the auspices of Mr. George Edwardes and Charles Frohman, present A Waltz Dream this week to crowded houses. Honours fall to Miss May de Sousa, bright, sparkling, and delightful as St. Franzi; Miss Ethel Cadman is equally successful as the Princess, and uses her cultured voice to the utmost effect. Mr. Leslie Holland, a comedian of exceptional ability and a dancer of no mean attainments, does well as Lothar, and with the able assistance of Mr. John Humphries as the Prince helps very considerably towards the success of the production. Mr. Wilson Pembroke acts well and sings very sweetly as Niki; and Mr. John Hamilton as Montschi achieves a gratifying success. Called upon, through the indisposition of Miss Amy Augarde, to assume the rôle, Miss M. Maitland makes a capable Frederika. Messrs. Arthur Royd, Albert Kavanagh, and Willie Warde, jun., prove well able to take care of their various parts. The whole reflects great credit upon Mr. J. A. E. Malone, the producer, and Mr. Hamish McCunn, the musical director.

GRAND THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. Harry Upton.—Sapho proves a great attraction here this week. Miss Ada Abbott gives an artistic impersonation of the complex character of Fanny Legrand; Mr. Ernest Abbott makes a capital exponent of Jean Ganssin; Miss Florence North is sufficiently sympathetic as Lucy; and Aunt Divonne is well played by Miss Ethel Tinsley. Mr. Francis Trevor (Déchelette), Mr. H. B. Wilson (Flamant), Mr. John Lester (Caoudal), act efficiently; and the humorous parts are effectively brought out by Mr. Edwin Keene (Uncle Cesaire) and Mr. W. H. Daris-Brown and Miss Mary Douglas (the two Hettemas).

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. Albert C. Duncan.—The sympathetic rendering of The Master Musician and the delightful 'cello playing by Van Biene, assisted by Miss Mary Mannering, gain the warmest appreciation; Joseph Hart's "Rain Dears" make an attractive display of dancing, and the scenery is elaborate; excerpts from Il Trovatore are capitally given by Mr. Charles Fisher's "pocket opera" company; the Jackley Trio contribute an amusing item; the Lupinos keep up their reputation for eccentricity; Allan Hanbury tells some smart anecdotes; the Lumars create a mild sensation in an acrobatic act; a musical act by the Bensons is well received; Lupino Lane gives a comical dance; and the Bioscope films are excellent.

Carnell.—The marvellous feats of the Klein family of cyclists arouse the greatest enthusiasm; Arthur Reece renders his songs acceptably; a capital little comedy, The Magpie and the Jay, is successfully given by Miss Maud Hall and Carleton Macy, ably assisted by Miss Bessie Carlton; comical patter by Karr and Kooney and some knockabout business of the Three Krakes are provocative of laughter; Tony Iveson shows his skill at the piano; Dora Martini is responsible for a clever gymnastic display; and the programme is contributed to by Rosie Ré Val, W. G. Wesley, and the Barrascope.

NUNEATON.—PRINCE OF WALES'S.—Proprietors, Theatre and Entertainments Co.; Managing-Director, Mr. A. F. Cross; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Brown.—Captain Clayton's pantomime Cinderella is here this week. Miss Linda May as Cinderella is charming and attractive; Miss Amy Allnutt makes a capital Prince, her powerful and effective rendering of popular songs making her a general favourite.; Miss M. Preston is pleasing as the Fairy Godmother; Mr. Tom Gilbert and Mr. Bert Evremond as the Baron's daughters create plenty of fun; Mr. C. Turner as Blustering Joe shows himself to be a comedian of much ability; the acrobatic display given by the Zola Troupe is both smart and clever; the Gibson Girls execute some difficult dances in a highly creditable manner.

OLDHAM.—GRAND THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. S. Mayall. —Human Nature is being played by Mr. R. A. Beaton's company. Mr. S. Herbert Humber as Capt. Temple gives a forcible rendering of the character; and Mr. F. Morgan as Paul de Vigne is capable of much villainy. Miss Ada Oakley acts in a capable manner as Nellie; and Miss Beatrice Burdett is excellent as Cora. Miss Lil Leicester as Frank Temple and Miss Marjorie Armstrong as Dick are both accomplished in their respective parts; Mr. J. P. Dryden as Matthew Hawker, the scheming solicitor, is very good; and Mr. Alf. Ferris as Joe Lambkin and Miss Esther Carthew as his wife are very successful. Miss Nellie James as Maggie Wilkins and Mr. E. Harvey White are responsible for some excellent comedy; Mr. C. W. Maxwell is very good as Stephen Mardyke; and Mr. E. Fergusson is a good Rev. Arthur Lulworth.

COLOSSEUM THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Wm. Eastwood.—For Love and the King is here for the first time, played by Mr. C. Watson Mill and company. Mr. Mill acts the part of Jarval in a powerful manner; Miss Rosalind Tate as Princess Athene appears to great advantage; and Miss Joan Ellis is a clever exponent of the part of Natila. Miss Lily Wynter is capital as Grazia; and Miss Frances Tierney is very good as Edith Wynter. Miss Laura Munro does well as Princess Milinia. Mr. Villiers Stanley as Prince Uros is a capital study. Mr. John Burton is a capital Michael, and his son Vladimir is ably impersonated by Mr. Henry Earlesmere. Mr. Geoffrey Chate is a capital Duke Fernand; whilst Mr. J. K. Woods is very amusing as Carl Oppenheim; Mr. F. Lyndon being very successful as King Kara. The drama is dressed and staged in a most sumptuous manner.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Hulme.—The La Scala Opera Company, in a grand selection from Cavalleria Rusticana, is heartily enjoyed; Galletti's Monkey Comedians go through a marvellous performance; the Lukushimas, including Otoro San, gain much applause for their smart equilibristic entertainment; Juno Salmo appears with great success as a contortionist; Mignonette Kokin is excellent in her songs and eccentric dances; Wilson Hallett, in his humorous and pathetic child studies, fairly caught on, with good results; Mike Nono is a smart dancer and good singer; and Madge Brownie as a comedy artist does well. Sam Clarke caused hearty laughter for his dialect patter, being well received; Buster Brown is very smart in a trick roller skating act; and J. H. Ellis does well as a comedian.

PALACE THEATRE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter De Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. F. Thorne; Assistant-Manager, Mr. E Sharrocks.—Arthur Roberts and company cause hearty laughter in the cleverly acted farcical sketch Till Sunday; the Bros. Horne, in The Biter Bit, introduce smart boxing with success; Effie White introduces her latest creation, "The Spirit of the Cave," with good results; Hewitt and May, in a smart musical club-swinging act, are very smart; and Florrie Cooper is a most acceptable vocalist. Rosie Bartlett has a fine voice, and she uses it well; Frank Couch is good as a comedian; and the Palace Pictures complete a good bill.

ROYAL THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—General-Manager Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Kilrow.—The Ghost of Jerry Bundler heads the bill, being played by Mr. Harry Nuttall's company with great success; the Victoria Troupe provide a rich musical treat, with neat dances, and they have had a good reception; Carl and Carr are very amusing in their comedy episode; Dolly Golden is a capital speciality dancer; Florence and Rose Showell sing smart duets well; and Wills and Mackenzie are capital vocalists. Thomas and Taylor are clever in a quick-change act, Fun on the Midland; the Sisters Bartholomew sing and dance well; and the Les Zelovas are smart acrobatic equilibrists The Dottoecope concludes.

HIPPODROME.—General-Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. L. King. — The World in Motion continues to attract good houses with pictures both humorous and dramatic.

OXFORD.—THE NEW THEATRE.—Proprietors, The Oxford Theatre Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. C. C. Dorrill; Assistant-Manager, Mr G. T. Lucas.—Messrs. Dudley Bennett and T. C. Wray's company is here with The Catch of the Season and The Country Girl. In The Catch of the Season Mr. William Greene works exceedingly hard and secures a well-earned success and hearty reception as the Duke of St. Jermyn's; Mr. Grove Fisher is admirable as Sir John Crystal; and Mr. Franklin Miles makes an excellent Mr. William Gibson. As Lord Dundreary Mr. Joseph Bruce is inimitable; while Master Ernest Grata is distinctly a persona grata, and one of the successes of the evening as Bucket. Miss Claire de Vere is dignified as the Duchess of St. Jermyn's; and Miss Grace Hampton gives a vivacious rendering of Lady Caterham; Miss Edna Eden as Lady Crystal, Miss Barry Eldon as the Hon. Honoria Bedford, and Miss Kate Robertson as the Hon. Sophia Bedford are all highly successful; Miss Dorothea Clarke easily wins all hearts with her charming and graceful impersonation of Angela. The chorus is strong, and renders the numbers with good spirit.

EAST OXFORD THEATRE. — Lessees, East Oxford Theatre Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Stuart.—Miss Winifred Maude's company, under the direction of Mr. Victor du Cane, is here with The Sins of a City and The Stowaway. In The Sins of a City Mr. Victor du Cane is a great success as Isaac Levi; Mr. H. Gordon Ingram gives a robust rendering of Sandy McDonald; and Mr. Maurice Jones is realistic in the dual rôle of Joe Woodleigh and Jasper Woodleigh. Mr. Leonard S. Harrison wins favour as Donald McIvor; and Mr. Wordsley Hulse makes an effective villain as Ralph Blackwater; Mrs. Wingold Lawrence portrays Lesbia l'Estrange with becoming dignity; Miss Louise Carlton is natural as Jenny; and Miss Jennie Hackett is a fund of merriment as Midge; Miss Winifred Maude is very graceful as Seaweed.

PAISLEY.—PAISLEY THEATRE.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. H. Savile.—The Ugliest Woman on Earth is being presented by Mr. Frederick Melville's excellent company. As Jack Merryman Mr. Philip Darien gives a masterly performance; Mr. Leyton Cancellor as Hubert Gould plays effectively; Mr. Leonard Thackeray proves successful in the rôle of Antonio Luchesi; and Mr. Freddie Bentley is quaintly amusing and original in his embodiment of Tubby Horrick. Miss Beatrice Homer in the title-rôle plays with admirable intensity, which commands due appreciation; Miss Gertrude Harrison as Rose Courtenay is responsible for a sound impersonation; as Morita Miss Violet Macaree plays with commendable ability; and Miss Nellie Jackson creates a deal of amusement, with her Aggie Brown. Capital impersonations are submitted by Mr. William de Brigord as Tom Redvers, Mr. Harry Leyton as Raggles, Mr. Gerald Nolan as Dr. Carr, Mr. Richard Jollyboat as Griffiths, and minor rôles are adequately filled.

HIPPODROME.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Bostock; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. Stead.—The star attraction is Lowenwirth and Cohan, who as Hebrew comedians are exceedingly humorous; Minnie Hunt and Rhys Thomas present a clever comedy duologue, Her Birthday, which is entertaining; Rosie Archer delights with her mimicking; Maud Vera sings and dances nicely; Bi-Bo-Bi gives an enjoyable musical entertainment; Bennett and Martell, comedians, are excruciatingly funny in their business; Dolly Ross is a capital singer and neat dancer; Jack Hylton scores with his humorous songs; and the Hippodrome Bioscope shows as usual excellent films.

PENTRE.—TIVOLI PALACE AND HIPPODROME, LTD.—Manager, Mr. C. W. Poole; Resident-Manager, Mr. James Gunn.—At the top of a capital programme are the Garganis, the comical gentlemen acrobats who perform astonishing feats of skill and dexterity. A well-appreciated turn is that of Morton and Elliott, in their vocal numbers and clever manipulation of the harmonica. Leo Fields captures the audience with his well-rendered humorous songs; Oliver Conroy commands applause for his clean and refined comedy; Georgina Leno, daughter of the late Dan Leno, earns praise as a charming comedienne; Ned Graydon, in his comic manipulation of various instruments, creates mirth. L. B. Athol sustains his reputation as a popular vocal comedian; The Della Sisters, the ladies in black, are also a great success; the Tivoliscope, with up-to-date films, conclude.

PERTH.—PERTH THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. J. H. Savile; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank Aldridge.—Adria Hill and Robert Ayrton's company is here in The Woman from Russia and A Gambler's Daughter. In the former piece, Mr. Robert Ayrton as Captain Alexis played well; Mr. Chas. Russell as the Hon. Reginald Fitzgerald was successful; Mr. J. Lawrence was seen to advantage as Frank Haldane; Mr. Richard Pitt was effective as James Haldane; Mr. Dighton Probyn was a clever Wun-hi; Miss Adria Hill skilfully enacted the part of Wanda; Miss Edith Tempest made a charming Edith; and Miss Ethel Bateman did well as Mary Ann Smith.

PLYMOUTH.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Manager, Mr. J. Langdon Lee.—Gentleman Jockey, a smartly-written comedy, with a touch of drama, occupies the Royal for the week and provides a very good evening's enjoyment, the cleverly-contrived plot being well worked out. Miss Nora Melton, who understudies Miss Ethel Ward, absent through indisposition, makes a very capable Poppy Grayson, and performs her task excellently on short notice; Mr. Nelson Handcock as Sir Francis Granmere, the Gentleman Jockey, gives a finished rendering of a "goey" part, and furnishes some well-rendered vocal numbers; Mr. Helier Le Maistre makes a fine, vigorous trainer as David Grayson, and Mr. Weldon Atherstone makes an excellent villain as Frank Snakeworth; Mr. George Brentwood is particularly amusing as P.-C. Blodgers, and Mr. Leonard Dalrymple correctly interprets the dude Archie Fitzherbert. A feature of the performance is the excellent dancing of the Misses Dawson Payne and Chandler.

PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. Jack Field.—The Gothams furnish some excellent vocal numbers, whilst their remaining business evokes roars of laughter; Venturini completely mystifies his audience with one particular trick, whilst his remaining contributions consist of some skilfully manipulated conjuring; the Eight Pavilion Girls prove a fine draw, their singing and dancing being alike most acceptable; Nellie Deane, comedienne, finds plenty of popular favour, and the Sisters Desmond are accomplished duettists; Hans and Lux contributed some smart and down-to-date patter; the Five Vernons entertain with some accomplished xylophone selections, and Johnny Dwyer creates plenty of fun with his quaint ways.

PONTYCYMMER.—BODIE'S HIPPODROME AND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Proprietor, Dr. Walford Bodie; General-Manager, Mr. T. N. Mills.—Married to the Wrong Man, a four-act drama, presented by Miss Inez Howard's company, had a flattering reception from a well-filled house on Monday evening. Mr. C. Quinton Fulford makes an excellent hero; whilst the rôle of the villain is ably sustained by Mr. H. C. Cooper. Miss Margaret Savill plays the heroine with effective sincerity.

PORTSMOUTH.—THEATRE ROYAL.— Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Armstrong Bell.—Raffles is again being successfully presented here by Mr. Leonard Boyne's company, the amateur cracksman and idol of society receiving an excellent interpretation from Mr. Eille Norwood. Mr. E. W. Thomas repeats his success as the detective; some good acting is displayed by Mr. Harold West as Bunny; Miss Ruth Mackay portrays with skill the difficult part of Mrs. Vidal; a graceful and charming Gwendoline is seen in Miss Lucie Milner; Marie is well played by Miss Dorothy Gordon; the burglar Crawshay is rendered interesting by Mr. Dalziel Heron; and Crowley has a suitable exponent in Mr. Cecil Brymer, Earl Amersteth being ably impersonated by Mr. Arthur Willoughby. An amusing curtain-raiser is Hook and Eye, by Eille Norwood.

PRINCE'S.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager. Mr. J. E. Agate.—A strong attraction is provided this week by Miss Mary Austin and Mr. E. Vivian Edmond's company with Women and Wine. The staging is on an elaborate scale, and the fight between the women in the flower market is wonderfully realistic. Marcel is forcibly played by Miss C. St. Elmo, La Colombe being ably represented by Miss Octavia de Noel; some fine acting is displayed by Mr. E. Vivian Edmonds as Dick Seymour, Mr. R. Foulis doing well as Alphonse Beaudet; Miss Violet Sims sympathetically impersonates Mary Andrews, and Janet Marlow is well played by Miss Ethel Vinroy.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Capt. E. H. Warren-Wright; Acting-Manager, Mr. R. A. Maddox; Secretary, Mr. W. Pratt.—Miss Carrie Laurie's carefully-trained Juvenile Troupe, judging from Monday night's applause, are exceedingly popular; Roma and Romain display their skill on various musical instruments, the flute and piccolo playing being particularly good; Herbert Clifton's extensive vocal range is heard to advantage; Albert Letine's female impersonations meet with appreciation; Gala and Norris appear in the pretty scena "Down South"; Nellie Lunelle, Bert Terrell, and the Four Coloured Meisters likewise appear, and Payne's Bio-Photoscope shows some capital films.

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Harris; Assistant-Manager, Colonel F. W. Roberts.—A return visit is paid here by Mr. Eugene Stratton, whose songs include "That Girl of Johnson's" and "I may be crazy, but I love you." A particularly well-acted playlet, The Leaves of Memory, is presented by Miss Beaumont Collins, with Miss Collins as Ruth, supported by Mr. George Blunt as Major Gay, Mr. George Rowlands (Frank Egerton) and Mr. Fred Knight (Foster); Miss Ida Barr's songs are appreciated, likewise Messrs. Mabel Mignon and Marie Stroud. Herbert Rule, an eccentric comedian, assisted by someone in a box, evokes laughter with his "chorus" song; Hughes and Carney introduce boxing, and Wilman's instrumental display meets with favour.

PRESTON. — THEATRE ROYAL. — Proprietors, the Executors of the late W. Johnson; Resident-Manager, Mr. Stephen Pritt. — The Gay Gordons is meeting with a popular reception. Mr. Charles Chelderstone as Angus Graeme is agreeably prominent; Mr. Edward Carlton as Nervy Nat, Mr. Aulrey Stowell as Edmund Siddons, and Miss Louie Emery as Charlotte Siddons create much laughter with their broad comedy. As Victoria Siddons Miss Daisy Burrell is vivacious and sings and dances herself into popular favour; Miss Dorothy Giles is a winsome Peggy Quainton; another particular favourite, Miss Tessa Dalberta, is excellent as Mary MacLeod; and Miss Rosa Wynford is very successful as Lady Millicent Graeme. Mr. S. A. Cookson as Andrew Quainton is exceptionally good; and mention must also be made of Mr. Stafford Dickens, a capital Corporal John Smith. The rest of the cast is in capable hands, and the excellent chorus and augmented orchestra, under the baton of Mr. Leonard Leslie, does good work. The dresses and scenery are exceedingly pretty.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. Sawyer and Woodruff.—Mrs. Sam Duckworth's company is paying a return visit here with Her Nameless Child. As Anthony Ford Mr. J. W. Evelyn is admirable, and Mr. Sidney Cranston is as good as ever as Arthur (his son); Miss Pattie Hastings is still enacting the part of Phillis Ford, and has lost none of her popularity; Mr. Arthur E. Pringle as Lord Henry Woodville and Mr. Frank Thompson as Mongrole evince sufficient villainy between them to bring down the execrations of the audience; Mr. Larry Clements as the Postman, Tom Rivers, raises much merriment with his comedy, receiving able support from Miss Renie Douglas, who as Bessie Brooks is irresistible; Miss Mona Gray is an excellent Lady Sibil Woodville; Miss Geraldine Verner is very good as the French Maid, and Miss Beatrice Dover a capital Sarah. Mention must be made of Mr. Alfred Denbain's Jake (a striker), which he plays effectively. The minor parts of Jack (Mr. Geo. Wye), Jim (Mr. H. Huxtley), and XXX 41 (Mr. Gerald Vane), together with Mr. Joseph Oswald (as the officer), are well and capably sustained. The mounting leaves nothing to be desired.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident-Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank E. Burdett.—Clown Barker and his dogs, &c., show to what perfection animals may be trained; Harry Kirk is a quaint comedian; Wynnie Darrell sings and dances in a pleasing manner; the King's College Boys, in The Students' Concert, contribute some excellently-rendered songs and choruses; May St. Hilda, a clever artist, contributes three well-executed oil-paintings in the short space of seven minutes; the Roy Hearn Trio, in the sketch The Model Husband prove exceptionally clever acrobats; Ben Silvo executes some marvellous feats on the high horizontal bar and flying rings; Ruhart, assisted by La Belle Rosalind, is excruciatingly funny; Carr and Rose (Fred and Ada) present their clever and catchy little operetta Winning a Double with success; Bernard is a double-voiced vocalist who is fully appreciated; and Remorse on the Bioscope concludes.

RAMSGATE.—ROYAL PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Lord George Sanger; Lessee, Mr. Ernest Mansell.—The chief feature at the entertainments here is the exhibition of animated pictures of the great pugilistic encounter between Johnson and Tommy Burns, the total length of the film exhibited, it is stated, exceeding three-quarters of a mile. Harry Ware, ex-bantam-weight champion of England, and Darky Barton, of South Africa, give a boxing display. Local amateurs have responded to the invitation to take part in exhibitions of the "noble art." The programme has also included varieties by Harry Griffan, Nell Brough, and George Richens.

READING.—ROYAL COUNTY THEATRE.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. Milton Bode and Edward Compton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Benton.—The stirring melodrama Convict 99 is being played here this week by a good company. Mr. Fred Beresford enacts the part of the unfortunate hero Lawrence Gray in a powerful and dramatic manner; Miss Dorothy Milne sustains the character of Geraldine Lucas in a most sympathetic and charming style; Mr. Benson North acts with skill as the sinister Ralph Vickers; and the comedy element is well provided for by Mr. Archie Watts as James Stinchcombe and Miss Violet B. Clarke as Maggie Mason. All the other parts are well filled. The play throughout is of the most exciting and thrilling character, and is being well received by large audiences in the popular parts of the house.

THE PALACE. — Managing Director, Mr. G. Howard Watson; Acting-Manager, Mr. P. E. Draco. —The Dayton Family of ten performers appear with great success in a high-class risley entertainment, in the course of which they do some very clever acrobatic work; the Markies appear in a novel vocal and instrumental sketch, From Pavement to Stage; the comedietta A Fair Exchange is presented in good style by Herbert Dickeson and company; the Kimberley Boys, quaint comedians, are well received; Dan Feely is a good character comedian; Happy Attwood creates much diversion; Athas and Collins introduce some artistic dances; and Aggie Nolan, comedienne, gives a pleasing performance. The Adventures of a Runaway Drum are shown on the Bioscope.

A ROLLER SKATING RINK was opened on Monday evening in spacious premises in the Vastern-road, formerly occupied by the Electric Supply Co. A maple-wood floor has been laid down, which provides an admirable skating surface. The interior of the hall is very tastefully decorated and illumined by powerful electric lights. A large company attended the inauguration of the rink, including the Mayor and Mayoress, who wished the venture every success. The rink is under the management of Mr. Hayes, with whom is Captain Norton and a large staff of assistants. Mr. Ginnett is the general manager of the syndicate.

ROTHERHAM.—THEATRE ROYAL, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. Holbery Hardy.—The Singing Servants head the bill with an operatic burlesque; Miss Lillie Luraine gives a highly finished musical turn on a variety of instruments; and Kinnard is a mystifying magician. Miss Ethel Sheffer is very pleasing with her illustrated songs, and the Sisters Hampel are clever comedy duettists. Mr. J. Wright Aitken and company present a pathetic domestic sketch, The Battle of Life. Miss Laura A. Pardy is pleasing as Clara Melville; and Miss Una Wright scores as Lady Fitzherbert. Mr. George Beresford is a manly Tom Rawson, and Mr. J. Wright Aitken gives a fine portrayal of John Melville, one of the Six Hundred. The Milsted-Bell Trio have a smart comedy act, Two Sharps and a Flat, and Master Day, the champion boy diabolist, is well received.

HIPPODROME, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. T. Edgar Fox; Resident-Manager, Mr. Claude Shayler.—Mike Cray and his dog Dooley give a highly amusing and finished eccentric comedy juggling act, and Miss Ruby Norton has a flattering reception in her song scena "Lusana." Martin Conway brings down the house, the double entendre in his patter being very broad; Miss Clara Reid and Mr. John Power are responsible for a very smart duologue, The Chambermaid; and Bert Bowden is a clever comedian. The Westbrooks present a sparkling terpsichorean scena, "Two Little Maids from School," and Messrs. Martinett and Wallace, coloured novelty musical entertainers, are deserving of mention. Miss Flo Cecil is heard to advantage; Tom Edwards's company give an amusing comedy sketch, Harmony Hall; and The Shipowner's Daughter is pleasingly produced by the Hipposcope.

SALFORD.—PRINCE OF WALES'S.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. E. B. Goulden; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harold Goulden.—Mr. George A. De Gray, who ably sustained the principal character, Baron Woulfe Curzola, presented to a good house on Monday the weird play entitled The Power of the Cross. Gerald Fairfax was admirably played by Mr. R. Hall; Mr. A. J. Haviland was successful as Dr. Leslie Fairfax; Miss S. Carmichael cleverly played the adventuress, Rita Lascelles; Miss Phyllis Vaughan was a charming Blanche Kingsley; and the unfortunate Margaret Seaton was well portrayed by Miss Annie Hylton; the comic relief was provided by Mr. Tyrone Power as Timothy O'Dowd and Miss Etta Turner as Dolly Gray.

REGENT THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LTD. — Managing-Director, Mr. W. Turner; General-Manager, Mr. Herbert Raymond; Secretary, Mr. J. C. Patterson.—This week's bill is headed by G. H. Elliott, the chocolate-coloured coon, whose singing and dancing is much appreciated; Lillie Soutter, comedienne, also gains gains approval; Leslie Lyn and Willie harmonise well and do some smart comic business; Rowland Hill causes much laughter with his patter. Among the other good turns are those by Annie Lang, comedienne and dancer; Bros. Durant with their aeroplane; Henri Bekker, conjuror, assisted by Mlle. Maie; Terry and Bentley, refined comedy artists, and Clarice Sefton, comedienne and clever dancer.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; General-Manager, Mr. H. Winstanley; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. Geo. F. Slatter.—The Girl Redeemed from Sin is (twice nightly) presented by Mr. Geoffrey Fulton's company; Nancy Lee is cleverly presented by Miss Effie Bartlett, and the hero, Will May, is well portrayed by Mr. W. P. Carr; Mr. Philippe Orr carefully sustains the character of Lord Robert Denham; the villain, Ernest Sylveston, is creditably performed by Mr. Clinton Baddeley; Mr. Arthur R. Carlton as Jim Jakes and Miss Ada Oxley as Peggy Grey do a lot of comic business. The staging is effective.

OPERA HOUSE AND ASSEMBLY ROOMS, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. Turner; General-Manager, Mr. Herbert Raymond; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. Shepherd —New animated pictures are furnished and Mr. Tom Sherlock introduces the illustrated song "While life shall last," which is well received.

NEW CENTRAL HALL.—Proprietor, Mr. T. Whiteley; Manager, Mr. W. Roberts.—New "world-in-motion" pictures this week include several fine films, which are twice nightly greatly enjoyed.

SALISBURY.—COUNTY HALL.—Proprietor, Mr. Arthur Whitehead; Business-Manager, Mr. T. Brinsmead.—Miss Jessie D'Alton's company gave two performances here of the pantomime, Robinson Crusoe. As Robinson Crusoe Miss Jessie D'Alton won tremendous applause for her dancing, fencing, and singing; Miss Beatrice Witham as Polly proved a great favourite, her number, "Hang out the front-door key," being particularly popular; Mr. Bert Goldin as Mrs. Crusoe, Mr. Wal Kent as Friday, Mr. Bert Earle as Billy, and Miss Cissie Davis as Dolly submitted praiseworthy interpretations. The various other parts were all filled by capable artists. Mr. F. D. Alton Tebby acted as manager.

SCARBOROUGH.—THE AQUARIUM.—Secretary and Manager, Mr. Walter Kitchingman.—An excellent programme includes Mlle. Flora Lumiere, queen of the fairy grotto; Rita and Roma, vaudeville entertainers; Bert Rayburn, quaint comedian; Miss Mabel Fairchild, in a unique dancing scena; the Korries; Hillett and Hallett, comedians and dancers; the Four Elwys, in vocal scena; and Will Lindsay, comedian.

THE NEW HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Peacock.—Mr. Fred Mouillot's company opened here on Monday in A Message from Mars. Mr. Wallace Widdicombe achieved much success in the rôle of Horace Parker; and the part of the Messenger was admirably sustained by Mr. Wm. Brougham. Miss Winnifred Knightly did full justice to the rôle of Aunt Parker; and praise must be accorded Miss Rose Helene for her impersonation of Minnie Templar. Other characters ably represented were a Tramp (Mr. Norman Clark), Arthur Dicey (Mr. Robert Grey), Dr. Chapman (Mr. Guy O'Neill), the Solicitor (Mr. Arthur Linay), Mrs. Clarence (Miss Mary Glanbrane), a Policeman (Mr. Alfred Drayton), and Bella (Miss Estelle Twitchen).

SEAHAM HARBOUR.—NEW THEATRE ROYAL. —Proprietor, Mr. A. C. Harrison; Manager, Mr. Wallace Childs.—My Mother, God Bless Her! is the drama presented by Mr. Ernest J. Fare's company. Tom York is vigorously drawn by Mr. Fare; the villainy of George Temple is faithfully shown by Mr. George Stevens; much merriment is raised by Mr. Edward Keith's Charlie Chuckit; Mr. George Wallace as William Freeman is satisfactory; and a popular P.C. Honest is Mr. George Ashley. Mr. James Mailey is a capable Isaacs; Miss Florrie is effective in the hands of Miss Mabel Fare; and as Stella Miss Ada Hender gives entire satisfaction.

SHEERNESS.—HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Hippodrome Co.—Mr. E. H. Bertram's No. 1 Company is here in the musical comedy, Somebody's Sweetheart, which is capitally staged. Lulu, the principal character, is taken by Miss Nancy Cooke, an excellent actress and a sweet singer; Mr. E. H. Bertram is admirable as Stanton Ashleigh, his rendering of "Angel of my dreams" being a pleasure to listen to; Mr. James Salter as Blabbs causes a great amount of fun; Mr. Whitmore Ledger as Stephen is quite a hit; Miss Hetty Jefferies is excellent as Freddie Ashleigh; Miss Ethel Bankes as Zora, a gipsy, sings effectively; and the dancing of Misses Mabella and Elsie May is greatly enjoyed.

SHEFFIELD. — LYCEUM THEATRE. — Managing-Director, Mr. John Hart; General-Manager and Treasurer, Mr. J. E. B. Beaumont.—Lovers of pure romance in general and admirers of the historic genius of Stanley Weyman in particular, filled the Lyceum on Monday, and gave an enthusiastic reception to the play, Count Hannibal, and a cordial greeting to Mr. Oscar Asche and Miss Lily Brayton, who, as the Count de Tavannes and Clotilde respectively, repeated the triumphs achieved by them at Bristol on the production of the piece on March 18. Others who won deserved honour for helping to promote the success of one of the most notable performances seen in Sheffield for some time were Mr. Ewan Brook, who made a characteristic De Guise; Mr. Gerald Kay Souper, who did his best to give a touch of manly dignity to the character of the poltroon Tignonville, Mr. Caleb Porter as Father Pezelay, Mr. H. Grimwood with a good study of the weak king, Charles IX., Mr. Athol Forde as Badelon, Mr. J. F. Russell as Bigot, Mr. F. Beauchamp as Cambouillot, Mr. A. Thorne as De Retz, Mr. Ernest Henshaw as Chicot, Miss Elfrida Clement as Mme. St. Loo, Miss Ellinore Foster as Mme. Carlat, and Miss Muriel Hutchinson as Javette. The magnificent stage-pictures gave exquisite pleasure to lovers of picturesque scenery and historic accuracy, and the entire production appeals strongly to all classes of sane playgoers. At the close Mr. Asche and Miss Brayton were called before the curtain, and received an ovation from the crowded house.

THEATRE ROYAL. — Managing-Director, Mr. John Hart; General-Manager and Treasurer. Mr. J. E. B. Beaumont; Assistant-Manager, Mr. A. Henfrey Aldred.—The Great White Chief is being played by Mr. Lingford Carson's capable company. Mr. Charles Homer makes a virile and interesting representative of Leo Stanley; Mr. Hugh Brady does some good miming in the heavy part of the dumb Indian Chief; Mr. J. Robson Clyde presents a picturesque appearance and acts well as Black Hawk; Miss Dulcie Lawrence is a graceful Hester; Miss Pollie Denville makes a pretty Latika; and mirth-provoking comic business is provided by Miss Amy Ross Clyde as Martha and Mr. Leonard Maitland as Rupert Walker. Some good scenery is provided.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE. — Managing-Director, Mr. W. D. Forsdike; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. W. Ramsay.—No Wedding Bells for Her was presented on Monday by Mrs. Frank Bateman and Mr. Lomath's company. Miss Lizzie Montague (Mrs. Bateman) played with her accustomed feminine charm and emotional talent as Lola Delaspierre; and other well-depicted types of the metropolis were Mr. Stuart Lomath's Rev. Frank Hatherleigh, Mr. Percy Shaw's Delver, Mr. C. Coleman's Montague Blair, Mr. Henry Aynsleigh's Abney Stone, Mr. Geo. Herbert's Horatio Fane, Mr. Kenneth Black's Simpkins, Mr. P. Garton's Tightfist, Miss Mabel Durham's Doris Fane, Miss Ellen Owen's Marie Fraille, Miss Madge Grey's Milly, Miss Patty Allberry's Geisha Girl, Miss Ethel Lawrence's Mrs. Jonson-Vere, and Miss Nellie Wilson's Mrs. Eastman. Sapho was billed for Thursday, with Mrs. Bateman as Fanny Legrande.

EMPIRE PALACE THEATRE.—The Moss' Empires Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Alan D. Dunbar.—A programme full of genuine variety was submitted on Monday, the attractive "turns" scheduled being Mme. Alice Esty, the famous operatic prima donna; Miss Lydia Yeamans, the inimitable mimic of children and vocalist, assisted by Fred Titus at the piano; Mr. Herbert Darnley and his comedy pantomimists, in the laughable absurdity Jon Jay Jun; Miss Kathleen Cogan, vocalist; Miss Minnie Mace, comedienne; Miss Carry trayed by Mr. Oswald Marshall and Mr. George R. Montford; and Mr. Edwin Ling makes a thoroughly capable Father Lamplugh. Miss Doris Gilham's realistic acting as Glory Quayle is a marked feature; Polly Love is admirably impersonated by Miss Margaret Brodie; Miss Katherine Maude is most charming as Lady Hector Ure; and Black Meg and Mother Kent have efficient representatives in Miss May Dudley and Miss Mina Renouf.

EMPIRE.—Proprietors, the Stockport Empire Theatre Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Black. —Miss Florrie Gallimore, in old and new favourites, is delighting large audiences here this week; and among others appearing in an appropriately varied programme are the Woodbee Wonders, comic acrobats; Les Voces, pleasing operatic vocalists; the Three Transfields, entertaining lady instrumentalists; Richard Fineberg, an able character actor, in impersonations of well-known characters; Daisie Morell, favourite comedienne; Field and Lewis, an amusing pair of burlesque artists; and Mr. Harry Lowther and company, in a laughable sketch entitled Barmaids.

STOKE-ON-TRENT.—HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; General-Manager, Mr. H. F. Miller; Assistant-Manager, Mr. H. Moroney. —The New York Nippers create a good impression in their pot-pourri act, Bedtime, introducing some good singing and dancing; Captain Kettle as a card and coin manipulator is exceptionally smart; also here are Howell, Webb, and company, in The Galley Slave; Stidder and Dunbar; Lucretia and Josephine; Will Owen; the Gascoignes; Nellie Martell; and the Bioscope, with pictures.

SUNDERLAND.—KING'S THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. S. F. Davidson; General-Manager, Mr. Alexander Telford; Treasurer, Mr. J. Crawford Orr.—Messrs. H. Armitage and Arthur Leigh's company is on a return visit here in Leah Kleschna. Mr. Wm. Clayton introduces some fine acting into the part of Kleschna; Mr. Chas. Barret is an admirable Paul; Mr. Arthur Leigh a clever Raoul Berton; Mr. Wm. Heilbronn a capital Schraum; and Mr. Algernon J. Hicks a successful General Berton. Miss Bessie Rignold is deserving of the highest eulogy for her portrayal of Leah.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mr. R. Thornton; General-Manager, Mr. Harry Esden; Acting-Manager, Mr. George Dunn.—This week Messrs. Alfred Paumier and Walter Howard's company is here in The Prince and the Beggar Maid. As Monica Miss Ethel Bracewell gave a well-studied reading; Miss Gertrude Branscombe's Carniola was a painstaking representation; the characterisation of the three princes was in the capable hands of Messrs. Alfred Brandon (Hildred), Ernest Cox (Olaf), and Lionel Gadsden (Michael); Mr. H. Burton as Nathan, the dumb servant, was a success; as also were Messrs. Kenneth Black and Robert Noble as the Bishop of Illyria and Captain Hector respectively. The comedy is contributed to by Mr. J. H. Vyvyan (Lieut. Karl Stromberg) and Miss Jessica Black (Viola).

EMPIRE THEATRE. — Managing-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; General-Manager, Mr. Harry Esden.—Heading an excellent programme this week is B. A. Rolfe's Colonial Septette in An Olde Tyme Halloween; the skilful display of juggling by Kara is well received; Amy Anderson and company present their act, Troubles On and Off, which is pleasant and original in conception; Billy Hobbs executes some clever dancing; Chas. Vincent, comedian, and Gladys Mavius both win much success; the Three Prestons submit a humorous sketch, The Liftman's Rise; Barrington, freak pianist, proves himself master of the keyboard; and the Falcons, acrobats, receive hearty applause.

AVENUE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. Richard Thornton; General-Manager, Mr. Harry Esden; Acting-Manager, Mr. R. Foulkes Edwards.—A capital programme of pictures is on view here this week, the audiences being large and appreciative. The principal film is of exceptional merit. It is entitled the Return of Ulysses.

PALACE THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Henry N. Phillips; Resident-Manager, Mr. Francis MacDermott.—At this house in future there is only to be one display of pictures nightly, instead of two, as previously has been the rule. Miss Josie Noble, a juvenile, is heartily applauded; Miss Clements officiates at the piano.

SWANSEA.—THE GRAND.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. E. Oswald Brooks; Acting-Manager and Treasurer, Mr. Walter Page.—Delightful music, charming dresses, and a really excellent company make Butterflies a great success here. Widgery Blake (Puck) was capitally taken by Mr. Harrison Brockbank; another great success was Miss Annie Heenan as Rodanthe, the witch; Mr. Edwin H Wynne was a droll Mr. Podmore; and Mr. Johnny Wilkinson (Yarker) provided abundance of fun.

THE STAR.—Manager, Mr. William Coutts; Assistant-Manager, Mr. S. J. Powell.—Fred Granville's Productions, Ltd., produce Another Man's Wife successfully at the Star this week. Mr. Leonard Aardale plays with power the part of Carlos; and Paul Bernstaff is capably presented by Mr. Austin Mortimer. Miss Lilian Burns is an accomplished Lucia; and Miss Theo Henries a powerful Inez.

THE EMPIRE.—Proprietors, The Empires, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. P. C. Rowe; Assistant-Manager, Mr. W. H. Lennon.—An amazing turn of conjuring and coin manipulating is given by Le Roy, Talma, and Bosco, who astound large audiences by their cleverness; the Donaldson Bros. come with a new sketch, Sports in the Jungle, which is not only clever, but well staged; Annie Purcell, in excellent voice, has a reception worthy of her talent; Lester and Moure are newcomers who will be welcomed back again; the Sisters Morgan are accomplished duettists and dancers; the Bros. Harrison are really funny in "Golfing Johnnies"; and the Calcotts use a "wayside episode" to introduce good banjo playing and dancing. Nora Emerald is much appreciated.

SWINDON.—EMPIRE THEATRE.—Proprietors, The Wiltshire Entertainments Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Alfred Manners.—Messrs. W. H. Hallatt and Walter Howard's company is appearing here in Her Love Against the World. Mr. F. Emery gives a powerful representation of Eric, Earl of Strathmere; Lionel is effectively taken by Miss Rossie St. John; Miss Lewis Gilbert is admirable as Ulric; Mr. W. H. Hallatt is excellent as Prince Othmar; and Mr. Victor Rowland makes a capital Prince Maurice. Messrs. Henry B. Lewis and John Mill as Heinrick and Fritz respectively, are amusing; Shulah is in the capable hands of Miss Blanche Steel; Miss Gertie Reid as Katinka, and Miss Hetty Ferguson as Gretchen are very good, and Miss Grace Heywood displays considerable ability as Iris Princess of Idalia. The smaller characters are efficiently rendered, and the scenery and costumes appropriate.

TON-Y-PANDY. — ROYAL. — General-Manager, Mr. Sam Duckworth; Acting-Manager, Mr. Ridgewood Barrie.—Considerable interest is aroused by Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Kimberley's company in the sporting drama, Bound to Win. Squire Forbes is well presented by Mr. E. C. Edwards; Mr. H. N. Grimson gives a capital interpretation of Phillip; Ned Oakley is faithfully depicted by Mr. Horace Goldberg; Horatio Buffit and Willie Wilkins are mirth-creating personages as presented by Messrs. H. A. Allen and H. C. Momber; Miss V. Quest is well suited as Gladys Orme; and as Marion Forbes Miss Nancy Roberts evokes sympathy.

HIPPODROME.—Lessee and General-Manager, Mr. Will Stone.—John Lloyd's Gondolier Glee Singers provide an acceptable turn; the Cheers in their scena introduce cleverly trained cats; the Reays prove clever acrobats; Florrie Wright, comedienne, and T. W. Lenner, comedian, are well received; and Miss Helen Bourne is also good.

TORQUAY.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Licensee and Managing-Director, Mr. W. H. Mortimer; Secretary, Mr. Arthur Pearse.—Mr. Julian Malvern's company is here in I Defy the World. In the leading part of Leon Darville an excellent impersonation is given by Mr. F. B. Woulfe, who is ably assisted by Miss Edith Loraine; Miss Florence Delmar is a pathetic Blanche, and a capable representation of Fanchette is given by Little Dorothy Love. Mr. Chas. L. Julian makes a typical Count de Beaulieu; Mr. Walter Clarke also does well as Andre; and Mr. Arthur Chesholm is a dramatic Laroche. During the latter part of the week Jane Shore was played.

TREHERBERT.—OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Pooles, Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. H. Stephens.—On Monday Mr. Dudley Bennett and Mr. T. C. Wray's company opened here in Miss Hook of Holland. Mr. Chas. B. McLagan proved a success in the part of Mr. Hook; Mr. J. B. Fox made an excellent Captain Adrain; Mr. Sam Lockeridge was a prime favourite in the part of the Bandmaster; Mr. Frank Attree gave a fine rendering of Ludwig Schnapps; Miss Ethel James in the title-rôle was a huge success, and Miss Muff Carew did well as Mina.

TYLDESLEY. — THEATRE ROYAL. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. W. W. Brierley.—Miss Augusta Tullock's company occupies the boards here this week in The Woman Who Sinned. Miss Tulloch impersonates Judith Sartoris with considerable skill; Hester Norris is pleasingly presented by Miss Eva K. Coleridge; Miss Dorothea Vivian shows pathos as Blind Meg; and Miss Rose Watson is a lively Maudie Green. Mr. James Musgrove distinguishes himself in the part of Jack Carrington; Eugene Darville is spiritedly played by Mr. Lionel Yeomans; and Mr. Edward Vivian makes a creditable Silas Norris. Much amusement is caused by Mr. Wm. De Lacy as Percy Hogg, and Mr. Blake Thornton as Sergeant Jones.

WAKEFIELD. — OPERA HOUSE. — Proprietors, Sherwood and Co.—Messrs. Dottridge, Longden, and Livesey's company is here in The Village Blacksmith. Mr. Sam Livesey repeats his powerful delineation as John Strong; Mr. Albert Sinclair is excellent as Captain Leo; both are seen to great advantage in the sensational wrestling scene; Mr. Edwin Maydew is admirable as Lucas Marler; Mr. Thomas E. Marshall is humorous and effective as Jeremiah Parkins, ably supported by Miss Florence Dooley as Sal Perkins; Mr. Fred Haming performs good work as Billy Twigg; Miss Edith Giddens is capital as Martha Mopps; Miss Cissie le Grande acts well as Ruth Parkin; Miss Maggie Edwards gives a charming interpretation as Kate Strong; and Miss Kathleen Saunders is natural and convincing as Harry Strong.

HIPPODROME.—Manager, Mr. Sydney Tolfree.—Vonetta, a charming illusionist and protean actress, gives a fine performance, her wonderful feats and quick-changes quite mystify the audiences and merit high appreciation; the Three Hodginis are clever on the revolving ladder; Claude Feldman's Juveniles contribute a smart vocal and dancing act; the Sisters Russell, comedy artists, prove popular; Dan King, vocalist, the Paultons, song illustrators, and Frankfort and Maine, comedy couple, provide acceptable turns.

WATFORD.—PALACE THEATRE.—Sole Responsible-Manager, Mr. T. M. Sylvester; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. Mason; Assistant-Manager, Mr. W. Wright.—Mr. Dan Thomas's Dick Whittington company is giving Watfordians a farewell taste of pantomime for the season. Miss Daisy Yates makes a capital Dick. In addition to the pantomime the management have been presenting Mr. Jack Weller, a local coon comedian, who is about to sail for New York. He has proved a great attraction. Roselle's trapeze performance completes a fine evening's show.

CLARENDON HALL.—This hall has reopened, President pictures drawing satisfactory attendances.

WEST BROMWICH. — THEATRE ROYAL. — Lessee, Mr. R. Nightingale.—A Fight for a Throne is meeting with a hearty reception as presented by Mr. Geo. A. De Grey's company. In Capt. Jack Fortescue Mr. John Millward has a part that suits him capitally. Mr. Jerrold Reed as Nicholai I. is an ideal king; and Mr. Chas. Linney is admirable as Otto, Prince of Weimer. The Princess Esme of Miss Dora Hammersley is a very fine character study; Miss Margarette Tueski as Countess Valeska Lorenski had a difficult rôle which she fills with distinction; and the other characters are admirably sustained.

NEW HIPPODROME.—Manager, Mr. Tom Kuner.—Variety once more reigns here, the bill being headed by Miss Sara Mignon and company, who appear with much success in a powerful little drama, Jealousy, Miss Mignon taking a dual rôle with great ability. A warm welcome is given to the Mahatma, whose mysterious powers create a great impression; the Davies appear in a clever musical turn; Les Kestrals are remarkable athletes, whose performances are very clean; the Two Harolds are amusing dancers; and Nellie Raymond is an attractive comedienne. The Negro Comedy Quartette appear with success; and the pictures conclude a capital programme.

WEST HARTLEPOOL.—GRAND.—Lessee, Mr. Fred Granville; Manager, Mr. Herbert Feather.—Mr. Charles Carey and company this week present The Madeira Maid, Mr. Chas. Carey appearing in the rôle of No-one-in-particular, and Miss Madge Lacey as Maidie introducing some graceful dancing. Support is given by Mr. Harold Perry as Jack Denby, Mr. W. E. Matthews as Eno Downe, Mr. J. Ellis as Major-General Berkley-Colman, Miss Marie Ault as Mary Ann, a creditable piece of character-acting, and Miss Jessie De Grey as Mrs. Amelia Downe.

PALACE.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. J. Simpson.—George Formby, comedian, has a droll style, which elicits laughter; in view of the rinking craze having struck the district, the turn provided by the Miltons is most opportune, their comedy skating being enjoyed immensely; some clever tumbling is done by the Lizette Troupe; Mollie Augarde, comedienne, and T. C. Jaques, versatile comedian, are also well received. Rose Cass, comedienne, takes well, and other attractions are Bert and Dora, comedy artists, and some films on Raymond's Bioscope.

WIDNES.—ALEXANDRA THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. Jas. Kiddie.—Mr. Robert Macdonald's company is here with The Dairymaids. Miss Babs Christopher is a dignified Lady Brudenell; Mr. Scott Melville does exceptionally well as Sam Brudenell; Mr. Horace Manger is very much at home in the part of Lieutenant Meredith; Mr. F. Barclay is delightful as the good-hearted Dr. O'Byrne; Mr. Edwin Dodds convulses the house as Joe Mivens, introducing new business; Miss K. Severn is a pretty Winnie, singing very sweetly; Miss Maud Lucy is responsible for a clever performance in the part of Eliza, and sings her numbers effectively; Miss Julie St. George is amusing as the staid Miss Pyechase; Miss Isa Bowman is charming as Peggy, her songs receiving double encores. The chorus is well balanced and the play is nicely staged.

WORCESTER.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Arthur Carlton; Assistant-Manager, Mr. F. Le Warde.—Worcester theatre-goers are favoured by a visit of Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch, and are crowding the theatre nightly to revel in the inimitable humour and pathos of this quaint production. Mr. Gaston Mayers is touring the comedy with a complete London company and effects, and is thus enabling provincial audiences to witness its production under the most favourable circumstances. Miss Augusta Haviland, in the title-rôle, exercises a natural charm which quickly wins sympathy and has gained high encomiums; Mr. Burton Cooke's Mr. Stubbins is a consistently clever study; as also are the Miss Hazy of Miss Armine Grace, Mrs. Eichorn of Miss Beatrix Bell, and the Mrs. Schultz of Miss Violet Chamier. Miss Dorothy Clifton is a winsome Lovey Mary; Miss Winifred Murray as Miss Lucy and Mr. Guy Addison as Mr. Bob are an interesting pair of lovers; and the other parts are in the capable hands of Mr. Francis Charmier (Mr. Wiggs), Mr. Forrester Harvey (Mr. H. Jones), Mr. E. Cushman (Sheriff), Mr. C. Mansell (Billy Wiggs), Mr. Lawrence White (Chris Hazy), and Mr. Harry G. Wright (Deacon Bagsby). The children's parts, too, are in clever hands, and they include Misses Margaret Nybloc, Mimi Le Clare, Marie Stella, Kitty Rogers and Nelly Brooks, and Masters Francis Steel and Sydney Corden.

WORKINGTON.—OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Stanley Rogers; Acting-Manager, Mr. Falconer Jackes.—There is a very fine set of pictures here this week, including The White Chief. As to the variety turns, the Dunlops, in their comical cycle acts, are a great draw; Lillian Sivado does some wonderful things on the perpendicular rope and trapeze; whilst Dene and Dawson, in their sketch, Stage Aspirants, cause roars of laughter.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. McKenzie Morgan.—This week we are shown a set of very well chosen pictures, including Tom Thumb. The talent is good, and includes Harper, the ventriloquist, of crying baby fame; the Macleaveys, in their jumping acts; and a burlesque interlude, introduced by Mac and Albert Lawrence.

YORK.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees, Messrs. Waddington; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. J. Dacre.—Robin Hood is paying a welcome return visit. Mr. Ethelbert Edwards in the title-rôle achieves phenomenal success; Miss Cahill as Lady Marion give a bright reading of a popular and pleasing rôle; Mr. Laurence Tessier is a fine manly Will Scarlet, singing with admirable taste; Miss Laura Flockton's assumption of Adela is marked by much grace and natural charm; and Miss Madge Devereaux is at once interesting and pleasing as Alison. Broad, unctuous humour is contained in the part of Friar Tuck, admirably played by Mr. Colin Johnston.

OPERA HOUSE AND EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Peacock; Acting-Manager, Mr. Sidney Brook.—The return visit of Ada Fawn has given much pleasure to her many admirers; Madoline Rees sings sweetly; and the patter of Mr. Paul Barnes is a popular item. The Jacksons give a musical act of great merit; Will Warren sings in first-rate style; Edmunda's ventriloquial show is neat; King and Benson in their new burlesque make a hit; Fred Spencer continues to make funny faces; and Niagra and Falls do some neat tumbling.

ABRIDGEMENTS OF SPECIFICATIONS.

22,109.—Kinematographs Wrench, A., and Engelke, W., both of London. In kinematographic apparatus of the start-and-stop type, means are provided for adjusting the feed-wheels relatively to the projection aperture. The Maltese Cross (a) and the feeding-drum (a1) are shown in Fig. 2. Toothed feed-wheels (f) are mounted on a sleeve (e) upon the spindle (c), which is made hollow and has longitudinal slots (d). The sleeve has spiral slots (g) which engage pins (i) upon the end of a rod (h) extending into the hollow spindle, and caused by a spring (j) to bear against a cam (k). By rotating the cam (k) the rod (h) is pushed into or pulled out of the spindle, and by the operation of the pins and spiral slots the position of the film is adjusted.

22,316.—Theatrical appliances. Stranders, W., of London.

An effect (depending on persistence of vision) of an illuminated living figure (f), group, or object within a semi-transparent, luminous, or coloured globe, vase, cone, egg-shell, or other hollow shape is obtained by rotating illuminated hoops (j) of a corresponding profile round the figure. The hoops preferably carry externally a number of elongated white or coloured electric lamps (m) extending round the whole circumference, and different colours may be switched on by means of brushes and rings on a vertical hollow shaft (g) carrying the hoops. The figure is supported on a platform (e) at the upper end of a stationary spindle on which the hollow shaft rotates, and is illuminated independently by an optical lantern or lanterns. The hoops may be complete, or semi-hoops may be connected at the pivots. A support (b) may carry a bearing (l) or pivot (k), or the hoops may be supported entirely by the hollow shaft. The lamps (m) may be dispensed with, the hoops being then illuminated by an optical lantern.

THE SIGNIFICANCE OF SHAW.

So many commentaries have been made upon the dramatic work of Mr. Bernard Shaw—so many theories educed as to the purport of his plays, writes Mr. Robb Lawson in a "lecture" on this subject—that the layman stands in the perplexing position of finding counsellors darkening counsel. In that condition he is reduced to one of two alternatives, either to regard him suspiciously as a problematical playwright devoting himself to the sport of poking fun at his auditors, or to settle himself to the unalloyed enjoyment of his brilliant impertinences by regarding him as an inveterate paradoxer. The last thing he would think of would be to acclaim him the moralist of reality, as opposed to the moralist of convention. Mountebank he will say, but moralist never! It is in the latter phase the writer prefers to regard him.

In seeking out a parallel to the case of this dramatist one is impelled to return to a classical instance. With the work of Æschylus and Sophocles Greek tragedy had reached its culminating point as representing the noblest aim of the human—"the imitation of a worthy or illustrious and perfect action." But the Socratic spirit had come over mental life, and owed its introduction into drama to Euripides, when that author commenced to depict reality through the medium of his plays. That rang the death-knell of ancient Tragedy. The pale, unearthly righteousness, painted by his compeers, was changed into the quivering tense-veined humanity of Euripidean drama. Idealism died, and the naturalistic school rose out of the ashes. The fate of man, which aforetime lay in the hands of the gods, was exhibited as lying within themselves. Evil was seen to spring from the innate weakness of man. Euripides the sceptic was seeking utterance through this living concrete form of literature.

When Mr. Shaw first entered into the dramatic arena it was with what in the original programme was described as "a didactic realistic play," wherein the author, with purpose prepense, set out to slay the false romantic ideals that stood for romance in the year 1892. It is rather curious that the classical student, who should have been the first to discover the Euripidean parallel has been the last to give him credit for the same attitude towards life. Mr. Shaw has tried to guess at the reason for this by explaining that the contempt of the academic pedant for the original artist is often founded "on a genuine superiority of technical knowledge and aptitude." Now, Mr. Shaw's dramatic technique is as old as the English stage itself—even to the inclusion of the out-of-date soliloquy, whilst The Devil's Disciple presents all the ingredients of Adelphi melodrama. As to the question of aptitude, I find it difficult to credit the statement that any single auditor who has taken the trouble to see a Shavian play does not believe that their creator is a born dramatist. He himself has owned the soft impeachment as to being that earliest type of drama-monger, the mountebank, and we need but listen to his political or social harangues to find that he uses all the methods of drama to enliven his subjects. As to his plays, in many cases one leaves their perusal with the consciousness that they have been subjected to a Socratian dialogue. Why this essentially dramatic form should have been chosen for the exploitation of political and moral reforms was a question that puzzled the writer sorely, until, in the course of a note from the author, he was informed that Mr. Shaw regarded all the formulæ in which we think as "essentially dramatic and even melodramatic." All religions, he adds, "reach the people only as melodramas; all legal trials are melodramas, and all elections and burning questions are melodramas." All of which confirms a theory of the writer that the Shavian drama is a series of moralities depicting the progress of various pilgrims through the Valley of Convention up to the Plains of Reality. Man and Superman, his preface informs us, is the modern morality of Everywoman.

That conception of life has not been without its significance to Mr. Bernard Shaw. To it we owe the burden of his drama. To the uninitiated—and it is possible that there may be the majority—there will always remain the impression of a malicious derisive spirit informing the whole of his work. That is the fatality of Irish wit impinging itself on the stolid English mind. There is one aspect of it which recurs when I witness his plays. It is the tear which lurks behind that brilliance—the wit which does not cloy, but smiles despite its own heartache, as in John Bull. Father Keegan's way of joking is to tell the truth, but John Bull is too dull to perceive it, or else looks upon it with indulgent humour as the effort of some half-witted tract distributor. As to seriousness, I think one may safely accord that virtue to a dramatist who can write:

"This is the true joy of life, the being used for a purpose recognised by yourself as a mighty one—the being a force of Nature, instead of a feverish little cloud of ailments. The only real tragedy in life is the being used by personally-minded men for purposes which you recognise to be base."

Mention has been made of a parallel with Euripidean drama. Before proceeding to the estimation of the Shavian drama it might be well to formulate the aims of the pre-Shavian play and compare it with its successor. Unfortunately for the advocate, who should be able to prove his case by a formidable array of witnesses, the plaintiff is himself the only one citable. The Habitual Preface-Maker, in revivifying a dying custom, has devoted a goodly part of these to what, in the triumph of his mood, looks very much like a post-mortem examination of the claims of Victorian drama. Taking personal experience as his standpoint, he relates how, entering into his fourth year as dramatic critic, he found that his soul was becoming inane through his play-attendance as a critic. The drama of romance and sensuality was gradually sapping away all his joy in life; the pseudo-problem plays, devoted to details as pornographic as the Censor would allow, were making shipwreck of his mind. A period of cheap novels and cheaper newspapers had transformed the stolid English into a nation of maffickers theatrically hysterical. To meet the demands of such an audience the managers were compelled to provide plays which would appeal to the sex-instinct, making them decorous enough for presentation to churchgoers and as little sensual as circumstances called for. In a word, the romantic play, "with its intolerable perversion of human conduct," became the only wear, in comparison with which the critic preferred the open sensuality of the "Arabian Nights." To quote his own words:—"The pleasure of the senses I can sympathise with and share; but the substitution of sensuous ecstacy for intellectual activity and honesty is the very devil." The inference he makes that the drama is a demoralising force is peculiar, seeing that the supporters of the stage have been doing their utmost to uphold it against the invectives of the moralists of convention. To have their case supported by a foe so deadly to the Nonconformist conscience is, to say the least of it, surprising.

What, then, is this reformer's definition of Drama? It is a coherent explanation of the first broken, nervous, stumbling attempts at self-realisation, in the highest sense—the struggle of the higher nature with the low brutal aspect of things. The attitude must not be confounded with idealism. To Mr. Shaw that term is only a flattering name for the bad old romanticism in politics and morals. To him the tragedy and comedy of life lie in the consequences—sometimes terrible, sometimes ludicrous—of our persistent attempt to ground our institutions on the ideals suggested to our imagination by our half-satisfied passions, instead of a genuinely scientific natural history. That, in a phrase, is the clue to the alleged mystery of the Shavian dramatic formulæ—a mystery which would never have existed if his critics had given themselves up to the simple task of reasoning instead of conjecture; of endeavouring to relate his plays to some prehistoric standard, instead of regarding them as a frank attempt to render reality intelligible to an audience, the fine spring of whose mind had been destroyed by an overdose of romance. To him the function of the dramatist is not only to hold the mirror up to Nature, but to try and discern the faint foreshadowing of good that is striving to make its way out. Once let the public realise the truth, and the oft-repeated charges that his plays lack elevation of sentiment, or seriousness of purpose, fall to the ground. In their place (despite the bad angel of his good wit following everywhere) they will find a purposive Calvinist, with pitying heart, preaching a righteousness too high even for heroics, but everywhere possible for the man who is willing to let the good within him work itself out and discard the absurd idealism of convention. There are moments when one is reminded of the Scottish preacher, who joined a burning enthusiasm in denouncing sin to a humour that was never so happy as when it dealt with sacred things. And his own native priests are notorious in that respect. If a simile were needed to describe the style of this dramatist, it would be that of a gay butterfly skimming the edge of a marble altarpiece, the sheer contrast of its bright colouring making the holy seem more sacred by very contrast.

It is not enough to have a genuinely natural scientific historical plan as the basis of your drama. That in itself is novel, certainly. But it is no excuse for foisting upon an unsuspecting public drama whose sole claim to originality is the faculty of tickling the public in a new way. There must be an informing philosophy behind it—an alert and fresh outlook upon life, joined to the ability to impart its tenets. What Mr. Shaw has always asked for is a pit of philosophers—it is so like him to demand the impossible. His philosophy deserves such a pit, and as to the faculty of expression, there is none to gainsay him that qualification.

It is one of the misfortunes of the theatrical trade that the dicta of the dramatic critic, who will only see in a play what he looks for, are accepted as final judgment by the long-suffering man-in-the-street, and still more unfortunate for the finacial success of a play that this is precisely the man whom the manager caters for. That will help to explain why the reception afforded to Shavian drama presents a similar case to that at first accorded to Wagnerian opera. There is no need to labour the point—Mr. Shaw is before his time. Most philosophers are. It is true a large proportion of his audiences have gone to his plays with a rare sense of enjoyment, but imagine the chagrin of a dramatist finding people coming out with the exclamation: "Yes, it is very brilliant, but why can't you be serious." Mr. Shaw has said: "Any fool can make an audience laught: I want to see how many of them, laughing or grave, are in the melting mood." In those days of specialisation one does not expect to find philosophy mingled with humour in the concrete form of drama. Your regular theatregoer takes his drama as he does his sport—in the proper season. He can have his light music and a little laughter after dinner, or, if he is sufficiently overfed, he can wallow in the pathos of a melodrama. Present him to a Shavian play. If he has heard nothing about it, and is conventionally minded, he will retire sorely puzzled, feeling that someone has done him a mental hurt. The writer recollects the instance of one worthy gentleman whose case was that he had seen Major Barbara and had come out burning with shame. In another case a fairly advanced Socialist was denouncing Man and Superman as being frankly immoral. Clearly these people had misunderstood the Shavian philosophy. To épater le Bourgeois brings with it, not only the notoriety, but the hearty hatred of the people who regard such an ideal as the chief social crime.

"DOWN IN THE MUD."

A Play, in One Act, by Una Erle. Produced at the Rehearsal Theatre, Maiden-lane, on Friday afternoon, March 26.

Nita ..... MISS JOSIE HURST
Meg ..... MISS UNA ERLE

Meg, an old hag of a begging woman, employs Nita, a girl, to sing in the street for her, and furthermore, teaches her to steal. But Nita is heartily sick of the unsatisfactory life she is leading, and is anxious to turn to one more reputable, but the opportunity does not come to her. A gentleman who has heard her sing in the street, offers to train her for a five pound fee. Old Meg opens the letter which contains this offer and keeps it from the girl for a few days. But Meg has a symbol for right dealing in the form of a doll which her little dead daughter fondled before she passed to another land. Every time she looks at that doll Meg becomes conscience-stricken, and finally she hands to Nita the letter, in addition to her savings, which amount to the sum required for the vocal training. The curtain falls upon the death of Meg. Miss Josie Hurst looked much too pretty, healthy, and well-fed for the rôle of the girl Nita, but leaving out of consideration the fact that her personal appearance as the beggar-girl was scarcely in keeping with the character she was supposed to represent, her acting was quite praiseworthy, and she seems to possess a talent for tragedy. The authoress, Miss Una Erle, gave a suitable embodiment of Meg.

STAGE STAFF GOSSIP.

In the absence of Mr. Cecil Raleigh, Mr. Harry Norton, stage-manager of the Haymarket Theatre, presided over the meeting held in Terry's Theatre on Sunday evening last to consider the rules of the Dramatic and Variety Theatre Employees' Provident Association. The attendance was not as large as was expected, the inclement weather having, no doubt, kept many away who live in the suburban districts. The chairman, in opening the proceedings, read a letter from Mr. Cecil Raleigh expressing his great regret that his health would not permit him to be present, but he sent his best wishes for the success of the purpose of the meeting. A telegram was received to say that Mr. Cecil Paget was ill and unable to be present.

The chairman briefly addressed the meeting, and expressed his approval of the objects of the new Association. He was heartily in favour of combining in one Association all the various efforts to provide sick, funeral, and other benefits of a like nature which were of advantage to all employed in the profession. He strongly urged the older members of the staff not to neglect this opportunity of joining the new fund in view of the fact that the age limit had been suspended until March 31. The chairman then called on Mr. Wm. Johnson, secretary pro tem., to submit the draft rules to the meeting.

Mr. Johnson stated that the number present did not indicate the number who had applied to join, as between 300 and 400 applications had already been received, which included members of the staff and others at between forty and fifty theatres and music-halls in the metroplitan area. The committee had also been informed that many would join as soon as the date was fixed for the commencement of the funds. It had been decided that the meeting should be asked to fix the date as from March 31, and that the contributions should commence on Saturday, April 3. The printed draft of the rules had been widely circulated. Every head of department and many others at the various theatres and halls had had supplies of handbills, copies of the rules, and membership forms, and it was to be hoped that every employee had been made acquainted with the formation of the new fund. Only one amendment had been sent in, and he understood that Mr. G. H. Hooper had decided to withdraw his proposed amendment. Mr. Johnson then read the rules, and the alterations and additions which the committee recommend should be made. These amendments and additions are as follows:—In Clause 1 of Rule 6, the words "scenic artists" and "dressers" to be inserted.

The following new clause to be Clause 2 of Rule 6:—

"An applicant for membership may be elected at any time subject to the following condition as to date of membership. The qualifying period for the allocation of a 'share' of the surplus general fund shall be from quarter to quarter, January, April, July, and October, in each year. The qualifying period for sick, funeral, or benevolent fund benefits shall date from the Saturday following the application for membership, and a member shall pay thirteen or twenty-six consecutive weeks' contributions before being entitled to half or full benefit respectively. A member joining after the commencement of any one quarter may qualify for that quarter's 'share' by paying contributions due, and levies imposed, during such quarter. In no case shall the payment of such back dues affect the qualifying period for the sick, funeral, or benevolent fund benefits."

The following to be new rules:—

"A member changing his address and neglecting to notify the secretary within fourteen days to be fined 6d."

"Honorary members to pay an annual subscription of not less than 10s. 6d., but shall not be entitled to participate in the funds of the Association. Honorary members may recommend the application of a member for a grant from the benevolent fund."

Mr. Johnson stated that while the committee had made every effort to formulate the best possible scheme, and had examined the rules of many other associations, it was understood that the rules would come up for reconsideration at an annual meeting of members to be held early next year. In reply to a number of questions on Rule 6 and Rule 17, Mr. Johnson stated that the purposes of those rules were to avert rivalry between existing societies, and to avoid duplication of committees, offices, &c., which involved waste of money and energy. The aim of the committee was to provide satisfactory guarantees that men holding responsible positions in the profession would be entrusted with the management of the fund, and careful and economical management assured to members.

The chairman proposed the adoption of the rules as amended, and that they come into force from March 31, 1909. This resolution was unanimously agreed to.

Mr. J. Reid, president of the Carpenters' Society, moved the adoption of the following recommendations of the committee:—

"That Mr. Cecil Paget, Mr. Harry Norton, and Mr. G. H. Dyball, be the trustees of the Association.

"That Mr. Wm. Barbour, Mr. A. Jones, and Mr. J. Atterton be the finance committee.

"That Mr. C. T. Cory, master carpenter, the Vaudeville Theatre, be the treasurer.

"That Mr. Wm. Johnson be the secretary of the Association.

"That collecting stewards be elected by the members at each theatre and hall, or, failing such election, appointed by the committee.

"And that contributions be due on and from Saturday, April 3."

This resolution was seconded by Mr. Philip Sheridan, and agreed to unanimously.

Mr. James Cullen, master carpenter, St. James's Theatre, moved a hearty vote of thanks be given to Mr. Harry Norton for presiding at the meeting, and to Mr. Edward Terry for kindly lending the theatre for the meeting.

Mr. Cullen said that Mr. Terry had taken a very kindly interest in the new Association, and this was the second occasion he had lent the theatre for this purpose. Many of them knew that Mr. Norton had taken an interest in the annual concerts and sports, and had given them valuable assistance. He had, no doubt, been connected with many important productions, but, so far as the staff were concerned, none so important as the one he had directed that night. He had much pleasure in prosposing this vote of thanks for the kind and efficient manner in which Mr. Norton had conducted the meeting.

Mr. C. T. Cory, the newly-elected treasurer, seconded the resolution, Mr. Wm. Johnson spoke in support, and on putting the resolution to the meeting it was passed with hearty cheers. The meeting then terminated.

At a meeting of the committee of the cinematograph Operators' Association, held on Tuesday, Mr. J. Wood in the chair, several applications for honorary membership were granted. It was announced that Mr. Jeapes would act as one of the examiners, and a meeting of the Board was arranged to take place early next week. The arrangements for the annual luncheon were completed.

A meeting of the Carpenters' Society will be held on Sunday evening, at 8.30, in the Salisbury Hotel, St. Martin's-lane. All members are especially urged to attend.

The conference in connection with the dispute in Middlesbrough, arranged by the Board of Trade, took place on Tuesday last, at ten a.m., in the Corporation Hotel, Middlesbrough. The dispute has been proceeding since Jan. 11 between the managers of the Opera House, the Royal, the Hippodrome, and the Empire Theatres, and the local branch of the National Association of Theatrical Employees.

Mr. I. Mitchell, as representing the Board of Trade, presided. The managers were represented by Mr. A. Mattison, chairman of the Middlesbrough and Stockton Theatrical Managers' Association; Mr. W. K. Chatto, of the Opera House, secretary to the Asociation; Mr. Imeson, Theatre Royal; Mr. Rembges, Empire Theatre; Mr. Nicholls, Hippodrome; and Mr. Bastinan, of the Empire Board of Directors. Mr. W. A. Appleton, secretary, represented the General Federation of Trade Unions, the Employees' Association was represented by Mr. Wm. Johnson, general secretary, Mr. A. E. Wright, branch secretary, and Messrs. J. Patton and J. Hunter, members of the branch committee.

Pending this conference both sides had agreed to suspend proceedings in furtherance or in protest of the lock-out. It was agreed that the discussion which took place at the conference should be regarded as private, but it may be stated that no agreement was arrived at in settlement of the dispute, and the matter has been referred to Mr. G. R. Askwith, of the Board of Trade. The employees' representatives were emphatic in reserving unconditional liberty of action pending an award from Mr. Askwith. This attitude is due to the fact that the men have not been reinstated pending the award, which, they claim, should be done in view of the fact that the music hall managers by locking out their men committed a breach of the music hall award, which was designed to avert both strikes and lock-outs.

It is stated that after the conference an informal agreement was come to between the managers and Mr. Johnson, that, subject to the employees suspending proceedings pending Mr. Askwith's award, preference should be given to the men locked out as vacancies arose at the several places of amusement. The managers could do much in this direction to restore a friendly feeling.

A general meeting of the members of the Middlesbrough branch was held on Monday night to decide their course of action at the conference, and one on Tuesday evening to receive a report from their representatives. Much ill-will had been created by a letter in the local Press, over signature of one of the managers, containing a statement that some of the men had left their work at "a moment's notice," and implying this was the cause of the lock-out. The men emphatically deny that any of them left work, and at the Tuesday meeting a desire was generally expressed for an immediate renewal of proceedings in retaliation and protest of the lock-out. On Mr. Johnson's advice, and having regard to his confidence in the mangers' willingness to reinstate men as vacancies occur, it was decided to suspend proceedings for one week to afford the managers an opportunity to give effect to their undertaking. The whole dispute is much to be deplored, and it is to be hoped that the matter will go before Mr. Askwith without delay.

"CISSIE" LOFTUS ON MIMICRY.

"The mimic," wrote Miss Cecilia Loftus in a recent article in Reynolds's, "deliberately copies a model, an existing, actual model. The actor who creates a part (I hope no pedantic person is going to object to my use of the word 'create' in this connection) has to evolve his model from his inner consciousness and then copy it.

"Let me illustrate this practically. In my imitation of Miss Ethel Irving's charming impersonation of Lady Frederick, I endeavour as closely as I can to reproduce that lady's tones, gestures, intonations, &c., so as to make the spectator believe that it is Miss Irving, and not myself. At any rate, the spectators' approximation to this belief is the measure of my success as a mimic. And if a young actress, going to play the part on tour, were told to imitate Miss Irving, it would be mimicry rather than acting that would be required of her. Of course, I am not suggesting that anything of this sort is actually done; I am merely supposing it for the purpose of my argument.

"If, however, I had never seen Miss Irving, and had been asked to play the part (it is a part I should much like to play, let me add parenthetically), the position would be different. Reading the play, I should have to let the situations, the dialogue, and the author's directions build up a mental image for me of Lady Frederick. I should realise to myself on this basis how she would look, talk, move, and so on; and then, having thus evolved a Lady Frederick in my mind, I should proceed to copy her (as imagined by myself), to mimic her imaginary intonations, and gestures, and play of feature. So that the actor may be said to differ from the mimic in this. The actor has first of all to call into being the model he copies.

"Mimicry, therefore, being so essential a part of the actor's art, I must confess that, when I first determined to become an actress as well as a mimic, it was somewhat of a shock to find that theatre managers actually regarded the reputation I had won as a mimic as dead against me. They wouldn't hear of me as an actress; and if I had not had a certain amount of influence and a great deal of perseverance, I should probably never have got a chance of realising my ambition.

"Naturally, I had to acquire experience; but that can only be got on the stage. When I gave my imitations, for instance, I was never troubled with my hands; I always did the right thing with them. But when I first had to play a part—and it was only a small one—my hands seemed to have become elephantine, and gave me no end of trouble. This did not last long; the difficulty was speedily got over as I got acclimatised to the new conditions. And I only mention it to show one of what I may style the mechanical differences between mimicry and acting. But, to revert, I have never got over the surprise I experienced at finding that my mimetic skill was, at the outset, a positive handicap to a stage career. In other words, my command of the physical basis of the art of acting was tacitly assumed to be the reason why I couldn't rear the superstructure upon it. I do not attempt to explain why theatre managers should entertain this idea, nor can I say whether there is any foundation for it in circumstances unknown to me. I merely put it on record as, to me, an interesting bit of reminiscence.

"Speaking for myself and from my own experience, I can only say that I have always found myself experiencing the emotions I am portraying. Not, perhaps, to the actual extent of real experience, but sufficiently so to make my work, to me, something far other than mere simulation. When I played Marguerite in the late Sir Henry Irving's company, the emotional stress to which I subjected myself nightly left me more or less a wreck after each performance."

THE L.C.C. AND AMUSEMENTS.

The usual weekly meeting of the London County Council was held on Tuesday at the County Hall, Spring Gardens, Sir M. Beachcroft (chairman) presiding.

CHAIRMAN AND VICE-CHAIRMAN.

The Theatres and Music-Halls Committee reported that they had re-elected Mr. H. J. Greenwood to be their chairman and Mr. Ernest E. Wild to be their vice-chairman for the ensuing year. Mr. Greenwood had also been elected the committee's representative on the General Purposes Committee.

WATER SUPPLY TO THEATRES.

The Theatres and Music-Halls Committee brought up the following report:—A deputation from the Theatres Alliance attended before us on March 3, 1909, with reference to the question of the charges made by the Metropolitan Water Board for the supply of water to theatres and other places of public entertainment. The points to which the deputation drew attention may be briefly stated as follows:—

(1) Theatre proprietors are now being charged for the supply of water to their theatres 5 per cent. on the rateable value of the premises, less a rebate of 20 per cent. if certain conditions are ful filled. This charge does not cover any unusual or uncommon consumption of water. For instance, the Board insists on an additional payment of 1 guinea a year for each hydrant installed in a theatre, although the hydrants are sealed and no water is used unless there be a fire.

(2) The Board, in making a charge of 5 per cent. on the rateable value of the premises, is treating theatres as domestic premises, and is levying the maximum rate it is entitled to under the Act and allowing the minimum rebate.

(3) Theatre proprietors have refused to pay the charge of 1 guinea for each hydrant, and have asked to be given a supply under section 16 of the Metropolitan Water Board (Charges) Act, 1907. This the Board refuses to give except by meter. If the proprietors were to take the supply for the hydrants under section 16, as they would be entitled to do, except for the Council's objection to a metered supply, they would only be called upon to pay for the water actually used, with a minimum charge of 22s. 11d. a quarter, instead of a guinea a year for each hydrant. To meet the objection of the Board to giving an unmetered supply under section 16, the theatre proprietors have offered to pay a minimum charge of 22s. 11d. per quarter, and, in addition, a charge to be assessed by the fire brigade or other competent authority for any water actually drawn from the hydrants in case of fire. The Board has declined to accede to this suggestion on the ground that it is impracticable.

(4) If by means of the hydrants in places of public entertainment any fire is kept within small limits, the result is a great saving of water to the Board, which is compelled to supply water to the street hydrants for fire extinction free of charge. The proprietors are thus made to pay for precautions which are actually of advantage to the Board.

The deputation stated that the Board had now intimated that it would institute proceedings against the proprietors for the recovery of the outstanding charges, and they asked that, as the proprietors were placed in their present unfortunate position by reason of the Council requiring them to instal hydrants in their premises, the Council would, if it could not see its way to allow a metered supply, make representations to the Board with a view to inducing the Board to accept the suggestion made by the proprietors. As regards the question of allowing the supply of water to hydrants in places of public entertainment to pass through a meter, we are advised that, if this were done, the efficiency of the hydrants would be very seriously diminished, and we are therefore unable to recommend the Council to allow it. We have carefully considered the suggestion of the deputation that the Council should make representations to the Board with a view to the acceptance of the offer made by the theatre proprietors, and while we feel that the position is one of considerable hardship, we are of opinion that the Council cannot usefully intervene in the matter, which has already been fully considered by the Board. We recommend:—

That a metered supply of water to fire hydrants in places of public entertainment be not allowed, and that the Council do not make representations to the Metropolitan Water Board on the question of the charges made for the supply of water to such hydrants.

Mr. Greenwood asked permission to hold over the report until the next meeting, and this was agreed to.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Committee recommended approval of the following:—Proposed new opening, giving easier access to the grand saloon from the dress-circle at the Broadway Theatre, Deptford; proposed safety-curtain to be provided at the Kilburn Vaudeville Theatre; certain alterations proposed to be made to the stage and arena at the London Hippodrome; proposal to abolish the sun-burner and alter the ventilation of the auditorium at the Savoy Theatre, Strand. The recommendations were agreed to.

There was a remarkable cast of Bulwer Lytton's Money during the lesseeship of John S. Clarke at the Haymarket in April, 1879, on the occasion of a complimentary benefit to E. L. Blanchard. We question if there has been a better combination of names since the original cast.

A curious incident happened in the last act of the production of The Suicide in 1822. The personage Wingrave (announced to be performed by Oxberry) never appeared!—the worthy undertaker was missing. At the conclusion, much disapprobation was expressed, until his appearance in The Bill of Fare—the clamour then increased, when he stepped forward, and thus addressed the house, in a somewhat embarrassed manner:—"Ladies and gentlemen,—I cannot but be conscious of the cause of your disapprobation. I have been fourteen years before the public, and till this present moment never met with your disapprobation. In the play of The Suicide I had to appear in the last scene—I did not know the piece consisted of only four acts. I was walking in the park studying a part in which I am to seek your approbation on Saturday. I arrived at the theatre—the last scene was on. Ladies and gentlemen, I must beg pardon—your approbation I have ever felt. I feel—I—I—(Loud applause.—Mr. O. clapping his hand on his breast, &c.)"

HOW SARDOU WROTE.

Some time before his death in November last M. Sardou gave a writer in the Strand Magazine a full and exact description of his methods of work, his ideas on stage-management and on the art of acting.

"How do I write my plays?" said M. Sardou. "That is not an easy question to answer. But, as regards the actual casting into shape of a comedy or drama, I proceed thus. First of all I write out a scenario or sketch of the piece: this consists of a short story or résume of the plot, for I should tell you that, though I am devoted to the dramatic form, I greatly admire the art of the novelist, and Balzac is as dear to me as Shakespeare. Then, when I am in the mood—for to a certain extent I believe in the inspiration of the moment—I write, as a rule, at one sitting the first act. When I next take up the work I almost entirely rewrite each scene, leaving it to my faithful and conscientous secretaries to make a fair copy. Sometimes I go over the various portions of a play as many as ten times before I am finally satisfied. My instinct is always to cut down and to abbreviate what I have already done. As I write I see the characters before me, and observe their least actions. Of course, each dramatist composes in a different fashion; to me each scene is an absolute reality, and I seem to see into the minds of each of my characters."

"And at what time in the day do you prefer to work?"

"I always write in the morning. I do not believe in night work; the brain is then either dulled or over-excited. As for the time it takes me to write a play, I should say from three to four months. I only do this kind of work in the country, for there alone can I secure real peace. When I am at Marly I make it a rule to receive no visitors till after three o'clock. By that time my serious writing is over for the day, and I am ready to enjoy the company of my friends."

"May I ask if you take your plots from real life and from history, or do they simply occur to you?"

"That is not an easy question to answer," replied my host, smiling. "Everything and anything, from an important historical scene to a trivial event in my everyday life, suggests plots and inspires me with ideas for new plays. You must know that I am a great believer in method; I have but little sympathy for untidy genius, for it is impossible to produce good sustained work without a certain orderliness."

He rose, and, opening the doors of a fine inlaid cabinet, displayed rows on rows of what appeared to be letter portfolios, each neatly docketed. "There, now you will understand something of my work," he observed. "The moment I think of a good idea or plot I open a fresh dossier and put a name on it. As time goes on, any historical fact or newspaper cutting bearing on the initial idea is added in, and so in time my play composes itself, and comes to fruition almost without my knowing that it has done so. Of course, this method of procedure is especially suitable when applied to the historical drama. For instance, supposing it occurs to me to-day that a certain character, known to students of the Renaissance, would make the hero of a fine play, I inscribe the name on one of these envelopes, jot down a few ideas or vague outline of the plot as it occurs to me, and then, as time goes on, everything, not only about the personage in question, but the town in which he lived, the period illustrated by him, and the speeches he is recorded to have made, is all gathered together till I am ready to start work."

"And is it true, monsieur, that you are very particular as to the historical accuracy of your dramas; or do you, on the other hand, allow yourself a certain poetic licence?"

"Yes, to the first part of your question," he answered, quickly. "I am extremely exact down to the smallest detail, as I can claim to take measureless pains. Perhaps I should tell you," he continued, thoughtfully, "that I was born an historian rather than a playwright. When I was quite a young man I taught history, and I have always had the keenest interest in that past which so many believe to be dead, but which is to me ever living Before sitting down to write an historical play I read every work dealing with the period, often as many as fifty to one hundred volumes. I am fortunate in the possession of an excellent memory, and long after the drama has been produced I can give chapter and book for every actual fact told therein. Take, for instance, my Theodora and the reconstitution of Byzantium—the critics called my knowledge into question and objected to the use of forks on the stage. They declared that in those days these modern instruments of refinement were not known. It is easy to image how foolish they must have felt when I, by quoting a dozen authorities, conclusively proved my point. Why, at Treves, Queen Helena's fork is one of the most interesting of the relics!"

"Then I presume that you yourself arrange every detail of the mounting of your plays?"

"Certainly; every scene is either drawn by myself or under my close supervision. The reconstitution of the Acropolis in Gismonda was made from photographs specially taken in Athens for the purpose. Of course, there are certain periods of history with which I personally prefer to deal. I am intensely interested in the personality of Napoleon I., and I have all my life collected Bonapartist relics, including a great number of the famous soldier's autographs. This collection became very valuable to me when I was arranging the production of Madame Sans Gêne."

"And you have made a special study, I believe, of the Revolutionary period?"

"Yes, and of old Paris. I can reconstitute any corner of mon vieux Paris in a few moments without the help of either drawings or plan. After the drama, my favourite passion is architecture, and I would go a long way at any time to see a mediæval mansion or castle in a good state of preservation. Not long ago I was fortunate enough to discover Robespierre's house in the Rue St. Honoré. The gentleman who has given up the greater portion of his literary career to the study of the terrible Revolutionary hero declared that the house had been pulled down and did not exist. But after a little trouble I was able to prove," concluded M. Sardou, triumphantly, "that I had indeed discovered Robespierre's house, and that the flat he had occupied during the last years of his life was practically intact."

"I suppose, monsieur, that you are to a certain extent in sympathy with the doctrines of the Revolution, or that you at least count yourself a Republican?"

"Good heavens, no!" he cried. "I make no secret of my opinions. I have the greatest contempt for the Republic and all its methods. Far from ensuring freedom and comfort to the individual citizen, a Republican régime, to my thinking, strikes at all liberties.

"I need hardly ask you for your views as to the Censorship—"

"As far as I can see, the Censor has never done any harm," was the unexpected answer. "He may object to certain coarse realism, and so on. But here, in France, it is a mistake to think that the Censor interdicts a play. It is the Government who always performs that duty. An interdict was placed on my Thermidor because I described the guillotine in unpleasant terms; and yet had it not been for the events of the day 9 Thermidor, described by me in too true a fashion, President Carnot, who was Chief of the Government at the time that my play was stopped, would have never existed, for on that day his great-grandfather, 'Le Grand Carnot,' would have been guillotined."

CALLS AND ENCORES.

"Macready relates in his Memoirs," writes Dutton Cook in his "Book o' the Play," "that the practice of 'calling on' the principal actor was first introduced at Covent Garden Theatre, on the occasion of his first performance of the character of Richard the Third, on Oct. 19, 1819. 'In obedience to the impatient and persevering summons of the house I was desired by Fawcett to go before the curtain; and accordingly I announced the tragedy for repetition amidst the gratulating shouts that carried the assurance of complete success to my agitated and grateful heart.' But while loving applause, as an actor needs must, Macready had little liking for the honours of calls and recalls—heartily disapproving of them, indeed, when they seemed to him in any way to disturb the representation. Thus, of his performance of Werner at Manchester, in 1845, he writes: 'Acted very fairly. Called for. Trash!' Under date Dec. 23, 1844, he records: 'Acted Virginius [in Paris] with much energy and power to a very excited audience. I was loudly called for at the end of the fourth act, but could not or would not make so absurd and empirical a sacrifice of the dignity of my poor art.' Three years later he enters in his dairy: 'Acted King Lear with much care and power, and was received by a most kind, and sympathetic, and enthusiastic audience. I was called on, the audience trying to make me come on after the first act, but of course I could not think of such a thing.' But these 'calls' relate to the conclusion of an act, when, at any rate, the drop-scene was fallen, hiding the stage from view, and when, for a while, there is a pause in the performance, suspension of theatrical illusion.

"Writing in 1830, Mr. Parke describes the custom of encoring performers as a prerogative that had been exercised by the public for more than a century; and says, with some justice, that it originated more from self-love in the audience than from gratitude to those who had afforded them pleasure. He considered, however, that encoring had done service upon the whole, by exciting emulation and stimulating singers to extraordinary exertion; and that though, in many instances, it destroyed the illusion of the scene, it had become so fixed that, in spite even of the burlesque of encoring Lord Grizzle's dying song in Fielding's Tom Thumb, it continued to prevail as much as ever. He notes it as curious that, 'in calling for a repetition, the audiences of the French and English theatres should each have selected a word forming no part of their respective languages—the former making use of the Latin word bis, and the latter the French word encore.' Double encores, we gather from the same authority, first occurred in England, at the Opera House, during the season of 1808, when Mme. Catalani was compelled to sing three times one of her songs in the comic opera La Freschetana. As none of the great singers, her predecessors—Mara, Banti, Grassini, and Billington—had ever received a similar compliment, this appeared extraordinary, until the fact oozed out that Catalani, as part of her engagement, had stipulated for the privilege of sending into the house fifty orders on each night of her performance. After this discovery double encores ceased for a time at the King's Theatre; but the system reappeared at Covent Garden, by way of compliment to Braham, each time the great tenor sang the favourite polacca in the opera of The Cabinet; and subsequently like honours were paid to Sinclair upon his return from Italy. Until then, it would seem, Mr. Sinclair had been well satisfied with one encore, and was exceedingly anxious that smaller favour should, on no account, be withheld from him. When he played the part of Don Carlos, in the opera of The Duenna, he was disappointed with the measure of applause bestowed upon his efforts, and complained that the obbligato cadenza—which Mr. Parke had time out of mind played on the oboe in the symphony of the song, 'Had I a heart for falsehood framed'—interfered with the effect of his singing, and that the applause which was obtained by the cadenza deprived him of his encore. Accordingly he requested that the cadenza might be suppressed. 'Though I thought this a mean and silly application,' says Mr. Parke, 'I complied with it, and never interfered with his encores afterwards.' It must be said for Sinclair, however, that encores had come to be regarded as tests of a singer's merits, and that a re-engagement at the theatre sometimes depended upon this demonstration of public approval. At Vauxhall Gardens, indeed, the manager—'who was not,' says Mr. Parke, 'a musical luminary'—formed his opinion of the capacities of his singers from the report of a person appointed to register the number of encores obtained by each during the season. The singers who had received the most encores were forthwith re-engaged for the next year. Upon the whole, however, the system was not found to be completely satisfactory. The inferior vocalists, stimulated by the fear of losing their engagements, took care to circulate orders judiciously among their friends, with instructions as to the songs that were to be particularly applauded; and it frequently resulted that the worst performers, if the most artful manœuvrers, were at the head of the poll at the end of the season, and re-engaged over the heads of superior artists, and greatly to the ultimate detriment of the concern. In reference to this system of obtaining encores, Mr. Parke cautiously observes: 'Without presuming to insinuate that it was surreptitiously introduced into our English theatres, I may be permitted to observe, after forty years' experience in theatrical tactics, that it would not be difficult, through a judicious distribution of determined forcers in various parts of a theatre, with Herculean hands and stentorian voices, to achieve that enviable distinction.' Possibly the reader, bearing in mind certain great successes and double and treble encores of our own time, may confirm, from his own experience, Mr. Parke's opinions and suggestions in this direction.

"It was a rule of the theatre of the last century that, although the audience were at liberty to demand the presence of an actor upon the stage, particularly with a view to his giving an explanation of any matter in which he had offended them, this privilege did not extend to the case of anyone connected with the theatre other than in a histrionic capacity. Thus, when in the year 1744 a serious riot occurred in Drury Lane Theatre relative to the excessive charges made for admission to an old entertainment—it being understood that for new entertainments it was permissible to raise the prices—'the manager (Mr. Fleetwood) was called for by the audience in full cry; but, not being an actor, he pleaded his privilege of being exempted from appearing on the stage before them, and sent them word by one of the performers that he was ready to confer with any persons they should depute to meet him in his own room. A deputation accordingly went from the pit, and the house patiently waited their return.'

"At this time, no doubt, the actor laboured under certain social disadvantages; and the manager who did not act, however insignificant a person otherwise, was generally regarded as enjoying a more dignified position than that occupied by the most eminent of performers. In time, of course, the status of the actor improved, and he outgrew the supposititious degradation attaching to his exercise of his profession. We have lived to see composers, authors, and even scene-painters summoned before the footlights, nothing loath, apparently, to accept this public recognition of their merits. But these are innovations of quite recent date.

DRURY LANE THEATRE CHILDREN.

A pleasant custom was renewed on Monday at the West Theatre of the Albert Hall, when the children of the Drury Lane pantomime presented their annual extravaganza. The production used to be confined within the walls of Old Drury, but two years ago a departure was made, and the piece was taken to Bexhill and other popular resorts. So cordial was the welcome received that it is intended this year to make a similar tour, and several bookings have already been arranged. It is an ideal holiday for the children, and they are looking forward with especial eagerness to the visit to Hastings and to Bexhill, where Mr. J. M. Glover, who combined the Mayoralty of the town with the musical-directorship of the Lane, is sure to give them a hearty greeting. This year's pantomime is again written by Mr. Bruce Smith, the eminent scenic artist, with music arranged by J. Holliday, jun., and is entitled

"A-LAD-IN, AND WELL OUT OF IT."

Abanazer ..... MASTER EDWARD GORDON
Aladdin ..... MISS FLORRIE CLARK
Slave of the Lamp ..... MISS LOUISE GIBBONS
Genii of the Ring ..... MISS MAY NOBLE
Emperor Ching Chang Chow ..... MASTER WILL BISHOP
Princess Sin Sin ..... MISS ADDIE WELLS
Widow Twankey ..... MASTER JACK FROST
Scrubbi ..... MISS LILY RANDALL
Li-Slop ..... MASTER GEORGE BURTON
Fairy Queen ..... MISS DORIS TREVELYAN

There was a notable absence of the pantomime "gag" proper, a rigid adherence being made to the "book," which is overflowing with rhymed jests, some of them very neatly turned. The scenery is also from the brush of Mr. Bruce Smith, who has provided some capital sets, The Jewelled Cave, indeed, being so gorgeous that one looked for something more elaborate in the subsequent Palace scene, the back-cloth of which might have been expected to rise and reveal a wealth of colour.

The youthful players entered with zest into their task, and a most exhilarating performance was the result. The bright light of the cast was Miss Doris Trevelyan, the Fairy Queen of the two last pantomimes at Drury Lane, who played the same attractive character in the piece under review. She acted with her customary grace, the delivery of her lines being admirably distinct and clear. Miss Trevelyan sings like a thrush, and her cultivated voice was heard with extreme pleasure in a flower song and in the pretty ballad "Many years ago," loud demands for an encore being made. The title-rôle was entrusted to Miss Florrie Clark, who made a buoyant Aladdin, singing especially well "I want you to see my girl." Miss Addie Wells was a prepossessing Princess, with flashing eye and natural vivacity. Her song was the quaint "Afraid to go home in the dark," followed by a dance in which Miss Wells displayed much cleverness, and was assisted by a quartette of skilled coryphées. Another talented young lady was seen in Miss Louise Gibbons, who officiated as the Slave of the Lamp. Her duties included the singing of "Come along, Mandy," which had to be repeated, and of a territorial song, which enjoyed a similar distinction. The latter effusion has an irresistibly lilting refrain, and it was delivered with abundant spirit by the singer, who made a smart appearance in kharki, added effect being given by Sisters of the Red Cross and wearers of the Union Jack, who formed the chorus. A golden-haired Genii of the Ring was forthcoming in Miss May Noble, who utilised an excellent voice in a "Teddy Bear" song, much mirth being created by the antics of a life-sized Bruin, who assisted in the effect obtained. Miss Lily Randall was a vivacious representative of the Forewoman of the Washhouse, and furnished a most appreciated interlude with the Policeman, comically enacted by Master George Burton.

The star comedian of former productions is again included in the quaint personality of Master Jack Frost, whose claim to fame rests on the fact that he is the Drury Lane call-boy. He is quite a pastmaster in the art of mirth-making, and his efforts as Widow Twankey proved diverting throughout. Master Will Bishop, son of the Will Bishop, also furnished incentives to laughter as the Emperor, on whom he conferred a pronounced Cockney accent. The tuneful lament of "Poor Old John" fell to his share, and the topical duet, "There's nothing very wonderful in that," sung with Widow Twankey, contained some happy hits. Master Bishop's dancing was also admired. A duly sinister wicked uncle, with ferocity in every feature and turpitude in every tone, was presented by Master Edward Gordon. The members of the chorus did remarkably well, dancing nimbly and with agreeable precision. A good word should be added for Miss Gladys Holliday, who accompanied ably at the piano. The burlesque was produced by Mr. Edward Spiller, under whose direction the company is starting on what should be a prosperous and enjoyable excursion.

The children made their first appearance out of London at a matinée performance at the Royal County Theatre, Kingston-on-Thames, on Wednesday, and were received with marked favour.

AN interesting anniversary was celebrated on the 12th ult., when were completed the first twenty-five years of the existence of the L. E. Waterman Co., the manufacturers of Waterman's Ideal Fountain Pen. Before Mr. Waterman, many men had seen the possibility of a writing implement which should carry its own ink-supply and constantly feed its own nib, and many inventors had experimented with the idea of a fountain pen. That possibility became a reality with the model invented by L. E. Waterman and first sold on Feb. 12, 1884. Millions of these pens have been sold, over one million having been sold in a recent twelvemonth, and there is scarcely a country in the world where the merits of this fountain pen are not known. The pen made in 1884 was substantially the same pen as the one made in 1909. Improvements in detail have been added—the finish is perhaps more superb, and some parts have been simplified and improved—but behind the pen as we know it to-day is embodied the principles laid down by Mr. Waterman in constructing his first pen. Waterman's Ideal seems destined to "go on for ever," for an excellent reason—its wonderful simplicity makes improvement scarcely possible. There seems every reason to believe that just as the steel pen superseded the goose quill, the fountain pen, which finds its best model in Waterman's Ideal, will some day entirely supersede the pen that depends upon the inkstand for its replenishment.

SHAKESPEARE'S connection with the Southwark Cathedral, at the foot of London Bridge, is to be marked by a recumbent figure of the poet, in alabaster, with Tudor Gothic canopy and screen, which is to be erected in a recess in the south aisle, where it will form a pendant to the tomb of Gower opposite. Shakespeare was a parishioner of St. Saviour's for over fifteen years, and the cathedral, as St. Saviour's is now called, is the one building remaining in London with which he was associated.

AT the Tunbridge Wells Police Court on Thursday, Clarence Valentine Hoskins, was charged with embezzling on March 1, 1909, at the Opera House, Tunbridge Wells, the sums of £8 14s. 5d. and £27 19s. 10d., the property of his employers, John Egginton, Walter de Frece, and Frederick Mouillot. He was sentenced to three months' hard labour.

PLAYERS OF THE PERIOD.

MISS MAY BEATRICE.

The career of Miss May Beatrice has not yet attained to very great lengths, but it has been a very varied and successful one, covering leading parts in both musical comedy and legitimate drama. She began her professional work in that best of schools, a Shakespearean répertoire company, under the management of Mr. Esmonde Bramley. Her first part was that of the Prince of Wales in Richard III., which she played during her third week in the profession. She made her first entrance riding on horseback, which saved her the awful ordeal of walking on the stage with knees trembling with nervousness and violent stage fright. However, all went well, and the débutante acquitted herself with the utmost satisfaction, as evinced by the fact that she was subsequently entrusted with a number of different parts in the same company, among them being Sebastian in Twelfth Night and the Gentlewoman in Macbeth. Afterwards Miss Beatrice joined Mr. William Maclaren's Claudian company for chorus and understudying. Then came a tour as Ancaria in Mr. Henry Chattell's Sign of the Cross company, and the following tour she was given the part of Berenice, which up to the present has the distinction of being her favourite rôle. In the interval between these tours the young actress experienced a complete change, going from costume drama to modern comedy, playing for some time Margery, the light comedy lead in Our Flat. She also sustained leading parts in East Lynne, The Ticket-of-Leave Man, and the old stock pieces. Having finished tour as Berenice she took up the part of Muriel Eden in The Gay Lord Quex for a few weeks, and then joined Mr. Morton Powell to create the part of Helena Landless in his production of The Mystery of Edwin Drood. While touring with this Mr. Rich Waldon saw her, and engaged her for the dramatic part of Demon Boy in the successful pantomime of Diccory Dok, which has just completed a prolonged run at the Princess's Theatre, Glasgow.

MR. JERROLD ROBERTSHAW.

A native of Yorkshire, Mr. Jerrold Robertshaw lived at Ilkley for some years, and went on the stage at twenty-eight years of age, going to Sarah Thorne for nine months as leading man. His next engagement was as Tigellinus in Mr. Wm. Greet's Sign of the Cross, and then Jediah in Daughters of Baby'on. Three or four small parts in town were followed by three years with Mr. Ben Greet, when Miss Edyth Wynne-Matthison and Mr. Robertshaw played leads together—Benedick, Evelyn in Money, Joseph Surface, Charles Marlow, Claude Melnotte, &c. Sir Charles Wyndham saw him play these parts, together with David Garrick, at Brighton, and was so favourably impressed by the clever actor's performance that he gave him De Guiche in Cyrano de Bergerac. After that, with Mr. Charles Cartwright, Mr. Robertshaw had a leading part in Colonel Cromwell, and then toured his own company in Shakespeare as Hamlet, Othello, Shylock, Macbeth, and Henry V.

Another decided advance in his career was made when Mr. Robertshaw joined Mr. Arthur Bourchier for Pilkerton in Pilkerton's Peerage. Subsequently he went to America with Miss Julia Marlowe as Cardinal Sforza in Queen Fianetta, and afterwards played Malatesta in Dante with Irving at Drury Lane, followed by a part in Letty at the Duke of York's in the autumn of 1903. Rejoining Mr. Bourchier, Mr. Robertshaw added to his laurels with Tackleton in Cricket on the Hearth, Etchepare in The Arm of the Law, and the Demon in W. S. Gilbert's Fairy's Dilemma. From the Garrick Mr. Robertshaw went for Mrs. Brown Potter's season at the Savoy, playing Turridu in Cavalleria Rusticana and other parts. Again he rejoined Mr. Bourchier for Antonio in The Merchant of Venice, and then took up the rôle of Prince of Wales in Mr. Fred Terry and Miss Julia Neilson's revival of The Scarlet Pimpernel at the New, following on with Sir Malcolm Vernon in Dorothy o' the Hall. An engagement as Fouché to Sir John Hare's Napoleon in The Great Conspiracy was followed by five or six short runs in plays at the New, Royalty, Savoy, &c. He played the title-rôle in the recent production of Antony and Cleopatra at the Queen's, Manchester. Fencing is a hobby of Mr. Robertshaw's, who has also a fondness for music and all kinds of literature, occult and otherwise. On the other hand, he confesses to the habit of smoking far too many cigarettes.

MR. DENIS LYNDON.

A native of Nottingham, Mr. Denis Lyndon comes from a military family, and it was intended that he should follow that profession. His grandfather was a captain in the 29th Regiment, and served through the Indian Mutiny. His great-grandfather was a Professor at Dublin University, and won the Vice-Chancellor's prize three years in succession, and a monument is erected to his memory at the University. Always of a roving disposition, and passionately fond of the sea and yachting, the subject of this sketch has had many thrilling experiences, being unfortunate enough to be shipwrecked three times. He commenced his theatrical career in the autumn of 1897, receiving his first professional engagement at the Theatre Royal, Goole, with Mr. Harry Joseph's vaudeville company, with whom he had many pleasant tours as principal comedian and stage-manager for his extravaganzas and pantomimes. Mr. Lyndon has fulfilled many summer engagements with Messrs. Benet and Marshall's concert companies. He then launched out upon his own resources, and was the originator of the first "pierrot" concert party in Jersey. In conjunction with his brother-in-law, Mr. Will Terry, he founded the Royal Bohemian Players, who have had the honour of being twice patronised by Royalty. Since then he has taken up the more serious part of the profession. Tours followed with Mr. Haldane Crichton's Dandy Fifth and Mr. Ernest Carpenter's Lady's Maid company, in which he scored a success as Pietro Conti, the Italian Gendarme. He has had many tours with several managements in drama, comedy, and burlesque, and stock seasons in Edinburgh, Brighton, and Birmingham, playing a varied round of characters and comedy parts, including Glabrio in The Sign of the Cross, Red Murdock in Jane Shore, Joe Shotwell in My Sweetheart, Cripps in The Silver King, Spettigue in Charley's Aunt, Lord Elton in The Sorrows of Satan, Rip in Rip Van Winkle, Marks in Uncle Tom's Cabin, Hawkshaw in Ticket-of-Leave Man, Mons. Du Basson in The Gamster of Metz, Pete in The Octoroon, Abe Nathan in Shadows of a Great City, Mesmerist in The Bells, Old Drayton in The Worst Woman in London, Muldoon in Muldoon's Picnic, Major Galbraith in Rob Roy, Badger in The Streets of London, Achmed in Relief of Lucknow, Danny Mann in The Colleen Bawn, Harvey

MR. DENIS LYNDON.

Duff in The Shaughraun, Sam Brown in The Golden Chance, De Vere in A City of Pleasure, Pat O'Dare in On the Frontier, Barney Bawn in The Diver's Luck, Dr. Caius in The Merry Wives of Windsor, M. de Château Renaud in The Corsican Brothers, Ghost in Hamlet, Gobo in Les Cloches de Corneville, &c. He is author and producer of all Mr. Henry Benet's successful pantomimes, and under this gentleman's management toured in Sergeant Brue, sustaining the title-rôle and undertaking the stage management. He is engaged to play Major O'Neil in the autumn revival of The Lady Slavey. Besides being a keen fisherman, Mr. Lyndon is an excellent horseman, riding and driving being his favourite hobbies. He has lately taken over the Runnacleave Theatre, Ilfracombe, and in conjunction with his aunt (Mrs. A. Chown, proprietress of the Runnacleave Hotel), will run it during the coming season, most of the best known touring companies and concert parties having already been booked.

MR EDMUND KENNEDY.

Surviving the drudgery of several years "tied to the office-desk," Mr. Edmund Kennedy was given his first theatrical opportunity by Mr. J. B. Mulholland, who engaged him for an experimental fortnight as acting-manager at the Theatre Metropole, Camberwell. The engagement extended to three years, during which time Mr. Kennedy acquired a mastery of the business side of the profession, which he gratefully ascribes to Mr. Mulholland, of whose enterprise and managerial qualities he has the highest admiration. Thus equipped, Mr. Kennedy sought touring management, and was engaged by Mr. Leonard Boyne in that capacity, for a tour of Sporting Life. Then it was he essayed his first professional appearance as an actor under the management of Mr. Eade Montefiore, in a répertoire of Pinero plays, being entrusted with Inspector Messiter and Sergeant Lugg (doubled) in The Magistrate, Wedderburn in Sweet Lavender, and quite a host of small parts. He returned to acting-management, under Mr. Robert Courtneidge, at the Prince's Theatre, Manchester, for two years, and was subsequently engaged by Mr. Flanagan for a short season at the Queen's Theatre there in the parts of The Student and Brander in Faust and Gaspard in The Lady of Lyons.

Mr. Kennedy owes his chief all-round experience to Mr. Ben Greet, with whom he played some forty or fifty parts, including Colonel Anstruther in The Second in Command (plus stage-management), Old Adam and Jaques de Bois (doubled), Angelo in The Comedy of Errors, Starveling, Theseus, Vincentio, Oliver, Antonio, Gonzalo, Orsino, Hortensio, Mr. Page, and numerous other parts in Shakespeare and classic drama. Following this, he added to his experience by playing in "downright melodrama" for a few weeks, sometimes as many as five parts in a night, from a toothless old man of ninety to a stripling of twenty. His first chance of a "lead" was afforded by Mr. Mouillot, who gave him the character of Prince Dmitry in Tolstoi's Resurrection. He afterwards created the part of the comically-mad poet, Caerwon Moody, in the late Wilson Barrett's play, The Never-Never Land, later playing the juvenile lead, Jack Mowbray, in the same drama. He was engaged by Messrs. Armitage and Leigh for the "lead" in Lucky Durham, which he sustained throughout the provinces and London suburbs for over three years. "I must acknowledge my indebtedness to my old friends, Armitage and Leigh," says Mr. Kennedy, "for this opportunity of playing a great part in, I think, the late Wilson Barrett's greatest play." Other parts he has portrayed are Captain Molyneux in The Shaughraun and Richard Hare and Archibald Carlyle in the perennial East Lynne. On one occasion he "doubled" the parts of Carlyle and P.C. Bullock, and claims that his attempt to make the latter character funny aroused much laughter—in the orchestra! "I take pride in recording the fact," Mr. Kennedy observes, "that, thanks to the enterprise of my old friend, Mr. James Kiernan, I played the lead and produced David Garrick at his theatre for a whole week to packed houses." His last engagement has been for six months in America as The Vicar in The Servant in the House, written by his brother, C. Rann Kennedy, which has enjoyed prolonged success in the States, and for which Mr. Kennedy anticipates a still greater triumph in this country.

MISS FYFE ALEXANDER.

The stage career of Miss Fyfe Alexander began with small parts on tour with Mr. Charles Steuart's répertoire of farces, Our Flat, The Jerry-Builder, and Confusion. Later she walked-on and understudied in town, and then was engaged by Mr. Seymour Hicks. While playing Fanny in Quality Street Mr. Barrie chose her for the invalid girl, Lady Milly, in Little Mary. When the piece was finally withdrawn from Wyndham's Theatre Miss Alexander went abroad. Returning to England a year later, she was engaged by Mr. Edward Terry to play Blanche in Liberty Hall, Minnie in Sweet Lavender, and Charlotte in The Magistrate. In the spring of 1907 she joined Mr. Charles Macdona to play Lady Gerania in Dr. Wake's Patient, with Mr. Thalberg Corbet as Dr. Wake. Then followed two tours as Lady Marion in Robin Hood with Mr. Lewis Waller's company. Other parts played at various times include Ruth Arhenser in Mr. Smith with Mr. Walter Reynolds, Sally Grace in The Man from Mexico with Mr. George Willoughby, Florence in Uncle's Will, Millicent in The Bugle Call, Claire Ffolliott in The Shaughraun, and Harriet in Quality Street.

MISS FYFE ALEXANDER.

This spring Miss Alexander is touring with The Early Worm, from Wyndham's Theatre.

THE Captain Macheath of Mme. Vestris, said a theatrical critic in 1822, was in her usual style of talent. But we much regret to see a lady perform this part. There are some male characters which from their romantic and softer colouring, may be represented by a woman; but Macheath is not one of them; he is a bold, dashing highwayman, the gentleman of low life, one who has a spice of gallantry in his ruffianism, and of ruffianism in his gallantry. His love is the coarsest profligacy, only carried off by the gaiety of overflowing spirits. A woman, in undertaking such a part, has to choose one of two evils: she must either play it as it ought to be, in which case she will infallibly be disgusting, or she must soften it down into a sprightly, but romantic lover, which, while it renders her interesting, presents a very different portrait from that intended by the author. Now Mme. Vestris chose, and wisely, the latter alternative; she threw all her natural witchery of voice and manner into the part, and as Mme. V. was delightful, but she was as little like Macheath as a rose is like a thistle; and we do think that decency is utterly violated by a woman playing the parts of coarse and brutal libertines; not all the sweetness of Vestris, her magic grace, her delicious smile, her soft melting tones—no, nor all the witchery of her eyes, will ever persuade us to the contrary.

AMERICAN AMUSEMENTS.

NEW YORK, MARCH 17.—Mr. Robert Mantell, whose star is in the ascendant, has won new honours in a handsome revival of Shakespeare's King John at the New Amsterdam Theatre, his performance of the title-rôle having elicited a chorus of praise in which there is hardly a dissenting note. Mr. William Winter, the leading authority of this country on such matters, names Mr. Mantell as the leading Shakespearean actor of America in an exhaustive review of his performance, and credits him with "a noble achievement." Miss Marie Booth Russell, conspicuous for her beauty and dignity, gives a highly intelligent and sympathetic portrayal of the unhappy Constance, this being adjudged her finest embodiment. Hubert de Burgh and Prince Arthur, two of the most prominent characters in the play, have worthy representatives in Mr. Ethelbert Hales and Miss Leila Frost, the familiar incident of Hubert's attempt to burn out Prince Arthur's eyes being reproduced in a most effective manner. Mr. Fritz Leiber is an excellent Faulconbridge, Mr. James Brophy finely personifies the pride and authority of King Philip of France, and others who contribute to the success of the representation as a whole by their conscientious rendering of their respective rôles are Miss Lillian Kingsbury, Miss Lorraine Frost, and Miss Edith Campbell; Messrs. Guy Lindsley, L. Rogers Lytton, George Stilwell, Charles Keene, George Turner, William Bowen, Walter Campbell, and F. Dallas Cairns. King John had not been performed in New York since 1874, when John E. McCullough appeared at Booth's Theatre not as the King, but as Faulconbridge. King John was played by J. B. Booth, Prince Arthur by Minnie Maddern (now Mrs. Fiske), Constance by Agnes Booth, Hubert by H. A. Weaver, and the Dauphin by Gustavus Levick. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kean had appeared here in King John nine years previously. In the present instance Mr. Mantell announces that he has rearranged the play "to meet present-day requirements." There are seven acts with ten changes of scene. The first act passes in the throne room of the King's Palace, and the second occurs before the walls of Angiers. The third act has three settings, namely King Philip's tent, the plains near Angiers, and the King's tent again. Act four shows a room in the castle at Northampton, and act five the throne room in King John's palace. In act six we see the walls of the castle and the death leap of Prince Arthur. The first scene of the last act is an open space near Swinstead Abbey, and the closing scene takes place in the orchard of the Abbey. The play is splendidly mounted, and the stage management is in every respect admirable. Mr. Mantell is a native of Ayrshire. Before he came to America in the eighties, he was for several seasons a member of Miss Wallis's well-known company touring the English provinces.

"THE RICHEST GIRL," a farcical play in four acts, by Paul Gavault, adapted into English by Michael Morton, is the current attraction at the Criterion Theatre, Samson having ended its long run at that house and gone on tour. M. Gavault's play was probably much funnier in the original French than it is in English. One also suspects that some of the fun was rather naughty and had to be left out. Unfortunately the residue is rather inane. Paul Normand, a dull clerk in the Parliament of Agriculture, wins the confidence and approval of his chief, Mr. Mingasson, and being prosaic and conventional souls, they both arrive at the conclusion that Paul should marry Mingasson's daughter, the estimable Florise. Normand takes a cottage in the country in company with an ardent young artist, Felix Tarride. Benjamine Monnier, the daughter of a chocolate "king," being bent on a lark, compels her chauffeur to drive her far into the country at a late hour. The motor-car breaks down at Normand's very door, and on the eve of a visit from his chief and his prospective bride. Miss Monnier, who has an uncurbed temper and more money than she knows what to do with, takes complete possession of the place. Felix sees a possible chance of painting old Monnier's portrait, and of his friend's marrying an heiress, so he sticks his knife into another tyre and makes it impossible for "the richest girl" to proceed. Normand gives up his room and sleeps in an armchair. Next day there is a fine scene when the Mingassons—father and daugher—arrive and find the saucy Benjamine in possession of Paul's house. Paul's troubles multiply after that. Mr. Mingasson breaks off the engagement and leaves in a rage. Paul goes to his office, and after considerable trouble succeeds in regaining his chief's favour. But Benjamine suddenly appears on the scene, having come to Paul's office to thank him for some roses which she believes he has sent her, in order to make amends for his conduct in the country. Paul tries to get rid of her before his prospective father-in-law appears, but to spite him she stays and takes lunch with him. Her charm begins to make an impression upon him, and the result is that all engagements are again broken. Benjamine decides to enter a convent, but eventually she and Paul discover that they are in love with each other, and get married. Miss Marie Doro plays Benjamine very prettily, and is ably assisted by Miss Anne Meredith, Miss Ethel Morrey, Messrs. Louis Massen, Orrin Johnson, Fred Eric, Frank Burbeck, and Fred Tiden.

MISS HILDA SPONG, who is almost a stranger in New York nowadays, has a new play called A Man and His Mate, according to the "out-of-town" newspapers, in which she appears as a lady doctor, the scenes being laid in the "semi-civilised West." Dr. Elizabeth Breckenridge, familiarly known as Betty, falls in love with a horse thief named Harry Ogden, who has been caught by his pursuers, and is about to be strung up. Betty cuts the rope, and allows the thief to escape, afterwards concealing him behind her skirts when the miners and cowboys seek to recapture him. Then she gives him a hypodermic injection of morphine and takes him into her house for safety. Betty declines the love of her cousin, and reduces herself to the level of the fugitive thief, so strong is her passion for him. Choo Lang, an Americanised Chinaman, is introduced as secretary to Colonel Breckenridge, Betty's father. Through his good offices the Colonel is conciliated, the "family honour" is saved, and the ill-assorted pair are eventually united.

MRS. LESTER WALLACK, widow of the noted actor and manager, was the beneficiary of a special afternon performance at Wallack's Theatre on the 5th inst. The affair was under the auspices of the Association of Theatre Managers. The programme included nearly every prominent player in New York, the balcony scene from Romeo and Juliet being acted by Miss Eleanor Robson and Mr. William Faversham. The sum of three thousand dollars was realised.

MR. TOM E. MURRAY, the Baron of the Boy Blue pantomime at the Prince of Wales Theatre, Birmingham, had his benefit on the 19th inst. There was a big house, who greeted Mr. Murray with enthusiasm, and showered presents upon him. Among the "extra turns" was Mr. Wilkie Bard, who was greeted with a furore; little Miss Mona Cutler, in her dress of silver and white, danced three pretty dances, and was the recipient of a pretty little gold chain and pendant and a basket of chocolate; Seener and Fridkin's Russian Imperial Troupe danced wonderfully; Mr. Wilson Hallett contributed some very funny items; and Mr. Aubrey Fitzgerald, who came down with Mr. Wilkie Bard from Drury Lane, also sang two songs.

LONDON & SUBURBAN THEATRES.

KING'S THEATRE, HAMMERSMITH.

On Monday, March 22, the Comedy, entitled
"MRS. DOT."

When a woman sets her mind to obtain anything she generally succeeds in getting what she wants. Such is the expressed dictum of Mrs. Worthley (widow of "Worthley's Entire"), who wants to marry Gerald Halstane, and, in spite of his being engaged to his cousin, Nellie Sellenger, she does so. How it is all realised is told in Mrs. Dot, Mr. W. Somerset Maugham's popular light comedy, played at the King's this week to substantial and appreciative audiences by Miss May Palfrey and company. The comedy is fitly described as light, but it is distinctly amusing, and was voted entirely satisfactory by the Monday night audience. As the widow, Mrs. Worthley, otherwise "Mrs. Dot," Miss May Palfrey scored a conspicuous and well-deserved triumph. Looking charming in some elegant gowns, she displayed talent of a high order. A huge success was made by Mr. F. Kinsey Peile as James Blenkinsop, his easy and natural acting lending every assistance to the rôle; Mr. Hugh C. Buckler scored as Gerald Halstane, giving a really good representation of the bewildered lover; Freddie Perkins was cleverly handled by Mr. Basil Hallam, the audience readily taking to him; Charles, the valet, was creditably undertaken by Mr. McIntyre Wicksteed; very good was Miss Emily Paterson as Lady Sellenger; and Miss Evelyn Kerry gave an entertaining rendering of Nellie Sellenger. Miss Annie Hill's Miss Eliza McGregor was in every way satisfactory. That new "thriller in little" The Mystery of Redwood Grange was also given. In it Mr. Weedon Grossmith (who met with a reception which must have gladdened his heart) acted Mr. Wilkins with great ability. His assumed bravado was delightfully expressed, and altogether Mr. Wilkins ought to become one of his popular rôles. Mr. H. C. Buckler did well as the coachman.

THE MARLBOROUGH.

On Monday, March 22, the Play, by Alfred Sutro, entitled
"THE BUILDER OF BRIDGES."

Mr. George Alexander's company has been delighting good houses here by excellent performances of the above fine play. Mr. Leonard Pagden is admirably earnest, solid, and strong as Edward Thursfield. Miss Dorothy Green as Dorothy Faringay, supplies a clever impersonation. Mr. Lewis Fielder represents Arnold Faringay with subtlety and success. Mr. Arthur Vezin as Walter Gresham plays the part convincingly. Sir Henry Killick has an able exponent in Mr. Alfred Harris; and Mr. Percy D. Owen as Peter Holland is effectively characteristic. Mrs. Kemmis as Mrs. Debney introduces a capital comedy note; and as Miss Closson Miss Beatrice Smith is alert and intelligent. The visit of the company has been very successful.

CORONET THEATRE.

On Monday, March 22, the Musical Comedy entitled
"THE BELLE OF NEW YORK."

Mr. George Musgrove's Belle of New York company is presented by Messrs. J. Bannister Howard and Alexander Leighton, and the bright, exhilarating musical play proves that it still retains its sparkle and melody. Mr. Harold Wardroper as the young scapegrace Harry Bronson acts with discretion and conviction. Miss Alice Nixon is dainty and chic as Fifi Fricot, and her songs are rendered with plenty of naïveté and coquettish charm. Miss Winnie Brown is a dashing Cora Angelique, and besides acquitting herself well in her rôle, she takes part in a special and highly successful waltz scena, "La Caressante," which Mr. William Pringle, a capable whistler and comedian, who enacts the part of Blinky Bill McQuirk. Miss Florence Hersee as Mamie Clancy displays any amount of animation and agility, and contributes a special coon song and dance, which is remarkably well received. She is also a lively Kissie Fitzgarter. Mr. Arthur Ricketts proves himself a resourceful low comedian as Ichabod Bronson, and Mr. Jos. R. Tate, who stage-manages the show, is very excellent as the "polite lunatic." Mr. J. Brian Ridout and Mr. Ray L. Cody do good work as the Portuguese twins, and Mr. Alfred Sandoe is quite efficient as Doc Snifkins. Mr. Reginald Edwards is highly diverting as the moody and morose low comedian Kenneth Mugg. Miss Aimee Roberts invests the Salvation lassie Violet Gray with charm, and Misses Daisie Jennings, Ethel Hubert, and others enact the part of bridesmaids. Mr. B. J. Paterson wields the bâton.

CRYSTAL PALACE THEATRE.

On Monday, March 22, the Play, entitled "TODDLES."

Mr. Murray King's company gave a highly-amusing rendering of Mr. Cyril Maude's successful play on Monday. Several alterations have been made in the original construction of the piece, all of them making for broader treatment and funnier farce. The child fiancée of Toddles has been omitted, and a more up-to-date rôle, in the person of one, Susan Strong, a Suffragette, substituted in her place. Mr. Murray King as Toddles was frankly farcical, and his well-acted indecision and amusing pranks raised shouts of laughter, especially in the bedroom scene in Paris. Freddy Gunner, his friend, was acted in a gentlemanly manner by Mr. J. V. Bryant, his quiet manner furnishing an excellent contrast to the eccentricities of the little nobleman. Mr. Joblyn's appearance itself was enough to cause hilarity, and Mr. Ardene Linden gave great character to the part. Mr. Mattie Cheshire made an entry as Boolby, a society entertainer, in the second scene, which innovation caused boundless mirth, both on and off the stage. Miss Naomi Nelson was incisive and striking as Lady Dover, who has so much to do with the action of the play. The part of Mrs. Joblyn was enthusiastically entered into by Miss Evelyn Shelley, causing her audience to shake with laughter at her many sallies of unconscious humour. Miss Ada Champion made Susan Strong a most uncompromising virago, both in her manner and attire, and Miss Mabel Ormonde as the designing widow, Mrs. Bowler, looked attractive in her many changes of costume. Miss Doris Langdon invested her part of the ingenue, Constance Joblyn, with much charm, acting naturally and making the most of her scene with Toddles in the last act. Mr. C. Douglas Cox as Haslitt, the moneylender, was brusque and breezy, and Mr. H. C. Peppin as Dr. Baird, the physician at the springs, was suave and professional in his manner. The Mayor at the Paris Registry Office was forcibly and amusingly outlined by Mr. Richard Webb, and Mr. Alexander Lee made a most discreet Valet. The play was preceded by the well-known curtain-raiser The Fair Equestrienne, in which Messrs. J. V. Bryant and C. Douglas Cox and Miss Ada Champion appeared, and which went excellently.

THE WEST LONDON.

On Monday, March 22, the Drama, in Five Acts, entitled
"THE STREETS OF LONDON."

This popular drama is always favourably received in Marylebone, and this week the West Londoners have been most appreciative. Mr. Chas. Carte is a veritable tower of strength as Badger, and never once did this eminent emotional actor allow his energies to flag or his efforts to falter; and his performance quite stood out by itself, and was cheered accordingly. Mr. Robert Landore enacted Gideon Bloodgood in determined and relentless fashion; Mr. Morton Lester agreeably sustained Mark Livingstone; Mr. E. G. Brandon was decidedly good as the warm-hearted Puffy; and Mr. Arthur Henry Poole lent distinction to the rôle of Paul Fairweather. Miss Ethel Faithful's portrayal of Lucy Fairweather was a touchingly sympathetic one; Miss Winnie Rose was pertly amusing as Dan Puffy; whilst Miss Claire Reynolds was quite at her ease as the scheming plotter Aleda Bloodgood. The minor characters were all carefully played, and the Fire scene was admirably worked, and excited much interest.

KENNINGTON THEATRE.

On Monday, March 22, the Musical Comedy, entitled
"THE MERRY WIDOW."

The first visit of The Merry Widow to Kennington Theatre drew an enormous house on Monday. The production is up to the high standard of excellence always associated with Mr. George Edwardes's enterprises, and nothing is wanting to make the show go with a swing from start to finish. The mounting and dressing of the musical comedy leave nothing to be desired, and the grounds of Sonia's house form one of the most artistic settings that could have been possibly devised. An augmented orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Andrew Maccunn, does full justice to Franz Lehar's marvellous music, and the talented company over which Mr. J. E. Malone exercises his genial sway do their work with an interest and freshness which are more characteristic of a new production than of a play which has been going strong for over two years.

Miss Clara Evelyn makes as captivating a Sonia as any who have ever filled the part, enacting it with a grace of manner and charm of personality that are deserving of the warmest praise. Her singing is very fine, her dancing clever, and in the "Merry Widow" waltz with Danilo she scores a big triumph. In the latter rôle Mr. Basil Foster is magnificent, bright, lively, and full of humour, a clever dancer, a good singer, an ardent lover, and in every way the beau-ideal of the dashing young Prince. He quite won everyone's heart on Monday by his delightful style in his many encounters with Sonia. Mr. Eric Thorne proves himself to be a remarkably able comedian as Baron Popoff, and his quaint mannerisms keep the audience in a hilarious mood whenever he is in evidence—which is most of the time. Mr. Thorne's skilful work should take him far in the realms of musical comedy. Mr. W. Talleur Andrews made a manly figure as Vicomte Camille de Jolidon, singing admirably, while the Natalie of Miss Nora Brocklebank was excellently presented. The duet between this couple was a splendid piece of vocalisation. Mr. George Miller was well placed as the Marquis de Cascada, and Mr. W. H. Rawlins was responsible for a lot of genuine fun by his treatment of the rôle of Nisch. The General Novakovitch of Mr. Theo Leonard was decidedly amusing, and Mr. William Spray cut an odd figure as the waiter at Maxim's. Miss Mabel Russell's dances were quite a wonderful exposition of the Terpsichorean art, and Miss Sylvia May deserves mention as Novakovitch's wife. The Misses Dorothy Le Brun, Norah Wadeley, Lilly Hadley, Muriel Francis, and Norah Stock made a bevy of beauty as the girls at Maxim's, and two others who danced and sang with great credit, besides looking exceedingly pretty withal, were Miss Pollie Edwards and Miss Kathleen Courtney. The parts of M. de St. Brioche and M. Khadga were adequately filled by Mr. Norman Greene and Mr. Robert Whitehouse respectively. A feature of the production which should not escape notice is the strong and well-balanced chorus, the concerted numbers being splendidly rendered. Mr. H. B. Brandreth, the manager, is to be congratulated on the enterprise shown in bringing The Merry Widow south of the river.

THE SHAKESPEARE.

On Monday, March 22, the Drama,
"THE BEGGAR GIRL'S WEDDING."

A good drama is always sure of a warm welcome from patrons of the Shakespeare Theatre, and the visit this week of The Beggar Girl's Wedding has resulted in crowded houses at every performance. The production is that of the author, Mr. Walter Melville, whose name is an assurance of excellence, and the play has been set with great care. The company, too, have been specially selected, and their interpretation of the piece leaves nothing to be desired. Mr. Otto Minster makes a fine manly Jack Cunningham, and his vigorous acting and earnest manner is well in keeping with the rôle Mr. Herbert Morgan gives a convincing embodiment of the scheming Gilbert Lindsay, and Mr. James C. Taylor brings his ripe experience to bear on the part of Robert Grimshaw with satisfactory results. A sound rendering of Norman Marsh is given by Mr. Ernest G. Batley, and Mr. Frank McClellan earns applause by his clever impersonation of the mad Physician, Dr. Millbank. Mr. Harry Playfair and Mr. Horace Kenny as Joe Webster and his accomplice, the Dodger, both contribute excellent character studies. Mr. Herbert Lloyd as Dicky Storm and Miss Daisy Meynard as Tina Torkington keep the audience in roars of laughter by their low comedy. Miss Vashti Wynne as Bessie Webster has a thorough grip of the character, and quickly wins the sympathy of the audience by her pathetic enactment of the rôle. Miss Doris Whyte is a prepossessing Elsie Cunningham, and the relentless Maud Villiers is strongly portrayed by Miss Olive Warne, whose stylish appearance and refined manner serve to intensify the spite and malevolence of the rôle. Miss Anita Playfair also renders good support, and the minor parts are satisfactorily interpreted.

THE FULHAM.

On Monday, March 22, the Musical Pantomimical Farce, entitled
"HIS MAJESTY'S GUESTS."

Mr. Fred Karno's company has been visiting Fulham with His Majesty's Guests, which entertainment is as mixed in character as its description would seem to imply. But it seems to find favour with considerable audiences. The fun of the piece pivots largely upon Mr. George Hestor as Sergeant Lightning, an eccentric policeman. Mr. Hestor is quite equal to the occasion, and never fails with repartee or business, and he is largely responsible for the flow of laughter. Mr. E. O. Freshwater does well as Lord Easem, and contributes one or two excellent songs in good style. Mr. C. Usher is quiet and effective as Mr. Miffin, and Mr. C. Griffiths is good as his nephew Harry. Mr. Richardson as Bunker, Mr. Sid Kearns as Mr. Minks, an impossible sort of curate, and Mr. S. Bolton as Fritz, the doorkeeper, show great ability in the acrobatic knockabout line, and Mr. Kearns further contributes some lively dances. Mr. S. Gosling as the butler also helps the business along. Miss Edith Ager makes a charming representative of Dolly Miffin, while Miss Kitty Brunton is vigorous and impressive as Miss Manley, a "new woman." Mr. Tom Manardo as Selina, the maid, is "put among the girls"; his make-up is excellent, and he aids Mr. Hestor and Mr. Griffiths in some smart business; Miss Florence Pragnell fills in the part of Miss Macherel satisfactorily. Miss Aggie Morris is a most able exponent of Lady Maud Easem. There are some good songs and choruses in the piece, notably a capital song and dance by the gang of burglars. The piece is handsomely mounted, and the dresses are very fine.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE, N.

On Monday, March 22, the Musical Comedy, in Two Acts, by Seymour Hicks, Music by Guy Jones, Lyrics by Arthur Wimperis, entitled
"THE GAY GORDONS."

Musical comedy forms the attraction at the Alexandra Theatre this week in the shape of Mr. Seymour Hicks's production of The Gay Gordons, which found considerable success on its production further West, a success that has since been largely added to elsewhere. The favour it has found is not to be wondered at, for it is one of the daintiest and prettiest specimens of its class, and far superior to many of its kind. Much, of course, depends on the representatives of Angus Graeme and Peggy Quainton, for to them falls the lion's share of the work and the responsibility of bringing matters to a successful issue. Fortunately, in the present instance two artists are at hand who are more than equal to all demands made upon them, and who work with unflagging energy and complete success throughout the piece. It would be difficult to conceive a more charming and captivating performance of Peggy Quainton than that given by Miss Madge Crichton, and Mr. Frank Lincoln plays Angus Graeme with a dash and virility and evident enjoyment that carry all before them. Mr. Tom Graves's eccentric and droll sketch of the showman Nervy Nat causes a good deal of amusement, and a very clever study of the showman's wife, Charlotte Siddons, comes from Miss Ida Laurie. The good work done by Mr. Edward Nainby is somewhat discounted by the extravagance of his make-up, which savours rather more of pantomime than musical comedy, with all its licence. A very finished and polished performance of Andrew Quainton is given by Mr. Ernest Ruston, and a vivacious and alert Victoria Siddons is found in Miss Mabel Dent. Others in a lengthy cast who share in the general success are Messrs. Norman Forrest, Mervyn Dane, Melville Florence, J. Cranston Neville, and Buchanan Wake; and Misses Emily Mellon, Gwynneth Hughes, and Norah Guiness. The play is excellently dressed and mounted, and more than a word of praise is due to the large and well-drilled chorus. The augmented orchestra is under the experienced direction of Mr. Arthur Spittle.

ELEPHANT AND CASTLE THEATRE.

On Monday, March 22, the Drama, entitled
"WHO IS SHE?"

The above very exciting drama, abundant with thrilling situations, is proving a great attraction here this week. Mr. E. Hill Miichelson (the author of the play) is responsible for a fine performance of the villainous Prince Bora; Mr. Graham Woods adopts an easy yet impressive style as the kind-hearted and loyal Prince Vladamir. Mr. Sinclair Holden in the character of Captain Arthur Gower is at his best as the nervous lover of Countess Ladori, a character undertaken with excellent results by Miss Alice Barber. Mr. Alfred Grenville gives a manly impersonation of the brave old soldier Sergeant Metroff, and Miss Marie Robson as the callous and revengeful Keta Noveitch provides an interesting study. Miss Violet Carlyle enacts the difficult and sympathetic rôle of the unknown woman Who is She? in an earnest and convincing manner. The part of the Little King is in the capable hands of Miss Mabel Ronald, and Miss Mary Collier is a decidedly taking maid as Sarette. The Chinaman Chang-Tee is played to advantage by Mr. Edward Swinton, and Mr. George Scully appears as Paul, the manservant. The drama is well dressed and staged.

THEATRE ROYAL, WOOLWICH.

On Monday, March 22, the Drama entitled
"THE WORLD AND THE WOMAN."

Mr. J. Rice Cassidy's company is appearing here this week in the above domestic drama. Written by L. C. Cassidy, the play is plentifully supplied with stirring situations, which are made the most of in the hands of a well-selected cast, and prove delectable morsels to the patrons of this house, who accord the drama a hearty reception. Mr. George H. Doyle sustains the rôle of Arthur Burleigh in an impressive manner, and delivers his lines with good effect. Mr. St. George Frere makes a capable Ludlow Burleigh, and scores well in the unsympathetic part of a rogue. Mr. J. Rice Cassidy, in the character of Tut Harding, offers a clever and diverting characterisation, which produces much laughter. Mr. Rolf Leslie as Terry O'Harris merits commendation for a sound impersonation. Mr. Henry Compton makes the most of his opportunities as Sir Francis Chalmers, and the same may be said of Mr. Frank Copland as the Hon. Willie. Mr. Carl Beechy is suitably placed as Hike. Old Robert has a good representative in Mr. R. Cockroft, and Mr. Stanley Wilford undertakes the part of Capt. Barclay. Mrs. J. Rice Cassidy submits an excellent study of Nelly, her acting being characterised by a judicious blending of pathos and lightness. Miss Amy McNeill makes a prominent figure of Lady Marion Chalmers. Miss M. Trevelyan is amusing as Libby, a Yorkshire servant. Gwendoline is adequately played by Miss Rose Hallas, and Miss Violet Parker acts well and affords much pleasure as Nina.

THE BROADWAY, NEW CROSS.

On Monday, March 22, the Play, entitled
"THE THIEF."

Mr. George Alexander's company, in the St. James's success, The Thief, is attracting large and well-pleased audiences this week. Mr. Rupert Lister makes a great hit by a very fine rendering of the part of Richard Chelford; Mr. Cyril Harcourt plays Raymond Leyton admirably; Mr. Owen Nares gives a delightfully fresh and youthful impersonation of Harry Leyton; Mr. Luke Forster submits an excellent performance of Mr. Protheroe; and the servant is well played by Mr. Bernard Stevens. Miss Marie Polini as Marise Chelford deserves the highest praise for her remarkably clever study, the great scene between husband and wife rousing the audience to enthusiasm. Miss Frances Leighton looks and acts well as Isabel Leyton. The play is charmingly dressed and lavishly mounted. It is preceded by a clever one-act piece, entitled The Nursery Governess, admirably acted by Mr. Charles King, Mr. Luke Forster, Miss Eileen Kerin, and Mr. Bernard Stevens. Mr. W. H. Griffiths is the general-manager of the company, and Mr. Bertram Iles, the local manager, looks well after the comfort of patrons.

A PANTOMIME SUPPER.

In order to celebrate the great success that has attended his pantomime of Red Riding Hood, at the Theatre Royal, Bristol, Mr. Ernest Carpenter on Wednesday night entertained the principal members of the pantomime company at supper, at the Crown and Dove Hotel, Bridewell-street, where the guests were, as usual, catered for in first-class style by Mr. David Crombie. In the unavoidable absence of Mr. Ernest Carpenter in London, Mr. H. C. Alty, the resident-manager, presided, and proved a most genial and courteous chairman. He was supported by, amongst others, Mr. Horace Livermore, Mr. Sid Macaire, Mr. George Chapman, Mr. F. S. Green, Mr. E. Jacobs, Mr. Frank Victor, Mr. Scott-Barrie, Mr. J. May, Mr. E. Walker, Mr. I. Harvey, Mr. Frank Hemming, Mr. W. Fowler, Miss Ethel Hall, Miss Daisie Dennis, Miss Margaret Webster, and Miss Nellie Danvers. After the toast of "The King," submitted by the President, came "Bristol Theatre Royal," proposed by Mr. Horace Livermore, and responded to, in suitable terms, by Mr. H. C. Alty. "Pantomime Artists," given by Mr. I. Harvey, came next, Mr. Frank Hemming being the responder. "The Ladies" was a congenial theme for Mr. Sid Macaire, and Mr. K. Scott-Barrie and Miss E. Hall replied. "Visitors," by Mr. E. Jacobs, was acknowledged by Mr. George Chapman. "The Chairman" was submitted by Mr. F. S. Green, and Mr. Alty replied. "The Host, Mr. Crombie," was given in felicitous terms by Mr. Alty; and Mr. Ivor Harvey submitted "Mr. Horace Livermore," who suitably responded. The proceedings were rendered additionally enjoyable by the splendid vocal and other contributions by professional members of the company, all of which were thoroughly appreciated, particularly Mr. Scott-Barrie's "specialities." The proceedings were pleasant and harmonious.

"THE EARLY WORM" AT DALSTON.

Allan Marchmount .....Mr. Lionel Rignold
George Duke of Tadcaster
Mr. T. Warburton Gamble
Lord Steyne .....Mr. Frank Graham
Sir William Mayton .....Mr. Raymond Dudley
Captain Baxter .....Mr. H. W. Pierre
Tom .....Mr. Eric H. Albury
Boatman .....Mr. Donald Dawson
Sailor .....Mr. Robert Melrose
Naylor .....Mr. Geoffrey Ellis
Sybil Annesley .....Miss Fyfe Alexander
Lady Steyne .....Miss Marie Daltra

Mr. Lionel Rignold's company in Mr. F. Lonsdale's farcical comedy, The Early Worm, has met with a most flattering reception this week at the Dalston Theatre. Of course, it need hardly be said that this is mainly due to Mr. Lionel Rignold's laughable enactment of the rôle of Allan Marchmont, otherwise known as the Early Worm. The piece was first produced at Wyndham's Theatre on September 7 last, and we then dealt fully with the machinations of the Duke of Tadcaster, and his friend Lord Steyne, and of the Worm. Sybil Annesley, an heiress, and the Duke are in love with each other, and the girl, in order to make the young nobleman jealous, arranges a pretty little scheme whereby she advances to Allan Marchmount, a penniless bounder, a sum of £20,000 to buy her fiancé's yacht the Firefly. The bargain having been concluded, Marchmount invites Sybil and Lady Steyne on board as his guests, and in the second act, in the cabin of the yacht, everybody arrives. The fun is kept going by the rivals—the Worm and the Duke—making endeavours to secure the favour of the heiress. The repentant Duke bribes the steward to fall overboard, and permit himself to be rescued; but the Worm has become a little previous with a precisely similar ruse, and it is he that wins the coveted reputation for bravery by plunging in and saving the well-paid victim. The Duke, who, has been so neatly foiled, has no scruples about locking his rival in the yacht cabin and leaving him to his fate; but the Worm dives through a porthole, and turns up to dinner in the last act with a remarkable tale of his adventures at sea. As a matter of fact, he has been picked up by a boatman after an immersion of two minutes. In the end the Worm, realising that Sybil loves the Duke and that there is no chance for him, behaves quite like a good sort of fellow, and even endeavours to shield the two noblemen over a rather compromising meeting with two young ladies. However, there is forgiveness all round, and as the curtain falls all the people are on the best of terms with each other.

One could scarcely imagine a more intensely humorous characterisation than that of Mr. Lionel Rignold of the Worm, and the success of the production is his success. Nothing could be more entertaining than the quips and oddities and mannerisms with which he imbues the part, and which have in the past, in other farcical rôles, won for Mr. Rignold such praise from the critics and such admiration from his audiences. So he impersonates the ridiculous, good-natured bounder with an abundance of fun and inimitable byplay that are simply irresistible in their mirth-provoking qualities. With such a part Mr. Rignold naturally has his hands full, and it is, therefore, highly creditable to him that he should contrive to portray the Worm's laughable absurdities in a sustained fashion throughout the three acts. Mr. Rignold scores heavily in every scene in which he appears. Miss Marie Daltra is seen in a really capital character study as the fault-finding Lady Steyne, and Miss Fyfe Alexander is most engaging as Sybil Annesley. The Duke of Tadcaster has a breezy, light-hearted representative in Mr. T. Warburton Gamble, and Mr. Frank Graham is distinctly good as the somewhat larkish Lord Steyne. Mr. Eric H. Albury cuts a most ludicrous figure as the despondent cabin-boy Tom; and Mr. Raymond Dudley as Sir William Mayton, Mr. H. W. Pierre as Captain Baxter and Mr. Donald Dawson as a boatman, submit commendable embodiments. The play, which is excellently mounted and staged, is preceded by the one-act piece by E. Vivian Edmonds, entitled The Wedding Morn, in which Mr. Raymond Dudley as Mark Lindon, K.C., Mr. Eric H. Albury as Cecil Lindon and Miss Christine Jenson as Mrs. Jowett are responsible for some interesting and able acting. Mr. Sydney R. Palfrey is the able acting manager for Mr. Rignold, and Mr. Eric H. Albury performs the duties of stage manager.

"EVERYMAN" AT THE CORONET.

Liberal encouragement is given to Mr. Robert Arthur's enterprise in reviving the beautiful allegory Everyman, and a full house witnessed the first of a series of performances at the Coronet on Wednesday afternoon. The play, which was produced under the stage direction of Mr. Wm. Poel, has a sumptuous setting, and is treated by the performers with reverent care. The "mystery," which is intended to exalt the Catholic doctrine of confession, may serve as a wholesome and edifying exercise for the penitential season, while its picturesque scenes and incidents appeal strongly to the dramatic student. Since its reintroduction to the London stage some years ago the play has enthralled audiences both in England and America, and it may be regarded as easily first among the "mysteries" which have found their way to the platform in recent times.

The names of the performers in the present revival were not identified with the characters on the programme, but one recognised with pleasure in the impersonation of the arduous rôle of Everyman that clever and resourceful actress Miss Lucy Wilson, whose emotional power and elocutionary ability were employed with never-failing effect. The terror of Everyman when he learns of his impending doom, his abortive appeals to his friends for assistance, his submission to the advice of Knowledge and Good Dedes, and his eventual passage through tribulation to the celestial sphere were portrayed with unerring skill, and exercised a profound impression. All the other parts were distinguished by care and ability, and the distinctness enunciation in every case was agreeably apparent. The sonorous voice of the actor who represented the Adonai was invaluable in the impressive lines he has to deliver, and a contrast was furnished in the rôle of Death, whose rapid monotone was very whimsical. Felaship was represented briskly, and his lines delivered by an actor with a remarkably melodious voice; and Cosyn and Kyndrede were equally well represented. Good Dedes was sympathetically treated by a clever lady, who spoke her lines in a refrain curiously resembling part of the air in the prison scene in Il Trovatore. Knowledge, too, had a gentle and dignified exponent, and the four young ladies who represented Strength, Dyscresion, Five-Wyttes, and Beaute were all comely and well-spoken. The names of the artists taking part in the production, in addition to Miss Wilson, were Misses Cora Busch, Hilda Fletcher, Mary Large, Ernita Lascelles, Isabella Merson, and Ruth Power, and Messrs. Richard Evans, Arthur Hands, Bevan Lorrimer, W. Nugent Monck, Herbert Ranson, Allan Smith, and Alfred Steerman.

An "Ave Maria" was exquisitely sung at the beginning by a lady with a cultivated soprano, and the incidental choruses were rendered in finished style. The performance is to be repeated at the Fulham Theatre this afternoon, at the Kennington on Wednesday next, and at the Coronet on April 7 and 8.

Mr. Editor,—Sir,—May I correct a slight error in to-day's issue. My name is Clive, not Philip, Currie.—Yours faithfully, Clive Currie, Actors' Association, 353, Strand, W.C. March 20.

ACTORS' ASSOCIATION.

A meeting of the council of the Actors' Association was held at 353, Strand, on Tuesday. Mr. Robson Paige was in the chair, and amongst those present were Mr. H. W. Mote (honorary solicitor), Messrs. C. Hayden Coffin, Richard A. Greene, Clive Currie, F. J. Arlton, J. Sebastian Smith, Langford Reed, and Mr. Hubert Blount (secretary).

The secretary read letters from two members tendering their resignations as members of the A.A., and the secretary received instructions to write and ask for their subscriptions for the current year before their resignations can be accepted, and expressing the hope that they will reconsider their decision.

Mr. Mote then read the resolution which he was asked to draw up with reference to the council sitting after a quorum ceased to exist, and which is as follows:—"That a management committee be appointed, all members of the council being ex-officio members of such committee, and that the duties of such committee be to deal with all matters of the weekly agenda when a quorum of the council is not present, three members of such committee to form a quorum." This was proposed by Richard A. Greene, seconded by Mr. Hayden Coffin, and carried, and instructions were given to put same in Standing Order Book.

Mr. Arlton read the Finance Committee's report, which the council adopted.

The following nominations were made: Edward Lewis, proposer C. F. Collings, seconder E. Vassall-Vaughan; Joan Durant, proposer Rita Sponti, seconder Clarence Derwent. Miss Dorothy Rundell was elected a member of the A.A.

Mr. Hayden Coffin proposed that Mr. Raleigh be elected Deputy to the V.A.F. to support Mr. Harcourt's Bill. On the proposal of Mr. Coffin, seconded by Mr. Greene, the following resolution was passed:—"That Mr. Raleigh be authorised to represent the A.A. as Deputy to the V.A.F. to support Mr. Harcourt's Bill so far as it effects sketches," and the secretary received instructions to write to Miss Mathews thanking her for her letter, and inclosing a copy of the above resolution.

Mr. Paige proposed that a circular, drawing attention to the resolution passed at the last general meeting and other matters of importance the council had in hand, be sent out with the whip. Mr. Paige read a letter from Mr. Cecil Raleigh, together with a draft of a slip which the latter had drawn up, and the secretary received instructions to have this copied and sent to every member of the council, asking them to send in their comments and additions before Tuesday next.

Mr. J. Garrett Todd was reinstated.

Mr. Raleigh's letter of the 16th inst. was again discussed, and the secretary received instructions to reply. With regard to the abolition of the agency fee, the council thought the matter required a larger council than the present one, and was therefore deferred, and with regard to the editing of the minutes this was entirely in the hands of the chairman, and that nothing further can be done in the matter.

The secretary reported that he had heard that no reply had been received by the A.U. to the invitation of the members of the A.A. to attend the A.U. debates every Tuesday, and the secretary thereupon communicated with Mr. Blackmore informing him that a letter had been sent on the 10th inst., and received a letter from Mr. Blackmore to the effect that the letter-box belonging to the A.U. had been robbed, and that the said letter was amongst those purloined.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—Surely after recent events at the Waldorf and Aldwych Theatres every member of our calling will join the Actors' Association and help to support the following resolution, which was carried by an enormous majority at the last general meeting:—"That the council be instructed to exert during the ensuing year their best endeavours to obtain for all members of our calling a payment when in an engagement of not less than £2 per week, a payment for rehearsals, and payment for all matinées."—Yours faithfully,
ROBSON PAIGE.

353, Strand, W.C., March 24.

ACTORS' UNION.

The usual committee meeting of the Actors' Union took place at 49, Bedford-street, on the 19th inst. The following members were present:—Messrs. Frank Gerald, Jerrold Heather, J. W. Braithwaite, Walter L. Rignold, Henry Bedford, A. Maitland Stapley and Kenneth Blackmore (secretary).

The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. The secretary was instructed to write to a member asking for full particulars with reference to a bogus manager. A special committee meeting will be called for the purpose of discussing the rules as revised by Messrs. Gerald and Blackmore, after which a general meeting will be called to place before the members such revisions as are approved of by the committee for adoption.

The secretary reported that letters containing postal orders addressed to the office have not been received, and that he had placed the matter in the hands of the police. Mr. Heather proposed, and Mr. Stapley seconded, that those members whose orders had been cashed be credited with the amount of their orders.

Messrs. Arthur Watts and Philip Campbell-Gilbert and Miss Madeleine Maude were elected members.

The following are the committee for the Actors' Union Athletic Club:—Misses May Conrade and Nelly Howitt, and Messrs. A. George Fry, Fred Chesham, Watty Brunton, Frank Harvey, Monte Maitland, Langford Reed (hon. secretary), and Walter L. Rignold (hon. treasurer). A meeting of the above committee was held on Tuesday last at the offices of the Union and Miss Conrade proposed, and Miss Howitt seconded, that the colours of the club be Actors' Union blue of the shade of their 1907 stamp.

Mr. Maitland proposed, and Mr. Brunton seconded, that all preliminary arrangements be left in the hands of Messrs. Rignold and Reed.

Mr. Rignold proposed, and Mr. Fry seconded, that the subscription to the club be as follows:—Member for full season, 5s.; member for half season, 2s. 6d. (six matches to constitute a half season); non-playing members, 1s.

Mr. Rignold proposed, and Mr. Fry seconded, that an advertisement be sent to the Sporting Life and any other papers that may be deemed necessary for the use of a private cricket ground.

Mr. Fry proposed, and Mr. Chesham seconded, that half-season members be entitled to become full-season members on further payment of 2s. 6d. at any time.

Mr. Rignold proposed, and Mr. Chesham seconded, that three members of the committee shall constitute a quorum.

The treasurer reported that a donation of 15s. had been received from Miss Conrade.

The committee wish to inform the members that Mr. George Alexander has consented to become the president of the club, and that Messrs. W. H. Bulbeck and Frank Lincoln have accepted the position of vice-presidents.

Members who are desirous of joining the club are asked to send their applications to Mr. Langford Reed, hon. secretary A.U. Athletic Club, 49, Bedford-street, Strand, W.C.

THE DRAMATIC DEBATERS.

As a result of a recent competition among the members of the society known as the Dramatic Debaters, four new one-act plays were produced on Sunday evening at the Court Theatre. None of the pieces was remarkable from a point of view of dramatic authorship, although each was extremely well acted.

The opening play was

"IN THE SILENCE OF THE VELDT,"
by Horace Collins.

Basil Thornton .....MR. A. HOLMES-GORE
Muriel Thornton
MISS BEATRICE FORBES-ROBERTSON
Jim Strong .....MR. PHILIP KNOX
Jack Hasler .....MR. R. HENDERSON BLAND

The scene is a prospector's camp in a kopje in the veldt, South Africa, and here Basil and Muriel Thornton, who have not been very long married, are happy in the possession of each other's love. But when another prospector, Jack Hasler, is brought to the tent suffering from black water fever, Basil becomes acquainted with an unfortunate page of his wife's history. In days gone by she had loved Jack Hasler, who now in his delirium, confesses to the wrong he did her, and refers to the child that was born. Then he passes to another world. There is an angry scene between Basil and Muriel, the former threatening to leave her; but, in the end, partly through the kindly offices of a friend, Jim Strong, there is a reconciliation. Miss Beatrice Forbes-Robertson struck a deep note of appealing pathos as Muriel; and Mr. A. Holmes-Gore as the husband, Mr. Philip Knox as Jim Strong, and Mr. R. Henderson Bland as the sick man, submitted most effective characterisations.

"JENKINS' WIDOW,"
by Priscilla Craven (Mrs. Teignmouth Shore).

Nurse Burton .....MISS MARY BARTON
Mrs. Wilks .....MISS CLARE GREET
Rev. Oswald Courtenay..MR. RICHARD HATTERAS
Lizzie Jenkins .....MISS SYDNEY FAIRBROTHER
Bill Jenkins .....MR. FRANK ESMOND

To put this story briefly, Bill Jenkins, a Covent Garden porter, is seriously ill, and knows that he has not many hours to live. Before he dies, however, he wants to see what his wife will look like in the widow's habiliments she will don at his funeral, and he insists that he shall be buried in a nice, genteel sort of way. So Lizzie Jenkins borrows a mourning costume, and duly appears in it before Bill, who expresses his delight thereat, and shortly afterwards expires. Miss Sydney Fairbrother furnished an exceedingly clever portraiture as Mrs. Jenkins; and Mr. Frank Esmond as the husky-voiced Bill Jenkins sustained a difficult rôle in a manner that did him infinite credit. Miss Clare Greet as Mrs. Wilks and Miss Mary Barton as a Nurse, submitted interesting and well-acted minor characterisations.

"THE HOUSE OF THE TRAITOR,"
Adapted from the French story, "Mateo Falcone," of Prosper Merimée, by Rathmell Wilson.

Fortunato .....MISS MURIEL VARNA
Gianetto Sanpiero .....MR. ESMÉ PERCY
Tiodoro Gamba .....MR. WILLIAM FAZAN
A Soldier .....MR. E. MARSDEN
Giuseppa .....MISS FRANCES DILLON
Mateo Falcone .....MR. R. HENDERSON BLAND

In the yard of Mateo Falcone's house on the Corsican plateau poor Gianetto Sanpiero, who is being hunted by the soldiers, takes refuge. He is hidden in an adjoining shed by Fortunato, the young son of Mateo. When the soldiers arrive Fortunato at first refuses to give any information as to Gianetto's whereabouts, but betrays his trust on being offered a watch and chain. Gianetto is immediately secured, and the soldiers march off with their prisoner. A few minutes later Mateo denounces his son as the first traitor of the family; and, in spite of his wife's entreaties, takes him away from her sight for a few minutes. A shot is heard, and the father returns with the dead body in his arms. Each one of the characters was ably represented, Miss Muriel Varna being boyish and natural as Fortunato, Mr. Esmé Percy presenting a pitiable picture of the hunted Gianetto, Mr. R. Henderson Bland stern and unbending as the father, Mateo Falcone, and Miss Frances Dillon affectionate and pleading as the mother.

"THE OTHER TENTH OF THE LAW,"
by Edith A. Browne.

Miriam Hardy .....MISS KATE RORKE
Paul Ray .....MR. A. HOLMES-GORE
Harry Hardy .....MR. CYRIL BRUCE
Princess Cerica .....MISS MABEL KNOWLES

It is not necessary to enter with detail into the story of this playlet. It concerns a mother's desire to keep her son from going to sea, how she nearly frustrates his intentions in that respect, and how, at the last moment, she repents. Miss Kate Rorke was seen in an admirable study of the distressed mother, who dreads the thought of the dangers inseparable from a seafaring life. Miss Mabel Knowles' emobdiment of a gypsy (Princess Cerica) was distinctly clever; and Mr. Cyril Bruce as the lad who wants to go to sea and Mr. A. Holmes-Gore as his uncle, suitably enacted their rôles.

AMUSEMENTS IN BARCELONA.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

BARCELONA, MARCH 8.—The Soriano is, as usual, doing good business. This hall is the oldest in Barcelona, and many of the best English artists have been introduced to Spain by its management. Miss Morrisini's troupe of wolf-hounds are admirably trained, and their powers of jumping are extraordinary. The Piccaninnies, a number of coloured ladies and gentlemen, are excellent. The Apache Dance calls for great praise, and reflects credit upon Les Florence-Macherini, a South American couple.

"THE MERRY WIDOW" is being rehearsed at the Nuevo Teatro.

THE Circo Barcelonos has an attractive programme. Montreal and his negro give a highly-finished amusing performance. Miss Daisy French, unicyclist, does an acceptable turn. Lina Bocaris appears in a Salome dance. Parisette, a Parisian star, and La Bella Deodima, are applauded for their classical poses.

BARCELONA, MARCH 20.—This week a new law comes into action here that no woman under the age of sixteen shall upon any condition be engaged at a music hall in Barcelona, and all below the age of twenty-three must have the verbal consent of their parents or legal guardians. Proprietors are forbidden to lodge artists upon the premises, and there must be no private boxes or rooms to which the general public have not at all times access.

MESSRS. SORIANO will close the Soriano on the 28th to facilitate the alterations and improvements that it has been decided to make there. Cromwell and Dood, comedy acrobats, are here, and their reception has been all that could be desired. The Nine Piccaninnies should have finished last week, but the management prevailed upon them to stay for a further fifteen days. This talented troupe will make their first appearance in England, under a two-years' contract, in September. The Eclaire Company is here, one of their number performing upon a trapeze fixed to a motor-cycle going at full speed on a teacup-track. Luis and Luis add fresh laurels to their former successes; and Matulla, Japanese magician, completes an attractive programme.

THE performance of An Englishman's Home at the Prince's Theatre, Bristol, on Monday, was under the patronage of the Duke of Beaufort, the High Sheriff of Bristol, and other distinguished people. The theatre was gaily decorated with flags, &c., and the audience was very enthusiastic.

"THE THREE BARROWS."

A Play in Four Acts, by Charles McEvoy, Produced for the First Time on any stage at the Gaiety Theatre, Manchester, on Monday, March 22.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

The title of Mr. Charles McEvoy's new play, The Three Barrows, which was produced on Monday last at the Gaiety Theatre, Manchester, is not conspicuously significant of the theme. It is simply the name of a farm at which some of the action takes place. The action is concerned chiefly with one character, namely Victor Meux, who is quite recognisable as an offshoot of the fancy that created David Ballard, in the author's more successful play of that name. Meux is a rising young barrister, who is engaged to Clara, the daughter of Sir George Ossler. What his real feelings are toward her is never known, but it seems certain that the girl has a deep affection for him, though her character and actions are not particularly of the kind that go to the making of heroic figures in drama. Meux, however, has seen the half-gipsy niece of Edward Frith, of the Three Barrows Farm, and has been so affected by the spell of her beauty and innocence that we find him actually lodging at the farm, unknown to his fiancée, at the time the play begins. A vapid acquaintance, Geoffrey Parker, gives this bit of news away in Sir George's drawing-room, and naturally Clara is piqued. Jealousy and nervousness take possession of her; the attraction at the farm is made sufficiently explicit by the admissions of the fatuous Geoffrey. A politic move on the part of Meux, who knows he has been seen by Parker that day, is to make his appearance at Balking Grange, Sir George's residence, without delay. Then we begin to understand him; he lacks character, and is not averse from lies and evasions. After this, nothing will satisfy Clara but a visit to the farm, so that she may see for herself what is the probable state of affairs there. We are shown the relations existing between the beautiful Anna and the invertebrate Meux; he has taught her to read and write, and, incidentally, to love him; while, on her part, she has unconsciously brought him to a quandary which bids fair to shake up, for good or bad, such emotional deeps as are in him. Clara's intrusion is productive of nothing of much moment, beyond a further intimation of the truth and an outbreak of bad temper on the part of Meux, who is apparently not clever enough to apply his strictures to himself, though he seems to be more deserving of them than anyone else. Then comes the great scene. It occurs within a barn, during a thunderstorm. Meux brings Anna in for shelter. Feeling inclined, in these circumstances, to talk to her about love, he also locks the door. He talks a good deal about love; but Anna's instinct is against the situation, which is quite gratuitously suggestive, and, besides, she has given her word to Clara that she will not interfere. The position becomes awkward when Anna's brother climbs over the wall with a gun, and for a moment it seems delightfully certain that Meux is going to be shot dead; but the latter saves himself by strenuously persuading Anna to confess her love, and by declaring wholeheartedly his intention and desire to marry her. All this accepted, the obligation is laid upon Meux to go straightway and tell the truth to Clara Ossler. This, however, is so manly and honest a course of action that our noble lover almost trembles at the knees at the thought of such an ordeal. Nevertheless, preceded by Anna's brother, he goes; and a pretty spectacle he makes. Welcomed by Sir George and his daughter, he simply stands there, sloppy, lugubrious, and unable to express himself, and, in two minutes after Sir George has left the young people alone together, he has given way to the deliberate enticements of Clara, vowed that he loves her "more than anything else on God's earth," and is committed to her for life. Clara is by no means to be congratulated. As for Robert Frith, who is waiting in the house to see him, all he has to do now is to convey to Anna the news of her lover's secession. It is to be hoped that Anna enjoyed herself later, when her senses came back to her; but we are not told anything more. The curtain descends on this. Assuming that Mr. McEvoy's intention was to depict Victor Meux as he appears in the play, it is hard to understand why he should have thought it worth while. Mr. B. Iden Payne, who played the part, is a good actor, but it is a pity he should be called upon to ask for the serious interest of an audience in such a rôle. Clara Ossler is also deficient in those elements which appeal to the higher sensibilities of an audience; but Miss Hilda Bruce Potter made her superficially quite a charming creature. Anna is evidently meant to be more heroic than any of them; her mind and actions shine out against the shadier ones of the other two concerned; but the situations are not big enough to prove much, and even the accomplished acting of Miss Mona Limerick could not put real poignancy into them. The card party at the beginning of the last act is very amusing. This is Mr. Edward Landor's chance to score as Sir George; and even the "dudish" Geoffrey Parker, ordinarily a foolish fellow, becomes briefly entertaining, because here Mr. Basil Dean also has an opening for his talent. Miss Mary Saker played the secondary part of Louise Parker with nice discretion; and a word of praise should be added for Mr. Lewis Casson as Robert Frith; while among the remainder Mr. Charles Bibby as Joseph Picter was notable as having not enough to do of a kind suitable to his fine gifts as a comedian.

ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

The first item in the college concert on Thursday evening, March 18, was Beethoven's Quartet for Strings in F, of which a successful performance was given by Mr. Sidney Bostock, Miss Dorothy Devin, Mr. Frank Bridge, and Mr. Felix Salmond. Richard Strauss's Sonata for Piano and Violoncello proved an interesting feature in the programme, the opening movement, Allegro con brio, being admirably contrasted with a somewhat sombre but melodious Andante. These two movements and a lively finale were cleverly played by Miss Marjorie Adam and Miss Ellen Bartlett. Included also in the concert was Liszt's difficult organ solo, Fugue with Introduction, "Ad nos, ad salutarem undam," skilfully executed by Mr. Alfred Millard, who received a most hearty recall. Two English songs, "In Linden Lea," artistically arranged by R. Vaughan Williams, and "The Sea Wrack" (Hamilton Harty), were sung by Miss Marie Wright with delightful freshness and purity of tone. It was also a pleasure to listen to the fine voice of Mr. Jamieson Dodds, although he would have been heard to greater advantage in a song of more contrast and less monotony than Schumann's "Stirb, Lieb und Freand." Miss Jean Fyans sang "Es muss was Wunderbares sein," and the concert ended with a very creditable performance of Brahms' Quintet for Piano and Strings in F minor, by Miss Ellen Edwards, Mr. Sidney Bostock, Miss Dorothy Devin, Mr. Frank Bridge, and Mr. Felix Salmond. The accompanist was Miss Constance Stockbridge.

THE DRAMA IN PARIS.

"LA CLAIRIERE."

Play, in Four Acts, by MM. Maurice Donnay and Lucien Descaves, Revived at the Théâtre Antoine on March 12.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

PARIS, MARCH 14.—The revival of La Clairière at the Théâtre Antoine was important, inasmuch as the gifted authors have not only condensed the work from five to four acts, but the plot, too, has been materially altered. As will be remembered, La Clairière is the name given to a Communist colony in the South of France, founded by Rouffieu, a tailor, who, having inherited a little money and a piece of land, has put into practice Fourier's precepts of phalansterianism. At La Clairière everything is done on the Communist principle, and at first things go swimmingly. The members of the little community are even strong enough to admit in their midst the victims of social hypocrisy. Thus, Hélène, a young schoolmistress, seduced and abandoned by the son of the mayor of the town, finds shelter in La Clairière, where she is entrusted with the education of the children. Jean Alleyras, a doctor, and his mistress also join the association. After a while, however, it becomes painfully apparent that the new association is anything but stable, for human passions will always make themselves felt. One of the members leaves because he wants to make money for himself. Another, addicted to drink, objects to remain sober, on principle. But it is a love-drama that gives the death-blow to La Clairière. Adèle, Rouffieu's wife, is madly in love with Collonges, an upright workman, and Collonges himself has lost his heart to the young schoolmistress Hélène. Adèle persecutes Collonges with her unwelcome attentions, and, mad with rage because she receives nothing but rebuffs, she denounces Collonges to the authorities for not having performed his military duties. Collonges, warned in time, is compelled to run away; whilst the incensed Rouffieu, hearing of his wife's scandalous behaviour, turns her out of the house. It is the end of La Clairière. The work, in its new form, was very well acted. M. Gémier again impersonated Collonges with his usual skill; M. Janvier played Rouffieu, created by M. Antoine; M. Marchal has replaced M. Janvier in the part of le père Nu-Tête; Mlle. Cassive has succeeded Mlle. Nau in the rôle of Adèle; Mlle. Van Doren as Hélène did not make us forget Mlle. Suzanne Desprès, who supplied such a telling picture of the luckless schoolmistress. In fact, Mlle. Van Doren did not at all show herself to advantage in that character.

"GRELUCHON,"

Comedy, in Four Acts, by M. Maurice Sergine, Produced at the Athénée on March 17.

M. Maurice Sergine is a young author, and Le Greluchon, the four-act comedy produced at the Athénée, is his maiden effort. The plot is flimsy, but the work on the whole is amusing, and met with a good reception. The story is as follows:—Francine, an actress, is the mistress of Sathonay, an amateur painter, and they are introduced to us in a studio where a revue is being rehearsed that is to be played at one of the fashionable clubs. Francine and Sathonay have led a regular life in its irregularity, with no excessive emotions, inasmuch as Francine is a woman of moderate temperament. In this studio Francine makes the acquaintance of Gaston Lagarde, who becomes the third member in the Francine-Sathonay ménage, and eventually holds the post of senior partner in the concern. But he is unsuited for this exalted position. He becomes irritable, the charm is broken; and it then dawns upon the ménage that they were only happy whilst Gaston was the "Greluchon," i.e., the lover in an unofficial capacity. And it may be remarked here that "Greluchon" is an old eighteenth-century word which in the course of years has degenerated into the unlovely word "rigolo." The fault in the piece is that the principal personages sometimes fail to interest us. On the other hand, the author presents to us Pauline Delanoy, a curious type, that stands out prominently. Pauline, an elderly woman, started life under brilliant auspices. Possessed of a splendid voice, and a pupil of the Conservatoire, she would have become a great prima donna; but the plainness of her features wrecked her career, for no composer had the courage to entrust a rôle to such a plain-featured girl. And so she blossomed into a kind of manicure, pedicure, and confidente to ladies of the theatrical profession. Sinking lower and lower, she finally acts as intermediary in "love affairs," not always of the cleanest kind. Yet poor Pauline feels happy in her self-imposed mission. Having never inspired love herself, she delights in favouring the affaires de cœur of her more fortunate sisters.

AT the Sarah-Bernhardt Theatre L'Aiglon is once more having a tremendous success. The takings average £360.

THE Comédie-Française announces for the 24th of next month the farewell performance of Mlle. Dudley. The talented actress made her début at the house of Molière in Rome vaincue in 1876. She created Anne de Kerviller, Les Maucroix, La Reine Juana, Le Fils de l'Aretin, Frédégonde, and appeared in various rôles in the classical répertoire. Mlle. Dudley was made Sociétaire in 1883.

AT the Opéra-Comique Iphigénie en Tauride will be revived in the course of next week, with Mme. Rose Caron in the name-rôle.

THE London Press frequently makes mistakes in respect to the penalties to be paid to authors by Paris theatrical managers who have failed to produce works accepted by them. These penalties are £40 for each act. If, however, the work has been put into rehearsal the author can claim £400.

PARIS, THURSDAY, March 25.—We have had two little premières this week at the Théâtre Michel. The first, La Secousse, was specially written for Mlle. Trouhanowa, the Russian dancer, famous for her diamonds, by the side of which poor Otéro's precious stones are nothing but little pebbles. You can guess what the plot can be of a work written under those conditions! We are in a "cabinet particulier" of a night restaurant in St. Petersburg. A man in evening dress, with lack-lustre eyes and bloated features, is lying on the sofa. Only a half-tipsy Grand Duke could present such a sorry spectacle. Nor are we mistaken; for the fellow bears that exalted title. The head waiter, who busies himself about the room, tries all he can to rouse the Imperial guest's energies by giving him a glowing description of all the beautiful ladies appearing in a ballet performed in a theatre a few houses further down in the same street; but in vain. The gentleman, spiritless and limp, does not stir. Finally, the waiter mentions Mlle. Trouhanowa, the great dancer, whereupon the Grand Duke gives a sign of life and expresses the desire to see the artist. A few minutes later the lady is introduced. She enters in a gorgeous toilette, and the waiter discreetly withdraws. If we were wise we would do the same, but curiosity prompts us to remain. Mlle. Trouhanowa then divests herself of the greater part of her garments, and starts her dance. The Imperial sinner becomes electrified, and—the rest need not be told. There is little chance of the work being produced on a London stage.

THE second piece was Plumcock et Poilowski, by MM. Maurice de Féraudy (son of the well-known actor) and Félix Puget, who, to suit the taste of the frequenters of that house, have also made a liberal use of the cayenne box. Plumcock is not an Englishman, as the name vaguely implies, but a fat Belgian. He starts on a short journey, and is imprudent enough to leave his wife at home, the pretty but flighty Margot, under the care of their equally flighty maid Annette. The moment Plumcock has turned his back Margot starts off to meet her "friend"; but Plumcock has missed his train, and returns unexpectedly. Annette, hearing her master's key in the lock, then takes an heroic resolve. In order to save her mistress she switches off the light, and takes that lady's place in the conjugal four-poster. Plumcock notices nothing; but a few minutes later his wife enters the house accompanied by Poilowski, a gipsy fiddler in the Rigo style, with hands as black as his oily hair. The play does not end here, but there is no necessity to relate the scenes that follow.

THE anniversary of the first performance of Faust, produced fifty years ago, was duly celebrated at the Opéra. The work was performed for the 1,336th time, and Gounod's children, M. Jean Gounod and the Baroness de Lassus, were present in the directorial box. Among the spectators the only person who had assisted at the première was old Barbier, who boasts having heard the opera no less than 1,336 times. On the other hand, I noticed several people—many of them strangers—who followed the action booklet in hand, which shows that to a certain section of the public Faust is still a novelty. Contrary to what is generally believed, Gounod's early career was by no means successful. Born in 1818, he was past thirty before he earned his first five-franc piece, paid to him by publisher on the understanding that a well-known artist would sing the song of which Gounod had brought the MS. As to Faust, Gounod had the greatest difficulty in finding a publisher willing to launch it. When the opera saw the footlights on March 19, 1859, it met with a splendid reception, although the critics were not unanimous in their praise as regards the work and its production. One man wrote: "Marguerite is a girl of the people. Why then does Mme. Miolan-Carvalho impersonate her in a beautiful dress with a long train? Goethe would have roared had he seen her masquerading about the stage in that manner." As to Paul de Saint-Victor, the famous critic, he takes the management severely to task for the way in which the first act was staged. "Faust's study," he wrote, "could only have been a room such as Rembrandt depicted it in his famous painting in the Louvre museum—the home of the thinker, the scientist. Instead of a mysterious cell, the Opéra management show us Faust seated in a huge shop filled with curious-looking instruments, like a dealer in secondhand rubbish."

AT the Comédie-Française the principal rôles in Honneur et l'Argent will be played by M. Leitner, M. Alexandre, and Mmes. Lara and Maille. Written in 1853, Ponsard's work ran 200 nights. When it was revived some fifteen years ago Mlle. Reichemberg played the rôle that will now be held by Mlle. Maille.

AT the Ambigu there will be a change in the cast of L'Assommoir, which is to be revived at that house. The rôle of Coupeau had been assigned to M. Jean Coquelin, but the deaths of his father and uncle have preyed so much on his mind that his medical advisers have ordered him a complete rest. M. Decori, therefore, will replace him; and the other rôles will be taken by Mme. Léonie Yahne, Mme. Desclauzas, Mlle. Alice Barton, and MM. Galipaux, Paul Fugère, Dieudonné, André Hall, and Dean.

"DINGLEY DELL; OR, A GLIMPSE OF THE IMMORTALS."

Comic Opera, in Three Acts, Written by Edwin Fagg, Music by L. D. C. Thomas and C. Wright, Produced at the Theatre Royal, Bath, on Thursday, March 25.

The author and composers of this new comic opera, all of whom are resident Bathonians, have gone to a period infrequently exploited. The play and characters are taken from the "Pickwick Papers," and deal chiefly around the personages of Jingle, Tupman, and Miss Wardle.

Act I. opens with the members of the Pickwick Club assembled in the courtyard at the White Hart Inn, just after the decision on the famous trial of its leader. Allegiance is sworn to Mr. Pickwick that all remain bachelors, and war is declared upon widows, under Rule 15 of Club Law. This places Winkle in an awkward position, as he has a special license in his pocket to marry Arabella. A company of strolling players arrive on the scene, including Jingle, whom Mr. Pickwick befriends, and who also becomes a great favourite with all. He borrows from everybody he can, and makes up his mind to oust Tupman in Miss Wardle's affection. The act closes with the arrest of Pickwick on account of damages demanded by Mrs. Bardell.

In Act II. the audience are taken to Dingley Dell, where the young ladies of Miss Wardle's school are bemoaning their lonesome state. The Club shortly afterwards arrive, and Winkle adroitly points out that though pledged to bachelorhood, they can still become engaged. The protestations of Miss Wardle are overruled by Wardle, senior, who proclaims a holiday and picnic. Tupman prosecutes his suit to Miss Wardle, a scene full of amusing possibilities. Jingle, ever on the alert, inflames her jealousy by making out infidelity on Tupman's part, persuades her to elope, a like decision Arabella and Winkle arrived at earlier during the picnic. A well-arranged country dance is quite a feature of this scene.

Act III., which is a short one, is taken up with the clearing up of matters by the arrival of the newly-wedded Mr. and Mrs. Winkle, and the reconciliation of Tupman and Miss Wardle, and the retraction of Mr. Pickwick's veto on "widders."

The music is full of melody and charm, and orchestrated for full band, with excellent and artistic results. The "Pit-a-pat" duet, in Act II., took the house by storm, as did the lovely plaintive ballad sung by Miss Wardle. Several other numbers have a tilting refrain, and the choruses are bright and animated.

As often is the case with adaptations from Dickens, the plot at times becomes rather difficult to follow, but the author deserves great credit for the careful way he has adhered to the period.

The cast was entirely composed of local amateurs. The professional assistance of Mr. Louis de Reeder during the final rehearsals, and who also conducted, proved of the utmost assistance and value in securing particularly smooth performances of this dainty and pretty musical piece.

ACTORS and actresses who are overworked or run down should try "Wincarnis," which is at once a perfect food, a powerful stimulant, and a potential restorative. It is also a most desirable "pick-me-up" for those who, though entirely free of any specific ailment, yet need a stimulating invigorant to counteract wear, tear, and worry.

MISS VIOLET LEY concluded last Saturday a two years' starring engagement as Lady Mary Crewye in Peter's Mother.

THE DRAMA IN BERLIN.

"NUR EIN TRAUM."

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

BERLIN, THURSDAY, March 25.—The popular dramatist's latest work met with a very cordial reception, the author being called repeatedly before the curtain. It is in the style of a French farce, and quite the reverse of the customary heavy German piece of this type. Added to the attraction was the fact—which is the best advertisement here for any play—that Only a Dream was for some time prohibited by the censor, and only permitted after a struggle and some concessions on the part of the author. Its merits are chiefly in a sparkling dialogue; of plot or action there is but little apparent. On a warm May night (the month of May in this country is proverbially dangerous), and after liberal potions of "Mai-bowle," or champagne cup, a young married couple—though in reality devoted to each other—forget their marriage vows. The husband, Carl Stabrin, falls a victim to the charms of his friend's wife, and his own pretty wife almost simultaneously does the same to the seductions of another friend of her huband's. On the following day the lady's conscience pricks her, and she tells her husband of her adventure, putting it, however, in the form of a dream. Stabrin's faux pas is now discovered, and he is forced to confess it to his spouse, who is so indignant that she retorts with a statement anent the reality of her own lapse from the path of virtue. Carl cannot and will not believe that it is true, until he is advised by his friend to pretend he believes it, and so the husband and wife cry quits. The reconciliation is perfect, each determining to eschew "Mai-bowle" on a warm May night for the future. The acting was very vivacious, adding much to the success of the piece.

AT the Friedrich Wilhelm Städtisches Theatre a new play by Maximilian Boettcher, entitled Schlagendes Wetter (fire-damp) was produced with every appearance of success last week. The action passes in a colliery district, and many dramatic scenes prove highly effective, while others are full of mere phrases. The men are on strike, and things are beginning to look very serious when the young clergyman of the town takes upon himself to mediate between the strikers and their employers. Unfortunately, the well-meant efforts meet with nothing but sneers on the part of the managers and menaces from the men, and the noble-minded pastor finally receives a knife between his shoulders. The wound does not prove serious, but a social martyrdom awaits our hero; he loses his sweetheart and his office as parish priest, and ultimately shakes off the dust of his native town from his feet. His dauntless spirit is by no means broken; he will still continue to work and suffer, if need be, in the cause of the gospel of peace. The author, who has written several plays of merit, has produced a most sympathetic figure in that of the young clergyman, and the grateful rôle was excellently rendered by Herr Werner, one of the best artists of the company.

ANOTHER piece with a similar title, Schlagwetter, was given for the first time at the Bürgerliches Schauspielhaus some nights ago, and made a favourable impression. The author, Julius Hirsch, is a novice, and has much to learn, but sufficient talent is evident to warrant a prediction of better things in the near future.

"DER GROSSE KOMET," MM. Laufs and Jakobi's amusing farce, which enjoyed such a long and successful run some years ago, has been revived at the Friedrich Wilhelm Städtisches after an undeservedly long interval. It met with an enthusiastic reception, and being capitally acted, will certainly enter upon a new lease of life.

FRAU AUGUSTA PRASCH-GREVENBERG, the eminent actress, wife of the late Intendant Prasch, gave a highly-successful recital in the Choralion Hall on Saturday evening, before a large and appreciative audience. Frau Prasch-Grevenberg is at present one of the most prominent members of the Court Theatre at Munich, and her numerous friends and admirers in Berlin gave the popular artist a hearty welcome. The programme was composed of gay and serious items, and it would be hard to say whether the delivery of dramatic or lighter excerpts was the more successful. Herr Egidi's admirable organ-playing was a very agreeable feature of the evening.

A SUCCESSFUL Handelian concert was given in Wesley Church, Pembroke Dock, on Tuesday evening by the local choral society, assisted by Miss Esta D'Argo (soprano) and Mr. Lloyd-Chandos (tenor), both of whom received tremendous ovations. The proceeds were in aid of funds to enable the choir to compete at the Welsh National Eisteddfod to be held in London in June.

PRESENTATION.—At the Theatre Royal, Newcastle, last Saturday, at the conclusion of the record run of Aladdin, Mr. Reginald A. Hunt, the stage-manager, was presented with a gold watch by the principals, a gold hunter by Malcolm Scott and Harry Tate, and an ebony walking-stick by the stage staff, as tokens of friendship and appreciation.

NEWS comes from America that the famous pianist, Paderewski, has been seized by an attack of rheumatism in the arms, and has cancelled all remaining dates for concert engagements pending treatment.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

SIR WILLIAM GILBERT has again been induced to take up his prolific pen, and is engaged on a libretto, which will be set to music by Mr. Edward German, by whom the cloak of the late Sir Arthur Sullivan has been so gracefully assumed. It is not likely that the work will be seen before Christmas, nor is it settled that it will be produced at the Savoy; but whenever and wherever it appears its welcome is assured.

THE entire company and staff of the Savoy Theatre met together after the performance of The Yeomen of the Guard in the Louis Seize banqueting hall of the Savoy Hotel on the 19th inst. for a "farewell" supper, in view of the termination of Mrs. D'Oyly Carte's season, which ends this evening. Mr. Rutland Barrington presided, and was supported by Mr. C. H. Workman and Mr. François Cellier. The supper was followed by an excellent concert, to which many of the artists contributed.

MR. MARTIN HARVEY'S Scottish tour is proving an unqualified success. Last week, at the Lyceum Theatre, Edinburgh, Mr. Harvey created a new record, and thousands of people were regretfully turned away on Friday and Saturday nights. This week the popular actor has been appearing at the King's Theatre, Glasgow, where the same gratifying success has greeted the various plays presented. On Monday evening the Glasgow season will be continued with the revival of The Last Heir.

MR. HARVEY will, of course, play Edgar Ravenswood, and Miss De Silva Lucy Ashton; whilst the Lady Ashton will now be Miss Mary Rorke. Mr. Charles Glenney will appear as Craigengelt; and Mr. F. Cremlin has been specially engaged to figure as Caleb Balderstone. Judging by the bookings, the Glasgow public have not forgotten the fact of the piece's pronounced merits, and the revival is assured of success before the curtain rises.

MR. ARTHUR BOURCHIER will, in the fulness of time, give playgoers in the principal English provinces an opportunity of seeing his sterling performance in Samson; but London is likely to claim his services for a lengthy period. Meanwhile he and Mr. Charles Frohman have arranged with Mr. Wentworth Croke to send out on August Bank Holiday a company, specially selected, to present Mr. Henry Bernstein's fine play in all the towns which are not on Mr. Bourchier's visiting list.

MR. F. R. BENSON lectured on "Shakespeare and the Fuller Life of the People" at the Freemasons' Hall, Edinburgh, on Tuesday afternoon, under the auspices of the local branch of the British Empire Shakespeare Society. A large audience was presided over by Lord Kingsburgh, who referred to the great part Mr. Benson had taken in the revival of Shakespearean acting and to his tireless thought in training others who passed out of his hands to go and give honour and glory to some other actor-manager.

IN the course of his address Mr. Benson said that Shakespeare seemed to grow more and more modern as one learned to understand and appreciate the wisdom of his message. Shakespeare had something to say about labour, about capital, about Socialism. In his sociological problems the working out came quite naturally; he knew all, and therefore he pardoned all. There they would get something of women's suffrage, garden cities, something about going back to the land. In As You Like It he gave them some theories on education; in The Tempest he had something to say on evolution. They would also find something on the indestructibility of matter and a scheme for a territorial army. They would find something not altogether unconnected with the appeals of John Burns in the House of Commons, and something in regard to the development of the drama, drama folk, amateur drama, professional drama, and Shakespeare readings.

THE Guild of Catholic Actors and Musicians is arranging for another performance on the anniversary of that at Daly's last year, namely, May 25. The Guild was formed by Mr. Charles H. E. Brookfield, well known throughout the theatrical profession, with the sole object of giving, at least once a year, at a West End theatre, a performance for the benefit of poor Catholic Missions in and around London. It is under the distinguished patronage of Miss Mary Anderson (Mme. de Navarro), Sir Francis Burnard, and Sir Charles Santley, with Mr. George Edwardes as the president.

AT the initial performance by members of the Guild last year Daly's Theatre was very kindly lent by Mr. George Edwardes, and the result of the matinée was very satisfactory, being the means of helping several poor Missions in the metropolis. The members of the Guild are numerous, and consist of Catholic actors, actresses, and theatrical business men, all of whom worked very hard in this most deserving charity. Mr. Thomas J. Chambers has again consented to act as hon. secretary and treasurer of the Guild.

THE title-part of The Noble Spaniard at the New Royalty Theatre is a new departure for Mr. Charles Hawtrey, and now he and the rest of the clever company have settled down in their parts, Mr. Maugham's diverting farce goes with a swing from start to finish. Owing to a misunderstanding Miss Gladys Cooper was unable to appear in The Noble Spaniard as announced, and the ingénue part was successfully undertaken at very short notice by Miss Anne Cleaver.

MR. W. W. KELLY, the well-known manager, who is sole lessee of the New Theatre Royal, Birkenhead, was elected to the Town Council of that place on the 17th inst. by a majority of over 500. Mr. Kelly, in his candidature for the Argyle Ward, issued an amusing illustrated brochure, giving seven good reasons why the ratepayers should elect him as their representative, each being accompanied by a sketch, into which the names of various popular plays were introduced. A local paper says:—"The new Town Councillor is a large ratepayer—one of the largest in the ward—and, quite irrespective of party considerations, we can be quite sure that he will apply his undoubted energy and ability to maintaining the high standard of efficiency and economy in administration which has characterised the present regime."

MISS LENA ASHWELL will accomplish a portentous event early in April, when, in conjunction with Mr. Otho Stuart, she will present The Earth to playgoers. Such is the title which has been fixed upon for Mr. James Bernard Fagan's new play, with which the new season at the Kingsway will begin.

"BEVIS," the new comedy, in three acts, by Hubert Henry Davies, will be produced by Messrs. Frederick Harrison and Charles Frohman at the Haymarket on Thursday next. In the cast will figure Messrs. A. E. Matthews, C. M. Lowne, Ivo Dawson, C. V. France, Horton Cooper, Arthur Minton, L. H. Kendrick, E. F. Meads, and H. Gerrish; and Misses Henrietta Watson, Nina Sevening, Madge Titheradge, and Lottie Venne. The action takes place at the present day in the summer-time, and the scenes are laid respectively at a mansion in Park Lane, at a house on the Thames, and by the river bank.

MESSRS. HOWARD AND WYNDHAM, LTD., and the Robert Arthur Theatres Co., Ltd., have entered into a co-operation whereby their respective theatres in Newcastle-on-Tyne will be worked conjointly. For the convenience of travelling companies the booking arrangements in connection with all the theatres interested are to be carried out under the supervision of both companies by Mr. Robert Arthur from the office of the Robert Arthur Theatres Co., at 24a, Regent-street, London, S.W.

THE announcement was made at the annual meeting of the shareholders of Messrs. Howard and Wyndham, Ltd., on the 18th inst. Mr. Simons, chairman of the company, presided. In moving the adoption of the report, the chairman stated that notwithstanding the fact that depression had prevailed in commercial and theatrical circles during the past year, the company's profits were equal to the average of the past fifteen years, namely, £10,500. Owing to the strain caused by attention to five theatres, Mr. Wyndham had felt that his hands would be strengthened by the admission to the directorate of Mr. G. T. Minshull, the general-manager of the company.

THE company had entered into an arrangement upon which they might congratulate themselves, namely, that with Robert Arthur and Co., Ltd., a company of equal importance as Messrs. Howard and Wyndham. That arrangement applied more particularly to the Newcastle district, but it would also have effect elsewhere. The arrangement had been so completed that public interest would not suffer by it, and he hoped that good results would accrue. The report was unanimously adopted. Mr. W. F. Frame paid a tribute to Mr. Wyndham for his efforts on behalf of the company for the past fourteen years. Mr. Heilbron was re-elected a director, and Mr. G. T. Minshull, the general-manager of the company, was also elected to a seat on the Board.

MR. WEEDON GROSSMITH has selected the evening of Tuesday, April 13, for the production at the Criterion of Mr. R. C. Carton's new play, for which no title is yet announced. Mr. Grossmith's support will consist of Messrs. George E. Bellamy, Davy Burnaby, A. Vane-Tempest, Fred Lewis, Lytton Grey, Walter Pearce, Fred Volpé, and Claude Edmunds; and Misses Compton, Lydia Rachel, Shelley Carlton, and Dora Barton.

MR. LAURENCE IRVING, who is winning his way to popularity, with his clever wife, Miss Mabel Hackney, in American variety theatres with their sketch The King and the Vagabond, has an honourable objection to making capital out of his relationship to his distinguished father, for he emphasised that fact clearly in a speech recently delivered from the stage of the Orpheum, Boston. "By an oversight," he declared, "for which no one is to blame, I have been placarded on your walls as the son of Sir Henry Irving. The fact is one of which I am so very proud that I do not care to brandish it before the public eye. My father's many close personal friends in America would only think poorly of a son who allowed his father's name to be used as a box-office appendage to himself."

MISS MAUDI DARRELL, the favourite musical comedy actress and daughter of Mr. Hugh J. Didcott, the doyen of variety agents, was married on Wednesday to Mr. Ian Bullough, a Scottish landowner, of Meggernie, Glen Lyon, Perthshire, and brother of Sir George Bullough. The ceremony, which was kept a secret, took place at the Paddington Registry Office, the only persons present besides the principals being the bride's father and Mrs. Morice, who signed the register. Miss Darrell was attired in a long chinchilla coat over a silver-grey skirt and white lace blouse. She also wore a chinchilla hat, and carried some pale pink roses. She was married in her stage name, which she has made her own by deed-poll.

MISS DARRELL was included in the cast of Mr. Robert Courtneidge's forthcoming production, The Devil, at the Adelphi, but is leaving the stage on her marriage, and will not, of course, take up the rôle of the artist's model for which she had been chosen. She was born in London, and educated at the Sacré Cœur Convent, Paris. Her first appearance on the stage was as one of the "six little wives" in San Toy at Daly's, in 1899; and two years later at the Gaiety she took up Ethel Sidney's part in The Toreador. In 1903 she appeared in The Girl from Kay's at the Apollo, and as Denise in Veronique. Miss Darrell played a leading part in Mr. Seymour Hicks's The Talk of the Town, and she also appeared in his 1905 Christmas revival of Bluebell in Fairyland at the Aldwych. Her last engagement in public was in The Belle of Brittany at the Queen's.

MRS. BULLOUGH is credited with the following note of farewell to the London public:—"March 24, 1909. My very best thanks to the public who have been so kind to me and to whom I regretfully say good-bye.—MAUDI DARRELL."

MR. GEORGE EDWARDES'S Merry Widow company will be at the Coronet next week. Miss Clara Evelyn will be the Sonia, Miss Mabel Russell, direct from her pantomime successes at the Adelphi, joins the company to dance, and Miss Nora Brockebank, Miss Sylvia May, and Miss Kathleen Courtney will also have important parts. Mr. Basil Foster, of the cricketing band of Fostershire, being a brother of R. E., W. K., and H. W. L. of that ilk, is to play the Prince. Mr. Tailleur Andrews, Mr. W. H. Rawlins, and Mr. Eric Thorne will also combine to ensure thorough performance of the popular comedy opera.

MRS. BROWN-POTTER, who arrived in this country from New York on Tuesday, has ventilated a grievance against the American form of contract. The popular actress stated that the wording of her contract made it appear that she was employed for eight weeks, but she discovered that these were not consecutive, with the result that there was very much inconvenience, and she was able to perform for three weeks only. She advised all English artists carefully to study their contracts before going out to the States.

A NEW comic opera entitled The Superior Sex will be produced at the Empire Theatre, Southend-on-Sea, on Tuesday and four following nights by the Southend Amateur Operatic Society. The libretto is by H. D. Banning and the music by J. H. Maunder. Mr. Hugh Moss is producing the work for the Society.

MR. A. S. HOMEWOOD, now appearing in Strife at the Haymarket—to be transferred to the Adelphi on Monday—will be the Bellidor of Maeterlinck's Sister Beatrice, to be produced by the Play Actors at the Court Theatre to-morrow night.

THE Incorporated Stage Society, which has contributed so appreciably to theatrical activities during the past decade, will celebrate an interesting event in its history on May 2, when its fiftieth production will be reached. The production will be What the Public Wants, a comedy, in three acts, by Arnold Bennett, and to mark the occasion a souvenir programme with an official record of the plays produced during its ten years of uninterrupted work will be issued to members. The annual dinner of the society will be held at the Criterion Restaurant on Sunday, May 9, and during the following week a reception in celebration of the fiftieth production will be given, when the artists who have taken part in its representations will be the guests of the society.

MR. PERCY HUTCHISON and company, in Brewster's Millions, had an enthusiastic reception on Monday at Mr. Robert Redford's beautiful Cardiff theatre. Calls to the number of a score and one were registered, and at the end of the evening, in response to persistent cries of "Speech," Mr. Hutchison thanked the audience on behalf of his company and himself for their warm welcome, and announced that, with Mr. Redford's co-operation, he hoped to produce many other big London successes in Cardiff in the near future.

IN spite of the season of Lent all the previous records of over thirty of the Hutchison plays have been broken, and a return visit of Brewster's Millions will be made early in the autumn. The only suburban visit this year of Mr. Hutchison and company in Brewster's Millions will occur next week, when the company go to the Shakespeare Theatre, Clapham.

MISS EMMA HUTCHISON and Mr. Percy Hutchison have secured the provincial rights of Mr. Somerset Maugham's fourth and biggest success, Penelope. A company will be sent on tour on August Bank Holiday.

LONGFELLOW'S line "That which the fountain sends forth returns again to the fountain" is the burden of the comedy by George Calderon, which the Stage Society will produce at the Aldwych to-morrow evening and Monday afternoon. The piece is entitled The Fountain, and the scene is laid in the East End at the present time. The cast will consist of Miss Eily Malyon, Miss Alice Mansfield, Miss Nancy Price, Mr. Hubert Harben, Miss Mary Jerrold, Mr. Frank Collins, Mr. Frederick Lloyd, Miss Mabel Adair, Mr. P. Percival Clark, Miss Irene Ross, Miss Ethel Ingram, Miss Beatrice Filmer, Mr. Fred Penley, Mr. Wilton Ross, Mr. A. E. Filmer, Mr. Fred Grove, Mr. Allan Wade, Mr. Robert Bolder, Mr. Val Cuthbert, Mr. Arthur Bachner, and Mr. Ross Shore.

"THE FOUNTAIN" will be preceded by Unemployed, a play in one act, by Margaret M. Mack, in which Mr. Edmund Gwenn, Miss Helen Boucher, Miss Vera Coburn, Mr. Walter Pearce, Mr. Charles Maude, and Mr. Arthur Bachner will appear. The fifth play of the season will be A Modern Aspasia, by H. Hamilton Fyfe, and will be produced on June 6 and 7.

THE next "at home" of the Actresses' Franchise League will be held in the Grand Hall of the Criterion Restaurant on Friday afternoon next, from two to four, when all members of the profession are invited. Among the speakers will be Lady Grove, Lady Strachey, Miss Frances Sterling, and Mr. Yorke Stanger, M.P., K.C. The "hostesses" who will receive for the League are Miss Eva Moore, Miss Alice Crawford, and Mrs. Frederick Mouillot.

AT the members' meeting on Tuesday, March 23, Mrs. Despard was the principal speaker. Miss Winifred Mayo, in absence through illness of Mme. Marie Brema, took the chair, and Miss Edith Craig received. Among the audience were Mrs. Madeline Lucette Ryley, Misses Marion Terry, Eva Moore, Esther Palliser, Nora Lancaster, Janette Steer, Dora Fellowes, Gillian Scaife, Nora Hastings, Helen Elmar, Helen Tytler, Ada Moore, Vera Holme, Rita Milman, Amy Ravenscroft, Sydney Keith, Lillah McCarthy, Marion McCarthy, Muriel Matters, Katherine Parry, Alys Rees, Madeline Roberts, Valentine, and Adeline Bourne.

MR. MATHESON LANG has been out of the bill at the Lyceum owing to a recurrence of the illness which involved the postponement of Hamlet at the Lyceum, but has now quite recovered his voice and strength, and resumed his part on Monday.

COMEDY, comedietta, and recital will form the programme of an entertainment to be given by the students of the London Dramatic Academy and School of Elocution, Oxford-street, on Thursday evening, April 29, at the Victoria Hall, Bayswater. By special request, Miss Nora Hastings, the principal, will appear with Mr. Sivori Levey in a short play, and items will be contributed by members of the school.

MR. GEORGE CONQUEST has resigned the managership of the Empire Theatre, Southend, and has been succeeded by Herr Adam Seebold, who has acted for some years as musical-director. Mr. A. Lingham Power still retains his position of acting-manager.

MR. GEO. ALEXANDER made what may be described as his début as chairman of the Parks and Open Spaces Committee at the meeting of the London County Council on Tuesday. He moved the adoption of the committee's report, and also replied to a question put by Mr. W. Johnson with reference to the public parks and the Daylight Saving Bill. His reply was to the effect that he did not see how this Bill would, if passed, affect the parks, which were already open to the public during the hours of daylight. Mr. Walter Reynolds has been elected vice-chairman of the Parks and Open Spaces Committee.

"STRIFE," the clever play by Mr. John Galsworthy which was produced at a matinée at the Duke of York's on the 9th inst. and put into the evening bill at the Haymarket on Saturday last, will be transferred to the Adelphi on Monday next. The piece will be given exactly as at the Haymarket.

"SIX WEEKS OF SHAKESPEARE" tersely describes the artistic programme of Mr. Gerald Lawrence and Miss Fay Davis's forthcoming season at the Court Theatre, which will commence with two performances on Easter Monday, April 12 next. It is proposed to give each week seven full representations (six afternoon and Saturday evening) of one of a series of Shakespeare's best-known dramas, comprising As You Like It, Romeo and Juliet, The Merchant of Venice, Twelfth Night, Hamlet, and Much Ado About Nothing. The stage will be enclosed by tapestries, and the charm of the plays will be enhanced by orchestral music of the period of each piece.

MISS DOROTHY CLIFTON, whose success in various rôles we have had occasion to record on previous occasions, is now playing the part of Miss Lucy in Mr. Gaston Mayer's South company of Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage-Patch.

AT the Colne Theatre Royal on March 18 was produced, for copyright purposes, The Mad Author, by Wm. Armstrong.

AN unusually accommodating spirit was manifested by the magisterial bench at Northampton on Saturday, when an application was made at the Borough Sessions on behalf of Mr. Thos. A. Evans, manager of the Palace Theatre, for a dramatic licence to enable a flying matinée of Dolly Reforming Herself to take place that afternoon. The Magistrates' Clerk said that the duty of granting such licences had now passed to the Watch Committee, and that it was usual to give seven days' notice. However, the Mayor (Mr. J. Brown), who presided, said that he would at once call the sub-committee and deal with the application, and, thanks to such kindly consideration, the popular comedy Dolly Reforming Herself was presented that afternoon, to the great delight of a large audience. The tour, it may be added, is that of Messrs. Jerrard Grant Allen and Geoffrey Besant.

AN agency on somewhat new lines, entitled the General Attractions Bureau, is being started by Mr. J. Rowland Sales (late manager at the New and Waldorf Theatres) at 16, King William-street, Strand. Not content with the provision merely of principals and chorus for managers, Mr. Sales undertakes to provide whole companies, to rehearse them, to teach them if necessary, to advise upon and introduce playa, to arrange song-scenas, and, in fact, to cover every kind of theatrical, operatic, and variety work. Mr. Sales is the youngest theatrical manager in London, indeed probably in the world, and in this new venture we most cordially wish him every success possible. Needless to add, he is supported by both an able and a competent staff.

MR. LESTER COLLINGWOOD always contrives to go one better, and his sixth anniversary at the Alexandra Theatre, Birmingham, on Friday, last week, far exceeded any previous one, both in numbers and éclat. In addition to the pantomime, turns were lent from the other establishments. Miss Dorothy Ward, who made her stage début under Mr. Collingwood at the Alexandra some four seasons ago, appeared from the Royal in her old success "Wouldn't you like to spoon with me?" Mr. Wilkie Bard, who unexpectedly made his appearance announced as an "extra turn," was received with tempestuous applause.

DURING the evening Mr. Collingwood was summoned on to the stage by the company and asked by Miss Ellaline Thorne, the principal boy, to accept, on their behalf, a marble timepiece and ornaments, and a beautifully illuminated address setting forth their sincere admiration for their "dear old guv'nor." Mr. Collingwood, in responding, never spoke wiser or better in his life, his graceful remarks and fine, soldierly appearance completing a scene that was good to look upon. Mr. Fred Bernardo also presented his chief with an address testifying his loyalty and respect, and other mementos were bestowed on Mr. Collingwood, whose little joke it is that his pantomime will run till The Night Before Christmas, that being the title of the play with which he commences his dramatic season. The ball that followed proved very enjoyable.

WE regret to record the death at the early age of 37 of Mr. John Millington Synge, B.A., the well-known Irish author and playwright, which occurred at a private hospital in Dublin on Wednesday. Mr. Synge was the youngest son of the late John Hatch Synge, and graduated at Trinity College, Dublin. He was a notable Irish scholar and linguist, and a musician of no mean order. For some years Mr. Synge was associated with Lady Gregory and Mr. W. B. Yeats as a director of the National Theatre of Ireland for the production of Irish plays by Irish authors at the Abbey Theatre, Dublin, where all his dramatic works have been produced.

THEY include Riders to the Sea (a one-act play), In the Shadow of the Glen, The Well of the Saints (a three-act piece), and The Playboy of the Western World. The last-named play, on its production, evoked extraordinary opposition, so violent being the feeling against it amongst a certain section of Dublin people that it was only possible to play it under police protection. In the Shadow of the Glen figured in the Irish National Theatre productions in London at the Royalty in 1904, and The Well of the Saints was seen at the St. George's Hall, Langham-place, in the autumn of the following year.

A REMINDER may be given of the Play Actors' performance to-morrow (Sunday) at the Court Theatre, at 8.30 p.m., when a translation by Bernard Miall of Maeterlinck's Sister Beatrice, with music by Hubert Bath, will be produced, under the direction of Miss Edith Craig. Sister Beatrice is one of two short plays which the author has described as librettos, that is to say, which were written with the intention of being spoken to music. The story of the play is a legend familiar to readers of Mr. John Davidson's poetry in "The Ballad of a Nun," and it has also been treated by Miss Adelaide Anne Proctor. The earliest existing version is to be found in the Dutch.

THE Bristolians welcomed Miss Fanny Wentworth back right royally on Monday evening at the Prince's Theatre, where her little sketch and songs at piano never went better. In consquence of her success she has been engaged by Mr. Vaughan to go on the whole tour as the "lever de rideau."

"A SENSE OF HUMOUR," by Beryl Faber and Cosmo Hamilton, was successfully produced for the first time in the provinces by Mr. Reginald Dance's company on Monday evening last at Messrs. Murray King and Clark's charming theatre in the Devonshire Park, Eastbourne. His Grace the Duke of Devonshire and party were in a box, and among other well-known people present were the Countess Starzay, Lady Violet Greville, and Lady William Smith.

MR. TOM B. DAVIS has engaged a strong cast for the new Oriental musical play A Persian Princess, written by Leedham Bantock and P. J. Barrow, with music by Sidney Jones and additional numbers by Marie Horne, which is in active rehearsal at the Queen's Theatre. Miss Ruth Vincent plays the title-rôle, Mr. George Graves has a part worthy of his comedy powers, and the company also includes Mr. Horace Mills, Mr. Aubrey Fitzgerald, Mr. Clarence Blakiston, Mr. Noel Fleming, Miss Lily Iris, Miss Vivienne Talleur, Miss Jessie Lonnen, Miss Ethel Negretti, and Miss Carrie Moore. Mr. Sydney Ellison is producing the play, which is in two acts, and some gorgeous Eastern scenes and dresses, designed by Mr. Percy Anderson, are promised.

ENGLISH playgoers will be sorry to learn that they are to lose that truly talented little comedienne Miss Florence Imeson, who has made such a success at the Shakespeare, Liverpool, this Christmas as principal girl to Miss Ada Reeve's boy. Miss Imeson has been engaged by Mr. J. A. E. Malone, of Daly's Theatre, on behalf of Messrs. B. and F. Wheeler, of South Africa, and sails for Cape Town on April 10 to star as Mary Gibbs (Miss Gertie Millar's creation) in Our Miss Gibbs, and Franzi Steingruber (Miss Millar's creation also) in The Waltz Dream, Anita in Havana, Militza in King of Cadonia, Daisy in The Dollar Princess, &c.

THE Senate of London University has accepted the offer of the John Oliver Hobbes Memorial Committee to found a scholarship in memory of the late Mrs. Craigie. A trust has been established for the maintenance of a scholarship in English literature, to be called the "John Oliver Hobbes Scholarship," tenable at University College.

"WILD WEST" will be established at Earl's Court again this summer. The show, which will be housed in the Great Empress Hall, is in connection with the entertainment side of the Golden West and American (U.S.A.) Industries Exhibition of which the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor of London is president of the Honorary Advisory Committee. It is a score of years since "Buffalo Bill" made his famous success at Earl's Court Exhibition with his "Wild West" show, and once again from the plains of Wyoming and prairies of Dakota, the genuine "Wild West" cowboy rider, steer-tier (lassoers of wild cattle), with cowgirl experts, are setting out for London. The troupe is bringing over a number of unbroken native horses, locally known as man-eating bronchos, with which to demonstrate their horsemanship and their prowess in lassoing the buffalo.

MESSRS. JAY AND MANN started their season most auspiciously at the Palace Theatre, Brighton, on Monday, with a special engagement of Mr. Edward Terry. The Press have been quite enthusiastic over the up-to-date methods and alert management which have now been inaugurated, and Brighton theatre-goers are much appreciating the regular afternoon vaudeville performances of The Will o' the Wisps, which form a special feature in the new programme. Amongst the bookings which have been arranged, or are in negotiation, are those of Miss Marie Lloyd and her special company, who appear during Goodwood week; Butterflies, The Flag Lieutenant, Miss Hook of Holland, The Catch of the Season, The Country Girl, John Tiller's companies, Harry Paulton, The Earl and the Girl, and others equally attractive.

LESS than a fortnight ago Messrs. Jay and Mann made special arrangements with Mr. Frank Curzon for part of the touring rights of An Englishman's Home, and in that time have arranged their company and an entire production exactly as now being played at Wyndham's Theatre. They open on Monday next at the Palace Theatre, Watford, with Ipswich to follow, and Kingston for Easter week. Immediately the first company is on the road, a second tour, under Messrs. Jay and Mann's management, will be prepared. The demand in the country for immediate dates for this striking play is phenomenal.

THE second act of Mozart's Magic Flute and the third act of Bizet's Carmen will be given by the students of the operatic class at the Royal Academy of Music on the evening of Thursday next. Mr. Edgardo Lévi will conduct. On the following evening the students of the dramatic class present Shakespeare's Two Gentlemen of Verona, under the direction of Mr. Richard Temple.

MISS MARGARET MURCH, who is concluding a five months' starring engagement with Mr. F. W. Purcell on the Stoll Empire tour, returns to the theatres for a short season to create the leading rôle in Messrs. Hamond and Smith's forthcoming production—The Alchemist of Bruges.

MISS BEATRICE FELSTED, who has recently been singing for Messrs. Ashton and Mitchell, was to have been heard in London at many season's concerts this year. Miss Felsted was compelled to relinquish all her engagements to undergo a serious operation, which has proved quite successful, and she will, we trust, soon be able to take up at least some of her more important engagements.

MR. CHARLES BARNARD is arranging the production at the Elephant and Castle Theatre of a play, entitled Money and Man, adapted from the well-known novel by F. Marion Crawford, entitled "Whosoever Shall Offend." Mr. Barnard has made great improvements at the Elephant in his first twelve months' control of the house. He has given his patrons some dramatic productions new to London, and a pantomime which had a record run for the south side of over ten weeks.

"AN ENGLISHMAN'S HOME" is billed for presentation at the Royal County Theatre, Kingston-on-Thames, at Easter. At the present time Mr. Peter Davey's well-appointed house is enjoying a prosperous season of variety.

A COMPLIMENTARY dinner to Mr. Stanley Greig, the joint hon. secretary of the O.P. Club, will be given at the Criterion on Friday evening next. Mr. Carl Hentschel will occupy the chair, and a programme, comprising many talented artists, is promised.

THE management of the Middlesbrough Grand Opera House may be justly proud of the fact that the result of their special Territorial night has been to bring the local forces up to strength, some 200 enthusiastic young men having presented themselves for enrolment within a few days. This week Mr. Ian Maclaren, who pays his first visit to Teeside, is drawing excellent houses at the palatial Opera House. Between the acts an augmented orchestra renders classical selections, which are loudly applauded. It may be added that the Middlesbrough Shakespearean week, like the Moody-Manners season, may possibly become an annual fixture at this theatre.

"ARTFUL MISS DEARING" is the title finally selected for Mr. Arthur Law's new comedy, which Mr. A. E. Henderson will produce at Terry's on Saturday, April 10. Additions to the cast already announced, which includes Miss Annie Hughes, Mr. C. W. Somerset, Mr. Paul Arthurs, and Miss Helen Ferrers, are Miss Charlotte Granville, Miss Kate Philips, and Mr. Arthur Longley.

MISS EMMY WHELEN, who comes to London with laurels won in Berlin, will take up the title-rôle in The Merry Widow at Daly's next week. Mr. George Edwardes has secured the young actress and singer for a term of two years.

"NONE BUT THE BRAVE," announced for production at the Lyric, has in deference to a prior claim to the title, been rechristened The Double Conquest. The new play, which is founded by Constance Fletcher on Balzac's La Duchess De Langeais, will be produced in about a month's time. Miss Maxine Elliott, who will appear with Mr. Waller in the principal parts, arrived in London from New York on Wednesday. She remains in this country till the autumn, when she will return to the States to tour with The Chaperone.

MISS CONSTANCE HYEM will take up the part relinquished by Miss Maudi Darrell on her marriage in Mr. Henry Hamilton's play The Devil, shortly to be brought out at the Adelphi. The cast is a strong one, and includes Mr. Lyn Harding, Miss Alexandra Carlisle, Mr. Bassett Roe, Mr. Vincent Clive, Mr. J. B. Gordon, Mr. J. S. Blythe, and Mr. H. Leyton.

THE Shaftesbury, greatly altered and lavishly redecorated, will be reopened in Easter week with a new play by Mark Ambient and A. M. Thompson, with music by Lionel Monckton and Howard Talbot and lyrics by Arthur Wimperis. The company includes Mr. Harry Welchman, Mr. Alfred Lester, Mr. Dan Rolyat, Miss Phyllis Dare, Miss Ada Blanche, Miss Florence Smithson, and Miss May Kinder, the last mentioned a new recruit from America.

"LITTLE RED RIDING HOOD," at the Theatre Royal, Bristol, came to a close on Saturday evening, when the house was packed in all parts, the audience being most enthusiastic. On Mr. Alty appearing in the final scene, he was received with much cheering, and said:—"Ladies and gentlemen,—I am requested by Mr. Carpenter to express his regret that he is not able to be present on this the last night of one of his most successful pantomimes, but he has been detained in London, and found it impossible to reach Bristol in time even for the closing scene. Mr. Carpenter wishes me to express his best thanks for the very liberal support which has been accorded to the pantomime, and also heartily to thank the artists, one and all, for the efforts they have made to render the pantomime one of his most successful records." Mr. Alty announced that the next pantomime would be Robinson Crusoe. Several presentations were made, to the musical-director, stage-manager, and others. There was an imposing floral display in the last scene, and "Auld lang syne" concluded the performance.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

A Quick Change.

WHEN Drink was being played at Sadler's Wells Theatre—then under the management of the late Walter Gooch—I was sent for, writes Mr. Arthur Estcourt, by Harry Jackson, his manager, and offered the understudy of Coupeau at a good salary, provided I did not show myself at the theatre, but remained at home for certain hours in the day. For four weeks I received my salary, earning my money more easily than I have ever done before or since. One day the telegram arrived, and I presented myself at the "Wells." Mr. Jackson informed me that they had received a communication from Mr. Warner to the effect that he had missed the tidal train or boat from Paris, and could not arrive in time for the performance. The curtain was kept down for nearly an hour. In the meantime I was dressed, not for Coupeau, but for my original part in the provinces of Lantier, whilst Mr. Wm. Redmond, the London Lantier, was ready as Coupeau. The curtain had actually gone up when Mr. Warner dashed into the theatre. As fast as possible I undressed behind the flat—no time to go to the dressing-rooms—throwing my clothes to Mr. Redmond, and he did the same thing with Mr. Warner's dresser. When Mr. Warner did appear he had a most enthusiastic reception from the audience, who little dreamt of the "scene" that had been enacted behind the scenes.

Back to the Censorship.

IN literary circles here, writes our excellent Paris correspondent, the question is being seriously discussed as to the necessity of asking the authorities to give us back the censorship. When the censorship was abolished it was thought that the public would act as scavengers and sweep away any dirt that came their way. The contrary, however, was the case. The moment Anastasie had retired several new outrageously décolleté pieces were offered to the public. The playgoers not only did not show any disgust, but, like Oliver, "they wanted more"! The public, therefore, have shown themselves utterly incompetent to act as judges, and I am quite of the opinion of those who think that something should be done to stem the tide of the filthy rubbish that is pouring down upon us. It is suggested that a new Anastasie should be brought to life, an intelligent censorship, composed of, say, three or four enlightened men of high literary standing, who, instead of looking for immorality where there is none, would try to raise the French drama from the low pitch to which it has fallen. Surely four such men could easily be found!

An Old Book on Acting.

"A thorough description of stage technique," says Mr. Robb Lawson in an article on "The Psychology of Acting" in the Fortnightly Review, "appeared in a volume dated 1750, attributed to Dr. Hill, who had studied as an amateur at the Haymarket under Charles Macklin. Its title is 'The Actor,' in which, according to the heading of Book I., many of 'the common prejudices of the age are considered, and observations made on the necessary qualifications of performers on the stage in general.' Some notion of the author's thesis can be gained from a perusal of the headings of his various chapters, such as: 'Whether an actor can have too much fire'—'No man who has not naturally an elevated soul will ever perform well the part of a hero upon the stage'—'Players who are naturally amorous are the only ones who should perform the parts of lovers upon the stage'—'Of the care that ought to be taken perfectly to impart the parts of a play in the actor's memory in order to its being played with truth.'"

Macready and Samson.

Talma was of opinion that acting cannot be taught, for, in speaking of Le Kain, who had no master, he averred that "every actor ought to be his own tutor." This, too, was Macready's conviction. After a visit to the Paris Conservatoire, the entry in his diary reads somewhat drily:—"Heard the pupils of Samson go through their course of theatrical instruction—I was interested and saw the inefficiency of the system clearly. It was teaching conventionalism—perpetuating the mannerism of the French stage, which is all mannerism. Genius would be cramped, if not maimed and distorted, by such a course."

Hamlet and the Pirates.

A writer in the Westminster Review in an interesting article on Thomas Kyd's Hamlet says:—"In the story of Hamlet's journey to England the play has been much changed from the account in the Belleforest's Hystorie of Hamblet. The main change is a peculiarly dramatic one. In the Hystorie Hamlet completes his journey to England without incident, there sees to it that his treacherous companions or spies are put to death, and remains in that country a year. In Shakespeare's play he never reaches England, but, through an accident, contrives to return shortly to Denmark, while Rosencrantz and Guildenstern sail on to their doom. By this means the time of absence is much shortened; and that is desirable from a dramatic point of view. But in other respects this situation is both dramatically and rationally awkward. Dramatically Hamlet's forgery is rendered superfluous so far as his own safety is concerned. And rationally the continuance of Rosencrantz and Guildenstern to England when the prince they were conducting thither had got away from them, appears absurd.

"Let us conjecture how this doubly awkward situation was composed. Thomas Kyd, we will suppose, in order to shorten the interval between Hamlet's departure and return, substituted the attack by pirates and abduction of Hamlet for his arrival in England and procurement of his companions' deaths. There was then, in his version of the play, no forged commission, and these two spies were simply forgotten after Hamlet had got away from them. But Shakespeare felt that it was a dramatic fault to let these men pass so early from view—that they should be punished for their meddling, and that their doom should be told in the closing scene. For these reasons he reverted to Belleforest's version, to the extent of having Hamlet procure their death by order of the King of England. But the incident of the attack by pirates had a hold upon the popular fancy and could make a thrilling tale when Hamlet related it to Horatio; and so Shakespeare, being careless about external difficulties in the plot, decided not to leave it out. This is only conjecture; but it seems a more likely view than that the change from the Hystorie to the present awkward version was made either by Kyd or by Shakespeare alone."

Four Hamlets.

IN the course of a legitimate season at the Princess's under F. B. Chatterton some thirty-five years ago four representatives of Hamlet appeared—Phelps, Fechter, Creswick, and Bandmann. Mr. Howard Russell played Claudius to each of them. On the first night Bandmann added Don Cæsar de Bazan to the bill, and Mr. Russell, as stage-manager for Fred Villiers, on the sick list, was instructed by Chatterton to bring the curtain down before midnight Saturday. This, in spite of his playing Don José in Don Cæsar as well as Claudius in Hamlet, he (Mr. Russell) succeeded in doing. The only omissions made in Hamlet were "The advice to the players" and the "King's Prayer." The Recorder's scene was always retained, and the Sailors' scene almost invariably left out, four hours and a half elapsing from rise to fall of curtain. Mrs. Bandmann was the Ophelia.

"THE NOBLE SPANIARD."

Victorian Farce, in Three Acts, Adapted from the French of Grenet-Dancourt by W. Somerset Maugham, Produced at the Royalty Theatre on Saturday, March 20.

Duke of Hermanos .....MR. CHARLES HAWTREY
Mr. Justice Proudfoot .....MR. E. LYALL SWETE
Captain Chalford .....MR. ATHOL STEWART
Count de Moret .....MR. LEON M. LION
Marion Nairne .....MISS ANNE CLEAVER
Lucy .....MISS KATE CUTLER
Countess de Moret .....MISS VANE FEATHERSTON
Mary Jane .....MISS JOY CHATWYN
Lady Proudfoot .....MISS FANNY BROUGH

Mr. Charles Hawtrey's season at the Royalty Theatre opened on Saturday with decided success. The description of The Noble Spaniard as "Victorian farce" is not exactly correct. The Victorian farce was a much cruder and coarser affair than the quaint comedy into which Mr. Maugham has turned his French original, which is entitled Les Gdités du Venvage, and the moderation and refinement of the acting keep the play quite within the pale of comedy. Were this not so, the effect of the adaptation would be destroyed, for the story is wildly extravagant. The Duke of Hermanos is one of those stage Spaniards who are never seen or heard of in real life. He is a descendant of Don Cæsar de Bazan, "noble" in the extreme, and having the right, as he often repeats, to wear his "'at" in the presence of his King. He has a "soul of fire," and nothing stops him when he is once in love with a lady. An English family staying at Boulogne consists of Mr. Justice Proudfoot and his mature, but frivolous, wife, Lady Proudfoot; Marion Nairne, a pretty widow; and Lucy, an ingénue, who is engaged to Captain Chalford, a languid dandy of the period. All the personages in the play wear Victorian costumes, with flounces and crinolines. Friends of the Proudfoots are the Count and Countess de Moret, the former a very susceptible and impressionable Frenchman. Into this peaceful family, the Duke of Hermanos, who has conceived a fiery passion for Marion Nairne, enters audaciously. Dispensing with the formality of an introduction, he calls on Marion, tells her of the overpowering passion she has inspired in him, and so harasses her that, to get rid of him, she says that she is married. The Duke declares that there is no room in the world for him and his "rival," and vows that he will challenge her husband and kill him in a duel. The fiery Spaniard mistakes Mr. Justice Proudfoot for the "obstacle," and tries in vain to induce him to accept a challenge. When Lady Proudfoot comes in from a shrimping excursion, the Justice, who believes that Hermanos is in love with her, reproaches her with her imprudence. Lady Proudfoot is much flattered by the idea of a lover, but is annoyed at not knowing who it is that is enamoured of her. Eventually, a reconciliation takes place between the Proudfoots, and Hermanos, returning unexpectedly, finds the couple embracing, and jumps to the conclusion that the Justice, whom he believes to be Marion's husband, is unfaithful to her.

The Duke continues to press his suit in the second act, in which, by his excited blundering, he interferes with the loves of Captain Chalford and Lucy. A bouquet is an accessory of importance in this act. The Duke has left one with Marion, telling her that he is prepared to elope with her, and that, if she wants him, she has only to throw the flowers from the balcony. Lucy finds the bouquet, and thinks that it has been sent by her fiancé; and he, believing that it is the gift of a rival, quarrels with her. Hermanos fancies the Captain is Marion's lover, and challenges him to single combat on the sands, an offer which the Captain promptly accepts. And so the Duke's errors and his excitement increase. In the third act, from a remark made by Marion, he jumps to the conclusion that the Count de Moret is her husband, and challenges him, the Count readily agreeing to take "satisfaction." But the susceptible Count is thus led to imagine that Marion is in love with him, the result being that the Countess, on entering, finds him kneeling at Mrs. Nairne's feet and emitting ecstatic vows. By this time, Marion has come to the conclusion that the only way to put a stop to the complications caused by the Duke's extravagant actions is to marry him; so, confessing her deception, she consents to become his wife.

Mr. Charles Hawtrey had to sacrifice some of his personal attractiveness to make up as the Duke of Hermanos; but he did so like the thorough artist that he is, and played the part with a vigorous sincerity that convinced the audience almost in spite of itself. The earnestness and impulsiveness of the enamoured hidalgo were depicted with spirit and skill; and the broken English and odd mispronunciation were given their full effect by Mr. Hawtrey, who kept the fun going till the fall of the curtain—no easy task in a play like this. Mr. E. Lyall Swete, with his expressive facial play, quaint oddity, and polished delivery, made an excellent Justice Proudfoot, full of ponderous respectability and droll self-esteem. Mr. Athol Stewart exactly realised the lisping dandy of the Bulwer Lytton period, and acted with ease and polish throughout; and Mr. Leon M. Lion reminded one of those quaint little Frenchmen whom Thackeray loved to describe and sometimes to draw, and acted in a crisp, keen, alert style that was very effective. Miss Kate Cutler was a delightful representative of the charming young widow, Marion Nairne, whom she represented very brightly and daintily; and Miss Anne Cleaver as Lucy gave an amusing caricature of one of the young ladies of the Anthony Trollope period, Miss Vane Featherston sustaining the not very salient part of the Countess de Moret with unfailing ease and pleasantry. Miss Joy Chatwyn was good as an Early Victorian servant; and Miss Fanny Brough, by her clever and tactful rendering of the rôle of Lady Proudfoot, kept in the domain of comedy a character which might easily have been let down to the level of crude farce. In the second act Miss Cleaver introduced an Early Victorian song, a setting by Miss Virginia Blakemore of some verses by Felicia Hemans, which was cordially received. The dresses, which were an important part of the entertainment, were cleverly designed by Mr. Tom Heslewood, and there was an excellent orchestra under the baton of Mr. Harold Robertson Grimston, one of whose compositions, a "Valse Lente," was included in the entr'acte music. The Noble Spaniard was preceded by that amusing bit of "low life" Feed the Brute, in which Mr. Robert Whyte as the working-man, Miss Mary Brough as Mrs. Pottle, and Miss Gwynne Herbert as Mrs. Wilks, acted with admirable realism and humour.

MR. NORMAN A. OVERTON and Miss Anna Beaumont are scoring on tour in the sketch of The Tyrant, with Miss Dagmar's company. Mr. Overton is seen to advantage in Mr. Fred Somerfield's part.

PRESENTATION.—Mr. E. De Hague Body, acting-manager of the Opera House, Burton-on-Trent, was, on the 19th, presented with an address and a purse of gold by his numerous admirers. The address was accompanied by an album containing the list of the very numerous subscribers, including the Mayor and other prominent townsfolk. Mr. Body expressed his deep sense of appreciation of the kindness extended to him.

THE NATIONAL THEATRE.

At the meeting of the General Committee of the National Shakespeare Theatre at the Mansion House on Tuesday, under the presidency of the Lord Mayor, there were present Lord Plymouth, Lord Lytton, Mr. B. S. Straus, M.P., Mr. Beerbohm Tree, Mr. E. S. Willard, Mr. Frederick Kerr, the Hon. Mrs. Alfred Lyttelton, Miss Lena Ashwell, Canon Rawnsley, Mrs. L. Gomme, Mr. Anthony Hope, Mrs. Holman Hunt, Mr. William Poel, Dr. Furnivall, Mr. Robert Donald, Mr. Acton Bond, Mr. Sidney Lee, Mr. Dennis Eadie, Mr. Laurence Binyon, Mr. Granville Barker, Mr. Sidney Low, Miss Lillah McCarthy, Mr. Osman Edwards, Mr. Frank T. Marzials, Professor Gollancz (hon. secretary), and Mr. Philip Carr (secretary).

Letters expressing regret for unavoidable absence were received from Lord Esher, Sir John Hare, Sir Lawrence Alma-Tadema, Sir Gilbert Parker, Mr. F. R. Benson, Mr. Edward Compton, Mr. Martin Harvey, Mr. Arthur Bourchier, Mr. Oscar Browning, Mr. Henry Ainley, and Mr. Matheson Lang.

The following report of the Executive Committee was considered:

THE REPORT.

The following is the full text of the report:

In accordance with the reference from the General Committee on June 22, 1908, the Executive Committee have carefully investigated the practical aspects of the proposal that the Shakespeare Memorial should take the form of a National Shakespeare Theatre. They are of opinion that the proposal is a practicable one, and that it be proceeded with.

The objects of a National Shakespeare Theatre, as conceived by your committee, are:

To keep the plays of Shakespeare in its repertory;

To revive whatever else is vital in English classical drama;

To prevent recent plays of great merit from falling into the oblivion to which the present theatrical system is apt to consign them;

To produce new plays and to further the development of the modern drama;

To produce translations of representative works of foreign drama, ancient and modern;

To stimulate the art of acting through the varied opportunities which it will offer to the members of its company.

To accomplish these purposes the theatre must be organised upon a true repertory system. It must produce a great variety of plays, and the productions, while simple, must be efficient and beautiful. Accordingly, the estimates include such a liberal endowment as shall free the directorate from all temptation to sacrifice its artistic policy to the making of large and immediate profits.

Your committee trusts that the establishment of the National Shakespeare Theatre in the metropolis will generally advance the production and appreciation of the national drama in the great cities of the Empire. They are of opinion that the time has not arrived for framing draft statutes in a form which could be considered final, but they have been able to report as follows:

1. They are of opinion that the sum required to build, equip, and endow a National Theatre would be about £500,000, and that this amount should be roughly allotted in the following manner:

(a) Site £100,000
(b) Building 100,000
(c) Stage and equipment 50,000
(d) Endowment 250,000

Any saving in items (a), (b), or (c), or any increase in the total sum should be added to the Endowment Fund.

2. That the name of the theatre should be "The National Shakespeare Theatre."

3. That, in order to provide for the legal ownership of the theatre and of the Endowment Fund, steps should be taken for the incorporation of the governing body, either by Royal charter (should His Majesty in Council be pleased to approve of the grant of such a charter) or by licence of the Board of Trade under Sec. 23 of the Companies Act, 1867 (30 and 31 Vic., c. 131).

4. That the supreme controlling authority of the theatre should be a body of governors, to be appointed as follows:

(a) Five governors appointed by the Crown;
(b) Eight governors appointed to hold office for five years—
One by the University of Oxford,
One " " Cambridge,
One " " London,
One " " Edinburgh,
One " " Dublin,
One " " Wales,
One by the Royal Academy,
One by the British Academy;
(c) One Governor nominated by the London County Council, and one by the Corporation of London, each to hold office for three years;
(d) The municipalities of the following cities of Great Britain and Ireland each to nominate one Governor to hold office for three years: Manchester, Birmingham, Liverpool, Leeds, Bristol, Edinburgh, Glasgow, Dublin;
(e) The following representatives of the self-governing Colonies to be ex-officio governors:
(a) The High Commissioner for Canada,
(b) The High Commissioner for Australia,
(c) The High Commissioners for any other Federated Colonies;
(f) The Ambassador of the United States;
(g) And the following to be ex-officio governors:
(a) The President of the Board of Education,
(b) The Minister of Fine Arts, in the event of such an office being created,
(c) The Chairman of the Shakespeare Memorial Association, Stratford-on-Avon,
(d) The President of the Academy of Dramatic Art.

5. They are of opinion that the governors thus appointed should co-opt additional governors in the proportion of one to every three of their number, to hold office for three years. One at least of these co-opted governors should be a woman.

6. They consider that, should any governor, appointed for a stated term, die or resign during his term of office, or should any of the above-mentioned bodies waive its right of nomination, or should any ex-officio governor decline to serve, the vacancy so created might be filled by co-option.

7. It seems hardly necessary to state that the services of the governors should be unremunerated.

8. They are of opinion that the governors should have power to appoint a Standing Committee, chosen from their own body, and that the Standing Committee should not exceed seven in all, of whom at least one should be a woman; also that the full body of governors should meet at least twice a year, and at other times on the requisition of one-third of their number, or when specially summoned by the Standing Committee; and that the Standing Committee should meet not less than nine times a year for the purpose of business.

9. After careful consideration, they are of opinion that sound administration of such a theatre requires that:

10. They consider that the arrangement of the programme should rest with the director, who should submit it for approval to the Standing Committee; and that all new plays should be reported upon by the director and the literary manager before being finally dealt with by the Standing Committee.

11. They hold that the director, if an actor, should in no case practise his art for fee or reward during his term of office; that the Standing Committee should decide, by fixed regulation or otherwise, on what exceptional occasions (and in no case for personal profit) he should be authorised to appear, or otherwise co-operate, in performances at other theatres; and that he should in no event be cast for any part on the stage of the National Shakespeare Theatre.

12. Following the precedent of all national theatres, the theatre should be a repertory theatre, designed, built, and equipped for this purpose, and the company, both in respect of number and of qualification, should be suited to the presentation of a repertory; and in order that there should be no doubt as to the meaning attached to the phrase, it seems desirable to state that a repertory theatre should be held to mean a theatre able to present, and which should present, at least two different plays of full length at evening performances in each week, and at least three different plays at evening performances and matinées taken together. One at least of such weekly performances should be a performance of an English classical play; Shakespeare's plays should be given on an average of at least one a week; and the number of plays presented in a year should be not less than twenty-five plays of full length. A play of full length means a play occupying at least two-thirds of the whole time of any given performance. But two two-act plays, or three one-act plays, composing a single programme, should, for the purpose of this statute, be reckoned as equivalent to a play of full length.

13. They recommend that whilst the arts of music and pantomime may be freely used when necessary, the repertory should consist of pieces in which the dramatic and not the musical element is predominant.

14. They consider that there would be advantage in arranging that the National Shakespeare Theatre should give performances in the towns of Great Britain and Ireland, as well as in London.

15. They are of opinion that there should be a pension fund attached to the theatre, to be raised and administered as the governors should determine.

16. They recommend that the statutes should make it clear that no person or persons should have any claim against the governors for a share in or charge upon profits. All the artists and employees of the theatre should be remunerated by a fixed salary or fixed payment for definite services; dramatic authors, however, might be remunerated by percentages upon the gross receipts produced by their plays. The governors should be at liberty, at their discretion, to allot a fixed sum out of the surplus in any year, after due provision has been made for a reserve fund, as a bonus to be divided among all the artists and employees of the theatre, in such proportion as the Standing Committee should determine.

17. They recommend that provision should be made for conferring some form of honorary distinction on actors who have completed a certain term of association with the National Shakespeare Theatre.

18. Finally, they would suggest the prudence of devising some means of meeting extraordinary expenditure; and they recommend that the Standing Committee should be empowered to place a sum not exceeding one-third of the endowment fund to a reserve fund, which might be drawn upon for the purpose of meeting a deficit in current annual expenditure.

Mr. BEERBOHM TREE asked whether the memorial would be kept back until the time of the tercentenary in 1916, or if it was intended to open it at an earlier date.

Lord LYTTON said it was important that they should have the funds in as soon as possible; by 1911 the latest.

Mr. WILLIAM POEL objected to the proposed director having authority to select, engage, and dismiss all artists and other employees, and make contracts on behalf of the theatre, without any control by the Standing Committee.

Mr. BEERBOHM TREE said that to put a director under the control of the Standing Committee would make management impossible.

Mr. GRANVILLE BARKER said it was the intention of the Executive Committee that the director should be solely responsible for the management of the affairs of the theatre, the ultimate responsibility resting with the Standing Committee. If the director exceeded his powers the Committee would have power to dismiss him. The Committee could never accept Mr. Poel's suggestion, because it would mean that the theatre would be run by a committee, and no manager worth his salt would submit to any such control.

Lord LYTTON said the director should be responsible for the management of the theatre, and the committee should have power to dismiss him—subject, of course, to an appeal to the trustees.

Mr. ANTHONY ELLIS suggested that they should ask the committee to define the relationship of the director and the committee more clearly. This was agreed to.

Mr. POEL objected to making the president of the Academy of Dramatic Art an ex-officio governor. It would create controversy if students were represented to the exclusion of actors and actresses, who were not to have a representative.

Miss LENA ASHWELL: Surely we should have a representative.

Mr. ACTON BOND, speaking as an actor, seconded the motion.

Mr. BEERBOHM TREE: What representative body of actors is there who could select a representative?

Finally, with the support of Mr. Tree, the proposal for a revision of the report in this particular matter, at the committee's discretion, was accepted.

The EARL OF LYTTON moved a resolution empowering the Executive Committee to give effect to the recommendations in the report.

The Hon. Mrs. ALFRED LYTTELTON seconded, and the motion was carried.

The LORD MAYOR proposed the following resolution, which was adopted unanimously:—

That this meeting of the General Committee of the Shakespeare Memorial is of opinion that the proposal that the Shakespeare Memorial should take the form of a National Shakespeare Theatre is a practicable one, and that it be proceeded with.

Mr. WILLIAM POEL proposed that the name of the theatre should be National Theatre (Shakespeare Memorial). The performances of Shakespeare's plays would be fewer and fewer in time to come. If the management were not popular another theatre might be established and take the name National.

Mr. MACKENZIE BELL seconded the motion, which was negatived.

Lord LYTTON deprecated any alteration in the title of the theatre.

Mr. LUTHER MUNDAY proposed, and Mr. ACTON BOND seconded, that they should recommend the executive that the title should be the Shakespeare National Theatre. The motion was carried.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—May I be allowed, as one who has, in and out of season, by voice and pen, as well as by considerable monetary expenditure, to point out that the scheme put forward by the present movers in this matter, and to be discussed at the Mansion House this week, is wholly impracticable and unbusinesslike. I would desire to say that I was asked to join the Executive Committee in the past, but I was unable to do so, as the scheme then put forward was wholly impossible; whilst, I may add, that the proposal I then made, conditionally, was not accepted nor taken up by the public. In the first place, the sum set out for the purchase of the site (£100,000) is quite unnecessary, since the proper method should be to obtain an option to acquire a building lease for the period of ninety-nine years, with a peppercorn rent for the first year, and a reasonable rent on a sliding scale for the remaining years, with the option also to purchase the site within five years if desired at a reasonable figure. The public will never subscribe £100,000 for a site, nor will they subscribe £100,000 for the erection of a theatre which can be well built for £50,000 or £60,000 at the very utmost—i.e., in the heart of the West End. As regards an endowment, I have twice interrogated Parliament upon this matter through the Hon. W. F. D. Smith, M.P., and have received the answer of both Governments in office at the time, that no such endowment would be made. Much as I would desire to see a National Theatre erected in London—and, I may add, I have never spared time nor money to further such a vital object—I regret to say the present scheme can only prove abortive, since it is not put forth on the proper economic business lines, which alone can ensure its success. Above all, such a scheme must first be "broad based upon the people's will," and as I have tested the public in many ways, and can speak from actual experience as to what they require and what they will only approve, I am certain the present scheme, much as I regret to say it, is doomed to failure. In conclusion, I would respectfully state that such a theatre should be ruled and regulated solely by men, and that no woman should ever have any voice in its management, i.e., if ever such a theatre was erected in our midst, for the inclusion of such would be entirely out of place and only help to accelerate its ultimate extinction.—Yours faithfully,
WALTER STEPHENS.
London, W., March 23.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—I crave the hospitality of your columns to place before the Committee of the National Theatre two suggestions: (1) That a member of the council of the Actors' Association be on the governing body of the National Theatre; (2) that minor parts be paid for at a rate not below £2 a week, and that an endeavour be made to give these parts to experienced actors who at the moment may have recently had indifferent luck. Provincial actors out of work should be able to feel that they could take a National Theatre job without shame while looking about for a better. What the president of the Gower-street school is doing in the galley is beyond the average actor's comprehension. The Gower-street school has done incalculable harm to the profession already, and placed many untried recruits above the heads of those who have borne the burthen and the heat of the day. For St. Genesius' holy sake let not the fledglings of the Gower-street school take the bread out of the mouths of established actors and actresses in connection with the National Theatre.
—Yours faithfully,
CECIL BROOKING.
Gaiety Theatre, Hastings, March 24.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—At this gloriously successful moment, when we hear of thousands being given anonymously towards a National Theatre, I hope you will think it opportune to put in a little word for Grand Opera in English to be associated in some way with it. I deeply regret to say that a clause I have seen printed in connection with this Shakespeare Memorial seems to preclude any hope of opera ever being held there, and since seeing that clause I have ascertained definitely that there is no idea of including Grand Opera. I presume that the National Theatre Company will occasionally make tours throughout the country; could not opera be played there during that time, or at a time when the theatre would be otherwise closed? In short, taking into consideration that this is a national scheme, could not opera be allowed some very, very small corner in the idea? There must be many who honour Shakespeare and the drama as much, perhaps more, perhaps less, perhaps equally, as opera, and would it not gladden everyone of these in proportion, and possibly increase their subscriptions, to see something done to encourage opera, at any rate until opera had a house of its own.

Pray believe me when I say I want all success and all happiness to the consummation of this glorious national theatre, and I am only putting in my little plea the same way as I should feel justified in helping drama and all elevating entertainment were the positions reversed.—Yours faithfully,
CHARLES MANNERS.

GUILDHALL SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

The students' orchestral concert, conducted by Dr. Cummings, was given on Wednesday evening at the City of London School. The programme commenced with Haydn's Symphony No. 1, in E flat (mit dem Paukenwirbel) (with drum roll). This symphony was produced during Haydn's second visit to London in 1795, a visit so successful that Haydn returned home with about £1,200, a sum at that time sufficient to secure his future. Haydn knew something about the drum, as at a rehearsal, the drum player failing to appear, young Smart—afterwards Sir George Smart—a violinist, in answer to Haydn's question "Can anyone here play the drum?" replied "I can." But after the first movement Haydn called him down, took the drumsticks, and showed how it ought to be done. In the performance of the Symphony the orchestral students were most successful in the opening Adagio and the second and final movement. Miss Lilian H. Tooley displayed ability in her singing of the recitative "Ah! come il cor" and aria "Ombra del caro bene" (Haydn). Miss Tooley was most successful in the aria, but seemed slightly nervous in the recitative. Brahms' Serenade in D, Op. 11, ably played by the orchestra, was also included in the programme. Tschaikowsky's air "God's will be done" ("Joan's Farewell" from the composer's Joan of Arc) was an ambitious song for a student, but Miss Fanny Cuthbert distinguished herself vocally, although her enunciation of the words might have been more distinct. The orchestra accompanied cleverly both the vocal items. A Preludio (MS.) by R. Zardo had much merit. The composer has a strong feeling for the modern Italian school of music, but the Preludio is certainly none the worse for that, as it contains a pleasing and melodious theme well carried out.

THE sale of dolls dressed by the principals of Mr. James M. Chute's Aladdin pantomime, at the Prince's Theatre, Bristol, and sold by auction by Mr. Bransby Williams, attracted a packed house to the Colston Hall, and realised £25. The function was arranged by Uncle Jack, editor of the Bristol Times and Mirror Children's Corner, and this lady (for "Uncle Jack" is a lady) has decided to endow a cot at the Weston-super-Mare branch of the Bristol Children's Hospital. The endowment takes place on April 21, and the tablet over the cot will bear the following inscription:—"The Bristol Times and Mirror Children's Corner 'Aladdin' cot, endowed as the result of a sale by auction of dolls dressed by the following members of Mr. James M. Chute's Aladdin pantomime, 1908-9:—Miss Ouida Macdermott, Miss Topsey Sinden, Miss Deborah Volar, Miss Daisy Wood, Mr. Bransby Williams, Mr. W. H. Powell, Mr. A. Clarke, Mr. A. Sutcliffe, and Mr. Jocelyn Hope."

"MAY I point out," writes an indignant actress to the Mail, "that numberless men find good and brilliant wives on the stage? It is a profession where women must learn the lessons of unlimited patience, self-control, cheerfulness under continual rebuffs, and dogged perseverance—not altogether undesirable qualities to bring into the marriage state. Surely a woman so trained compares favourably with an idle woman, taught to secure a rich husband at any cost, and ready to sell herself to anyone for money. In the case under discussion I fail to see that the society marriage, where the wife belonged to an old and honoured family, was any more a success than the stage alliance."

LONDON VARIETY THEATRES.

ISLINGTON EMPIRE.

A well-diversified programme is being presented at this popular hall, and audiences rule large and enthusiastic as a consequence. Georg Hackenschmidt, the famous wrestler, is at the top of the bill, and local athletes are following with the greatest interest the efforts of local champions to stand the fifteen minutes. It is needless to say that there is nothing very alarming to Hackenschmidt in the opposition put up. His visit, which is announced as his farewell, presumably before his big match in Australia, is a big success. Ada Cerito is still singing "Half time, change over," and it goes very well. The hit of the evening was made by Leo Tell, the well-known mimic, who apparently finds it a simple matter to reproduce the sounds of the most distinctly different things—cats, flageolets, 'cellos, motor-cars, and cornets.

A very clever item in his act was his imitation of a horse, and some idea of the reception he gained may be gauged by the fact that he had to concede two encores. A very pleasant act was submitted by Collins's Twelve Dutch Girls, who, in a variety of songs and dances, proved themselves to be very well trained and clever little artists. The Fidardy Trio, Continental acrobats, present a very smart show, full of skilfully-performed feats, which deserved and gained well-merited applause. The Three Sisters Sprightly have established themselves as firm favourites here. Their first item, a song on Fashions, caused great amusement; and their second, a golf scena, was even more successful, all three ladies having a capital sense of humour.

Sammy Shields, Scotch comedian, is also gaining laurels, his singing, patter, and football business combining to make his turn very popular. He caused any amount of laughter, and his topical gags gained a good deal of applause. Harry Conlin succeeded in hitting the public taste in two songs, the first, "I'm not going to play any longer," going well, and the second being a good dame song. Harry Morgan, who opens the programme, gained applause for a song and dance. The Bioscope is very amusing this week, and Mr. Petersen's orchestra, as usual, sustains its high reputation. Mr. B. Adams, the manager, is very attentive in the front of the house.

EMPRESS, BRIXTON.

An excellent programme has been arranged for this week by the genial manager, Mr. Nelson Francis. A prominent place in the evening's entertainment is assigned to Fred Karno's latest side-splitter The Yap-Yaps. This is being presented by a well-chosen company. There is an exciting and stirring boxing scena, which is greatly to the liking of the majority of those present. An exhibition in the noble art of self-defence by those well-known exponents Young Josephs and Alf. Reed is followed with great interest, and the contestants come in for very liberal recognition. A funny set-to—in which science may truly be said not to play an important part—is that furnished by the Honourable Chinn and Big Benn, the bruiser. Their amusing fooling is the cause of hilarity, and when the curtain is rung down the applause is long and deafening.

The Four Kellys, acrobats of no mean ability, give an exhibition of tumbling that is quite unique in its way, and their daring feats earn for them hearty goodwill. Dave Samuels, described as the "Jew marvel," has a regular winner in his pot-pourri song, which is composed of two or three lines from several of our leading popular numbers. As a Scotchman he is also a great success, his singing and dancing being too funny for words. The Daunton-Shaw trick cyclists are in their happiest vein, being responsible for neat and graceful execution of many difficult feats. A great feature of their turn is the comedy merchant, who contributes excellent fooling. Woodhouse and Wells show ability in the Terpsichorean art. A dainty comedienne with a pleasing voice and manner is Miss Connie Leon, who scores heavily in "I like your French bonnet," which she follows with "Peggy the pride of the mill," and concludes with some well executed dancing. Miss Tot Davis was unable to appear on the night of our visit, and in her place came the Louie Gilbert Cowboys, youngsters who sing and dance very creditably. The funny stories of Dutch Daly are much appreciated, especially by the male members of the audience; his concertina rendering of Mendelssohn's "Spring Song" brings down the house. Lewis's Marvellous Mannikins certainly do not belie their name, and the pitch of perfection to which their working has been brought may truly be said to be wonderful. The stage setting also is beautiful.

An amusing little sketch entitled Man's Equal is being presented by Herbert E. Terry and Jessie Danvers. A Suffragette and her lover go out for a cycling picnic. Arrived at their destination, they have a tiff, and the young man rides off, leaving his sweetheart alone. She passes the time by trying to smoke a cigar, the attempt ending in dismal failure, and several times she asserts that she does not know the meaning of the word "fear." The appearance of an escaped convict on the scene soon alters her tone of bravado. Assuring her that he will not hurt her, he commandeers her bicycle, and also orders her to give him her clothes, as he wants to disguise himself in order to further his chances of escape. She tearfully pleads to him not to be so cruel, but he is obdurate, and she goes behind a hedge, and one by one throws the garments over to him. The effect when he has them on is ludicrous, and amidst the roars of the house he departs. Left to herself, and without clothes, she is in a quandary as to what to do, when her lover appears and says that he has heard of the escape of a convict and had consequently become a bit anxious about her Explanations follow, a temporery rig-up is arranged, and the curtain falls. Keith and Rigby also entertain, and pictures on the Bioscope conclude a pleasant evening.

SHOREDITCH OLYMPIA.

The programme at the above hall is again this week crowded with attractions of a varied and interesting nature, and Mr. H. H. Ketteman, the energetic manager, must be complimented on the manner in which all the items are presented. The principal feature of the entertainment is the appearance of Mr. George Gray and company in the ever-popular sketch The Fighting Parson. It is almost needless to say anything regarding this production, and certainly impossible to say more in praise of it than has been already written. The scenes employed are well adapted to the purpose, and the various effects tend to further the success of this already famous playlet. Mr. George Gray enacts the title-rôle in his well-known conscientious manner, and invests the part with more than sufficient interest to hold the close attention of the audience. The many members of his company each perform their respective parts in a manner deserving of high praise.

Miss Elsie Clare, a charming vocalist, sings with taste and feeling "I never knew till now how much I love you." The blind musical genius, Martin Henderson, proves his worth beyond all doubt as a musician of high order. His piano playing is a delight to the ear, and his rendering of "The Lost Chord" on the concertina sets one wondering how it is that such melodious music can be obtained from this instrument. He is recalled again and again.

Collins's Twelve Dutch Girls contribute a pleasing singing and dancing scena. Their dances, both individually and collectively, are neatly executed. The comedy pair, Stacey and Williams, create considerable amusement with their humorous patter and songs, and the dance at the end of their turn is cleverly performed, their steps and movements being precisely in unison. The Irish humorist, Mr. Joe O'Gorman, relates several quaint anecdotes in his own inimitable manner, and forces laughter at every turn. His songs, too, are of a particularly droll nature, and evoke much merriment. Miss Eva Ellis charmingly sings "My little piece of Dresden china," and finishes with a dance, for which she is deservedly applauded. George Ridgwell is the possessor of a fine voice, which he puts to good use in a tuneful ballad, and he afterwards proves his ability on the cornet by a capital rendering of "Killarney." Mr. Harry Cooke does well with his song, composed solely of the titles of other songs, and meets with every success. The entertainment is brought to a successful conclusion by the Imperial Bioscope, with a series of new and original pictures.

THE MIDDLESEX.

An interesting and fairly well-written little tragedy was produced on Monday, March 15, at the Middlesex by Mr. Jose G. Levay's company, the title being:

"THE IRONY OF FATE."

Mr. Graham Wolfe .....Mr. Harold Summers
Mrs. Graham Wolfe .....Miss Lena Loveridge
Edgar Wolfe .....Little Molly Davis
Dr. Ernest Cartwright ....Mr. Harry Barford
Mary .....Miss Clarice Shirley

The scene of this playlet is given as the Library of Mr. Graham Wolfe's country house. Mr. Wolfe's business in London is that of money-lender—a calling of which he seems not too proud, if we are to judge by what he says to his little son Edgar. While the little family is engaged in conversation, a caller in the person of Dr. Cartwright is announced, and on hearing his name called by the servant, Edgar tells his father that the doctor is not too fond of him (Mr. Wolfe), and that he referred to him as a vampire, who would suck the last drop of blood out of anybody who happened to be in his power. Mr. Wolfe decides that he will be revenged upon the doctor for making such a remark in the hearing of the son, whom he loves very dearly. Dr. Cartwright has borrowed £500 from Wolfe, and the bill has to be met on the following day. When the two men are alone, Cartwright asks for a renewal of the bill for three months, explaining that if this is not granted he will be ruined. Wolfe reminds him of his insulting remarks, and Cartwright offers an apology, and pleads again for the extension of time in which to meet the liability. But Wolfe, indignant that his son should have listened to aspersions cast upon his own father, is obdurate, and declines to grant even a day's grace, and Cartwright leaves in a condition of mental distress. A few minutes later Mrs. Wolfe rushes in to her husband with the news that the little boy has been taken suddenly and seriously ill—he has broken a blood-vessel—and the servant is sent to fetch Dr. Cartwright. Wolfe learns on telephoning to the doctor's house that he has not yet returned, and a very short time elapses before the maid returns with a statement to the effect that Cartwright has committed suicide in a lane. And on the heels of this sad intelligence, Mrs. Wolfe comes in to tell her husband that their boy is dead. With the scene of Wolfe's remorse the sketch ends. Mr. Harold Summers as the implacable financier yet loving father was distinctly good, and Miss Lena Loveridge presented a sympathetic study of his wife. The other rôles had suitable exponents.

Among the individual "turns" of the variety entertainment here last week, Mr. Billy Williams, known to fame as "the man in the velvet suit," is taking the house by storm. He has a capital whistling song, and altogether is as merry and jovial as we have always known him to be. His songs, "Save a little bit for me" and "I must go home to-night" find great favour with the audience, who chorus some of the lines with much gusto. Miss Lily Burnand, ever fresh and vivacious, appears first as a slavey, and renders with considerable expression a most entertaining ditty. She also contrives to be amusing in her second item, which seems to concern the infelicity of married life. Miss Rosie De Vere proves quite an engaging comedienne, and Sinclair and Gordon appear in a most attractive petite comedy act, while Miss Elsie Forster wins golden opinions for her delightful singing and dancing. The Dalgarnos submit an extremely interesting original duologue appropriately entitled Caught Napping, and Miss Winnie Winn distinguishes herself by her vocalism and Terpsichorean efforts. Mr. Frank Couch is responsible for an extremely well-acted scena, in which he plays the character of an old-time London actor, "telling the tale to a barmaid," the pathos and comedy of the impersonation being capitally represented. Miss Flo Penley and Mr. George English create merriment with their musical comedy skit, Four a Shilling, Fine Mackerel, and Les Sucriskis give a daring and clever aerial gymnastic demonstration. Mr. Horace Jones, the quaint comedian and patterer, furnishes a humorously absurd picture of a curate singing "Let us be joyful," which fairly brings down the house, and the Gregson Trio are intensely funny in their comedy sketch The Dummy. The Sisters Selwyn offer some enchanting vocalism in the songs "My sweet rainbow" and "I'm not going away," and their dancing gains universal admiration. Sevill Foster and company with Eight Dreams and a Nightmare, and Robbins and Collier in the comedy railway scene, The Lady and the Porter, also make notable contributions to the programme, and the Daunton-Shaw troupe of Australian trick cyclists are once more seen in their marvellous exhibition. On Wednesday evening, St. Patrick's Night, Miss May Gurney gave an exquisite rendering of "The Wearin' o' the Green" and "The Kerry Dance." Attractive pictures by the New Bioscope conclude.

BATTERSEA PALACE.

The programme for the current week at this cosy hall is one of exceptional attractiveness, the principal engagement being that of the popular chorus singer Miss Lottie Lennox, who roused the enthusiasm of the audience for her excellent rendering of her latest song, "Join the Territorials," the chorus of which was heartily taken up. Miss Lennox also obliged with "The old green hat." In connection with the visit of this artist a singing competition is being held for the lady who can sing any of her songs as near to the original as possible, the sum of £5 being provided by the management as a prize. On the evening of our visit three ladies appeared, and were included in the semi-final, which took place during the first house last night (Friday).

Mr. Ernest Rees, billed as a droll comedian, certainly deserves the title, as he kept the audience highly amused and in a state of hilarity by his amusing patter and his inimitable rendering of "Father's photograph." The Four Figaros are conspicuous for their melodious interlude entitled Ten Minutes on the Continent, in which the national songs and dances of Switzerland, Spain, and Holland are introduced. Miss Josephine Crosk has obtained great popularity in this district for her vocal abilities. This week she scores a great success with a new song, "Kiss daddy good-night," which will, no doubt, rank with the successes of the year if its reception at Battersea be any criterion. Hayes and Watson gave a fine exhibition of sand dancing on a billiard table; Archie Pitt also gave a good account of himself as a comedian in the song "I don't think," and in a well-executed dance. The Sisters Belmont ably acquitted themselves in song and dance. A dainty and charming turn is that of Lona, a pretty young lady, who presents a refined musical act, in which various instruments are employed.

Mrs. Bennett and company play a powerful sketch entitled The Moreton Pearls, the characters in which are capably undertaken by Mrs. Bennett as Olga Lestrange, Mr. L. Strange as Gentleman Jack, and Mr. M. Farrar as Detective Darham. Mr. James McCarthy still attends to the comfort of his numerous visitors in his usual courteous manner.

"A MIDNIGHT MYSTERY."

A Detective Drama, in Five Scenes, Played for the First Time in England at the Empire, Camberwell, on Monday, March 22.

Frank Holt .....Mr. John G. Brandon
Judas Stein .....Mr. Frank Hawthorne
"Red" McNally .....Mr. Geo. P. Haines
Maurice Fane .....Mr. Henry J. Corliss
Mrs. Fane .....Miss Mary Bronton
Judy Flanagan .....Miss Reba Hall

Several of the sketches from the pen of the author of the above playlet, notably The Yellow Fang and The Girl and the Tough, have already won favour in London, and a success may also be credited to Mr. John G. Brandon for his production of A Midnight Mystery. As a thrilling detective story the piece has its merits, but it is in its portrayal of scenes and characters of New York life that its chief recommendation lies. It is a story of the abduction of Maurice Fane, a diamond merchant's clerk, who has been carried off by a gang of scoundrels. The aid of the great detective Frank Holt is sought by the young man's mother, and he promises to carry the case through. Fortunately, the abduction had been witnessed by Judy Flanagan, a "waif," who recognises the picture shown by the clerk's mother as that of a young man she had seen bundled into a cab the night before. Holt gains his first clue by disguising himself as an old Irish woman, and overhears a plot laid by Judas Stein and "Red" McNally, the heads of the "East River Gang," to carry off Mrs. Fane as well. Again disguising himself, this time as an ice-cream vendor in Central Park, Holt witnesses the abduction of Mrs. Fane, and springing on to the back of the cab, follows the villains to their haunt. To gain admittance to the thieves' den he adopts the guise of a New York "tough," and by this means prevents the killing of young Fane, who is bound to the wall. Fane has hidden the coveted diamonds so securely that his captors are unable to find them, and it is for the purpose of compelling him to speak that they have brought his mother there. They bring in a dumb Chinaman to apply the torture peculiar to his race, but scarcely has he begun when Maurice gives in, and consents to reveal his hiding-place. Eventually Holt is recognised by "Red" McNally, and there is a terrific struggle between the two men, when Judy Flanagan appears in the nick of time, and shoots McNally dead, ere the police enter and take charge of the Jew. Mr. John G. Brandon is the hero of the sketch, and acquits himself effectively of an arduous part, in which he sustains no less than five characters—his depiction of the New York "tough" being a particularly clever assumption. Judy Flanagan, a comely young girl, who stands in the same relation to Holt as Sherlock Holmes's page-boy did to that great detective, is played with spirit and keenness by Miss Reba Hall. "Red" McNally, who reminds one of Professor Moriarty, is thoroughly depicted by Mr. Geo. P. Haines, and his villainous associate, Judas Stein, is comically impersonated by Mr. Frank Hawthorne. The sketch is a marvel of setting, the famed Central Park being presented with every degree of realism, and changing instantly to an old wharf with the river beyond, the lights shining in the distance.

A foremost place in Mr. Jesse Sparrow's programme is occupied by Miss Millie Hylton, a rare favourite at Camberwell. Her return to the Empire is marked by the production of a new scena, called "Won't You Play at Sweethearts?" addressed to an imaginary beau. It has a lilting chorus, which Miss Hylton sings with much charm. The conductor of the orchestra, however, specially appointed for the number, thinks he can do better, and sings the refrain in a tuneful baritone. He is challenged by the comedienne to repeat the chorus on the stage, and promptly accepts the invitation. Arrived on the "boards," the conductor becomes aggressively amorous, much to the lady's indignation, until he is recognised as the veritable lover to which the song refers, and all ends in harmony. Miss Hylton is very daintily attired, and sings with her wonted captivating charm. As a "Nell Brinkley Girl," too, she exerts a fascinating influence.

The absurdity Ananias II. introduces Mr. Stratton Mills as a solicitor's office boy, and much laughter is created by a diverting sketch, which has before won success. Mr. Cecil Newton as a young barrister and Miss Minnie Blanchard as his fiancée give valuable assistance. Miss Queenie May sings in a tuneful voice a song, the sentiment of which appeals powerfully to the audience in "Just remind them of the days gone by," but the youthful singer is hardly so well suited in a lyric with the refrain "Go home and put your trousers on." "The Motor Man" is one of the many devices for creating laughter submitted by the Hersleb Brothers, clever and daring knockabouts; and merriment is also made by the Three Comedy Chanters, who combine humour and harmony in a manner most acceptable to the audience. Mr. W. G. Webber is applauded enthusiastically for his singing of the basso ballads, "The Deathless Army" and "Asleep in the Deep." Great Scott does wonderful things on the unsupported ladder, and the programme is also contributed to by Marlow and Manton, in Winning a Wife; Mr. Arthur Kingsley, light comedian; the L.V.O. Trio, "those troublesome slaveys; and Jeape's Animated Graphic. Mr. Percy Ford is a courteous and capable manager.

A FASCINATED JUDGE.

A claim by Messrs. Marinelli and Co., theatrical agents, against Miss Lalla Selbini, for £23 commission on performances at the Empire, was heard on Saturday in Westminster County Court.

The plaintiffs' case was that Miss Selbini signed an agreement to pay them commission on all engagements within a certain period.

The defence was that Miss Selbini's mother obtained the Empire engagement.

Miss Selbini, giving evidence, said she saw Mr. Marinelli in Paris while performing there and refused to sign an agreement with him. She was going on to Berlin, and Mr. Marinelli told her she would find harder treatment there than she had found in Vienna, because she would be met by men who would take the clothes off her back in the street unless she signed the contract with him. She signed under coercion.

Explaining the reference to Vienna, the witness said that men burst into her room at 7 a.m. while she was in bed, and carried off her clothing and jewellery because she had failed to carry out an old contract to perform in that city.

Mr. Marinelli, in evidence, gave a different version of the Paris interview. He told Miss Selbini she had broken four contracts in various cities, for which judgments had been entered against her, and that he could not act for her in Berlin unless she made him her sole agent.

The Dresden Selbini contract was put in evidence.

Deputy-Judge Bevan (reading): "Miss Lalla Selbini, the Bathing Beauty."

Mr. Cranstoun (for defendant) said that was one of her performances. Was it likely this young lady was a superior power in bargaining with Mr. Marinelli?

The Deputy-Judge: If you ask me, I think she could twist him round her little finger. When she turned her black eyes on me I was fascinated; my pen dropped from my fingers.

Mr. Cranstoun: That is flattery.

Judgment was given for Messrs. Marinelli and Co. with costs.

AMUSEMENTS IN AUSTRALIA.

SYDNEY, Feb. 16.—The Old Folks at Home, by Mr. John A. Campbell, was produced by Messrs. Meynell and Gunn at the Palace Theatre on the 13th. The mounting is decidedly picturesque, Virginian cotton-fields abounding, and an old English homestead, with a beautiful rose garden, was hugely admired. Mr. C. R. Stanford cast and stage-managed, also playing, with fine judgment, Lord Howard Kenilworth. A coon scene introduced shows Misses Marion Norman (Aunt Dinah), Queenie Williams, and Maggie Dickenson at their best; and, helped by a lot of clever children, Miss Alice Deorwyn was an ideal farmer's wife. Mr. Conway Wingfield was Andrew Ross, bringing out all the manly traits of the character; and Miss Beatrice Holloway made Dorothy sweet and charming. Mr. R. J. Lorraine was a typical Mexican bravo; and the artist, Lowell, who foiled his murderous attempt, had a competent exponent in Mr. F. Coope. The faithful mute was admirably portrayed by Mr. H. T. Lewis; and Miss Ida Gresham made a handsome Patricia. For strong character-acting Mr. J. B. Atholwood has no equal in this country, and he made stern old Christopher Robin stand out like a cameo. Mr. Leo Chateau and Miss May Roberts as a big sailor and a dainty maid provided the fun; and two solemn footmen, played by Mr. E. M. Keon and Mr. J. R. Howard, created some laughter.

"The Scarlet Pimpernel" was revived on the 13th at the Royal by Mr J. C. Williamson. For this revival Miss Beatrice Day was engaged to play Lady Blakeney, a decided item of strength. Miss Day's incisive elocution and airy persiflage came to the aid of the character, and her strong scenes with Chauvelin and Sir Percy were very fine. Mr. Julius Knight plays Sir Percy consistently and well; Mr. Leslie Victor is most impressive as Chauvelin, never once losing sight of his goal; Miss Susie Vaughan as the Comtesse de Tournai made a big dramatic mark; and Miss Guildford Quin was a deliciously simple Suzanne. Mr. Harry Plimmer was the Prince of Wales, dignified, distinct, and gallant. The Vicomte de Tournai had a most efficient representative in Mr. R. S. McKay.

"The Squatter's Daughter," by Mr. Anderson's company, at the Criterion, will run for the ten nights now to pass before Miss Eugenie Duggan and her husband, Mr. William Anderson, leave for England in search of rest and novelties, human and dramatical.

The Tivoli welcomed Cinquevalli back on the 13th with tremendous applause, and Mr. Harry Rickards's very large company shared in the enthusiasm. It is a fine bill.

"A MUSICAL TRAGEDY."

On Thursday evening, March 18, the attractions of the programme at the Shepherd's Bush Empire were, at the first house, enhanced by the introduction of an original musical comedy sketch, written and invented by Mr. Bert Gilbert, with music by Mr. George Hall. The little piece served to introduce to an English audience Miss Mabelle Morgan, a charming artist, who has a considerable reputation in Australia, and who was announced as "Australia's Gum Tree Girl," a description which, it must be admitted, does not mean very much to an audience on this side of the world. Miss Morgan, of course, played the leading part in A Musical Tragedy, and was assisted by Mr. William Le Brun. The sketch proved vastly to the taste of the audience, and, furthermore, gave to Miss Morgan opportunities for the exercise of an uncommonly good voice and the display of a very handsome presence. She appeared first in evening dress, and later on in a kind of principal boy costume. Her first song was particularly well executed, and earned hearty applause.

The slight plot of the interplay between the would-be tragedy queen, provided already with a play that is to bring the world to her feet; the sceptical, cynical, little musical comedy manufacturer, to whom, malgré lui, she pours out her hopes, her plans, and, incidentally, her play (but who decides that drama is played out, and recruits her to the ranks of musical comedy); and the jealous page-boy (well played by a gentleman whose name we were unable to discover), provides Miss Morgan, a novelty in the shape of a mixed (very) duet between Mr. Le Brun and a gramophone, and some humorous business which was pleasingly characterised by complete absence of exaggeration and vulgarity. But there is yet room on the peg for more and even for better hangings. With a little strengthening and elaboration we shall expect to meet this sketch again, quite possibly delighting larger audiences within the magic circle of the West End.

Barney Armstrong is singing a new song, "Lauder on the brain," in which he is assisted by Little Jimmy Steel. This should be a big number for the West-end halls.

Mr. Editor.—Sir,—In your report of the Hippodrome, Great Yarmouth, of last week, my name, and also that of Miss Ena Richards, was omitted. Should be glad if you would give publicity to the fact.—Yours faithfully, Beanland, Hippodrome, Lowestoft, March 23.

To the opening of new rinks there seems to be no end. In addition to those already recorded in The Era, we now have to chronicle the opening of skating palaces at Bedford, Huddersfield (about which Mr. Samuel E. Winslow says it is "the smartest and neatest rink I have ever seen"), Edinburgh, Bath, Belfast, Harrogate, Reading, and Ipswich.

Two thousand pairs of the famous "Baltimore Flyer" skates have been put into active service at the Victoria Hall, Exeter. This is part of a gigantic order for 30,000 pairs now being made for different rinks in all parts of the country. The Victoria Hall has been leased for three seasons of seven months each by Rinkeries, Ltd.

Hanley is to have a new rink costing £6,000. A site has been secured, and a ten years' lease has been signed. The rink itself is to be 350ft. long and 200ft. wide. A large motor garage will be a feature of this establishment for the use of patrons coming from a distance. The rink will be erected immediately opposite the Town Hall. The opening of the rink now in course of construction by the Wolverhampton, Bilston and District Skating Rinks, Ltd., at Stow Heath will take place on Saturday, April 3. The skating surface will be 200ft. by 80ft.

Presentation.—On the occasion of his first anniversary as manager of the new Alhambra Theatre, Belfast, Mr. Will White was on Monday the recipient of some valuable gifts. Mr. Ed. Smith (formerly of the Parthenon, Liverpool) on behalf of the directors of the New Alhambra, presented Mr. White with an illuminated address and a cheque for £25, and from the staff and some friends a very handsome diamond ring. Mr. White, who was received with loud cheers, thanked the donors and Mr. Smith, and said that he would do all in his power—as in the past—to merit the high esteem of the directors and of the many patrons of the theatre. It should be added that Mr. White was the recipient of several wires of congratulation during the evening.

SEIZURE OF PIRATED MUSIC.

Gottfried Martin, twenty-two, described as a wastepaper merchant, of Baroness-buildings, Shoreditch, was charged on Tuesday, before Mr. Baggallay, at North London, with having in his possession 32,173 pirated copies of various copyright musical works.

Mr. Travers Humphreys appeared to prosecute on behalf of the Music Publishers' Association, and said that on this occasion the magistrate would be asked to grant process against another person for conspiring with the prisoner to produce and distribute pirated music. The evidence already given showed that a man named Mansfield was arrested some months ago in the neighbourhood of Cassland-road, South Hackney, with a number of pirated songs in his possession, and, after two remands, he was discharged. Inquiries made by Detective-Sergeant William Smith, J Division, led to the seizure of thousands of pirated copies of music at Cassland-road, Holywell-lane, and Morris-road, Poplar. In all 48,000 copies were seized, the hiding-places being stables, lofts, or cellars.

Simon Sobel, a printer, of Hackney-road, said that he knew the prisoner as George Talner. He began to print music for him five years ago, and altogether he had printed about sixty different songs. About Christmas last he received a letter from the prisoner, who was then in Newcastle, asking him to clean two litho stones and "put down" "Asleep in the deep." The request for copies was urgent, the writer adding, "They are going mad for it up here." The witness printed 5,000 copies of that song, the prisoner sending him by post the transfer of the song to place on the litho stones. The witness was paid 4s. per ream, which represented 500 copies. He packed up the 5,000 copies, and a carman named William Wardell took them away.

Later the witness printed 5,000 copies of the song "My ain folk," and subsequently another 5,000, of which he gave the prisoner 400 or 500 copies, meeting him by arrangement in the Hackney-road. The rest of the copies were taken away by the carman Wardell. The witness asked the prisoner not to send any more boxes to his place for the music to be packed in, as he had not room to store them. The prisoner replied that the music must be packed in boxes in the same way as other printers packed it.

The last lot he printed was 5,000 copies of the song "Eileen Alannah." He received the transfer by post. When he heard that the police had made a seizure he took this lot to his father-in-law's premises in Holywell-lane, Shoreditch. The prisoner advised him to clean the songs off the litho stones, and referred to the arrest of Mansfield, remarking that they were quite safe, as he (Mansfield) would not give them away. The prisoner had told him that the music was old and that the copyright had expired.

Witness, now, however, pressed by the magistrate, after fencing the question for some time, admitted that he knew he was doing wrong in printing the music.

Mrs. Sobel, wife of the last witness, gave evidence in support of his statement, and said that she read all her husband's letters.

Mr. Humphreys: When were you married?—Witness: Last December.

Mr. Arthur Preston, chief agent to the Association, produced the copyright certificates for fifty-four different songs amongst those seized, and formally proved the certificates relating to the songs "Asleep in the deep," "Eileen Alannah," "Down the vale," and "Sweet Eileen."

Prisoner was remanded on bail.

MASONS AT WORK.

The first regular meeting of the session of the Chelsea Lodge of Freemasons No. 3,098 was held at the Town Hall, Chelsea, on Friday last under the presidency of Mr. Henry Coutts, W.M., Walter Hitch, S.W., Douglas White, acting J.W., Wolfe S. Lyon, treasurer, C. J. Doughty, secretary, W. F. K. Walton, S.D., G. H. Dyball, J.D., W. H. Atlas, acting I.G., Albert Le Fre, acting I.P.M., Angelo Asher, organist, A. E. Nicklin, steward, and J. H. McNaughton, tyler. The Worshipful Master advanced Mr. Ernie Myers, and completed the ceremony with Messrs. Herbert La Martine, Walter Ward, and Ed. E. Ford. Letters and telegrams of regret of unavoidable absence were received from a number of members from all parts of the United Kingdom. Amongst the brethren were Bertie Ralland, Wm. Ward, W. Collinson, Ernie Myers, Paul Murray, W. Doust, Ed. E. Ford, Ernie Warsaw, Herbert La Martine, H. J. Kisbey, Sydney Chaplin, Victor Kelly, R. E. Wilding, J. Grant, Ernie Chester, Albert Christian, J. B. Helm, C. H. Burton, W. Permâné, Tom Parker, Bowker Andrews, and Eric Farr. The Lodge was honoured by many visitors, including Hy. C. Courtney, Liverpool Dramatic 1609; Walter Barrett, Glasgow Dramatic 571; Eric Greenwood, King Solomon 29; Sydney Rogers, Earl's Court 2765; Chas. F. Galetti, Ben Hur 818, Chicago, Illinois; J. L. Ladley, Earl's Court 2765; B. H. Ward (Almon), Shepherd's Bush 1328; &c.

Mr. J. Howard Shackleton, the popular conductor of the orchestra at the Hippodrome, Portsmouth, since the opening entertainment, has this week been succeeded by Mr. Amos Parker.

Mr. E. V. Barr, a local comedian, had a flattering reception at the Great Yarmouth Hippodrome on Monday, where he reappeared after an absence of only a few weeks. Mr. Barr is making rapid strides, and his new songs and stories greatly amused the audience.

Terola made his first public appearance at the Grand Theatre, Hanley, on Monday, when his great sensational act of "motoring a whirling cyclone" caused great excitement, the feat being so daring. Wild shouts of enthusiasm welcomed the completion of the act, which is quite original and fully protected. The cost of the apparatus alone has been over £500.

Another entertaining variety programme is presented at the Lyceum Theatre Stafford, this week. Maurin's Fountains is a decidedly effective and pretty spectacle; Hand and Heart give a smart comedy act; Fred Ellis sings good songs; and Nellie Rutley makes a happy little Dutch girl; Johnny McElroy, an old Stafford favourite, causes screams of laughter with his "no name" sketch; and the Empire pictures are good.

"BOY BLUE" made his farewell bow to Birmingham audiences at the Prince of Wales's Theatre last Saturday evening, when the principals were all enthusiastically greeted. Early in the second part Miss Hetty King, after rendering one of her popular songs, was inundated with magnificent bouquets, and several souvenirs were handed across the footlights. In the course of an effective little speech Miss King thanked the audience for the kindness shown to her not only on that night, but during the whole of her stay. She did not know how to express her regret at having to leave them and the boys and girls with whom she had been so happy.

ANOTHER interesting little interlude occurred when Mr. G. H. Elliott presented Miss Tyrrell, the ballet mistress, and all the girls with souvenirs. He, too, thanked the audience, and said that the girls were the best he had ever met and a credit to the theatre and the town they came from.

DURING the forest scene all the performers gathered on the stage, flanked by the stage hands and theatre employees, while Mr. Graham made a speech of thanks to audience and artists. He thought artistically and materially Boy Blue surpassed everything they had previously attempted. Mr. Graham referred to the fact that when he first assumed the responsibility of running the theatre eleven years ago they had only two concert halls, but the halls with the two-shows-a-night system now equalled ten, while two additional theatres had been built. Still, the Prince's had always been well supported. Mr. Graham added that they had had a lot of principal boys, but the audience would agree with him in saying that they had had none to surpass Miss Hetty King. The other artists were referred to personally in eulogistic terms.

PAUMIER—ELLIOTT.—March 20, at St. Peter's Church, Regent-square, London, by the Rev. R. N. Pyk, Robert T. Paumier (Gilbert) to Pauline Elliott, daughter of the late J. B. Elliott (Elliott Savonas).

WILLIAMS—WOOD.—March 20, at Brussels, Mr. Jo. Williams, stage manager of Mr. Tom Barrasford's Alhambra, Brussels, to Miss Sarah Wood, late of the Eight Cocktails.

DEATHS.

ASKEW.—March 21, 1909, at Eden Cottage, Spennymoor, Mary Jane, the dearly loved wife of Henry Askew.

EDWARDS.—On March 19, 1909, at Ivythorn, Windsor-road, Torquay, Roger Edwards, dearly loved father of Mrs. Sam and Mrs. Joe Livesey. Deeply mourned by his sorrowing daughters. His end was peace.

HAMPSON.—At 19, Stratford-road, Heaton, Newcastle-on-Tyne, on the 17th inst., Ernie, the dearly-beloved husband of Josephine Hylton, aged 35, phthisis. Interred at Elswick Cemetery, Saturday, March 20. Deeply mourned.

OLIVE.—On Feb. 28, age 34, at Seattle, U.S.A., Lily Olive, the dearly-loved friend of Kitty Kirwan, suddenly, of heart disease. Never to be forgotten.

SYNGE.—March 24, at Dublin, E. John Millington, Irish dramatist, youngest son of the late John Hatch Synge, B.L.

WOODMAN (ROMER).—On March 23, Alexander Haines Woodman (Alec Romer), third son of the late T. H. Woodman, Lee-terrace, Blackheath, S.E., beloved husband of Annie E. Woodman (Margaret Radcliffe), in his thirty-eight year. All friends kindly accept this as the only intimation. No cards. All communications, 124, Clapham-road, S.W. Funeral Monday next, Norwood Cemetery.

IN MEMORIAM.

CASSIDY.—In ever-loving memory of my darling husband, John, who left me March 30, 1907. Never forgotten by his ever-loving wife, MADGE.

DASHWOOD.—In unfading and loving memory of our darling little son, Reg, who passed away March 27, 1907.
Fondly we loved him, he is dear to us still;
But in grief we must bend to God's Holy Will.
Our sorrow was great, our loss hard to bear,
But angels will guard him with kind tender care.
MOTHER and DAD.

GOODWIN.—In ever-loving memory of my darling wife Bonnie (L. B. Lyon), who was taken away March 19, 1907. Abide with Me.

GILLETTE.—In ever-loving memory of Ada Gillette (née Ada Watson), who fell asleep March 18, 1904. Never forgotten by all her family. To know her was to love her.
FOR SYMPATHY.

FULLER.—Mrs. George Fuller takes this opportunity of thanking the large number of friends for letters and telegrams of sympathy in her bereavement.

FLOWERBURN COTTAGE, Fortrose, Ross-shire, the Scottish home of Miss Violet Charlesworth, who has appeared at several of the London halls, was sold in Dowell's Rooms, Edinburgh, on Wednesday, for £975. It was put up at £853, but bidding was brisk.

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT
FOR
ACTOR AND COMPOSER,
By ALBERT A. STRONG, LL.B. (Lond.).
Copyright confusion is like the poor, always with us, and as it seems likely to remain so until at least the crack of doom, it were well for all concerned, or likely to be concerned, to take immediate steps to secure a copy of Mr. Albert A. Strong's new work, entitled "The Law of Copyright." Mr. Strong is already favourably known to the profession for his textbook on "Dramatic and Musical Law," which, like his latest production, is published at "The Era" office. "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer" essays to make clear to the non-legal mind what is—or, in some cases what probably is—the law as to musical and dramatic copyright. The chapters on the Berne Convention and on the Chase Act, passed by the United States Congress last March, are full of interest.—Referee.

THE NATIONAL THEATRE.

The prediction which we made in our leader of last week, that little difficulty would be found in getting the necessary capital for a National Theatre, received speedy confirmation in the announcement on Wednesday that an anonymous donor had given, or at any rate promised, £70,000; and that £5000 can be already considered to be subscribed. It may be as well, to avoid misunderstanding, to recapitulate the aims and objects of the National Theatre. They are to keep the plays of SHAKESPEARE in its repertory; to revive whatever else is vital in English classical drama; to prevent recent plays of great merit from falling into the oblivion to which the present theatrical system is apt to consign them; to produce new plays and to further the development of the modern drama; to produce translations of representative works of foreign drama, ancient and modern; and to stimulate the art of acting through the varied opportunities which the National Theatre will offer to the members of its company.

The National Theatre will be organised upon a repertory system. It will produce a great variety of plays, and the productions, while simple, will be efficient and beautiful. The estimates include such a liberal endowment as shall free the directorate from all temptation to sacrifice its artistic policy to the making of large and immediate profits. The arrangement of the programme will rest with the director, who should submit it for approval to the standing committee; and all new plays will be reported upon by the director and the literary manager before being finally dealt with by the standing committee. The theatre will be designed, built, and equipped as a repertory theatre, and the company, both in respect of number and of qualification, will be suited to the presentation of a repertory. It will be able to perform at least two different plays of full length at evening performances in each week, and at least three different plays at evening performances and matinées taken together. One at least of such weekly performances will be a performance of an English classical play; SHAKESPEARE'S plays will be given on an average of at least one a week; and the number of plays presented in a year should be no fewer than twenty-five plays of full length.

The National Theatre will give performances in the towns of Great Britain and Ireland as well as in London, and there will be a pension fund attached to the theatre, to be raised and administered as the governors should determine. All the artists and employees of the theatre will be remunerated by a fixed salary or fixed payment for definite services, dramatic authors being remunerated by percentages upon the gross receipts produced by their plays. The governors will be at liberty, at their discretion, to allot a fixed sum out of the surplus in any year, after due provision has been made for a reserve fund, as a bonus to be divided among all the artists and employees of the theatre in such proportion as the standing committee may determine. The managing staff will consist of a director, a treasurer, and a literary manager, all of whom will be nominated by the Standing Committee, subject to confirmation by the governors. The director will select, engage, and dismiss all artists and other employees, except the treasurer and the literary manager, and will be empowered, after consulting with the treasurer, to make contracts on behalf of the theatre. All appointments, whether to the company or the staff, and all dismissals will be reported by the director to the Standing Committee and confirmed by them. The director will arrange the programme and submit it for approval to the Standing Committee; and all new plays will be reported upon by the director and the literary manager before being finally dealt with by the Standing Committee. The director, if an actor, will not practise his art for fee or reward during his term of office; but it will be left to the Standing Committee to decide on what exceptional occasions (and in no case for personal profit) he will be authorised to appear or co-operate in performances at other theatres. He will in no event be cast for any part on the stage of the National Shakespeare Theatre.

Mr. BEERBOHM TREE'S reasons for espousing the cause of the National Theatre have been distinctly given by him. It seems to him that English theatres should be subsidised by English well-wishers of the drama rather than by American syndicates. There is an intellectual minority which has to be catered for, and the supply in this direction may create the demand for higher forms of the drama. It is very difficult for theatre managers to conduct their theatres on the highest artistic plane, unaided. He is fully aware that the best work is often done at the point of the sword of hunger, but he thinks that many of his comrades will agree with him that some kind of support—State or municipal—would help them to do the very best work without incurring the perils of the Bankruptcy Court. If some kind of State recognition be given to the theatre people will regard it more as the fashion, which is a very strong motive power in many quarters. Fashion, says Mr. TREE, is a very potent factor in the national life—as strong a factor, perhaps, as the love of art. Mr. GEORGE ALEXANDER, with his usual modesty, says: "Perhaps if I leave the matter in other able hands to develop I may find myself in the fortunate position of having the directorship of this new theatre offered me, with a handsome salary attached to it." Mr. BOURCHIER makes the following thoughtful and ingenious suggestion: "Why not let the committee approach Mr. TREE and see if they can make it worth his while to let them have his theatre for, say, three years, to run it as a National Theatre, with himself as the first director?"

Mr. BOURCHIER, however, is strongly opposed to the suggestion that upon the governing board there should be a woman. "I know," he says, "that in these days I am running a very serious risk in suggesting that a woman is not the fit and proper person to be connected with a public enterprise; but three societies devoted to the best interests of the drama (and which have now become institutions) have, to my positive knowledge, at certain times in their histories, been nearly wrecked because a woman was placed in a position of authority. The passive part which women can and do play in the management of a theatre is of incalculable value, but when they are actively engaged in it their intuition seems to fail them. With the main suggestions as to the working of the theatre no one," says Mr. BOURCHIER, "can have any quarrel. They are founded upon the experience of years in similar institutions abroad; but to start by building a theatre, especially when there are so many in London already suitable for the purpose, seems to me both a waste of money and a direct challenge to Fortune. Let us begin with the right director, a good répertoire, and good performances, thus gaining the favour of all concerned. Then the erection of a National Theatre will be the proper tribute to show the respect and confidence which such an organisation deserves."

Mr. FRED TERRY appears to be opposed to the establishment of a National Theatre. "A subsidised or endowed theatre," he says, "must come into direct and unfair conflict with managers of private enterprises. You cannot compete against £500,000. What is the National Theatre going to do that is not already done adequately—more than adequately—by existing enterprises? The position of director of the National Theatre," says Mr. TERRY, "will be a nice little plum, and, I do not mind confessing, a plum that would fall very acceptably into my own mouth. It would be a disappointment to me to give up acting—though not perhaps so much to the public. Still, the directorship of such an establishment would be absolutely free from financial troubles of any kind, and that would be a great consideration. I need, then, only think of Art."

We should like to allay the fears of those who think that the National Theatre would come into any serious competition with managers of private enterprises. The very aim and object of the enterprise is to appeal to those who, at present, do not patronise the playhouse. It is a movement in favour of the representation of the non-playgoing minority. The Independent Theatre performances and the IBSEN season no more competed with the ordinary theatrical entertainments than the publication of the novels of Mr. GEORGE MEREDITH and Mr. HENRY JAMES competes with those of the ordinary novels. The very essence of the National Theatre is that it shall not be popular, and that it shall not pay. As Mr. TERRY puts it, the director of the National Theatre "need only think of Art." We need not fear that the performers will not be forthcoming. There are many actors and actresses of genius to whom the National Theatre will offer irresistible attractions, and the demand will certainly create the supply.

O.P. LADIES' DINNER.

Everyone regretted that Miss Violet Vanbrugh was prevented by an attack of influenza from being present at the annual ladies' dinner of the O.P. Club at the Criterion Restaurant on Sunday evening, but fortunately the other lady guest of the evening, Miss Marie Löhr, attended, though she, too, was suffering from a very bad cold. The president, Mr. Max Pemberton, J.P., presided, and amongst those present were Mr. Henry Neville, Mrs. Max Pemberton, Miss Ethel Irving, Mr. Spencer Edwards, Mr. Gilbert Porteous, Mr. Robert Loraine, Miss Kate Bishop, Lord Mountmorres, Mr. and Mrs. Clement K. Shorter, Miss Maud Allan, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Butt, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred F. Robbins, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Hentschel, Mr. Frank Desprez, Mr. Herman Finck, Dr. Angelo S. Rappaport, Mr. H. A. Lytton, Mr. T. McDonald Rendle, Miss Nora Meredith, Miss Fanny Wentworth, and Messrs. Stanley Greig and J. Davis-Smith (joint hon. secretaries).

The toast of "The King" having been proposed by the president, Mr. HENRY NEVILLE, in proposing "The O.P. Club," in a sincere and unstudied speech which evidently came from the heart and was delivered admirably, said that when they reflected on the work of the club actors like himself could not but feel the deepest gratitude and admiration for those who gave their valuable time and their great influence in founding an organisation for the benefit of the drama and of those who took part in it, and in establishing the calling of the actor on a high pedestal as a great national institution.

Mr. MAX PEMBERTON, in responding, said: When first I began to read novels, I remember that much of the humour of the day concerned the club. The husbands of those days, when they had eaten the domestic cold mutton and had not found it good, were in the habit of banging the front doors of their houses in Bayswater and going off to their clubs. We, the readers, used to lose our heroes at the splendid portals in Pall Mall, behind which the lady authoresses detected them smoking cigars from golden tubes and drinking champagne from silver goblets. Those habits, it appears, were frequently accompanied by a passion for a foreign lady with black eyes and a far from white past, and they led, as a rule, to a misapprehension of the value of time which was lamentable. Men returning from these clubs at three in the morning were always ready to swear that it was just eleven o'clock. Of the proceedings generally, apart from those connected with alcohol and nicotine, women were supposed to know nothing, although their husbands told them much at the immediate moment of their restoration to the bosoms of their families. Indeed, woman had no place in that picture, and was regarded by the hall porter as the chief factor in the national decadence. Is there not a story told of a venturesome lady who once obtained admission to a great club in Pall Mall and remained undaunted even when the hall porter, imitating the immortal Bumble, fixed upon her an intimidating eye? Does not history say that old gentlemen wriggled from their armchairs, and poured forth from library and smoking-room to see so amazing a specimen of an unknown type—to learn, in short, what that strange being, woman, might be? All this, I suppose, was the popular view of the club life of twenty years ago, and, so far as Pall Mall goes, it may be the popular view to-day. Nothing, however, is more characteristic of our age than the creation of a new atmosphere and a new club life, and of this I venture to affirm the O.P. is worthy of the tribute you have so generously paid to it to-night. We have no palatial buildings in Pall Mall; our tubes are of the twopenny order, and not of 18-carat gold; we do not make war upon the clock, and when the hour for departure comes it is not the men, I think, but the ladies who say, "Oh, do stop a little while longer." In a more general aspect, I may declare that we have neither policy nor propaganda. We are an association, society, fraternity—call us what you may—for the expression of goodwill toward the theatre, and our first and last desire is for the theatre's popularity. Nor in this are we insular. We take our good things wherever we find them.

Mr. T. MCDONALD RENDLE, in proposing the toast of "Our Guests," mentioned that there was a lady still living—Mrs. Henry Compton, professionally known as Miss Emmeline Montague—who had played Juliet at Drury Lane Theatre under the management of Hammond in 1839, being then sixteen years of age. But Miss Marie Löhr was, he believed, the youngest Lady Teazle on record, and every playgoer would wish her success in the responsible task which she was undertaking. Her mother, Miss Kate Bishop, had long been a great favourite on the London stage. He then presented Miss Löhr, on behalf of the club, with a beautiful ivory fan in a pretty bag.

Miss MARIE LOHR, in reply, said: When I came here this evening I felt very much in the position of Sir Peter Teazle, for I detected in the task of making a speech "grounds for great uneasiness." I am but young in my experience of the stage, and I know that there are others who have a far higher claim upon your notice than myself. But I quite understand what is the feeling you have in your hearts: you desire, as playgoers, to show that you wish me success in my profession, and to cheer me on with encouraging words and with encouraging acts. It is quite true, as Mr. Rendle has said, that I have a very important and responsible task before me. The School for Scandal is not a frivolous piece of work, and I feel that when Mr. Tree produces this great comedy I shall be envying the coolness and the courage which Mr. Henry Neville is certain to display on the eventful night. Some people may think that I am too ambitious; yet "Fain would I climb but that I fear to fall" was never a motto of mine, and I hope it never will be. I shall do my best, and I trust, for your sakes, for the sake of the management, and for my own sake, that I shall succeed in gaining your favour. These are days when women are a little more daring than they used to be, and if I be, as Mr. Rendle has suggested, the youngest Lady Teazle on record, I hope, when you invite me to your next dinner, that you will not consider I was one of the worst. Mr. Rendle has said some very complimentary things about that promising young actress Miss Kate Bishop, and I thank him for that, because my mother's success is as dear to me as my own. For all your goodwill and gentle thoughts I am sincerely thankful, and in return I heartily wish the O.P. Club that prosperity and good fortune which it is anxious may attend myself.

Miss ETHEL IRVING, in proposing the toast of "The Chairman," said she had a very acceptable task. Nothing she could say about Mr. Pemberton would be too good. He had come, seen, and conquered them. To see him was to like him, and to hear him was to love him, and to read him was an abiding joy. Their hearts were at his feet.

Mr. MAX PEMBERTON, in replying, quoted the following passage: "Her simplicity bewitches me. If I stay I am undone. I must make a bold effort and leave her." In Lady Frederick, he said, there was a scene in which Miss Irving disillusioned a young man, but it was difficult to imagine her disillusioning anybody. He then presented Miss Irving with a handsome ivory fan enclosed in a fancy work-bag.

The entertainment was particularly good, such clever artists as Mme. Anna Aragvina-Kippman, Miss Nora Meredith, Miss Nellie Norway, Mr. Charles Copland, Mr. Stuart Edwards, Mr. Stuart Debnam, and Mr. Edward Hastings contributing with success, and Mr. J. P. Ling, a quaint humorist, creating roars of laughter by his imitations, &c. Mr. Sinclair Mantell was the accompanist.

"FIFTH QUEEN CROWNED."

Play, in Four Acts, Adapted by Ford Madox Hueffer and Norreys Connell, from the former's Novel, and Produced at the Kingsway on Friday Afternoon, March 19.

Cranmer	MR. ORLANDO BARNETT
Lascelles	MR. COURTENAY THORPE
Henry VIII.	MR. JAMES HEARN
Catherine Howard	MISS ADA POTTER
Duke of Norfolk	MR. COWLEY WRIGHT
Poins	MR. PATRIC CURWEN
Magister Udal	MR. PERCY GAWTHORNE
Mary of Poins	MISS MURIEL PLATT
Prince Edward	MISS KATHARINE RIVERS
Lady Mary of England	MISS EILY MALYON
Lady Mary's Maid	MISS KATHLEEN ROBERTS
Lady Cicely	MISS JOAN TEMPLE
Lady Rochford	MISS MURIEL ALEXANDER
Mary Hall	MISS MARGARET BUSSE
First Yeoman	MR. DAVID TEMPEST
Sir Thomas Culpepper	MR. H. A. SAINTSBURY
Badge	MR. HENRY WILDE
A Seaman	MR. OSCAR YAUGHAN

Change of scene, so beneficial in most circumstances, had a disastrous effect on Fifth Queen Crowned, which was produced at the Kingsway on the afternoon of Friday, March 19. The piece was designed to portray the putting off of Catherine Howard by Henry the Eighth, and four acts, embracing eleven scenes, were utilised in the process. The result was a succession of episodes divided without any regard for dramatic effect, the curtain falling upon the most ordinary situation on one apartment in order to show what was going on in another. It is difficult to judge of the worth of a play under such circumstances, and though there are many incidents of a thrilling nature, the constant switching off of the scene was fatal to the interest which was occasionally aroused. Such migrations are chiefly due to the pursuit of a letter which the King orders Cranmer to prepare to send to the Pope, making submission to his Holiness. It is clear to Lascelles, Cranmer's secretary, that the King's decision is due to the instigation of Catherine Howard, the fifth of Henry's wives, and fearful that the country may return to the faith of its fathers, Lascelles determines to secure the undoing of Catherine. He enlists the services of her cousin, the ne'er-do-well Thomas Culpepper, who had been a suitor to the Queen before she was raised to her exalted position. Culpepper is induced to thrust himself into the Queen's apartment while the King is away, and is discovered by his Majesty, who returns unexpectedly. The King declares to his courtiers that he had himself sent Culpepper on a message to the Queen, and refuses to credit Catherine's traducers. Other means are then taken by Lascelles, who gets the King to sit disguised in Cranmer's room while a number of Lutherans testify to Catherine's sullied reputation. The result is that the Queen is placed upon trial, and from the lips of a waiting-maid Catherine learns that the witnesses were made, under threats of torture, to swear against her innocence, and that the King himself had forced her to declare that Catherine was not a mere child but a grown woman when certain unedifying revellings, in which Culpepper was implicated, had taken place some years before. Catherine thereupon enters the council chamber, and before the assembled court admits to treason and infidelity, and any crime imaginable, afterwards assuring the King that it was in order to preserve her maids from torture that she thus courted her doom, but refusing to comply with his request to proclaim her innocence.

The piece was admirably cast. Miss Ada Potter, the giver of the matinée, played the title-rôle, and proved a veritable queen in appearance, sweetly sympathetic and gracious in manner. She had little opportunity, however, for the display of dramatic ability until the close, when she delivered with power and dignity the lines expressive of her opinion of the King. Henry was played by Mr. James Hearn, who gave a ripe and finished rendering. With a make-up that realised to perfection the pictures of "Bluff King Hal," Mr. Hearn combined the necessary "fruity" voice, indicating, too, with many a clever touch, the debauched nature of the monarch. The part of Cranmer was weakly drawn, and proved a thankless task for Mr. Orlando Barnett, who dealt with it in his customary artistic style. Miss Eily Malyon represented Lady Mary, whose connection with the plot was not clearly emphasised, with the requisite adamant coldness, and her hard and unsympathetic tones were cleverly assumed. Quite an Iago touch was given to the character of the scheming Lascelles by Mr. Courtenay Thorpe, who ably indicated the cunning and malevolence of the villain-in-chief; and Mr. H. A. Saintsbury as Thomas Culpepper gave a skilful depiction of a countryman in his cups. Miss Muriel Platt and Miss Margaret Bussé utilised their emotional powers agreeably as two of the Queen's maids; and a pretty little Prince Edward was furnished in Miss Kathleen Rivers. Mr. Percy Gawthorne was responsible for a picturesque portrayal of a Latin master, who is implicated in the charge against the Queen; and as the renegade keeper of the Queen's door Mr. Patric Curwen was passionate and vigorous. Reconstructed and compressed, and with the characters more clearly defined, the drama might be made into a production of considerable interest.

Preceding the principal piece was a play in one act, by Marah Aymet, entitled

"IN THE NAME OF THE CZAR."

Strepov	MR. MAX MONTESOLE
Katia	MISS ESME HUBBARD
Esther	MISS HERMINE GINGOLD
Miriam	MISS MURIEL CARMEL
Leonovitch	MR. RODERICK MACLEOD
David	MR. ESME PERCY
Sarah	MISS FLORENCE CASTELLE
Isaac	MR. WILFRED FLETCHER
Simon	MASTER WILLIAM PARKE

A slice out of life in a much-discussed quarter of the globe is presented in the above playlet, which is a harrowing story of a Jewish massacre in a Russian market town. Strepov, the Governor, who has the supervision of the atrocity, has taken an unholy fancy to the Hebrew maiden Miriam, and offers to become her protector. In order to gain time and thus save her compatriots Miriam would yield to his proposals, but is prevented by her lover, David, the organiser of a Jewish defence society. The massacre has already begun when the Governor enters, and after ordering David to be shot, sends his men away. Miriam seizes David's pistol, from which the cartridge has been extracted, and covers Strepov, who sinks to his knees and begs for mercy. When Miriam finds David is dying she throws down the weapon, and is shot by Strepov's men. Some of the dialogue is very plainspoken, and the rather contemptuous allusions to the Christian religion do not fall agreeably on the ear of an English audience. A meeting of the Jewish revolutionary committee, in the course of which a political speech is delivered and a prohibited song is sung, does not, moreover, seem quite in keeping with the fact that the dreaded massacre is in progress and their oppressors are within earshot. Mr. Max Montesole gave a skilful depiction of the brutal and contemptible Strepov; and Mr. Esmé Percy delivered in vehement and telling style the lines which fall to the young Jewish leader, who is committed to an oratorical display. Miss Muriel Carmel spoke with appealing force, and suggested the innocence and pathos of the rôle of Miriam in a manner that carried conviction.

A POPULAR Spanish composer, Señor Ruperto Chapi, died in Madrid this week from pneumonia.

EDWARD COMPTON AT ABERDEEN.

Mr. Edward Compton, who is appearing this week in His Majesty's Theatre with his talented Compton Comedy Company in old English masterpieces, was entertained at supper on Tuesday in the Imperial Hotel, Aberdeen, by members of the Aberdeen Pen and Pencil Club. Mr. G. W. Barclay, who presided, proposed the health of Mr. Compton.

MR. COMPTON, who was enthusiastically received on rising to reply, provoked much laughter by giving as his opening sentence, "Aw'm awfu' gled tae be wi' ye again." Continuing, he said he did not speak his native language very well, but that sentence expressed his sentiments very accurately. My father was once introduced by a friend to a Mr. Maclure, and the friend said, "Mr. Compton, this is Mr. Maclure, of the firm of Maclure, MacDonald, and MacGregor," at which my father remarked in his dry manner, "That almost sounds like a Scotch firm," and Mr. Maclure naïvely replied, with unconscious humour, "It is, Mr. Compton, it is." He had often wondered whether it would not have been better for him to have taken into his profession his own name of Mackenzie, and perhaps it would have been well if he had adopted such a name as Compton-Mackenzie, because when he told anyone proudly that he was a Scotsman, they invariably remarked, "But Compton does not sound a very Scotch name." He could not help feeling that Scotch audiences knew he was a Mackenzie by instinct. He never was so well treated or enjoyed acting so much as when his foot was on his native heath. Being a Scotsman, he did not feel much difficulty in receiving the many complimentary, kind things which his old friend Barclay had said that evening. He did not blush at the many sympathetic remarks made, because any credit he deserved was that he happened to be a Scotsman, and therefore that credit was theirs also—it was Scottish. After referring to the duties of an actor, Mr. Compton said that a great many of them—he was happy to say he had been one of the happy number—had the sympathy, the generosity, the loyalty, and the constancy of the great British public, of which they in Aberdeen were a part. Without that they could do nothing. He remembered taking as his motto many years ago a quotation from a seldom-read author—Marcus Aurelius—which was, as far as he could remember, "Don't act as if you had a thousand years before you. While you can, do something in the world to make it better than when you entered it." He did not suppose he had carried out all his ideals, but at least he had been constant to his first love, which was legitimate comedy. He had during the last twenty-eight years that he had been his own manager and his own leading man endeavoured to hold, as it were, the mirror up to nature—the nature of the eighteenth century—placing before audiences good, wholesome, honest work, and endeavouring to feel as he woke up each morning after his previous night's performance that his audience would be always able to say that the evening's amusement had borne the morning's reflection. After a jocular reference to the work, difficulties, disappointments, and troubles of an actor-manager, Mr. Compton said that, nevertheless, there was a great deal of pleasure in the work. Proceeding, Mr. Compton said that, notwithstanding all the hard work of the stage, actors managed to live long. He came across a newspaper report the other day giving an account of a dinner at which, in giving the toast of "Our Guests," Mr. T. M'Donald Rendle mentioned that there was a lady still living who had been professionally known as Miss Emmeline Montague, who played Juliet at Drury Lane Theatre under the management of Hammond in 1839, she being then sixteen years of age. That reference did not perhaps convey much to them, but he might mention that the lady referred to was his (Mr. Compton's) mother. She was now living and well at the age of eighty-eight, and would be very happy to hear of the way in which they had received her "boy." So they saw that, notwithstanding their hard work, actors and actresses lived long.

THE TERRITORIAL QUESTION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—I am anxious to tell you and your readers of the progress made with our Theatrical and Music Hall Territorial force during the period in which I have been recruiting.

The force is now an actual fact. We are drilling every Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday at headquarters, 2, Duke-street, Charing Cross, at 11 a.m., and our men are making rapid progress towards becoming efficient soldiers. That we are able to put in our drills in the mornings between 11 and 12 is a move in the right direction; this is an hour which, with most of us, is free time; after it is done we are right there in the business quarter, at the time of day when most agents will see us. We are freshened and invigorated by an hour's drill, we meet other men who are in our profession, we are able to discuss questions of interest, and to hear news of advantage to us all.

There are several members of the theatrical and music hall profession who have given me their names for membership, and from whom I should be glad to hear; or, if more convenient to them, I can meet them at the London Irish Rifles Headquarters, 2, Duke-street, Charing Cross, at any of the following hours:—

Monday	11 to 1 a.m. .. 7 to 9 p.m.
Tuesday	11 to 1 a.m. .. 7 to 9 p.m.
Wednesday ..	11 to 1 a.m.
Thursday ..	11 to 1 a.m. .. 7 to 9 p.m.

I cannot too strongly impress on the members of our profession the necessity for supporting this movement. Surely amongst us all, both theatrical and music hall, we can find 500 men to form a regiment of our own; surely we have 500 men who are willing to sacrifice a few hours of their leisure; surely we can say we can spare a few hours towards making ourselves efficient for the defence of our country. I hope the reproach will not reach us that we were too selfish to do it, or that we funked it.

I should be very glad to hear from any of our profession on the subject; or, better still, go down yourselves to the London Irish Headquarters, and say you want to join B Company, and then when you have sworn in communicate with me.—Yours faithfully,

CHARLES C. OMMANNEY.

25, Claverton-street, S.W.

GENERAL SMITH, who died suddenly in July, 1803, was the person Foote introduced into his Nabob under the name of Sir Matthew Mite. The General was in early life a cheesemonger, in Great Queen-street, Lincoln's Inn Fields, but abandoned that calling to try his fortune in India, where he acquired considerable wealth. Foote, whose talent lay in lampooning and mimicry (even in his earliest days) had got the knack of imitating the General in the shrug of his shoulder, the lisping of his speech, and some other things for which he was remarkable, until it grew a common topic among his acquaintance, who used to say, "Come, Sam, let us have the General's company." The General sent for Foote:—"Sir (says he) I hear you have an excellent talent at mimicking characters, and among the rest, I find I have been the subject of your ridicule." "Oh! Lord," says Foote with great pleasantry, "I take all my acquaintance off at times—and what is more wonderful, I often take myself off," "Gad so," says the other, "pray let us have a specimen." Foote, on this, puts on his hat and gloves, takes hold of his cane, and making a short bow, retreated accordingly out of the house without uttering a syllable.

VARIETY GOSSIP.

The Hippodrome will close down after next Saturday, April 3, for three months for reconstruction and redecoration. The remodelling of the stage will include its enlargement to seventy feet deep, new machinery will be installed for working the arena, and a new proscenium will be built.

When the house closes it will have a record of 5,725 performances, which is equalled by no other place of entertainment in the world. Two performances every week-day have been given since it first opened its doors on Jan. 15, 1900, with the exception of the period of the death of Queen Victoria in January, 1901.

The Hammersmith Palace, which is now run by the London, Provincial, and Continental Combination, will be closed soon after Easter for alterations and redecoration, and will probably reopen on August Bank Holiday on the two-houses-a-night plan.

During Mr. Alfred Butt's recent jaunt on the Continent he contrived to visit Paris, Berlin, Munich, Vienna, and Buda-Pesth, passing no fewer than 105 hours in trains. He booked what he considers two wonderful novelties, one of them from Buda-Pesth, whose performance he contrived to see while acting temporarily as a stage-hand—a remarkable experience for the managing-director of one of the finest variety houses in Europe.

Miss Vesta Tilley, who made a most charming picture in brown furs, was yesterday (Friday) morning the centre of quite a large assemblage of friends and well-wishers who gathered on No. 13 platform of that Pillar of Farewells, Euston Station, just prior to the leaving of the 9.50 a.m. American special, to bid the popular lady and her husband, Mr. Walter de Frece, good-bye and a pleasant time in America. Many handsome bouquets were proffered her and accepted with a winning smile, and whole sheafs of telegrams expressing the sincere regard and admiration in which she is held were handed to her.

Among the many people who gave her the heartiest of send-offs were Mr. Alfred Butt, Mr. Oddenino (of the Prince's Restaurant), Mr. Bertie Crewe, Mr. Matt O'Brien, Mr. Tom Honey, Mr. William Russell, Mr. F. A. K. Hounsell, Mr. Fred Bishop, Mr. Leo Harwood, Mr. Worton David, the well-known song writer, and Mr. Kenneth Lyle, the composer of a number of Miss Tilley's songs, including "Jolly good luck to the girl who loves a soldier," which by special desire of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales was sung by Miss Tilley at an aristocratic gathering a night or two back. Miss Tilley's publishers were represented by Mr. John Abbott and Mr. Edgar Bateman. Later in the day Miss Tilley and Mr. de Frece embarked on the White Star liner Celtic. They have as fellow-voyagers Mr. and Mrs. David Day.

Miss Maudi Darrell, the daughter of Mr. Hugh Jay Didcott, was married on Wednesday at the Paddington Registry Office to Mr. Ian Bullough, a son of the late Mr. John Bullough, of Accrington, who made a large fortune as a textile machine maker, and a brother of Sir George Bullough, of Meggernie Castle, Glen Lyon, Scotland, and owner of the Island of Rum in the Hebrides. Miss Darrell was married in her stage name, which she has adopted by deed poll.

Mr. Hugh Jay Didcott, who gave his daughter away, is the doyen of agents, and in the zenith of his success was entrusted with the organisation of the entertainments given to the children of London in Hyde Park during the celebration of Queen Victoria's Jubilee in 1887. This gigantic task was carried out in a way that gave the highest satisfaction to the initiators.

Mrs. Brown-Potter, who has returned from the States, has some complaint to make about an American management because she was asked to recite "Ostler Joe," by George R. Sims. This was a favourite piece with Mrs. Kendal, who gave it at the Albert Palace one Saturday afternoon in the autumn of 1885. The famous actress was engaged by William Holland, the people's caterer, who could not galvanise the Albert Palace into a success.

Many of our readers have met at the festive board the late Marquis de Leuville—who dallied with the arts (!)—and not a few were bluffed into the belief that he was a most distinguished personage. He was the author of some lines on the escape of an English vessel from the ravages of a hurricane at Samoa, and was really the son of a Strand hairdresser named Oliver. He posed as the grand seigneur, and affected a foreign accent. On one occasion, at the end of a banquet, when he had dined well, the "marquis" remarked: "Sapristi! I had vat you English call a twist!" "Yes," remarked a well-known comedian, "an Oliver Twist!"

Mr. Joseph Wilson and Mr. James Howell have returned to their respective posts at the Tivoli after indisposition; and we are glad to hear that Mr. Geo. Barclay, one of the most enterprising of our agents, is now on the road to recovery from a serious attack of pneumonia.

In his cartoon in the current number of Punch Mr. Linley Sambourne presents, over the title "Copyright Expires," a jovial German tar striking a flamboyant attitude on the end of a quay, and waving his country's flag as he sings the famous ditty by the late Mr. G. W. Hunt, sung by Macdermott in the 'seventies:—

"We don't want to fight, but, by Jingo! if we do, We've got the ships, we've got the men, we've got the money, too!"

John Bull (A.B. of his Majesty's Navy), who is leaning in a dejected attitude, hands in pockets, against a bollard, interrupts: "I say, that's my old song." The German tar replies: "Well, it's mine now."

Mr. Kenneth Lyle had the honour of accompanying Miss Vesta Tilley before T.R.H. the Prince and Princess of Wales on Wednesday night last. The song their Royal Highnesses requested was "Jolly good luck to the girl who loves a soldier," of which he is the composer. Mr. Kenneth Lyle is a Manchester man.

At the Harry Lundy benefit matinée at the Oxford on Thursday next Miss Florrie Robina will probably revive her beautiful song, by the late Ernest Allan, "'Tis the same dear face," for which a verse apropos to the occasion will be written. Mr. Harry Lauder, Eugene Stratton, Joe Elvin, Vesta Victoria, Victoria Monks, Winifred Hare, Chirgwin, Jack and Evelyn, and other stars have promised their services.

Mr. George Queen, who last week produced The Cockney Huntsman at Shoreditch Olympia, entered the profession in 1887, as a five-year-old boy, with the late Tom White, of Tom White's Arabs. Mr. Tom White died in August, 1900, but some time previous—in 1898 to be exact—Mr. Queen joined his brother, William Le Brun, as Queen and Le Brun, comedians and animal impersonators. They struck oil, being featured in eight successive Drury Lane pantomimes. In 1906 Queen and Le Brun sailed for Australia under a six months' contract with Mr. J. C. Williamson to play the horse in Mother Goose, and stayed over two years, returning to England last December. Queen and Le Brun then dissolved partnership.

Mr. Macnaghten's new Huddersfield Palace is to be completed by July 24. It will almost face the parish church.

Mr. Frank Seabrook has been appointed resident manager of the King's Theatre and Hippodrome, Kirkcaldy.

Mr. Ernest Lepard, who was formerly manager at the Alhambra, Brighton, has taken up a similar position at the Canterbury, in succession to Mr. Adams. He entered upon his new duties last Friday (19th).

Mr. Geo. Dickinson, manager Albert Hall, Edinburgh, has been appointed manager at the Gaiety Theatre, Glasgow, which has been taken over by the B.B. Picture Co., who intend running it twice nightly with pictures and variety.

The management of the Gaiety, Glasgow, is to be taken over on Monday next (29th) by the B.B. Pictures, of which Mr. J. J. Bennett is the controlling spirit. The latest films will be interspersed with a few variety turns.

The Eastbourne Town Council invite tenders for the use of variety and minstrel entertainment stands for the ensuing summer months. Forms of tender can be obtained from Mr. H. West Fovargue, Town Clerk, Eastbourne. They should be sent not later than April 7.

Professionals visiting Hanley will find the pleasantest surroundings and excellent enjoyment at the Birches' Head Hotel, where mine host Wm. Cooper, a keen theatrical enthusiast, has the largest green in the Potteries, and where The Era can be seen. There is an excellent billiard saloon.

Mr. P. A. Lennon has been selected by the Ramsgate Municipal Entertainments Association for the position of manager of the Royal Victoria Pavilion in that famous seaside resort. Mr. Lennon has acted in a managerial capacity at the Empires at Birmingham, Leeds, and Bradford, under the Moss' Empires, Ltd., and has also filled the same responsible position at the Richmond Theatre and the Camberwell Palace.

When he left Bradford, where he had acted for five years as manager of the Empire, he was the recipient of many striking testimonials to his popularity and ability, a personal letter coming from the then Mayor, Mr. David Wade, wishing Mr. Lennon every success in his future career.

Mr. Julius Simpson, manager of the Palace Theatre, West Hartlepool, has been made the recipient of a handsome solid gold scarf ring by the staff of the Palace and Hippodrome, Burnley, and a few friends. The ring was accompanied by a letter asking his acceptance of the gift as an expression of the appreciation and kindness extended towards the staff during his stay in Burnley.

The Corporation of Hastings invite tenders for the hire of the caves under the West Hill, Hastings, known as St. Clement's Caves (which are licensed for music and dancing), for a term of seven years, from June 24 next. Mr. Ben. F. Meadows, Town Hall, Hastings, will give particulars.

The bandstand on the beach at Dovercourt is to let. The forty whose tender is accepted will be allowed to use the bandstand in the Public Gardens up to July 16. Mr. E. E. Randall, secretary, Amusement Committee, Town Clerk's Office, Harwich, should be written to.

At the Palace, Attercliffe, on Saturday last, all previous records, as far as attendance was concerned, were broken, over six thousand persons paying for admission at the two evening shows and a special matinée, the place being packed at each performance, and numbers unable to gain admission. The matinée attraction was Mr. Leoni Clarke's novel trained animal act, and animated pictures by Mr. E. C. Clayton. Manager Dent's face wore an extra smile of self-satisfaction.

Mlle. Ghita Corri, who has this week been starring at Long Eaton and Loughborough with Mr. Charles M. Daly's Hippodrome company, is to be the principal vocalist at the big concert at the Birmingham Town Hall next Saturday, and on Good Friday will sing Rossini's "Stabat Mater" and Weber's "Softly Sighs" (Der Freischütz) at Mr. Charles Corri's annual concert at the Royal Victoria Hall, this latter being Mlle. Corri's first professional appearance in London for nearly two years.

A number of new shows and novelties, to be installed at New Brighton Tower, will be on exhibition at Easter for the first time in this country. Mr. R. H. Davy will, in addition to his secretarial duties, have the entire management this season. In this he will be assisted by Mr. Robert E. Goffin, who for twelve years has been assistant manager at the Empire, Liverpool. It is obvious by these changes in the managerial department that the directors intend that this concern shall be run on English lines only this year.

Dr. Walford Bodie, at the Hackney Empire this week, is playing nightly to packed houses. He has been offered many return dates, but has only signed for a few, as he seriously contemplates retiring from the stage at an early date. His hypnotic tales, under the title of "Harley, the Hypnotist," now appearing in the Novel Magazine, have caught on, and C. A. Pearson, Ltd., have accepted several more. The April number will contain a startling story entitled "The Eve of the Election." The doctor is also engaged on a musical comedy. What prodigious activity!

Miss Jean Bodie, the daughter of Dr. Walford Bodie, who has been lying dangerously ill at The Towers, Southport, is slowly recovering. Dr. Bodie has cancelled the week of April 5 to give his daughter his personal attention, and endeavour to have her removed to their Highland home, the Manor House, Macduff, where, with home comforts and the bracing ozone from the Moray Firth, he hopes she will soon be well. She will then go with Mrs. Bodie (Princess Ruble) for a few months to the South of France. Next week the doctor opens at the Empire, Holloway.

Miss Katie Moss, who comes to the Coliseum next week, is an associate of the Royal Academy of Music, where she won eleven medals and five certificates, thus creating a record. She has secured the Westmoreland Scholarship, the Ratson Memorial Prize for singing, the Hine gift for composition, and the Dove Prize. She is a soprano, plays the violin, and recites.

Many of the older members of the variety profession will recall with pleasure the memory of the late Sam Hague, whose minstrel troupe were before the public during a great number of years, and in so doing will testify to his kindly nature and generosity. Sam Hague was ever ready to "help a lame dog over the stile," and now that his widow, who supported her husband in his good actions, is in need of assistance, we are sure that this appeal will not be made in vain. The case is one which asks for an early response, and any contributions, however small, that are sent to Mr. W. W. Kelly, proprietor of the Theatre Royal, Birkenhead, who is interesting himself in Mrs. Hague's behalf, will be gratefully appreciated.

Mr. Charles Coborn is at Nice, enjoying warm, sunny weather.

'Caicedo, king of the wire, who is to star at the Circo Frank Brown, Buenos Aires, left England last Friday (19th). He hopes to be back in England in July.

Will the collectors of the Music Hall Home Fund who have not yet done so kindly send in their cards at once, so that they may be announced in our next issue? The Fund closes on March 31.

Mr. Arthur De Jong, the managing-director of the Tivoli, Cape Town, and the South African Entertainments, Ltd., is now in London in search of new talent for his various enterprises. The Eccentric Club is his headquarters.

Mr. K. Scott-Barrie made his début before a London audience at the Tivoli on Monday, and met with great success. He has been specially engaged by Mr. Ernest Carpenter to play Dame at the Lyceum next Christmas.

Mr. Benjamin Woodger, secretary of the Music Hall Home, has been laid up with bronchitis, but is now on the mend. The next committee meeting of the Home will be held at the Camberwell Empire on Thursday next at noon.

Miss Marguerite Broadfoot, the popular burlesque actress, who in private life is known as Mrs. Ernest Edelstein, gave birth to a son on Monday. The happy father has been the recipient of a shoal of congratulations.

Miss Mabel Sinclair, the premier lady ventriloquist, accompanied by her husband and manager, Arthur Palling, returned to Great Britain on Tuesday, March 16, by the Lusitania, having terminated a twenty-five weeks' tour of the principal cities of the States from the Atlantic to the Pacific. She holds continuous contracts for London and provincial halls for three years.

Mr. Gus Elen, a prime favourite in Hackney, as elsewhere, appears at the local Empire next week. He began his theatrical career about 1882, making his début at the Black Dog, Battersea, and afterwards at Poppy Lord's, Lisson Grove, and the Magpie and Stump, Battersea, all old-fashioned hostelries. He has toured under the Moss Empires management almost since its inception, and in his reminiscent mood relates that he has received all sorts of salaries during his career, ranging from £50 for a single evening and £100 for a week's engagement to 3s. 6d. for an evening's work and 7s. 6d. for a week's work.

Mr. John L. Shine's new and startling patriotic sketch, entitled Invasion; or, Wake Up, England! is due at the Canterbury on Monday. Much curiosity is being evinced anent the production, as it is understood to be not only on a much more elaborate scale from a scenic point of view than is usual in the halls, but also from a musical point of view, the services of the distinguished Dr. F. Osmond Carr having been solicited. He is said to have contributed some magnificent work for The Conspiracy in the Subterranean Chamber at the Cosmopolitan Club, and also for the Bombardment and Destruction of London.

The fine cast includes Mr. Henry Bedford as John Drowsy, of Apathy Hall; Mr. Rupert Stretfield will be the Hon. Tom Dawdler; Mr. Wilfred E. Shine will take the part of General Scorvin, of the Cosmopolitan Army; and Mr. J. L. Shine himself will be Admiral Lord Harry Wideawake, V.C.

Apropos to Mr. Shine's appearance as an English Admiral, it is a well-known fact that a few years ago he bore a marvellous resemblance to a particularly famous officer of that rank; in fact, no less a personage than Lord Charles Beresford himself. Meeting unexpectedly in a first-class compartment on the return journey from Newmarket a few years ago they became acquainted, and each had plenty to tell the other of the numerous and humorous mistakes the likeness had caused.

"Motogirl," after concluding this week at Birmingham, leaves direct for Wintergarten, Berlin, to play the month of April there. This is the sixth return engagement. Returning from the Continent in June, Motogirl again plays Moss and Stoll, commencing at the Coliseum, London, with a return engagement in June, and provinces to follow.

Mr. Harry Day has returned from Bath, looking very much better. His partner, Harry Goodson, who has been directing at Effingham House during his absence, was presented last week with a valuable liqueur, cigar, and card sideboard.

Mr. Fred Land, whilst on his way from the Euston to the South London on Saturday night, had an unpleasant experience. A motor 'bus collided with his brougham while crossing Waterloo Bridge, smashing the front and severely injuring the horse. Fortunately, Mr. Land escaped with a severe shaking, and was able to appear in due course at the South London.

Miss Daisy Dormer, fresh from her triumphs at Leeds, is delighting Ealingites this week. This is not the first visit by many of dainty Miss Daisy, and the more she comes the more her welcome grows. Her artistic charms extend not only to her "finger tips," but to the very end of her pretty toes. There is an irresistible élan about the little lady that has always spelled success, and to-day, with her archness and chic she stands in the very front rank of popular favourites.

The latest quotations for music hall shares are as follow:—Alhambra, 1⅞; Canterbury, ⅞; Electric Theatres, 25/9; Empire (15s. pd.), 1⅞; Ditto (10s. pd.), 1⅛; London Pav. Ord., 3⅜; Ditto Pref., 5; Metropolitan, ; Moss' Empires, 5⅛; Ditto 5 per cent. Pref., 4⅛; Oxford, 6⅜; Palace, —10½d.; Tivoli, 6½; Var. Cons. Theatres, 11/0.

At the 600th meeting of the Music Hall Artists' Railway Association, held on Wednesday, Mr. Sid Bandon took the chair. There were also present Messrs. Harry Blake, Arthur Rigby, Marriott Edgar, Fred Millis, T. C. Callaghan, J. Miller Northern, Harold Finden, H. Herald, Alf. Herald, W. H. Atlas, J. Rich, and Lieut. Albini. New agencies were appointed at the Golden Lion Hotel, Todmorden, and the Horse and Groom, Gainsborough. The weekly statement showed an increase of thirty-six new members and receipts of £60 5s. 6d.

The success of The Midnight London Express is phenomenal. On Monday next it returns to the Surrey after an absence of seven weeks. The business on its initial production broke all records, and Mr. Frederic Baugh, anxious to emulate the achievements of the Oxford and Cambridge crews, believes he can establish another record. This week at the Balham Hippodrome, "house full" has been the rule all the week.

Mr. Jo Williams, stage-manager for the Brussels Alhambra, Mr. Barrasford's popular palace of variety, was married on Saturday to Miss Sarah Wood, of Manchester. The bride was formerly a member of the combination known as the Eight Cocktails. The happy pair are going to make their home in Brussels. Presents were received from Mr. and Mrs. Trenchant, manager of the Alhambra; from the staff, from the artists on the bill (including Houdini), from the orchestra, from the secretary, and from the many friends Mr. Williams has made since he has been in Brussels.

Mr. Edward Thane is producing on Monday at the Queen's, Poplar, a new sketch entitled Bitter Enemies.

Mr. H. J. Greenwood has been re-elected chairman and Mr. Ernest B. Wild vice-chairman of the Theatres and Music Halls Committee of the London County Council.

The Palace, Greenwich, has lately reverted to the old plan of one house nightly, and Mr. Dave Hyman, manager for Mr. Dan Barnard, considers that the hall will benefit by the change of policy.

A week's collection, ending March 13, at the Queen's, Poplar, in aid of the National Lifeboat Institution, resulted in the munificent total of £15 odd being gathered for this noble organisation.

Mr. Ernest Ch. Gittins's production of the military sketch, played by late Carl Rosa artists, entitled The Daughter of the Regiment, will be the strong attraction next week at the cosy little Manchester Tivoli, where Mlle. Adèle Prescott will make her reappearance as Marie after her recent severe accident.

Rosherville Gardens will be reopened on Good Friday. A varied daily programme, including dancing in the Baronial Hall, rickshaws from the White City, a pierrot troupe, and a menagerie, all contributing, let us hope, to a happy day. Mr. T. Read, of the Agricultural Hall, is providing.

The Five X-Rays (the mad athletes), with an act entirely new to London, will commence on Monday a six nights' engagement at the Canterbury. Proprietors and managers will have an opportunity of using the X-Rays on their own audience after seeing the effect they have on the audiences at the above hall.

"Come Inside" is the title of the new revue shortly to be produced at the Empire. The libretto is by Mr. George Grossmith, jun., who has already written three successes for the same house, and will deal with up-to-date events of the world. The lyrics are by Mr. C. H. Bovill, and Mr. Cuthbert Clarke will arrange the music. The scenery is to be painted by Mr. R. C. McCleery, and the production will be in the able hands of Mr. Fred Farren.

The first scene is laid in the Beauty Parlour at Pelfridge's, which will naturally suggest the newest of London's stores. The second scene, Advertisements, is of a very novel character, and the final situation will be in the Universal Arena—a happy setting for the incidents Mr. Grossmith has invented.

Mr. Stanley Brett, the brother of the volatile Seymour Hicks, Mr. Arthur Playfair, an old Empire favourite, and Mr. Sam Collins, the American comedian who won London's approval as Potage in The Casino Girl at the Shaftesbury, together with Miss Winifred O'Connor, Miss Collette D'Arigny, a new importation from Paris, and Miss Lulu Valli, have been entrusted with the chief rôles.

Mr. Sidney Bacon's musical comedy sketch, The Duchess of Tooting, brighter and breezier than ever, started its third touring year at East Ham last week. Beautifully mounted and costumed, and with an excellent cast, headed by that popular comedian, Mr. Stephen Adeson, the "Duchess," has this week been the chief attraction at the Hippodrome, Birmingham.

Mr. Lance-Grove, a descriptive and character vocalist, on Monday night at the Hippodrome, Hastings, sang a new and original loyal song, entitled "Our Frontiersman—the King!" written by A. C. Shelley, and composed by Harold Wilrowe. The lyric was enthusiastically received, as was likewise a new military song by the same writers, entitled "We'll fight to the death for Bobs."

Mr. Lance-Grove was in the thick of all the fighting throughout the South African campaign, being one of Lord Dunraven's Sharpshooters, and his corps lost a column at the battle of Springfontein, and many hundreds of comrades in the fierce engagement at Tafel Kop. Mr. Grove has an excellent baritone voice.

Mr. Horace Hunter is the author of a new dramatic sketch, entitled Rough Justice, which will be produced at the Bedford on April 5. The sketch, which will be elaborately mounted and dressed, contains six powerful acting parts and twelve supernumeraries. The star part of Madge Goodwin will in all probability be played by Miss Lily Hammersley.

The D. and S. Barnard Dramatic Agency has been established, with headquarters at the Elephant and Castle Theatre. The firm belongs to the family of theatrical proprietors and managers who have been associated for years with popular houses in Woolwich, Greenwich, Birmingham, Wolverhampton, Chatham, &c.

Mr. Alfred Butt will present on Monday at the Palace Theatre Mr. Richard Golden, the well-known actor, in a new sketch, entitled A Case for Divorce, by Mr. Clay Greene, who has adapted his work from an incident in Holman F. Day's story of "Squire Bill." Other members of the cast are Mr. Charles White, Miss Helen Rouse, and Miss Erskine. Mr. Golden must not be mistaken for George Fuller Golden, who was so popular at the Palace as a raconteur.

Amongst the newcomers next week at the Coliseum are the Musical Courtiers, who will appear in a novel arrangement of airs from The Bohemian Girl. The company consists of ten artists—six operatic vocalists and four pianists. The singers include Mr. Hilton St. Just, the well-known tenor; Mr. T. H. Wood, late a leading baritone of the Moody-Manners Opera Company, and Mlle. Louise Van Dalle, soprano. The leading pianists are Mr. Edwin Hesseltine (a pupil of the late Sir Charles Halle) and Mme. Vera Neville, a distinguished student of the Berlin Conservatoire.

Before Judge Emden, at Lambeth, on Thursday, the re-trial of the action brought by Mr. Thomas Mackney, music hall artist, against Mr. Fred Karno, sketch proprietor, for damages for wrongful dismissal, took place. When the action was before his honour a few weeks ago the jury found for the plaintiff, and his honour consented to the case being re-tried, on the ground that the verdict was against the weight of evidence. The jury now found that plaintiff was drunk on the occasion in question, and that defendant had not waived his right of dismissal. His honour gave judgment for the defendant, with costs.

On behalf of the Committee of the Music Hall Ladies' Guild, 61, New Oxford-street, W.C., Miss Melinda May begs most gratefully to thank the following:—Mrs. Fred Ginnett, donation of 3s.; Miss Lottie Albert, donation of 3s.; Mrs. Herbert Shelley, for pretty baby's bonnet; Mrs. Lily Bradgate, for a letter for consumptive home; Miss Helen Martin (collecting), 10s.; Miss Emma Don (collecting), 2s. 6d.; the Last Leaf of the Pineapple, 5s., from Miss Lottie Albert; Miss Lilian Baylis, Victoria Hall (collecting box), 17s.; Mrs. George Smythson (collecting), 2s. 6d.; collected at the Palace, Hull, by Miss Irene Rose, 3s. 7d.; Mrs. Schaller (collecting), 2s. 6d.; Mr. Nat. Lewis (collecting), 4s. Will musical friends please note that we have for sale a splendid banjo, which can be seen any day at 61, New Oxford-street.

Miss Vesta Victoria returned to London, after one week's absence, on Monday, appearing at the London Pavilion and the Empire, Holborn, where packed houses gave her a very enthusiastic reception. At the Holborn Empire the audience, in addition to lustily joining in the chorus of each song, continued to sing some of Miss Victoria's past successes, such as "Waiting at the church" and "It's all right in the summertime," after the popular artiste had left the stage, and were only satisfied by Vesta returning and smilingly bowing her acknowledgments.

Messrs. Bercham and Wheeler, her representatives, are busy arranging some flying matinées. We understand that there will shortly appear in the magazines some interesting articles on Miss Victoria's famous American tours and her various experiences across the pond.

The Oxford and Cambridge crews have accepted the invitation of the directors of the Empire to be present during the performance after the University Boat Race on Saturday next.

Mr. George P. Jackley, the original speech-whistling page of the Jackley Trio, is the author and composer of several successes, such as Miss Gertie Gitana's "Happy" song. He is on the Stoll tour until July.

Mr. Alfred Butt has arranged two special "farewell" matinées for Miss Maud Allan at the Palace Theatre, on March 31 and April 7, when Miss Allan will give a more varied and larger number of dances than usual. The "classical dancing" boom seems to be dying a natural death. Nothing that we have seen in the interpretations of Miss Allan has even approached in its pathos, tenderness, and dramatic significance the telling of the story of The Dryad at the Empire by the incomparable Genée.

An agency on somewhat new lines, entitled the General Attractions Bureau, is being started by Mr. J. Rowland Sales (late manager at the New and Waldorf Theatres) at 16, King William-street, Strand. Not content with the provision merely of principals and chorus for managers, Mr. Sales undertakes to provide whole companies, to rehearse them, to teach them if necessary, to advise upon and introduce plays, to arrange song-scenas, and, in fact, to cover every kind of theatrical, operatic, and variety work. Mr. Sales is the youngest theatrical manager in London, indeed probably in the world, and in this new venture we most cordially wish him every success possible. Needless to add, he is supported by both an able and a competent staff.

The Zoological Gardens and Amusement Park at Chevinedge, Halifax, have taken definite shape, and by Whitsuntide it is expected that arrangements will have been so far completed as to allow them to be opened to the public. Workmen are already busily engaged in making the necessary repairs to the beautiful house at Exley Bank, which is excellently adapted to the purposes of catering.

Half-way between the Punch Bowl and the Calder and Hebble is the point decided upon for the elevated railway, and this will convey visitors up the hillside and deposit them at the main entrance to this resort of pleasure. On the payment of sixpence they will be admitted, and the first thing which will attract their attention will be the deer park. They will then pass the bear pit, alongside which it is intended to construct a children's corner.

Adjacent to the beautiful greenhouses will be the refreshment garden, and in the Zoo proper there is a small lake. A popular feature of the Amusement Park will be a water chute, which dips into a lake, on which gondolas will be gliding about, passing along a canal under a bridge.

It is intended, of course, to make the present venture a permanent one, while new ideas will be introduced from time to time. An exhibition of cottage homes, similar to that at the London White City, will also be held. Indeed, the possibilities of such a place are endless. Although the prospectus of the company is not yet issued, Mr. A. R. McKill, York Chambers, Halifax, has already received numerous applications for shares and season tickets, and the promoters believe it will prove a lucrative business, of much benefit to Halifax.

Mr. Bransby Williams has just finished his book, which he calls "An Actor's Story." It will be published by Messrs. Chapman and Hall on March 29. In it Mr. Williams gives an account of his early days as an actor before he hit upon the idea of impersonating characters from Dickens and Shakespeare on the music-hall stage His book deals, naturally, at some length with Dickens, but it has much in it on acting and actors of the day, and is full of interesting and lively stories concerning them. The book will be copiously illustrated.

It is with regret that we have to announce the death of Mr. Alec Romer (husband of Miss Margaret Radcliffe), which sad event took place on Tuesday. The deceased gentleman had been suffering from an incurable malady for the past twelve months, and, from the first, the specialist and doctors held out no hopes.

The late Mr. Romer, although quite a young man (thirty-eight years of age on the 15th of this month), was for many years a member of the D'Oyly Carte Répertoire Co., and latterly under Mr. Geo. Edwardes's management at the Apollo Theatre in The Girl from Kay's, Mr. Popple, &c. His last engagement was at the Adelphi in the pantomime Aladdin, 1907-8. Mrs. Alec Romer has been unceasing in her efforts to cheer and comfort her afflicted husband, and the end came as a sudden shock to her. The funeral takes place at Norwood Cemetery on Monday next.

The remains of the late Mr. George Fuller were interred in Highgate Cemetery on Tuesday. The hearse containing the oak casket, which was covered with beautiful floral trophies, was followed by the carriages containing the mourners, who included the widow, Miss Katie Lawrence, his mother, and several cousins. Amongst those at the graveside were:—Messrs. H. Schomberg, Jeffreys, Edgar Bateman, Dave Cohen, Geo. Parker, J. Clarke, F. Ambridge, J. Deakin (of the York), G. Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Elvin, Mr. and Mrs. Jackson, Mr. Mead, and many others.

There were many lovely flowers, which included a wreath of violets and daisies from his wife, a wreath from his broken-hearted mother, wreath from his cousins (Beattie, Eva, and Nellie), sheaf from Mr. and Mrs. S. Billimore (cousins), anchor from Mr. and Mrs. M. Billimore (cousins), cross from Mrs. C. Billimore (aunt), harp from Johnnie Clabon (cousin), a beautiful floral design from Mr. Pony Moore, a cushion of flowers from Marie Lloyd, a chaplet from Mr. George Parker, a cross from Mr. Eugene Stratton, a harp from Mr. and Mrs. Joe Elvin, a harp from Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Williams, wreaths from Mr. Jack Lotto, Dr. Pernet, Mr. Jeffreys and family, Old Treble, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Newman, Mr. and Mrs. McDonald, the Waterloo Angling Society, and Mr. and Mrs. Jackson; bunches of flowers from Nell, Cousin Lulu, Miss Maud Knight, and Susie. Mr. Eugene Stratton was unable to be present owing to his being on tour.

SONGS, WRITERS, AND SINGERS.

MESSRS. FRANCIS AND DAY have in the press, for immediate publication, Mr. Harry Lauder's two latest successes: "I'm coortin' Leezie Lindsay" and "I've loved her ever since she was a baby."

MR. DAVID DAY, of Messrs. Francis, Day, and Hunter, accompanied by Mrs. Day left Euston by the 5.55 p.m. express on Thursday for Liverpool, thence to embark on the s.s. "Celtic," which departed for New York on Friday. The heads of the various departments of the well-known music-publishing firm were present to bid farewell to their chief, who is paying a business visit to the States, and on the platform were many well-known people connected with the world of song-writing, including C. W. Murphy, A. E. Sidney Davis, Karl Kaps, J. F. Lambe, Scott Mackenzie, and others.

A CHARMING song—as dainty as that little sylph Miss Elise Craven, to whom it is dedicated, and who sang it at the reception that followed the wedding of Miss Coats to the Marquis Douro a day or two since—has just been published by Messrs. Francis and Day, entitled "Fairy days." It is by Arthur du Soir, the music by Francis J. Peers.

MISS TRULY SHATTUCK'S cultured voice has, at the London Coliseum, during the week, been heard to the greatest advantage in Messrs. Francis and Day's "Naomi," a song with a haunting refrain, words by Percy Edgar, and music by C. W. Murphy, which has been orchestrated in Reginald Allen's well-known masterly style. The lady's final contribution is the popular "Bombadier."

MISS MADGE TEMPLE, at the Tivoli and Canterbury, has, in addition to her "Come, be my rainbow" number, been charming large audiences by her rendering of "I'm looking for Mr. Wright," a new aeroplane song, by R. P. Weston, C. W. Murphy, and Hermann E. Darewski.

A BARN dance on the popular song "Sue, Sue, Sue," and a march on that up-to-date and stirring number "Bravo! Territorials," both by Hermann E. Darewski, will be placed on the market in the course of a few days by Messrs. Francis and Day.

AT Brighton towards the close of last week a complimentary farewell dinner was given to Mr. Ernest Lepard on his retirement from the management of the Alhambra. Mr. H. J. Preston presided.

MR. LESLIE STUART tells a favourite story of his in a recent contemporary, which runs as follows:—"A great feud existed between the McTavishes and the McGregors. One day a baboon belonging to a circus on its way to Edinburgh fell ill and died. The animal was quite a dilapidated old creature, so, when it was dark, the corpse was deposited in a ditch, where it lay upon its back, with its hideous face staring up at the sky.

"PRESENTLY two shepherds came along. 'Hey, mon,' cried one, 'look what's yon!' The pair approached the ditch and gazed wonderingly at the dead animal. 'It's nae a McTavish,' said one, 'for it's nae red enough.' 'And it's nae a McGregor,' decided the other, 'for it's too guid-looking.' He paused and rubbed his head. Then he blurted out: 'I ken. Let's gang up tae the castle and see if any of the English visitors are missing.'"

MR. FRED BARNES has, at the Holloway Empire, been singing with great success Messrs. Francis and Day's "If there wasn't a man," and his newer song, from his own pen, "The scapegrace," looks like being a song that will do him yeoman service.

MR. FRED W. LEIGH has just completed a special song for Miss Louie Tracy, entitled "The dapper dandy boy." Miss Tracy's bill matter is registered and fully protected.

SAM MAYO is scoring with his latest song, "I played my concertina." Mr. Mayo has not had such a big song since his well-known "I'm going to sing a song." "I felt so jolly I jumped for joy" is still going strong with him. The last two numbers are published by the Von Tilzer Music Co.

"DON'T stop my 'arf a pint o' beer," which Gus Elen is featuring this week at the Coliseum, is published by the Von Tilzer Co. George Leyton has just acquired the performing rights of a drinking song entitled "Health, wealth, and the girl you love," from the same publishers, and he intends to produce the song immediately.

MR. WORTON DAVID has just finished a song entitled "I've got my little bit of blue, blue ribbon on," the singing rights for the halls of which have been secured by Mr. Fred Earle. The song will be issued by Von Tilzers soon after Easter.

THESE publishers are at the present moment negotiating with one of the biggest variety artists for a production both in this country and America of a song by Worton David and Fred Godfrey entitled "Georgie, I like the photograph."

HARRY FORD'S latest song, "I always like to do things nice and friendly," will be a popular number with pierrots this season. It is included in the Von Tilzer Annual Summer Book, which is in great demand among alfresco comedians.

THE committee of the Veterans' Relief Fund (Portsmouth branch) are anxious to thank the host of artists who so willingly came forward and gave their services at the King's Theatre, Southsea, at the matinée in aid of the fund on Wednesday, March 17. Many of these artists came down specially from London and some from Brighton, and altogether gave a magnificent show, lasting four hours. The result was a net balance of £171 2s. 9d. Thanks are due to Mr. J. W. Boughton for the loan of the theatre and for paying for trams to bring the old men; and to Mr. Barrasford for arranging the show. Mr. Claude Marner, the manager, worked like a Trojan.

THE following names will give an idea of the excellent programme that was provided:—Mme. Albani, Miss Evie Greene, Barton and Ashley, Wright and Lawson, Rose Archer, Emerson and Baldwin, Dorothy Clark, the Gregory Troupe, Elmo and Rego, Frank Harvey and company, Dorothy Gould, Les Andos, Zakovsky, Renroff, Chris. Richards, George Leyton ("Lucknow") Miss Bayley Harris, Miss Millie Craddock, Mooney and Holbein, Gladys Huxley, Sam Spira, Gilbert Gerrard, Harry Taft, Marie Wilton, Alfred A. Harris, and Dorothy Green, Harry Brown, Ernest Shand, Edie King, Elsie Bernard, Robert Pateman, Band of the Royal Marine Artillery, Mr. B. S. Green.

MISS MABEL FAIRCHILD, with her unique dancing scena A Belfry Dream, topped the bill one week at the Aquarium, Scarborough, and was retained the next as a "draw"—a very exceptional occurrence, which has obliged the lady to postpone this week's date in order to remain.

MISS TOTS DAVIS, unfortunately taken ill with influenza, was unable to appear at the Empress, Brixton, on Monday evening. Mr. Grimes very kindly postponed her engagement until her recovery. She returned on Sunday from a successful tour in the North of England.

LONDON PAVILION.

Sketches written round instrumentalists are not uncommon on the variety stage, and though one does not lose touch altogether with the romance of The Power of Music, by F. S. Jennings and Jan Rudenyi, yet it is the achievements as a violin virtuoso of the latter gentleman that are the playlet's chief attraction. Two violinists are rivals in love of Eileen Granville, who, though favouring the suit of Renard Carona, is under the strange spell woven by the musical genius of Disani, a poor Hungarian violinist, of whom she dreams. Renard, who has won a great success as a violinist at the Queen's Hall, returns triumphant to give the flowers that have been thrown to him to his inamorata. He would play a solo, but the strain is taken by the wandering Disani, who laughs at Renard's pretensions, and insults him. The latter would retaliate, but Eileen intervenes. Eventually becoming enraged, Renard smashes the beloved instrument of Disani, who, however, forgives everybody before going out to shoot himself. Mr. Jan Rudenyi, who appeared a few years since at this hall, plays admirably some Hungarian dances, and Miss Dora de Winton, who looks handsome as Eileen, and Mr. John D. Saunders as Renard do all that is possible to sustain the dramatic interest.

Miss Vesta Victoria returned on Monday to renew her triumphs with Mr. Frank Glenister's patrons. She opened with a new song, in which the prospective wife of a peer who comes from the "masses" indulges in speculation as to her prospects in "society." The comedy of the notion is developing, and with such a capital subject to work upon we may be sure that Miss Vesta's impersonation of the lady who has married into the nobility will before long be a thing of joy. "The Widow" and "Now I have to call him father" are established favourites that no one of the Pavilion audiences would miss on any account.

Mr. Tom Dunville still dissembles drolly as Hamlet of Denmark Hill; and Mr. Tom Costello, the laureate of comic matrimonial entanglements, gives a genuinely funny picture of the result of the marriage of a widower with six to a relict with another half-dozen. Little Tich has added an impersonation of Dr. Dudd, the dentist, to his gallery of comic portraits, and the result is roars of laughter, which are increased by his quaint dancing as Little Miss Turpentine. Versatility is enshrined in the methods of Mr. Albert Le Fre, who returns to the Pavilion time after time to find his popularity undiminished and his audiences as eager and responsive as ever. Mr. Le Fre's gifts are many-sided, but his dancing is a speciality of his turn, and his quaint impersonation of a serious gentleman with a stiff leg going through a quadrille quite upsets one's gravity. Other favourites include Mr. Albert Whelan, who mimics Harry Lauder to good purpose; Jack and Evelyn, a popular pair, who win the heartiest approval in their latest comic duo; Ross and Grayson, whose mélange of music and piano-playing extraordinary evokes uproarious hilarity. The Zaid Trio have an original speciality; the scientific exhibition of rifle and pistol shooting by the Three Royal Dreadnoughts is watched with much interest; and other turns include Mr. Larry Lewis, Gicardo, Miss Hettie Lee, Mr. Josh Dixon, Miss Emilie Hayes, Florence and Lillian, and Mr. Maynard Dakin.

THE HIPPODROME.

We regret the continued absence from the front of this house of the popular manager, Mr. Fred Trussell, who is slowly recovering from his accident, and will not, we are afraid, be back before the closure on Saturday next. Mr. Hicks, who is acting on behalf of Mr. Trussell, is directing a programme of exceptional strength and variety. The Motor Chase is a series of stupendous sensations that thrill audiences nightly, and the eagerness with which the flight of the young lovers, Walley Berkeley and Lady Sybil Pinbury, is followed proclaims the real grip of the sketch, which has been so ingeniously and so cleverly produced and stage-managed by the incomparable Frank Parker. Cupid is a powerful factor in The Motor Chase, and when Lady Sybil tells the alien millionaire of Hebrew origin that his millions cannot buy her love, we feel that we are in for a healthy time with melodrama that has a dash of wholesome sentiment in it. Down country lanes career the rival suitors in motors, and of course the dangers of the route by the silent pool, easily avoided by hero and heroine, prove to be the undoing of Mr. Issy Tass, who swerves with his car, which falls into the water. Mr. Philip Cunningham and Miss Maud Cressall, a very pretty actress, play with a sure touch, and Mr. C. W. Somerset's breadth of style as Tass is of the greatest service in every scene, more especially in the first. Mr. Evelyn Vernon looks every inch an aristocrat as the Duke of Stroud; Mr. Clive Currie is an effective Lord Winkworth; Mr. H. Latimar gives a neat sketch of Count von Brisen; and Mr. O. E. Lennon is amusing as the loafer. The Hyde Park scene is a triumph of realism, and the ball makes a pretty spectacle.

A sensational jumping act is presented by the Deonzo Brothers from America, who do some really wonderful feats. They jump on to bottles and decanters, and incidentally extinguish candles with their feet. Their greatest tour de force is their ascent of a pyramid of tables by leaping on to bottles and similar objects, taking a barrel in their upward progress. When the top table is reached both turn somersaults to the ground. Not the slightest mistake is made, and the different objects which afford temporary rests for this light-footed pair are absolutely intact at the close of their performance, which is flawless. Miss Lina Marrder in golden raiment looks handsome on her white steed, the animal pacing very cleverly in a perfect haute école exhibition. As a pendant to the act, Miss Marrder, in voluminous serpentine skirts, poses while pretty chromotropic pictures are thrown on to them. The St. Bernard dogs and fox terriers also add to the variety of the turn. The Carmos do some astonishing balancing feats, the gentleman also showing considerable strength when he balances on his chin a chair on which his lady partner is seated. Mann's performing elephants are interesting; and E. H. Bostock's kangaroo, who boxes three rounds with his trainer, evidently looks upon the business as a little playful exercise that is quite to his liking.

Woman, lovely woman, asserts herself most unmistakably and most agreeably when the Stockham Grecian Ladies' Band, consisting of fourteen pretty girls in beautiful Grecian costumes, is led by Mme. Stockham from the conductor's rostrum aloft on the dress-circle level. The combination includes the famous Stockham Harp Trio and a lady virtuoso on the trombone, who chose "Ora pro nobis" for her solo on the night of our visit. The selection from Faust was also very finely played. At the conclusion of the turn the curtain had to be raised four or five times in response to an enthusiastic reception. The Boccaccio Minstrels include Signor Francis, an accomplished mandolinist, who plays Gounod's famous serenade delightfully. Mr. Johnny Fuller's feline tricks and wire performance as a cat are excellent, and the Fratellini Brothers are always welcome. The Pathégraph affords great amusement with a comic picture.

OUR New York correspondent writes:—"Mr. Laurence Irving and Miss Mabel Hackney, in The King and the Vagabond, were the leading attraction last week at the American Music Hall, the only house in New York that is run on the English plan. Mr. William Morris books nothing but first-class attractions for his 'genuine London music-hall,' as he terms it, but one may say that the playlet presented by Mr. Irving and his talented wife is more than a cut above the average vaudeville offering.

"IT was evidently not too 'high-toned' for Eighth-avenue, however, judging from the applause that came from all parts of the house when the curtain descended. Mr. Irving and Miss Hackney must have been very well pleased with their reception. This week they are appearing at the Fulton Theatre in Brooklyn."

MR. CLIVE CURRIE, who is playing Lord Winkworth in the mile-a-minute sensation, The Motor Chase, at the Hippodrome, will head a company entrusted with the representation of Miss Ina Rozant's play A Stage Name and The Taming of the Shrew at the Rehearsal Theatre, Maiden-lane, on Sunday, April 4.

CLARENCE HOSKINS, formerly manager of the Tunbridge Wells Opera House, was sentenced to three months' hard labour on Wednesday on a charge of embezzling £36, the money of Messrs. Walter de Frece and Frederick Mouillot. Hoskins eloped with a chorus girl, but attributed his downfall to drink.

TESTIMONIAL TO MAURICE DE FRECE.

TO COMMEMORATE HIS FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY OF THE DRAMATIC AND VARIETY AGENCY.

President, MR. ARTHUR COLLINS, T.R., Drury-lane.

Several mutual friends, well-wishers, and members of the profession have suggested that a testimonial should be given to Mr. Maurice de Frece, who will shortly enter upon his fiftieth year of the variety agency business. For half of this period Mr. de Frece has been connected with the firm of Richard Warner and Co., with whom he is no longer associated. Mr de Frece's friends deem this a most fitting opportunity of expressing their esteem and appreciation of his sterling good qualities in business and his straightforward conduct and extreme courtesy to one and all with whom he has come in contact during his career as the oldest-established variety agent in the world.

We regret to say that at the present time Mr. de Frece is an inmate of St. Peter's Hospital, Henrietta-street, Covent Garden, W.C., where he will undergo a severe operation. It is expected he will remain in hospital four or five weeks.

The following gentlemen form the Committee, with power to add to their number:—

Mr. Frederick Abrahams	Mr. Sydney Hyman
Mr. Harry Barnett	Mr. Johnny Jacobs
Mr. Natt Behrens	Mr. E. J. Leamy

TERRIERS' DINNER AND BALL.

The annual dinner and ball which was held on Sunday last at the Horns Hotel, Kennington, was a most enjoyable function. About one hundred Terriers and their friends assembled for dinner at 10 p.m. The President, Mr. Jesse Sparrow, was in the chair. After the usual loyal toast, Mr. G. P. R. Burgess (hon. solicitor to the Terriers) proposed the toast of "The Terriers' Association," which was responded to by the secretary, Mr. Arthur Were. The chairman proposed "Kindred Societies," to which Mr. Douglas Stuart and Mr. Pat Carey replied. "The Visitors" were toasted by Mr. Harry Gage (hon. treasurer), and acknowledged by Mr. Ernest Rees and Miss Gertrude Glynn. Mr. H. Cory Woodrow proposed "The Chairman."

After an excellent repast provided by Mr. Joseph Sams, the company adjourned to the ballroom, and dancing, commencing shortly after midnight to the strains of the Belgravia Orchestra, conducted by Mr. Sweet, continued into the early hours. During the interval an impromptu burlesque minstrel troupe and band performance given by Tom Callaghan ("Hebrew comedian"), Charles Stevens, Willie Benn (at the piano), Harry Mayville (violin), Fred Larola and Fred Neiman (drums), Ted "Caruso" Hanley, and others, created uproarious mirth. Terriers M. H. MacDowall and H. Cory Woodrow made excellent M.C.'s.

The company present included Mr. Jesse Sparrow, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bawn (My Fancy), Miss Peggy Pryde, Mr. George Pearson, Mr. Pat Carey, Mr. Horace Wheatley, Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Alexander, Mr. Tom Callaghan, Mr. G. P. R. Burgess, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Gage, Mr. M. H. McDowall, Mr. and Mrs. Larola, Mr. and Mrs Fred Neiman, Mr. and Mrs. Willie Benn, Mr. and Mrs. H. Cory Woodrow, Mr. Chas. Pratt, Mr. and Mrs. Barney Hyams, Mr. Bert Marsden, Mr. and Miss Madden, Mr. W. L. Murray, Mr. Syd Cottrell, Mrs. Pounds, Mr. Squire Wyndham, Mr. Charles Cornish, Mr. and Mrs. Kohler, Mr. and Mrs. Emery, Mr. and Mrs. Crook, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Stevens, Miss Gwenn, Mr. and Mrs. Wagstaff, Misses Dilloston, Mr. and Mrs. Chambers, Mr. and Mrs. Hilton, Mr. and Mrs. C. Moore, Mr. C. F. Gage, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Webb, Mr. Fred Hooper, Dr. Frost, Mr. Douglas Stuart, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Were, and others.

A PRETTY incident took place at the Central Hall, Lincoln, on the 18th. The little wonder of the Four Cecilians, who so greatly charmed the patrons during the week, was presented with a pretty gold necklet and pendant. The present was entirely from the townspeople of Lincoln. At Saturday's matinée the children subscribed to present her with flowers. She will be seen at the Empire, Camberwell, next week.

BILLY KEENE AND JESSIE ADAMS have made a tremendous success in Panama, Central America, and are re-engaged for a further forty weeks. They dress in the "real" pierrot dress—white face and skull-caps—with illuminated scenery, and their act has been greatly praised for its refinement and beautiful ensemble work. The artists composing the company are Alec Leo, Frank Foley, Harry Barlow, W. Crandon-Bevan, Jessie Adams, and Billy Keene.

DR. BODIE AT HACKNEY EMPIRE.

The remarkable demonstrations of Dr. Walford Bodie, the famous "electric wizard" and bloodless surgeon, are familiar to music hall audiences in every town of importance in the United Kingdom, and this week dwellers in Hackney and the immediate neighbourhood have been flocking to the handsome Stoll Empire to renew acquaintance with his novel and wonderful exhibition. After his first experiment with a 4in. spark coil, in which the doctor proved his marvellous resistance to the deadly electricity, acquired, as he explained, by years of practice, he introduced the Death Chair, an exact replica of the one used in Sing Sing Prison, New York. Dr. Bodie referred to a question recently raised in the Press—"Does Electricity Kill?" He is of opinion that the method of carrying out the death penalty in America is not always painless or instantaneous. Strapped in the chair, the doctor duplicated every experiment so graphically described in the Press, lighting arc and incandescent lamps with a carbon held between his teeth, setting fire to a pocket handkerchief, and accomplishing other wonderful feats, the voltage passing through his body being enormous. Another daring and attractive exhibition was his incarceration in the "Cage of Death," which, when connected with his apparatus, became a dazzling prison of electric fireworks, from which Dr. Bodie emerged unscathed, to the accompaniment of loud and prolonged applause. As a finale to his unique and interesting turn, the doctor introduced three little patients whom he had cured of paralysis and kindred complaints on former visits to London. These youngsters had all been dismissed from London hospitals as incurable, but were now eloquent testimony to the doctor's cleverness as a skilled surgeon. One little toddler, carrying cumbersome leg-irons, with which she formerly managed with difficulty to walk, ran on the stage in the full enjoyment of the use of her limbs, affectionately kissing her benefactor ere she departed. A lad of eleven, who had had a withered and quite useless arm, spoke up for himself, telling how the doctor had cured him, and proving it effectively by giving an exercise with dumbbells.

In conclusion, the eminent Scottish osteologist experimented on two children—many were in attendance, but time would not permit more being treated in that house. A little girl of three was carried on by a nurse, a bad case of paralysis, and after the doctor had exercised his marvellous healing powers, was able to walk off unaided. The result was exactly the same in the case of an older child afflicted with a withered leg. To the uninitiated the modus operandi appears simple; it is certainly swift and sure, the boldness and adroitness with which the doctor performed the operations inspiring confidence with the patients, who apparently suffered no pain. The names and addresses of the children and the hospitals from which they have been discharged are given, and Dr. Bodie claims to have treated successfully over 1,000 cases—a record of which he is naturally proud. The attractiveness of the doctor's daring demonstrations is enhanced by his striking personality and fluent address, his explanatory remarks being always interesting and frequently humorous.

MISS PAULINE ELLIOTT'S MARRIAGE.

A very pretty wedding took place last Saturday, March 20, at St. Peter's Church, Regency-square, the officiating clergyman being the Rev. R. N. Pyk, between Miss Pauline Elliott, daughter of the late J. B. Elliott, and Mr. Robert T. Paumier. The bride, who looked charming, wore a white silk Empire gown, covered with Maltese lace, white picture hat, white ostrich feather and orange blossoms, and carried a bouquet of white orchids, was given away by her brother, Mr. Tom Elliott, Mr. George Hanson being best man.

The bridesmaids, Misses May and Violet Elliott, looked very pretty in frocks of champagne-coloured silk slashed with blue, and blue picture hats, and bouquets of daffodils, and wearing diamond and turquoise brooches, the gift of the bridegroom. Mr. Percy Greenhalgh, a friend of the family, played the "Wedding March" on the bridal party leaving the church. The scene was a very striking one, pew after pew being filled with friends and relatives of the bride and bridegroom.

A reception was afterwards held at the residence of Mrs. J. B. Elliott, Washington House, Guilford-street, Russell-square, where the guests assembled sat down to a sumptuous banquet and drank the health of the happy couple.

The presents, which are numerous and costly, were displayed in the reception room, and much admired. They include: from bridegroom to bride, diamond and ruby ring; from bride to bridegroom, gold watch set with diamonds; a silver fruit and flower stand from Mr. D. J. Clarke; set of silver photo frames, Mr. and Mrs. J. Elliott; silver scent bottles, Mr. and Mrs. H. Elliott; silver serviette rings, Mr. M. Elliott; silver double-decked manicure set, Miss M. Elliott; silver jewel casket, Mr. and Mrs. Saul Ettenias; silk and Honiton lace dressing gown, Mrs. J. B. Elliott; table centre, Miss Violet Elliott; fancy clock, Mrs. Saul and daughter; Thermos bottle in leather case, Councillor Young, J.P.; silver travelling clock, Mr. and Mrs. Hunter; large oil painting, Miss Amy Elliott; silver glove stretchers, Master Bedford Elliott; silver purse, Mr. P. Greenhalgh; handsome bedspread, Mr. and Mrs. Wood; lace doylies, Mrs. Riddrough; nightdress case, Misses Transfield; a long pear-shaped chain with diamond heart, Mr. Welsby; silver tea service, Mr. Gordon; silver coffee service, the Hon. W. Gough; set of silver trays, Lady Gough. Amongst others too numerous to mention are enamelled boxes, jewelled fan, writing case, dressing bags, fitted motor bags, and many other beautiful gifts.

The bride's going-away dress was grey cloth, with hat to match, and sable furs. The honeymoon was spent at Brighton.

A pleasant incident occurred in connection with the above. On Saturday night, on the termination of the performance of the Elliott-Savonas at the Empire, Holloway, a beautiful bouquet was handed up by the conductor to the bride, and the band played the "Wedding March." The whole audience took in the situation at once, and cheer after cheer echoed through the house, mingled with shouts of "Good luck!" and it was some minutes before the curtain was allowed to finally descend.

The sole and exclusive rights for Bioscope pictures of the Grand National, run on Friday at Aintree, have again been acquired by the management of the Empire. Arrangements have been entered into whereby Bioscope cameras will be placed at every jump, so that a complete record of the race, from start to finish, will be obtained. Pictures will be taken of the crowd in the paddock, and also a bird's-eye view of the course.

Bioscope pictures of the Guards' Rush to Hastings are being shown at the Empire. The incidents include the start from London, the troops en route, and exclusive views of the encampment and drill on the cricket ground at Hastings.

A number of officers of the Russian Squadron, which played so signal a part in the rescue of the victims of the Messina Earthquake, were present on Thursday evening, the 18th, and were vociferous in their applause for their countrywoman, Mlle. Lydia Kyasht, also showing their appreciation of Mr. Fred Farren and Miss Beatrice Collier in "La Danse des Apaches." The Russian National Anthem was played during the evening.

DEATH OF MR. THEOPHILUS DUNKLEY.

Many members of the theatrical and music-hall profession will regret to hear of the death of Mr. Theophilus Dunkley, the well-known theatrical undertaker, of 88, Westminster Bridge-road. Mr. Dunkley, who was sixty-five years of age, had been confined to his room for nearly a fortnight with bronchitis, and he passed away on Tuesday evening a little before nine o'clock. The funeral is to take place on Tuesday, the cortège leaving the residence at twelve o'clock, and arriving at Lambeth Cemetery, Tooting, at half-past one.

The deceased gentleman, who was born in Westminster Bridge-road, was the son of an undertaker, and succeeded to a business founded by the family in 1814. Mr. Dunkley was for many years a prominent figure in variety circles, and was one of the oldest habitués of the Canterbury Music Hall and of the old Surrey Theatre, frequently visiting the latter place of entertainment during the time of Phelps and Creswick. He was a great friend of the late Mr. Charles Crowder and Mr. George Adney Payne, and was present on the occasion of the opening of the Canterbury and Paragon. His other friends in the profession were legion, for he was personally very popular and highly respected.

Mr. Dunkley was invariably to be seen at important music-hall functions, and often acted as M.C. at the balls. He was a well-known Freemason, and a Past-Master of the craft, being W.M. in Jubilee year, 1887. Mr. Dunkley attended to the funeral arrangements of many well-known artists, including Dan Leno, Jennie Hill, and Bessie Bellwood.

He leaves a widow (his second wife), a daughter (Mrs. Florence Elizabeth Herring), and a son (Mr. W. R. Dunkley), who will carry on the business, and who has assisted his father and managed affairs for the past nineteen years. Mr. W. R. Dunkley is also well known to many music-hall people.

THE LATE MR. THEOPHILUS DUNKLEY.

"WHO'S MY DAD?"

New Sketch, Produced at the Granville, Walham Green, on Monday, March 22.

John Short ..... Mr. Myles Clifton
Samuel Snipe ..... Mr. Edgar Payne
Mr. Glue ..... Mr. Stanley Lathbury
Miss Semolina Snipe ..... Miss Millie Vere
Polly ..... Miss Daisie Wallace

In the story of this sketch Mr. Samuel Snipe is secretly married to Polly, a fascinating maid-of-all-work. Snipe's sister, Semolina, is also secretly married, having espoused a Mr. Glue, a paying guest of the Snipes. Both parties have spent their honeymoon at Margate, and on the arrival of Short, a waiter from the hotel where they stopped, who recognises them, they all are thrown into a state of panic. Fearing that Short has suspected the truth, they bribe him to secrecy. There are some diverting errors of identity, and eventually disclosures dispel all dangers. Mr. Myles Clifton appears as the waiter, Short; Mr. Edgar Payne is excellent as Samuel Snipe; and Mr. Stanley Lathbury as Glue, Miss Millie Vere as Semolina, and Miss Daisie Wallace as Polly, all do good work.

Tamomoto, "the Japanese Blondin and perpendicular rope performer," is producing wonderment at Ealing this week and what this expert son of "Sunrise Land" cannot perform in the way of climbing, clinging, and balancing—to say nothing about sitting upon nothing, as it were, and calmly fanning himself—is not worth knowing.

In Mr. Justice Coleridge's Court on the 19th Mr. Walter Gibbons, of the London Theatres of Varieties, sought for an injunction to restrain the British Cinema Company, Ltd., from so advertising as to mislead the public in regard to places where Harry Lauder was appearing, and to restrain them from giving any colourable representation of that artist's performances. The jury awarded the plaintiffs £50 damages. On the morning of Lauder's first appearance in May at the Balham Hippodrome, the defendants put out a poster which, counsel maintained, was likely to make the public believe the comedian was appearing at the Balham Empire, for the words "on the auxetophone" were in type so small that they could only be seen by a person quite close to the poster, while the name "Harry Lauder" was so big that it could be read some distance away.

MISS VESTA VICTORIA.

A chat with Mr. Charles Beecham, the representative of Miss Vesta Victoria, reveals the fact that at the London Pavilion Miss Vesta Victoria has taken by storm the hearts of the patrons of this fashionable rendezvous, and the sequel to this success has been an offer by Mr. Frank Glenister for a return visit for an extended period after Miss Victoria has fulfilled a six nights' engagement in Edinburgh. Success breeds success, and offers have been made from the big circuits for Miss Victoria's services. Someone has written that the cause of this success is genius—that high mental endowment, that creative or inventive faculty, which is at once a law and model unto itself; that special intellectual capability that no training can give, and but few possess. Miss Victoria has been written about in the New York Evening Journal by the famous Nell Brinkley in her usual racy American style:—"Vesta Victoria is the Prince of jesters of the English music halls. So many you see that crack their jokes and caper in her trail, but Vesta trills the whistle, swings the big bâton, sports the bearskin shako, and walks backward at the head of the squad. She's the raggiest ragtime song. She the best verse in the whole blessed pome. She's like the taper-faced girl that wore a Buster Brown collar—and all the little Bettys that we see framed up in Buster Browns, too; but none of 'em ever look like the taper-faced girl looks in her Buster Brown. It's like that with Vesta Victoria and the other little Britonese music hall Bettinas. They grin, in grotesque absurdities of frock and hat. They skip and simper in white baby-dress with pale pink ribbons. They warble songs with bashfully naughty and funny titles. And we like them bullee! But they don't do any of these three things as Vesta Victoria does. She's the Hurdy-Gurdy that first plinked out 'Waiting at the church.' And now she has some others. 'Is anybody looking for a widow?' with a big white bow chucked under her chin; with her hands shyly folded, and sometimes flapping like Dutch windmills. And then 'Now I have to call him father,' with an aching face, 'in more senses than one,' and an uncanny flannel skating frock. Vesta Victoria isn't pretty—not very much pretty—but she sports the bearskin shako and sways the big bâton in the English squad."

MISS VESTA VICTORIA.

Miss Victoria will be seen at all the principal London halls during the next few months; some entirely new character studies and songs will be forthcoming from one who has been too long away from the old country.

AGENTS AND LICENSING.

The question of the licensing of employment agencies is shortly to come before the London County Council.

In the case of music hall agencies no power to inspect books will be sought, but they are to be licensed annually, the Council having power to refuse a licence on evidence of misconduct. Agents not accepting preliminary fees will not be exempted. The Public Control Committee think that the licensing of agents would afford material protection for girls seeking employment abroad.

We have received several letters. On behalf of Day's Variety Agency, Mr. Harry Goodson writes:—

"I came to the conclusion some time ago that the Public Control Committee were every now and then dealing with matters concerning which they have had unreliable or anonymous information, without any practical experience or knowledge.

"The members most certainly are under the impression (as in the times when music halls were 'sing-songs' and the performers rogues and vagabonds) that a music hall agency is conducted in the back-room, cellar, or top attic.

"If they would make a tour of the principal variety agents, it would be a shock to their imaginations to find that a music hall agency with suites of lofty and airy rooms, waiting-rooms, inquiry offices, reading-rooms, and every possible convenience for artists, was being conducted on the most straightforward and honest lines, certainly on more legitimate business lines than many other businesses or offices over which they have no control.

"If the Public Control Committee would concentrate their attention upon not only bogus music hall agencies but bogus agencies of every description, and obtain power to deal with them, they would then perhaps become a useful body.

"Including music hall agencies in their proposition and comparing them with other employment agencies is an insult to honest music hall agents as business men.

"I do not object so much to the possibility, if they care to apply for authority to call here and inspect our books from time to time to see that no preliminary fees are taken, so as to exempt us from being licensed or registered, but if licensed or under registration we would appear as always being under suspicion of getting a livelihood on an illegal basis.

"Should the licensing of music hall agents become a reality it would be the simplest thing imaginable for any undesirable person to apply for a licence and use the fact of his being licensed by the County Council as a hallmark.

"The fact of his having 'Licensed by the London County Council' on his notepaper would entice honest but simple persons to deal with him, and his one object would be to use the announcement on his notepaper with intent to defraud. He would thus be licensed to carry on a bogus agency with the County Council's sanction!

"This is quite impossible under the present conditions of the Variety Agents' Association, which was formed with the one sole purpose of keeping the business clean in every respect."

Mr. S. L. Francis-Clare, secretary of the Variety Agents' Association, says that the points raised by the London County Council were in substance considered by the Committee of the House of Commons on the occasion of the London County Council (General Powers) Bill, 1905, passing through the House of Commons.

A considerable quantity of evidence was taken, which resulted in Section 52 of that Act, which enacts that the provision with regard to employment agencies "should not apply to any keeper of a concert, theatrical, or music hall employment agency or registry unless in the course of such business he by advertisement, circular notice, or otherwise offered to procure employment in consideration of a preliminary or registration fee, or unless he accept a fee, commission, or other monetary payment before procuring employment."

The points which have been raised by the Public Control Committee were fully gone into, and from investigations the Association have made they have not been able to discover any new circumstances which would justify the question being reopened.

REOPENING OF GRAND HALL, BROMLEY.

The late Lyric Theatre, Bromley (Kent), reopened on Monday under its former name of the Grand Hall. The place has been redecorated and furnished anew, presenting a decidedly more attractive appearance than formerly, and, under the energetic management of Mr. Alfred Moul, will no doubt resume its more successful days.

For the opening attraction excellent animated pictures were shown, one entitled The Englishman's Home depicting a day with the Territorials. The Red Hand shows modern Paris in its right aspect and the taverns and supper rooms of the Montmartre, in which a realistic representation of the "Danse d'Apache" is given. The characters in this film were represented by MM. Severin and Max Dearly, Mlle. Mistinguette, and Mlle. Napierkowska, popular French artists.

The programme was further enlivened by some tuneful numbers admirably rendered by Mlle. Marie D'Alcourt, who obliged with "As long as the world rolls on," and Mr. John Wheelan, who sang "My pretty Jane," both numbers being heartily received by the crowded audience. Considerable amusement was also caused by De Vere's Fantooches in an excellent representation of a music hall entertainment. Mr. William Neale ably assisted at the piano, and the front of the house was attended to in a most capable manner by the courteous resident-manager, Mr. Hubert S. Chambers.

Mlle. Dolli, a pupil of Mme. Cormani of the Alhambra, who appears on Monday next at the Crown Hippodrome, Peckham, has been trained in the Italian School, and has appeared with much success at the Scala, Milan, and also the Verdi Theatre. Beside her exhibition of classic dancing she also gives the Russian and Hungarian styles, and her work was greatly appreciated by the late Mme. Katti Lanner.

SHILLING COLLECTION FOR THE MUSIC HALL HOME.

3,495 SHILLINGS.

In again directing the attention of our readers to The Era's Shilling Fund on behalf of the Music Hall Home we are in the happy position of being able to associate with the appeal thus being made the name of the foremost music hall comedienne—Miss Marie Lloyd. It seems scarcely necessary to remind our readers of the deep interest Miss Lloyd has ever taken in matters affecting the welfare of her brothers and sisters of the variety profession. It is her desire that her "year" will be marked by a considerable increase in the subscriptions of previous years, and she therefore, through The Era, commends the Music Hall Home to the charitably-minded. Mr. Thomas Barrasford, the President of the Fund, is again this year exerting himself in its behalf, and this fact is sufficient indication that he is satisfied as to the way in which the institution is being conducted, and that he considers it worthy of support.

Mr. Ben Woodger, the secretary of the Music Hall Home, tells us that in 1907 the inmates averaged ten but that in 1908 there have been as many as twelve. The address of the Home is 31, Wilson-road, Camberwell, and there the matron (Mrs. Fruin) busies herself for the comfort and convenience of her "family." At present there are eleven of these, and the desire is to increase the number, which can only be done when sufficient funds for the purpose are collected. During the past twelve months three or four of the inmates have recovered their health and strength sufficiently to enable them to look for engagements. These secured, they left the Home, and the vacancies thereby created were immediately filled up. Now, this Home requires keeping up, and it cannot be kept up on air. There is no need for us to refer to all the good work which has been performed by the institution in the past, as that must for the most part be within the recollection of our readers. The ages of the inmates range from fifty to seventy-six. In all probability these men will be maintained in the Home until the day of their death, and their funeral expenses paid for out of the funds of the Home.

The Era's Shilling Fund is the main source of income to the Home, and this means of sustenance is added to by the donations of artists, either given directly, or through the collecting boxes through which many managers of variety theatres collect pennies from "dead-heads" and from artists who desire free admission.

Anyone can be supplied with a collecting-card by sending a postcard to Mr. Woodger.

Briefly, we may once more repeat that the objects of the Music Hall Home Fund are to provide shelter for deserving members of the variety profession who have been stricken with poverty or illness in their declining years, or who have in other ways fallen on evil times. Mr. F. H. Pedgrift, the hon. treasurer, will be pleased to receive filled-up collecting cards addressed to him at The Era, 5, Tavistock-street, Strand, W.C., and to acknowledge them in these columns.

The Fight for Mitcham Fair.

An important outcome of the recent meeting of the London Divisional Committee of the Showmen's Guild was the determination to leave no effort wanting to bring about a mutually satisfactory conclusion to the questions at issue between the would-be abolitionists and the defenders of the fair rights of the people of Mitcham. The steps taken by the committee will be sufficiently indicated in the following letter, which has been sent to the chairman and clerk of the Board of Conservators, to the chairman and clerk of the Parish Council, to the local papers, and to the public men interested in the matter:—

MITCHAM FAIR AND THE ORGANISED SHOWMEN.

The Showmen Guild,
5, Tavistock-street, Strand, W.C.

Dear Sir,—We think the present time opportune to lay before you the definite proposals of the Showmen Guild with a view to dealing with the existing difficulty of Mitcham Fair.

We wish, first of all, to state that the Executive Council of this Society is prepared to effect a settlement in the interests not only of its members, whose trade and business is vitally affected by the attempted abolition of old-established fairs, but also in the interests of the people of Mitcham, who evidently do not desire the abolition of their old-time fair and holidays.

We admit that, recognising the strength of the movement for the removal of the fair from a site no longer suitable owing to the congestion of public traffic and the increasing difficulty of the authorities to deal with the traffic at the fair time, it is wise for the fair to be removed to a more commodious and, from the traffic point of view, safe site.

We understand that Figg's Marsh originally belonged to the same Manor as the Fair Green. We therefore suggest that to remove the fair to Figg's Marsh would involve no friction with other manorial right holders. Failing this, we think the best site for the fair would be the Three Kings Common. Although we definitely name these two sites, yet, if the difficulties are insuperable, we would accept alternative sites, some of which have been named: one on the right-hand side and another on the left immediately over the railway bridge on the Croydon-road, or any other site on the common that would be mutually acceptable.

We want to state again so that there may be no misapprehension as to our position: First, we desire that the fair shall be controlled and the revenue arising therefrom shall go to the public authorities concerned, and for the easement of public burdens or for the improvement of the commons.

Our primary object is to preserve the fair for the people of Mitcham for ever, and at the same time to bring it under direct local control in order that the amusement of the people may be of such a character as shall meet with the approval of the authorities, and also satisfy the legitimate wants of the people at holiday time.

We shall be glad to hear from you further upon this question.

Signed on behalf of the Showmen Guild (London Divisional Committee),

A. Ball, Chairman.
F. H. Pedgrift, Treasurer.
T. Horne, Organiser and Chaplain.

Some Important Developments.

In view of the fact that next March will see the election of a new Parish Council, and that considerable dissatisfaction is felt by the great majority of the ratepayers at the way in which £400 of the people's money was given up by the Parish Council in 1905, there is a growing body of public opinion in favour of letting the people—whom the matter really concerns (we mean the people of Mitcham)—give a decisive vote on the question.

Such a vote will be cast in March next, if not earlier. The organised showmen have all along declared that they would abide by the declared will of the people. The Home Secretary is on the highest constitutional grounds when he refuses—as he does—to abolish the fair, except and only at the express desire of the whole body of Mitcham ratepayers, properly voiced in a democratic manner.

Messrs. Bostock and Wombwell's No. 1 menagerie spent a profitable time in Central Glamorgan last week-end, good business being done at Bridgend and Maesteg. At Bridgend much local interest was aroused through a local hairdresser shaving a local butcher in a lion's den. Each received a gold medal for their courage.

DEATH OF WILLIAM CLARK, OF GHOST SHOW FAME.

There passed away on Wednesday last, March 24, one of Britain's most famous showmen, William Clark, professionally known as Col. Clark. He travelled in later years with one of the most perfect Picture Palaces on the road, and was an immense favourite with the show-loving public in the great Lancashire towns, where he mostly attended at the great fairs and wakes, and in winter time for private business. His circuit of fairs included Manchester, Oldham, Blackburn, Bolton, Wigan, Burnley, Stockport, Bury, and a score of other towns in the great cotton manufacturing district.

We last saw him at the annual meeting of the Showmen's Guild at Manchester on Jan. 17. He bore then marks of physical weakness that provoked our personal alarm and inquiry. He had suffered, he told us, from a severe chill at Bolton winter fair, and confessed to feeling much run down.

The show for many years past has wintered at Farnworth. It was there that, surrounded by his family, he passed peacefully away in the early evening of Wednesday last.

That a notable worker has gone from our midst will be universally admitted. Yet more than that must be told of William Clark—the sterling nobility, large-hearted charity of the man stands out to mark him as a bright example of all that is best in showland. He had identified himself zealously with the work of the Guild from the commencement of the movement for trade defence. In the bitter days of the George Smith crusade against the purity and the sanctity of the showman's home on wheels, William Clark came to the front as a fighting champion of his class and of his own people. We recall a manly speech of his at the Manchester Free Trade Hall in 1892, when, following a rousing speech by James Bostock, he brought the house down by the passion and fire of his appeal for justice and fair play for the travelling showpeople. He travelled all night from Glasgow, where his then famous ghost illusion pavilion was located, in order to take his part in that meeting. His open-handed liberality in response to all appeals to help his poorer brethren in the dark hour of bereavement or trouble endeared him to the whole body of showpeople in Great Britain.

He was, in truth, a great showman, and it is such men who ensure the sympathy and affection of the people, and of such men in the highest and truest sense is the kingdom of God on earth.

We but voice the conviction of the whole heart of showland when we say Requiescat in pace. To his aged father, to his sons and daughters, to his grandchildren and the whole of the Clark family we tender our sincere sympathy, and pray that the bright memory of his life may comfort them in the dark hours of sorrow. The funeral will take place on Monday next, March 29, at Chadderton Cemetery, Oldham, at 2 p.m. Friends will please assemble at St. George's Hall, Oldham, at 1.30.

The Old Gaol Ground, Salisbury.

We are pleased to see another combination of amusements are located on the above ground. This time it is Mr. Jacob Studt and his huge enterprise which are drawing huge crowds to this central site. First and foremost is his magnificent Picture Palace, with its gorgeous front brilliantly illuminated, and the dainty troupe of lady dancers, and is crowded at every performance. Mr. Studt's two machines, viz., the switchback gondolas and his superb motor-car track, are a great attraction, and his tower chute is as attractive as ever. Freeman's juvenile motor-cars and throwing games, stalls, &c., are a good draw, the whole forming one of the best aggregation of amusements seen in Salisbury for a long time, and it is little wonder the grounds are packed every night.

The Guild Fund for the Mitcham Unemployed.

The following letter has been received by the Guild Chaplain from Councillor Dant, of Mitcham. We hope to send another remittance at the end of this week. Again we commend this extremely necessary charity to all the readers of "The Showman World."

Ingledene, Wilton-road, Merton, S.W.
March 21, 1909.

Dear Mr. Horne,—Thank you very much for the cheque (£12) received on behalf of the Mitcham Unemployed Distress Committee on Saturday. I had the pleasure of placing it in the possession of my committee the same afternoon, and the members desired me to express their gratitude to you, Mr. Pedgrift, and the other donors.

There is still much distress in the parish, which we are trying our best to alleviate chiefly by means of the provision of work, so that the recipients may not feel that they are accepting charity.—With kind regards, yours very truly,

Chas. H. Dant.

To the Rev. T. Horne.

The Roundabout Proprietors' and Showmen's Union.

The secretary of the Union asks us to make it widely known that the meeting advertised in our issue of to-day (Saturday) is of great importance, and that a good attendance is requested.

Eccles and Patricroft.

The principal show, machine, and other attractions here were provided by Vallo, Hibbert, Hurst, Wallis, Cordwell, White, Smith, Massey, Whalmore, Lynch, and Harrington.

John Collins, with his concerns and attendant crowd, are at Gorton, and John Green, with similar entertainments, is at Denton.

A Copy of "The Era" will be forwarded to any address in the United Kingdom for six stamps.

FAMOUS SHOWS AND SHOWMEN.

THE STORY OF ONE HUNDRED YEARS OF BRITISH SHOW-LIFE.

By the Rev. Thomas Horne,
(Chaplain the Showmen's Guild.)
[Copyright.]

CHAPTER X.

Period 1825-1850.

As indicating the growth of the show business in the period we are now dealing with, the records of the City of London are especially valuable. The various lists of shows at Bartholomew Fair year by year clearly indicate that the struggle between the reactionaries on the City Council, who aimed at the abolition of the fair, and the vast majority of the people of London, who still wished to retain the ancient charter fairs, with all their valuable privileges.

The people then, as now, were ably backed up by the showmen, in their endeavours to continue their old fairs. London was the storm centre of the puritan forces of England against the amusements of the people. We read of the determined efforts of religious zealots to kill not only Bartholomew Fair, but all fairs. Influenced by these prejudiced abolitionists of popular open-air amusements. The City Council did all it could for some years to discourage the showmen attending the fair; whilst at other times it seemed to have been borne down by public opinion in favour of mending and not ending the fair.

A period of alternating success and failure thus marked the fairs of Smithfield in the years 1825-1836. We read that in 1828 an acount was taken of the receipts at the more important shows. Wombwell's took £1,700, Richardson's £1,200, Atkins' £1,000, Morgan's wild beast show £150, the pig-faced lady, £150; the fat children, £140; the reputed head of Wm. Corder, the murderer of Maria Martin, £100; Ballard's menagerie, £90; Ball's theatre, £80; the diorama of the Battle of Navarino, £60; the Chinese jugglers, £50; Pike's theatre, £40; a Salamander show, £30; Fraser's mumming booth, £26; Keyes and Lane's variety show, £20; and the Scotch giant a similar amount.

This list is interesting as an indication of the popularity of certain kinds of shows, and there does not seem to be, nearly a hundred years later, very much variety in the types of exhibitions. For if we went to one of the best of our fairs of to-day we should just find the same kind of shows, but of course, brought up to date. We should find the modern edition of Richardson's show in the superb picture palaces that now follow the fairs. We should find a smaller kind of picture show, with a variety programme, answering to the concerns of Ball, Pike, and Keyes and Lane. We should also find the smaller menageries and the peep-show, of course up to date, and the inevitable freak show.

The Rivalry of Wombwell and Atkins.

In our story of the remarkable career of Wombwell the Great we referred to the keen business rivalry that existed between Wombwell and Atkins. In the year 1829 Wombwell's big draw was an animal that surprised all the naturalists, and not the least surprising thing about the creature was its fantastical name. It was, in truth, an American buffalo, but Wombwell introduced it to his patrons as "that most wonderful animal, the 'Bonassus,' being the first of the kind which had ever been brought to Europe." It proved a great attraction, and was really a great curiosity, and one of the first of its kind ever seen upon a fairground.

The fanciful name given to it by Wombwell stuck to it, and a reference is made to this rare animal in the epilogue of the Westminster play of that year as "one of the world's great wonders." It was purchased by the Zoological Society from Wombwell, and placed in the Zoo, but it did not live very long, and the Hudson Bay Company gave the Zoological Society a young buffalo to take its place.

Atkins replied with a huge announcement, which read as follows: "Wonderful phenomenon in nature, the singular and hitherto deemed impossible occurrence of a lion and tigress co-habiting and producing young has again taken place in a menagerie, on October 28, 1828, at Windsor, when the royal tigress brought forth three fine cubs. They are now to be seen in the same den with their sire and dam. The first litter of these extraordinary animals were presented to our most Gracious Sovereign, when he was pleased to express some considerable gratification, and to denominate them lion-tigers, than which a more appropriate name could not have been given. The great interest the lion and tigress have excited is unprecedented; they are a source of irresistible attraction, especially as it is the only instance of the kind ever known of animals so directly opposite in their dispositions forming an attachment of so singular a nature; their beautiful and interesting progeny are most admirable productions of Nature. The group is also truly pleasing and astonishing, and must be witnessed to form an adequate idea of them. The remarkable instance of subdued temper and association of animals would permit the keeper to enter their den, and to introduce their performance to the spectators, is the greatest phenomenon in natural history."

Atkins also announced that his menagerie contained an elephant 10ft. high, and defied Wombwell or any other menagerie proprietor in the world to produce its equal.

Atkins's lion and tigress with their playful cubs were engaged by Ducrow and West as one of the attractions of the equestrian season at Astley's in 1830, and were introduced to the audience by their keeper, Winney.

Another new turn was a zebra hunt, in which four trained zebras took part. Upon the occasion of Ducrow's benefit there was a Spanish bull fight with Ducrow as the toreador.

In the following year the trained zebras were introduced in the spectacle of Aladdin.

Some Smaller Shows.

A show that had a considerable vogue at the time was Capelli's performing cats. Amongst other feats they were trained to beat drums, to work a knife-grinding machine, to hammer upon an anvil, to grind coffee, to ring bells, and to play the organ. One of these feline performers understood French as well as Italian, and would take the word of command with equal facility in both languages. Capelli also had a wonderfully-trained dog that was announced as being able to play any gentleman in the audience a game of dominoes.

There were also two large waxwork exhibitions. The best of these was by Ewing, and was arranged in ten caravans, with an outside fit-up equal to Wombwell's. A smaller concern of the same kind was Fergusson's, who, with his wax figures, combined the exhibition of freak novelties.

Panoramas, dioramas, mechanical shows, and phantasmagorial exhibitions were also very popular with the people.

One of these optical illusion shows, or phantasmagoria, was run by a Frenchman named De Berar, and it was a sort of forerunner of the ghost illusion, for he produced the vision of death upon a pale horse, and amazed his audience with an optical presentment of a human skeleton.

Another show of this character attracted audiences by declaring that inside they would show them the "raising of the devil." The clever proprietor of this show, named Haynes, as a foretaste of the fires of hell, emitted a shower of sparks from a lump of burning tow in his mouth.

A Scientist on the Optical Show.

Sir David Brewster visited one of these optical illusions, and gave the following descriptive account of his experience:

"The small theatre of exhibitions was lighted only by one hanging-lamp, the flame of which was drawn up into an opaque chimney or shade when the performance began. In this "darkness visible" the curtain rose, and displayed a cave, with skeletons and other terrific figures in relief upon its walls. The flickering light was then drawn up beneath its shroud, and the spectators in total darkness found themselves in the midst of thunder and lightning. A thin, transparent screen had, unknown to the spectators, been let down after the disappearance of the light, and upon it the flashes of lightning and all the subsequent appearances were represented.

"This screen, being half-way between the spectators and the cave which was first shown, and being itself invisible, prevented the observers from having any idea of the real distance of the figures, and gave them the entire character of aerial pictures. The thunder and lightning were followed by the figures of ghosts, skeletons, and known individuals, whose eyes and mouths were made to move by the action of combined sliders. After the first figure had been exhibited for a short time, it began to grow less and less, as if removed to a great distance, and at last vanished in a small cloud of light.

"Out of this same cloud the germ of another figure began to appear, and gradually grew larger and larger, and approached the spectators till it obtained its perfect development. In this manner the head of Dr. Franklin was transformed into a skull. Figures which retired with the freshness of life came back in the form of skeletons, and the retiring skeleton returned in the drapery of flesh and blood. The exhibition of the transmutations was followed by spectres, skeletons, and terrific figures, which, instead of receding and vanishing as before, suddenly advanced upon the spectators, becoming larger as they approached them, and finally vanished by appearing to sink into the ground.

"The effect of this part of the exhibition was naturally the most impressive. The spectators were not only surprised, but agitated, and many of them were of opinion that they could have touched the figures."

Mechanical Exhibitions.

Du Pain's French mechanical show was a great advance on the moving peep-show which had hitherto travelled the fairs. One of his most effective scenes was a view of Algiers, with the sea in motion, and vessels entering and leaving the harbour. Another novelty of an extremely ingenious kind, and one that became a permanent feature with the clever Frenchman's successors in this line of business, was the representation of a storm at sea, with a vessel in distress burning blue lights, firing guns, and finally becoming a wreck.

Brown's theatre of arts was a famous mechanical exhibition with moving pictures of the battle of Trafalgar, the Passage of the Alps by the French Army, and the Marble Palace of the Czars at St. Petersburg.

The Freak Shows of this Period.

Bromsgrove's show came to the front about the year 1830, and was a freak exhibition of considerable dimensions. The principal attractions were Clancy, the Irish giant, 7ft. 2in. in height; Farnham, the dwarf Hercules, who, although he was but 3ft. 2in. high, was so strong that he could carry two big men on his shoulders with ease; and Thomas Pearce, the Shropshire giant youth, who, although but seventeen years old, stood 5ft. 10in. in his stockings, and was thirty-five stones in weight.

A similar show—Semmitt's Museum of Nature—boasted four living wonders, the Canadian giant twin sisters Priscilla and Amelia Weston; Lydia Walpole, the same dwarf that was exhibited in Maughan's show in 1825; and an albino woman aged nineteen.

Another show of some note at this period had for its chief attraction a cleverly-trained monkey, whose imitation of humans was a particularly clever performance. In addition to the performing monkey were several groups of mechanical figures representing artisans working at various trades.

The Successors of Richardson.

Richardson, in his will, bequeathed five hundred pounds to his old friend John Johnson. This enabled him (in partnership with Nelson Lee, who had by this time become one of the most able showmen in the kingdom) to purchase by private contract the whole of Richardson's show. The new proprietors started out at Whitsuntide at Greenwich, and the outside parade, the celebrated "Esmeralda Dance," was a big draw. This was the beginning of the many wonderful things accomplished by the great Nelson Lee, who brought to the portable theatre ability and genius that lifted it on to a higher plane than it had ever attained in the history of the British drama.

Frost, in his story of the old London Fairs, speaking of the outside parade, says:—"I once saw a very pretty harvest dance of reapers and gleaners on the parade of Richardson's show, and on another occasion a fantastic dance of Indians, who held cocoanuts in their hands, and struck them together, assuming every variety of attitude each dancer sometimes striking his own nuts together and sometimes his own against those of his vis-à-vis."

The old theatre under the new management prospered, and one very important advantage was in the fact that the new proprietors kept the old company, both of actors and the stage-workers together. Delamore succeeded Lewis as stage manager before Richardson's death, and he was retained by the new proprietors. John Douglas, Paul Herring, and Crowther were members of the company, and some of the most notable actors and actresses of the London stage, from time to time, accepted engagements at Richardson's booth.

From Greenwich they visited Deptford and Camberwell Fairs, where they had very lucrative seasons, both before and after the fairs. It was the custom with these large portable theatres to build up some time before the fair, and to continue for weeks after the conclusion of the fair, as long as good business rewarded their enterprise. Thus it was that Richardson's show between Whitsuntide and Old Bartholomew Fair only moved three times.

The Clown and the Policeman.

At Croydon Fair there occurred an amusing adventure to the clown of Richardson's show. The first day being very wet, and the time hanging very slowly upon the merriman's hands, he sallied forth into the town, seeking adventure and diversion, and he got it. He attired himself in the uniform overcoat of a policeman of that period, and walking down the High-street, was immediately the subject of great and most inquisitive observation. The first constable he met straightened himself up and looked at the clown with all his eyes, and made once as though he intended to arrest him, but as the clown appeared rather a biggish man to tackle single-handed, the constable merely fell in step with him and accompanied him down the street. Presently another policeman became singularly interested in the uniformed clown. These two were joined by a third officer, and taking courage of numbers, Mr. Clown was arrested. When he was thus handled by the police the showman protested loudly and vigorously against this summary arrest.

At the police-station the clown was charged with personating a constable and loitering about for an unlawful purpose. The Clown begged that Nelson Lee might be sent for. Speedily Lee was on the spot, and explanations ensued. The mystery of the clown's arrest was explained by the fact that some short time previously several robberies had been committed in the town by a thief dressed up as a constable. The clown was released and hurried back again to the show, in time to take his part in the evening performance, and he declared that whatever character he was called upon to assume he would never promenade the streets in the garb of a policeman again.

The Marquis and the Mummer.

The leader of the then "Smart Set" in London was the notorious Marquis of Waterford. He was the acknowledged captain of a gang of roystering and lawless young aristocrats known as the "Rackabouts," or "The Night Hawks." The doings of this crowd of rowdies was the theme of universal comment and condemnation. At Greenwich Fair when Nelson Lee and Johnson opened with Richardson's show, the showmen were very much distressed and annoyed, and their business hindered by a group of these roysterers led by the Marquis. They invaded the shows in turn, and prevented, by playing trumpets, swinging rattles, and a constant volley of interruptions, more or less of an insulting character. Such were the rude amusements of the young bloods of those lawless days.

Into Richardson's theatre came this noisy crowd, and the performance of the drama The Tyrant Doge was subjected to the most annoying interruptions. The roysterers did not confine their interruptions to vocal and instrumental methods, but they commenced a fusillade of the performers, throwing nuts and using peashooters.

A prominent member of the company was a brilliant Irishman, professionally known as Connor Darrell, affectionately termed by his friends "Con." Now "Con" was a bit of a mystery to the company, and at times, when off his guard, betrayed sufficient of his early life to indicate that he was of noble birth. His stories of university life and his intimate acquaintance with viceregal society in Dublin marked him as a man of good birth and breeding.

The point of this will be seen in the course of our short story.

Who Was the True Gentleman?

"Con" Darrell was taking the juvenile lead in the play, and with him was associated the beautiful Laura Gittens, afterwards famous as a leading actress, in conjunction with her husband, in Dublin. It was an open secret that "Con" Darrell was an ardent admirer of Miss Gittens. When the fusillade of nuts commenced, Darrell conducted Miss Gittens off the stage, and coming to the footlights, with a gesture of supreme command, imposed silence upon the audience, and thus delivered himself of his angry felings:—

"I am led to understand that the gang of dissolute blackguards who find some sort of devilish pleasure in preventing the enjoyment of peaceful citizens is led by the Marquis of Waterford. I will not credit the Marquis with being a gentleman, for no gentleman would insult a lady, or permit those under his control to do so. The stern duty is laid upon me of chastising the ringleader of this gang of lawless ruffians that have invaded this theatre, and have made it impossible for you, the peaceful patrons of the drama, to enjoy your money's worth. The Marquis of Waterford, if he has one spark of manly feeling left in his composition, will now come on to this stage and take his punishment like a man."

The bullying Marquis, despite the efforts of his friends to restrain him, pushed his way to the front, and with all the insolence of his class (and a bad class at that), said with the greatest possible scorn and contempt, "Gentleman or no gentleman, it ill beseems me to condescend to pit my strength against a strolling vagabond of a mummer."

"If the right noble Marquis will give me one moment's private word with him, I will dissipate all the objections that aristocratic etiquette, according to his own standard, demands.

Nelson Lee Sees Fair Play.

Realising the seriousness of the position, and fearing that the sage might be stormed by the riotous gang led by the Marquis of Waterford, Nelson Lee speedily formed a cordon of his men three deep at the front of the stage, and taking up the matter himself thus addressed the audience:—

"Ladies and Gentlemen,—Mr. Connor Darrell's action has our full approval. We are determined once and for all to put a stop to the lawless behaviour of groups of young ruffians, whether aristocrats or commoners is of no moment. The question that you are interested in and that concerns every public entertainer is this: shall a mere handful of reckless roysterers invade the shows of the fairground and spoil the pleasure of peaceful people?"

This appeal of Nelson Lee was followed by tremendous applause, and the whole of the audience by this time had been worked into a fever of excitement and expectation. The Marquis and his crowd realised that they were trapped, and that there was no way out of the difficulty but to meet the challenge issued by the Mummer to the Marquis. With an insolent stare at the audience and a nonchalant shrug of the shoulders, the Marquis ascended the side steps and mounted the stage. Immediately "Con" Darrell whispered two or three words into the ear of the Marquis. The effect was instantaneous and magical. With the politest bow and in his most courtly manner the erstwhile reckless man about town became the aristocrat, and uttered these significant words:—"Mr. Connor Darrell, I am completely at your service, the lady has a most worthy champion. You can name your own time and place, and as the affronted party, you are entitled to nominate the mode of battle—pistols, sword, or fisticuffs."

Darrell, throwing off his coat, exclaimed, "The British mode—fisticuffs; the time and place—now, and here."

This decision was received with thundrous applause. The Marquis threw off his coat and prepared himself for the contest.

Again Nelson Lee intervened. "I beg the noble Marquis, for, indeed, I do begin to see his nobility now, to appoint two gentlemen to come on to the stage and act as his seconds. I am confident that Mr. Darrell will permit my partner, Mr. Johnson, and myself the honour of a similar compliment to act as his seconds."

Again round upon round of applause thundered forth.

When these necessary preliminaries had been arranged, the fight commenced, the men set to, and being equally matched in physical strength and ability to use the weapons Nature has provided, the fight was long and severe, but in the end virtue triumphed, villainy was vanquished, and the noble Marquis was not "At Home," except to his surgeon and to his most intimate friends, for quite a fortnight after he had received his chastisement for bullying a lady on the stage at Richardson's show.

"Con" Darrell married the beautiful Laura Gittens, and as we have intimated, won fame and fortune in the Irish capital.

Show News from Yarmouth.

A site has been secured on the Marine Parade, Great Yarmouth, for the purpose of erecting an up-to-date Moving Picture Palace, similar to the Electric Palace at the Marble Arch end of Oxford-street. A great measure of success has been attained at the Gem, a handsome building opposite the Wellington Pier, with an entertainment consisting solely of pictures; whilst on the Piers, at the Hippodrome, and even at the Aquarium and Theatre Royal, the cinematograph has been a most popular feature of the entertainments provided. The promoters of the new enterprise are well known in the film industry, and will have their building open for the summer season.

White City, Old Trafford.

W. C. Manning and five expert assistants are coming from Boston (Mass.) by the Cunard liner Saxonia to take part in grand pyrodramatic spectacles of life-saving and fire-fighting. The paraphernalia includes two American fire engines, with twelve horses, numerous wagons, ambulances, &c. During Easter Joseph Wells, pyrotechnist, of Honor Oak, London, will make displays of big set firework pieces. Some of the finest bands of the country are engaged, including the Royal Marine Band, under the conductorship of Lieut. George Miller. Arrangements are going rapidly forward for the opening on Good Friday, and Mr. J. E. Maddock, the manager, is extremely busy.

FILM GOSSIP.

Showmen and Managers throughout the United Kingdom, and in every English-speaking country, will find in this column particulars of some of the best and newest Films in the Market. Many of these Films we have seen ourselves, and can confidently recommend showmen to add them to their list of attractions.

Pathé Frères.

THE ANTI-IRRITABILITY POWDER.—This is an intensely comical Pathé series. Acting upon her maid's suggestion, Mrs. Fig fills her kitchen bellows with a marvellous powder, which she blows at her irrascible husband. On the floor the smashed crockery and water streams, witness to that gentleman's bad temper. After the first blow, Mr. Fig is filled with an immense joy, and he embraces his wife before going out. He seems to possess wings, and wants to communicate his happiness to all the world. For so doing he blows his powder in the nose of every passer-by. These, seized with the same happiness, whirl about and laugh; the constables join in the fun, for they have been granted a whiff of the wonderful cure; and a pickpocket, availing himself of the turmoil, helps himself to the powder. A gendarme who has not received a dose of the unheard-of medicine, marches off the joyous man to the next police station.

MISS FAUST.—Miss Faust sells her soul to Satan through the telephone in exchange for a second youth. But a small angel arriving in a taxicab is so shocked at seeing Miss Faust flirting with a page-boy that he changes her into a monster, half man and half woman. Miss Faust is furious, and she asks to be put into telephone communication with the Lower Regions. Satan grants her her wish, and Miss Faust is young and charming again. The page-boy's sister, on seeing him so much courted by the old girl, thinks she will have a duel with her. Now, the angel appears again, and he causes Miss Flirt to become so small that she looks like a toy woman, and her friend Satan is precipitated down into his own domains. The angel, thinking that the culprits have had sufficient punishment, accompanies them to Heaven in a lift, and they receive a warm welcome at the end of their journey. A lovely ballet ends the subject.

HERE I AM AND HERE I SHALL STAY.—Mr. and Mrs. Happy-go-Lucky are happy in their temporary home lent to them by one of their friends, but their joy is short-lived, for they receive a letter from the proprietor of the house, informing them that he has let same, and requesting them to do their best to make the new tenants comfortable. Mr. and Mrs. Happy-go-Lucky do not know what to do, for they have just spent their last penny, and they cannot remove to other quarters just yet. After taking down the board showing that the house was to let, Mr. Happy-go-Lucky ponders over the situation. Suddenly he has an idea. Entering the house, he breaks the window panes, unhinges the doors, waters the walls, and when he has finished, he looks at his work with an air of perfect satisfaction. The tenants arrive the same day. Mr. and Mrs. Happy-go-Lucky very amiably show them round, but Mr. and Mrs. Grumpy do not seem very enthusiastic. As they are going to sit down, the chairs, whose legs have been weakened, give way under their weight, and they tumble down. "Of course," says Mr. Happy-go-Lucky, "this house wants a lot of repair." A cold wind comes in through the windows. Mr. and Mrs. Happy-go-Lucky fetch a faggot which has been previously watered in the cellar; the chimney smokes and the wood will not burn. The new-comers, tired by their long journey, go to bed and sleep between damp sheets. To crown it all, Mr. and Mrs. Happy-go-Lucky appear before the new tenants disguised as ghosts, and the poor people are so frightened that they leave the inhospitable house hurriedly, whereas Mr. and Mrs. Happy-go-Lucky bow them out very amicably, and put up the board again "House to Let."

PAUL GIVES HIS LAST BACHELOR PARTY.—Paul Chesnay is giving his last bachelor party, and all his friends are gathered at his chambers. The merry crowd go out bearing Venetian lanterns at a very late hour of the night. A girl friend, Jane, is sorry to think that this is the last of the merry-making with such a good fellow, and she wishes to make him remember it. Between two fits of laughter, she explains that she will play a trick on him, but she cannot be made to say what it consists of. To tell the truth, she has no definite plan, but snatching from the table a packet of visiting cards, she thrusts it into her pocket. The gang having rung the bell of an unknown house, two old people come to the threshold, asking what it all means. The young people surround them, and dance about in a most maddening manner, after which they leave the poor couple alone on the pavement. At the café they make such a disturbance that Paul has to be marched off by the police. Meanwhile, on the sly, Jane has distributed Paul's visiting cards to their numerous victims. The next morning, at the time when happy Paul is ready for church, where he is going to be married to the nicest girl on earth, all the people who have a grudge against him break into the room and repay him for his friends' mischief of the previous night. The bride is very good, however, and she forgives him for his prowess, provided, of course, there will be no more of this nonsense in future.

A GOOD COMPANION.—The woodcutters are felling the trees in the great forest, covered with snow, while small Eric remains at the camp with Toby, the horse, and the victuals. He warms himself at the great fire at first, but the fire having gone out, Eric walks to and fro, then being tired of the great silence and solitude, and the frost nipping his fingers more and more, he jumps into the sledge and drives away on the snow which covers everything and hides the road. He is lost now, utterly lost! In his despair he stretches himself on the soft whiteness and goes to sleep, with his limbs more and more numb with cold. Toby, guided by instinct, returns to the camp, where the woodcutters have returned, and are now searching for the missing boy. Their anxiety is increased when they see the horse alone and the sledge empty; Toby is intelligent, and he succeeds in making them understand that he wants them to come away with him to the spot where they find the sleeping child. Eric and Toby are close friends by now, for the horse has saved the child's life.

JOHN WISHES TO MARRY A DANCER.—John is holding in his hand the tail of a pink little pig at the same time as he is courting Jane, his sweetheart. But as he goes to the village he looks with amazement at the picture of a dancer in a shop window, and afterwards he thinks of nothing but of the pretty "star" whose picture he has just seen. Then he writes a letter to his parents, saying that he is going to London, as he wants to marry a dancer, whose portrait he has seen in a newspaper. He disappears through the window, while Jane comes in at the door. Finding the note, she wipes her eyes on her apron, and after a while she has made up her mind to go to London, and be a dancer. She arrives before John in the great city, where three daubers take her to an hotel, where they have taken the precaution to put up a board with the word "Opera." Jane is so pleased with herself and everybody, that she dons a dancer's dress and fixes in her hair a wreath of flowers. In the meantime, John arrives in his turn; he sees the notice, and enters the house. He kneels down before Jane, who is just dancing a kind of barn dance, and tells her of his love. Suddenly he recognises her, and both go back to their native place, where John at last realises his dream of marrying a dancer.

IN reply to several inquiries from showmen, we may state that Messrs. Pathé are selling their films at the present time without any restriction whatever.

LEFT OUT.—The silent tragedies of life are the saddest—and the saddest of all is that of a lonely child, bereft of a mother, with a father in name only, indifferent, careless, perhaps brutal. Or worse still, if naturally kind, but calloused and soddened through intemperance. Such is the story of a childish sorrow told in our picture. The story of a pretty, delicate child, to whom misfortune came with crushing blows. First in the death of a loving mother—then in the coldness and neglect of a good, well-meaning, but weak-willed father, who is cast down by loss of fortune and position. The little one knows that her clothes are poor, and, child as she is, can understand why she is slighted by other children and left out of every childish game. No one knew when her voice was choked—nor cared when she stole away through the gate and the grasses deep, past the wall to a lonely grave where her mother lay asleep. Her father comes to realise his weakness, and wrought to a mighty resolve by the pathetic figure at the grave, conquers a bright future for both.

JEALOUSY.—That the "green-eyed monster" stalks in many matrimonial ventures, and invades and menaces the daily routine of our social existence, is a question for serious consideration. Mr. Bing's jealousy is aroused by the attentions shown his wife by a gallant photographer, and becomes so unreasonable and destructive that from sheer necessity he is forcibly ejected from the studio. Outside the studio the porter is in a heated argument with a pedlar. Mr. Bings, while raging at his ejectment, finds the door locked, seizes the porter's ladder, and tries to climb through the transom. The porter and pedlar come to blows, and during the ensuing "Free for All" the ladder is thrown down, leaving Mr. Bings stuck in the transom. The porter, after throwing his antagonist into the street, returns to act the "good Samaritan" by helping Mr. Bings back to terra firma. But more excitement follows on the reappearance of the pedlar. While the members of the "Ladies' Art Club" are in deep study over an exceptionally attractive male model, they are driven to cover by the cyclonic entrance of Mr. Bings and the porter, who are pursued by the revengeful pedlar. The ladies seek the most convenient shelter. Mr. Bings seeks refuge behind the door. The muscular model, with quick action, seizes the pedlar and hustles him out of the room, while Mr. Bings deftly locks the door. The students come out of hiding, and are assured of safety by Mr. Bings, who leads them to believe that it was he who disposed of the desperate pedlar, whereupon he is acclaimed and crowned a hero. Mrs. Bings, through the keyhole, sees her husband the centre of admiration. Her jealousy is aroused, the door is opened, the model returns, explanations follow, and Mr. Bings is exposed as a fraud, and is led out by his wife amid the derisively shouting students.

BOYHOOD DREAMS.—Tommy Brown is a captive caught by the lure of the deadly dime novel. A new thriller is just out, and Tommy is absorbing all that is possible from the brilliant front-sheet exposed on the news stand. By hook or crook, he must have it for his own. Not having the necessary cash, he becomes a carrying agent for a weary traveller, who rewards him munificently. The money thus obtained is immediately exchanged for several lurid volumes. Sneaking quietly to his room, he is soon in the midst of deeds of daring and hairbreadth escapes. Found by his mother executing a war dance around a supposed fallen foe, he is put to bed, and all books in sight are confiscated. His mother's warning does him little good, as on her leaving, Tommy gets up, digs more novels from under the mattress, and proceeds to burn the midnight oil until he finally falls asleep and dreams. Creeping stealthily from the old chimney-place in the pirates' cabin, he releases the captive maiden and leaps into the midst of the outlaw crew. A desperate hand-to-hand encounter ensues—Bing-bang-bing. His trusty guns have not failed—his heroism is rewarded—the last of the desperate band lies grovelling at his feet. His mind calls to life visions of hero worship, of news stands surrounded by excited crowds buying the new "blood-curdler" exploits of Tommy Brown. These visions are rudely dissipated by the heavy hand of his mother, who, attracted by the uproar in his room, arrives at the time of his most heroic exploit. Tommy wakes up, to find himself being unwound from the bedclothes in no gentle manner.

A BIRD IN A GILDED CAGE.—An Eden, where happiness is supreme, is entered by a snake in human form, and a loving couple are parted by his venom. A weak woman—a wife and mother—agrees to an elopement with her husband's best "friend." An innocent child is taken along to enter into a life of misery. The father returns, to find an empty house, his loved ones fled with the man he trusted. Madness seizes him. A frantic search is made everywhere for the guilty couple, but without avail. Losing all interest in life—business and friends drift away—and the inevitable happens—the father becomes an outcast—drifts lower and lower, until starvation stares him in the face, and he becomes a burglar. In the meantime, the guilty couple have gone the way of the transgressor. The child, now a beautiful girl of eighteen, weds a man who wins her after an ardent courtship. A brief period of happiness, and she awakes to find she is "a bird in a gilded cage." Fate further sports with her. A man comes into her life whom she learns to love. She agrees to an elopement. But now the strangest part of all! Her father, in concealment, overhears the plotting. He confronts the young people and forces them to listen to him. He tells the pitiful story of how his life was wrecked with dramatic effect, and turns the young people from their purpose. The girl tells her story, and the father finds a daughter, and the daughter a father.

OUR Barcelona correspondent writes:—"There is no doubt that, with Paris, Barcelona ranks as the most important centre with regard to cinematograph matters, and despite the enormous number of halls, new ones are being constructed every week. The surprising part of it is that they all appear to be flourishing. In consequence of this, every important firm of film producers has a branch here, those of Messrs. Pathé Frères and Gaumont being especially busy. The principal film exhibited here this week is The Return of Ulysses, the work of M. Jules Lemaitre, of the Académie Française, and which is the property of Pathé Frères. The film is interpreted by artists of the Comédie Française, and is divided into thirteen scenes, all of which are so life-like that one requires very little imagination to picture the figures as living beings.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—I signed the Articles of the Paris Convention, in the hope that it would do something to relieve the severe competition from which film producers are suffering.

I did this with a feeling of certainty that it involved considerable sacrifices on the part of my company, and I was prepared to suffer. Closer acquaintance with the conditions of trading and with further alterations in the Articles of the Convention effected by the Central Committee have convinced me that the result to my company would not only be suffering, but extinction. This would assist in relieving the competition no doubt, but I prefer some other method.

I have spent too many years of my life behind a counter to adapt myself to any restrictive method of dealing with my customers. I therefore refuse to adhere to the Convention.—Yours faithfully,

ANIMATED PICTURES are a strong force in variety business nowadays, and the latest theatre to pass over to this style of business is the Gaiety, Glasgow. On Monday, the 29th inst., the management of this hall is taken over by the B.B. Pictures, of which Mr. J. J. Bennell is the controlling spirit, and all the latest films will be shown, interspersed by a few variety turns.

As showing the hold that pictures have on the Glasgow public, the B.B. Pictures opened at the Wellington Palace, Glasgow, in December, 1907, for a "three weeks' season," and they are still there, after sixteen months' consecutive showing. In addition, the B.B. (which, being interpreted, means Bright and Beautiful) have shown for weeks in St. Andrew's Halls, Glasgow's leading concert hall, also in Pollokshaws, Bridgeton, and other places in and around Glasgow.

PICTURES form the staple programme at Hengler's Cirque, Glasgow; also at the old Queen's in Watson-street, now known as Pringle's Picture Palace.

MR. R. PRINGLE also runs the Bijou Hall, Cowcaddens (once the Alexandra). At the Waterloo Rooms and half a dozen lesser halls pictures are also to be seen. Mr. A. E. Pickard, the enterprising proprietor of the Glasgow Panopticon, was one of the first to realise the value of pictures, and relies to a great extent on them.

A New Cinematograph Palace.

RECREATIONS THEATRE, Edgware-road, W., is the title of a new hall for the display of cinematograph pictures, which was opened to the public on Saturday last. There was a private view on the previous evening, at which many people interested in various ways in the film industry were present. Amongst these were Major T. Madden, Capt. R. Lyons, Capt. John Alexander, Mr. J. J. Newbould, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Pedgrift, Mr. and Mrs. Montagu A. Pyke, Mr. Stanley Felgate, Mr. and Mrs. N. Jungman, Mr. and Mrs. L. B. de Laitte, Mr. E. T. Delmege, Mr. and Mrs. W. de Veer, Mr. W. Whitehead, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Carter, Mr. Seward Brown, Mr. Herbert Godsal, Mr. H. Blackhorne, and Mr. J. L. Burt.

AN exceedingly attractive programme of pictures was run through. The films included a very remarkable series, entitled The Birth of a Gun, which proved of a most instructive character, and created no little wonderment in the minds of those who had never been inside one of the great engineering establishments. Other sets shown Earthly Paradise, Stilton's Revenge, Nick Carter, The Delights of a Modern Gaol, and Woman's Craft. Altogether, a very pleasant evening was spent.

RECREATIONS THEATRE represents all that is latest in design and equipment. The auditorium, which is 115ft. by 32ft., with a seating capacity of 700, is fitted with tip-up seats, and has a handsome proscenium, with two stage-boxes, gangways in accordance with the theatre regulations of the L.C.C., and an extra exit, 6ft. wide, entirely separate from the hall, direct to the street. The operating room, which is entirely disconnected (except for the projecting openings) from the auditorium, is of brick and concrete throughout, fitted with duplicate Kineto machines, with safety shutters, and every improvement for safeguarding the public. The electric installation, in addition to the gas work, and the heating apparatus was fitted by Messrs. Cathcart and Co., while the building operations were executed by Mr. Jas. Easten, of Charles-street, N. The boxes and hall were lavishly decorated by flowers and palms, and the refreshments were in the able hands of J. Lyons and Co. Messrs. Lazarus were responsible for the seating arrangements and draperies, and with its handsome white and gold front and domed pay office, brilliantly lighted electrically, everything has been done to deserve success. The building and works have been designed by Mr. W. Hancock.

P. Collins, jun.'s, Wonderland.

THIS superb picture palace paid a flying visit to the populous Midland industrial centre of Blackheath for the week end, and was accorded an immense reception and instantaneous success. The excellent series of up-to-date cinematograph films, with speciality programme, was under the personal supervision of Mr. Patrick Ross Collins. The moving pictures were exhibited by Mr. J. Humphries, the capable operator in charge.

IN the very centre of Ireland a new rink has been opened, and business at it already is "booming." The Park Pavilion, Longford, has been turned into a rink, and has been most successful so far, under the management of Mr. J. Ormonde-Dann.

THE first Carnival (Fancy Dress) was held at Messrs. Broadhead's Empress Rink, Preston, on the 19th inst., and proved a huge success, about 160 fancy dress skaters taking part. The Grand March was cleverly executed, and the promenade portion was crowded with non-skaters, who evinced the keenest interest in the proceedings, which were carried out without the slightest hitch, under the capable direction of the popular and courteous resident-manager, Mr. J. H. Langford. In all, eighteen items were gone through in the programme. The next event is a Cinderella.

ANOTHER rink was opened on Saturday last in Preston by the Marathon Skating Rink Co., Ltd., and Mr. Topping is the able manager. The rink is situated in Frank-street, North-road, and has a skating area of 16,000ft. of maple floor. The building is most lofty and commodious, and a capital orchestra is provided. Richardson's ball-bearing skates are exclusively used, and the rink, being situated in a thickly-populated neighbourhood, bids fair to be well patronised.

THE Exhibition Hall Roller Skating Rink, Belfast, was opened to the public on Monday afternoon, and judging from the enthusiasm, this latest venture promises to be a great success. There was a fashionable attendance at the opening ceremony, which was performed by the Lord Mayor of Belfast with much acclamation. There will be three sessions daily, and Mr. J. McCartney, the proprietor, will certainly do all in his power by introducing many novelties to merit the patronage of the Belfast public. The floor is of maple wood, and has been laid under the supervision of an American expert, and no less than 150 electric lights have been arranged down the centre of the hall. Wright's orchestra is responsible for the music, and it may be added that the skates used are the Ball-to-flyer pattern.

TENDERING FOR SITES AT FAIRS.

The interview of the Guild Chaplain with the Secretary to the Local Government Board with regard to Corporations putting up fairground sites for tender will be well within the memory of our readers. In order to bring the question in a specific manner before the Board the town of Blackburn was mentioned as the most recent example of a Corporation that had hitherto charged a fixed rent, adopting the new method of advertising ground at the Easter Fair to be let by tender.

The Guild Petition Against Tendering and in Favour of Fixed Tolls.

The views of the Guild Executive were embodied in a petition to the Right Honourable John Burns, President of the Local Government Board. The two letters given below will place our readers in possession of the later developments of the question. We only add at this point, that the matter is too serious to be left at the stage indicated by the reply of the Town Clerk of Blackburn.

Local Government Board, Whitehall, S.W.
March 20, 1909.

SIR,—I am directed by the Local Government Board to advert to your letter of Jan. 11 last, respecting the letting of standings in the Market Grounds at Blackburn, and to forward to you for the information of the Showmen's Guild the accompanying copy of a communication which the Board have received from the Town Council of Blackburn, with whom they have been in correspondence on the subject. I am to add that the Board have no control over the Town Council in the matter.—I am, Sir, Your obedient servant,

J. S. DAVY, Assistant-Secretary.

Rev. T. Horne.

Town Hall, Blackburn. Feb. 24, 1909.

SIR,—I am instructed to reply to your letter of the 2nd inst., forwarding copy of a letter which the Local Government Board have received from the Showmen's Guild, and asking for the observations of the Town Council of Blackburn upon the matter.

I am to state that the second sentence of the first paragraph of the letter from the Showmen's Guild appears to be open to misconstruction.

The advertisement referred to deals only with part of the ground used for the fair, and the action of the Corporation has been of an experimental nature.

Whether it will lead to a permanent alteration in the methods of the Corporation in letting standings for the fair is a question that has not yet arisen.

With respect to the remainder of the statements contained in the letter of the Showman's Guild, the Corporation have no observations to offer, except that they do not conceive that the quotation from the Schedule of the Blackburn Improvement Act, 1882, which has been extracted from the Report of the Royal Commission on Market Rights and Tolls, and which appears at the end of the letter, has any bearing on the matter.

They consider that the action which they have taken is within their powers under the above Act.

I am to add that my Council are at all times very happy to give any information which the Local Government Board may ask for; but the statements contained in the letter from the Showmen's Guild appear to be of so general a nature that it is difficult to deal with them in any specific way.

It must not, however, be taken that my Council admit the correctness of the view put forward in that letter.—I am, Sir,

Your obedient servant,
(Signed) LEWIS BEARD.

The Secretary, Local Government Board,
Whitehall, S.W.

ROLLER-SKATING AT READING.

On Monday a new rink was started in the Vastern-road at the premises occupied by the Reading Electric Supply Co., and at least one excellent floor was immediately largely patronised and another one in embryo has been set apart where beginners may make their first flounders and gyrations. The rink has been opened by a London syndicate, which has already successfully inaugurated similar ventures in seven different centres in the metropolis and several in large provincial towns, so that Reading will have the advantage of the experience gained by the management in these places. Locally the rink is under the management of Mr. Hayes, with whom is Captain Norton and a large staff of assistants, while the wants of patrons are catered for in every particular—cloak rooms being provided for both sexes, refreshment booths, &c. The principal floor, which is 164ft. long by 55ft. wide, has been laid with specially prepared maple, and already it is in excellent condition, though naturally it will improve with use. All round the rink is a balustrade and a promenade for spectators, while the pillars and woodwork generally are draped in coloured material, the whole being lighted by means of electric arc lamps. When skating is in full swing the scene is a brilliant and animated one, not without its amusing side, of course. The floor upstairs is of the same dimensions as that on the ground floor, and here beginners may disport, under the tuition of lady and male attendants in uniform. In fact, uniformed men are everywhere—they welcome one at the entrance, direct one to the pay-box and thence to the cloak-room, affix the skates, and afterwards wait upon the wants created by violent exercise. It should be said that a ladies' orchestra provides music while skating is in progress, and is so ingeniously placed that its strains serve to enliven both floors.

On Monday evening, the first of what promises to be a long and successful season, there was a large gathering of skaters of varying degrees of proficiency and a larger body of onlookers, who found much to admire in the graceful movements of some and much to smile at in the unpremeditated contortions of others. The Mayor and Mayoress (Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Colebrook) and Miss Colebrook were among the visitors on the first evening, and the Mayoress was presented with a bouquet by Captain Norton, on behalf of the syndicate.

The Mayor, in acknowledging the bouquet, said that as Reading people they wished the promoters of that venture every success. The town was grateful to them for bringing that entertainment into their midst, because he could see already that a great deal of enjoyment was going to be obtained from it.

Our representative was able to get a few minutes conversation on Monday evening with Mr. Ginnett, the general manager of the Syndicate, who took him round the building and explained in outline his plans for the coming summer. There is no doubt that in the course of a very short time the present arrangements will be perfected, and the comfort of patrons studied in every way; while carnivals, fancy-dress and otherwise, exhibition skating, races, &c., will be promoted. But the plans go farther than skating only. One large room is to be converted into a lounge, and on the flat roof of the building a roof garden, so popular in America, but hitherto not generally adopted in this country, is to be laid out. This will make a very pleasant summer resort and open-air concerts, &c., will be provided. Further, it is proposed to lay down tennis courts at the rear of the building, and while the present idea is that these should be of grass, there is little doubt that Mr. Ginnett will speedily realise that the need of Reading lawn tennis players is an asphalte court which could be used in all weathers.

On the previous Thursday a new skating rink under canvas was inaugurated by the same syndicate.

A BIRD IN A GILDED CAGE.

A wife with innocent child elopes with husband's best "friend." Losing all interest in life, husband drops lower and lower until he becomes a burglar. In this part he overhears plot of young wife to elope with her husband's friend. He confronts them, tells his story, turns them from their purpose. Girl tells her story, and father finds a daughter and daughter finds a father.

RINKING GOSSIP.

Mr. John F. Davidson is inaugurating a Professional Roller Skaters' Association, to give greater prominence to bona-fide professional skaters—those who have a finished act to offer to managers seeking exhibition skaters—and to promote roller skating in general. Communications may be addressed to Mr. Davidson, care of The Era Office.

The N.S.A. speed championships of Great Britain will take place this evening at 8 p.m. on the Great Rink at the Crystal Palace. These events will no doubt draw a great crowd, for some very fine racing is expected. The items on the programme include the 1½ miles amateur championships for the Benetfink Perpetual Challenge Cup, and gold, silver, and bronze medals, and the 1½ miles Professional Championships, first prize £10, second prize £3, and third prize £2.

A large roller skating rink has been opened in Dragon-road, Harrogate, by a local company, and is doing wonderful business. There are three sessions daily, and admittance is free in the morning. There is a café where light refreshments can be had at a moderate price, and altogether it looks to be the future—near future—meeting-place of the fashionable Harrogate people. A band plays all day, and Mr. Sharp, the manager, is hard-working in endeavouring to please his patrons. A special concession will be made to professionals wishing to "rink."

THEATRICALS ON THE RINKS.

An interesting snapshot at the American Roller-skating Rink, Birmingham. Miss Hetty King, the well-known male impersonator, relating an amusing skating experience to Auguste Van Biene, the veteran 'celloist.

Mr. E. H. Bostock's new roller skating rink, erected in the short space of nineteen days by Messrs. W. G. Fisk and Co., reflects great credit upon both proprietor and builder. The building, of wood and iron, is 168 feet long by 62 feet wide; the floor, excellently laid in rock maple, is excellent. A large company responded to the invitation of Messrs. Bostock and Partington, the joint proprietors, on Monday afternoon, when the Worshipful the Mayor of the Borough made the official opening of the building. An excellent exhibition of roller skating was given by Professor Blanning and Mme. Dunkery, Captain Oliver and Mr. Gordon Bostock of Glasgow University, by Miss Lucy Bostock, and other lady students of the Girls' High School of Ipswich and Norwich, and some local practitioners. The Mayor formally declared the building open, and complimented the proprietors on having provided the town with so excellent a building for the practice of a rational and healthy enjoyment. The building was open to the public in the evening, and the crowds that attended gave evidence of the popularity of this form of amusement.

Ealing has been badly bitten by "rinkomania," and the astuteness of the Walpole Hall syndicate in forecasting the coming boom in the late autumn of 1908 has resulted in a phenomenal success. In fact, if a plethoric banking balance did not prove it, the tale of the box office receipts would sound like veritable fairy tales. Carnivals are the order of the day, and with Wallace Taylor's fine band to quicken matters, gaiety—on rollers—reigns supreme.

On Thursday at the Stratford Rink Rudi Klofacz, a "champion" of 3½ years, gave an exhibition of fancy skating at the carnival held in aid of the funds of the West Ham Hospital. There is nothing like the young idea in all things.

EARLE REYNOLDS AND NELLIE DONEGAN,

THE MUSICAL COMEDY DANCERS AND SKATERS.

America.

Earle Reynolds—the Marvellous Master of Human Balance—starting a one-toe reversible toe-spin—one of his many difficult feats which has gained him prestige as the most finished performer in the dancing and skating world.

Earle Reynolds and Nellie Donegan use the famous Winslow Ball-bearing Roller Skate, the most durable, quickest action, and finest ball-bearing roller skates manufactured.

In Dublin, Kingston Pavilion held a ladies' graceful-skating competition, and at Earlsfort-terrace a two-step contest was most popular. At Bilston, Farnworth, Headingley, and Douglas successful functions have been held. The Colosseum, Blackpool, announce that "many surprises will be in store for those who attend the full-dress carnival on the 31st inst."

"Begor, but I'd be wantin' a moty-kyar to ketch th' divil now!" This was the observation made by a stalwart member of the Irish Constabulary, one P.C. Patrick McEwan O'Kelly, when Terence O'Reilly, an intrepid roller skater of fifteen, "sailed rownd th' corner of Iglinton-strate, yer honour, like a whirlwind, and knocked me clane into th' middle av th' strate." Terence, it seems, did not wait to apologise to the policeman for butting him, but continued his headlong career until a faulty pavement levelled matters—and Terence too.

Thus it came about that Patrick, the policeman, did not need a "moty-kyar" at all, at all after all "to ketch th' divil," and so poor Terence was made prisoner. As it was proved that many Belfast children had been knocked down and injured by street roller skaters, Terence's papa was called upon to pay 7s.; but, worse than all, Terence's precious rollers themselves may never be worn by Terence again. The hard-hearted police have confiscated them. Ochone!

At the fancy dress Cinderella at the Derby Rink last Wednesday once more the excellence of the costumes and the peculiar results of the shuffling of the characters represented was noticeable. "Flora Macdonald" and "A Jamaican Coon," for instance, were a strange pair; then "Faust" and "A Puritan" caused comment; and "Monkey Brand" and "A Bohemian Girl"—splendid skaters both—were the jolliest of jolly chums.

"Woman's Life" comes out with a whole-page article this week with many weighty reasons why the fair sex should indulge in roller skating. The writer says about girls: "Catch your skater young. She takes to the rollers as naturally as a duck takes to swimming. She swings from the waist downwards and learns equilibrium, which may have a mental effect equal to that of the physical." About the young of the sterner sex the same writer adds: "I say nothing much about boys. They take to roller skating as they do to bird's-nesting. If the bough breaks, well—they come to earth hurriedly, and perhaps with some contusions."

Halifax inhabitants have caught the rinking fever. There are now two rinks in full swing. The American Roller Skating Co., Ltd., have made arrangements for the erection of another rink on the Clare Hall Estate. This is an ideal site for a rink, being close to the amusement part of the town, and very central. The floor is to be of maple, and of up-to-date construction. It is anticipated the rink will be opened in a few weeks' time.

Good business continues to be done at the Tournament Hall, Liverpool, many hundreds of lovers of the exhilarating pastime attending daily. So successful was the last Cinderella that a similar function has been arranged for April 15. We understand that Messrs. Crawford and Wilkins have secured a site in Holland Park, London, for another rink, and are also contemplating ventures in principal Continental towns.

The rinking craze has touched the Hartlepools. Messrs. Brown and Proud are pushing forward with the conversion of the market building at Hartlepool, and hope to have everything ready for opening for Easter holidays. The building is capitally adapted for the purpose, having a floor-surface of about 100ft. square, and situated in the centre of the ancient borough. At West Hartlepool Messrs. Kirtley and Geipel are hastening on the erection of a building in Whitby-street, and, when finished, a skating-floor of about 45ft. by 125ft. will be at the disposal of skaters.

Two thousand folk alone witnessed the carnival held in the large Dumfries Drill Hall on Monday, and the success of this one function justifies the same management in organising a masked carnival for April 7. Paddy is going in for linen attire, and last Wednesday at Belfast nearly 1,600 skaters thoroughly enjoyed themselves "in a spotless make-up," as one comedian expressed it.

The skating-rink boom has reached the Welsh district. In Penarth there are already nine rinks. Cardiff, by next season, will be in possession of not less than seventeen of all sorts, sizes, and shapes; whilst Newport seems likely to be treated in a very similar way, though only two will be worthy the name of rink. These, however, will be splendid structures, the smaller 150ft. by 140ft., and its companion 300ft. by 100ft., both being the result of private enterprise in conjunction with the big rinking syndicates.

Says the Manchester Evening News: "Dancing on roller skates is the latest pastime to which women have become addicted, with the ever-increasing purpose in view of reducing their too redundant figures to a proper and fashionable Directoire outline." There is at least one ladies' something or the other league that has this week seriously considered whether the M.E.N. editor should be pilloried as an "ungallant youth" or served with a writ for libel.

"From Land's End to John o' Groat's, from Humber to Galway" there has been one great carnival time this past week in the rinkeries therein contained. Reports to hand show that at the Hull rink a splendid mask and costume carnival was held. On Thursday the Murrayfield rinkers made merry, and at Bradford on the same night there was a barnyard carnival.

"Smock and Kirtle" also reigned supreme on Thursday at Monument-road, Birmingham; and the special function at the Nottingham Empress Rink, held on behalf of the local Woman's Hospital, realised £34. Whatever be the weather, the fun at the Highgate Rink is always fast and furious, especially when King Carnival reigns, as he does very frequently here. And an especially bright and animated scene was witnessed at the Mumbles Pier last Wednesday, when a big crowd thoroughly enjoyed the sport.

Rinking, Ltd., opened their splendid new skating rink at Peckham on Monday. It is situated close to High-street, and a few minutes' walk from Rye Lane station. The floor-space is 170ft. by 60ft. All the great features of this company's rinks are in use, such as there being a special annexe for learners, three sessions daily, a band, and plenty of instructors.

At the Hippodrome, Hastings, a special engagement has been made of Buster Brown, trick and comedy roller skate expert, and a grand roller skating carnival, open to both lady and gentlemen skaters, has been held.

Rinking has caught on at Huddersfield with a vengeance, the attendances daily being most satisfactory. As an indication of the severity of the "fever," it is only necessary to report the payment of a 5 per cent. dividend for the first week of being open. The great success of the first has led to the announcement that another rink is to be opened in time for the Easter holidays.

On Wednesday next, the closing night of the Empress Roller Skating Rink, Earl's Court, for the season, Allie Moore will meet Harley Davidson, the winner of the International skating race at Olympia recently, in a contest for the fastest mile. The men are backing themselves for £50 aside, and Rinking, Ltd., have put up a purse of £100 to go to the winner.

Allie Moore was born at Charlevoix, Mich. Until three years or so ago he was a sailor, and in addition to his records made on rollers, is a clever athlete and boxer. He is built on powerful lines, and skates from the hips. Moore has won all the American championships during the past eighteen months, and also the State and inter-State championships, as well as many handicaps. He is accounted the fastest roller skater America has ever produced, and has brought the world's records down by many seconds. Moore has accomplished the following times:—

	M. S.
Half-mile	1 20
One mile	2 32
Two miles	5 12
Three miles	7 55
Five miles	13 18⅘

Moore's chief hobby, when he is not engaged breaking records, is sailing his 30ft. boat, the Sea Woolf, over the Canadian lakes. He takes his trips alone, and has spent more than one summer in steering her through the picturesque water gorges of the mountainous lands beloved of Fenimore Cooper.

Both men are interesting personalities. Harley Davidson is brother to John, the subject of our last week's sketch, and a member of the famous Davidson family. He is the proud possessor of 904 trophies won in roller and ice skating matches. His latest trophy is studded with forty diamonds, and was won at Olympia last month. These represent twenty years' devotion to the sport.

It may be found interesting to take a glance at the principal races Harley Davidson has contested. In 1895 he won the American Championship at Newberg, New York, and in 1893-4 made world's records. In 1899 at St. Louis he defeated J. S. Johnson and John Nilsson for the World's Indoor Championship. Davidson won the American championship from Weinberg, of Chicago, and broke all records from one to five miles. He did the mile in 2min. 49sec., two miles in 5min. 45sec., and five miles in 15min. Davidson's best records are: One mile, 2min. 37 3-5sec.; two miles, 5min. 22sec.; five miles, 14min. 15sec. These records were made at Chicago in June, 1907. Davidson made the fastest mile, at Ouaha, on Dec. 30, 1906, ever made on a flat track, covering the distance in 2min. 54 4-5sec. His greatest achievement undoubtedly was on March 27, 1907, when he skated 127 miles in ten hours.

Davidson is a terse, square-set, little American, born in St. Paul, Minn. He keeps his medals attached—in selections of 190 at a time—to a number of cloth breastplates. They are in the most fantastic samples of the goldsmith's art. His British trophies include Queen Victoria's Diamond Jubilee medals for the half and one mile, won at Chatham in 1897, and another gained in the same town for a two-mile race. He owns the Canadian medals

HARLEY DAVIDSON.

(1896) for the St. Paul's Winter Carnival, the Quebec (1896), and the Montreal meetings of 1891.

They are very enthusiastic over roller skating at Eastbourne, but such things as "Cinderellas," "masked carnivals," barnyard balls," and the like are taboo. Instead we find that last week at the Devonshire Park Rink the function undoubtedly was the polo match, at which everyone who was anybody attended.

They love hockey on skates in the North Country. On Saturday night a picked team of Newcastle medical students will meet the Sunderland champions on the local rink. The "bully off" is fixed for six o'clock.

270 Replies.
Sir,— Wanted, Known,
I inserted an advertisement, asking for Music Hall Artists in the last week's issue of "The Era." May I say that I am absolutely astounded at the number of replies I received to my small advertisement, no less than 270 Artists favouring me with applications. May I by this means thank the many artists who sent in their terms, as it is impossible for me to reply to each individual. I thank all for their very kind promptitude in responding to my advertisement.
I remain, yours faithfully,
Alfred Ball.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

RE APPLICATIONS FOR ENGAGEMENTS.

All applications by either Artists or their Agents must be made to the Head Office. Lowest terms must be stated, and distinction made between salaries required for larger and smaller towns. Vacant dates should be stated. If a list of existing bookings be sent, it will render selection easier.

Artists employing Agents should accredit one only at one time, as the friction arising when several Agents are employed at the same time, all expecting the one booking to go through each of them, often renders it expedient to avoid that booking altogether rather than give undeserved offence to several Agents.

New Acts seeking Engagements, or turns not rebooked (possibly because they have played a series of dates without introducing new business), will facilitate matters by having their acts seen by our District Managers. Their Districts and Postal Addresses are as follow:—

EDINBURGH, GLASGOW, NEWCASTLE, AND DISTRICT.
MR. S. GETHING, Empire Theatre, Glasgow.

BIRMINGHAM, NOTTINGHAM, LEICESTER, AND DISTRICT.
MR. HATTON WHARTON, Empire Theatre, Nottingham.

SOUTH WALES DISTRICT.
MR. ALBERT MITCHELL, Empire Theatre, Cardiff.

LEEDS, SHEFFIELD, HULL, BRADFORD, AND DISTRICT.
MR. T. GERALD MORTON, Empire Palace, Leeds.

LIVERPOOL, MANCHESTER, AND DISTRICT.
MR. ALBERT BULMER, The Empire, Liverpool.

LONDON DISTRICT.
MR. J. CHRISTIE, Empire Theatre, Shepherd's Bush, W.

N.B.—Mr. OSWALD STOLL or Mr. FRANK ALLEN can be seen by appointment on all matters arising out of the above, and for the discussion of entirely new Numbers.

All Artists or Agents who communicate with our District Representatives must have made definite applications, in accordance with above directions, to the Head Office, at the same time, or just previously.

Artists and Agents are requested to note that the Standard Theatre, Shoreditch, and the Terriss Theatre, Rotherhithe, come within the areas absolutely barred by us. Artists and Agents are also requested to note that the Hippodrome, Aston, Birmingham, comes within the area absolutely barred by the Grand Theatre and Empire Palace, Birmingham.

INSTRUCTIONS TO ARTISTS.

Artists must have at least Fourteen Band Parts for English Orchestrations, and Seventeen Band Parts for Foreign Orchestrations. Matter of Bill, Blocks, and Specimens of Pictorials FOR THE ABOVE THEATRES must be sent to Co-operative Offices, at above address, THREE WEEKS before Opening, failing which Artists will run the risk of having their Engagements cancelled. It is important that separate bill-matter, blocks, pictorials, &c., for Dublin, Belfast, and South Shields, be sent direct to Mr. Frank Allen at the Co-operative Offices.

IMPORTANT.—Artists must forward Copies of Songs to the STAGE DEPARTMENT, ABOVE ADDRESS, TWO WEEKS previous to opening, with Assignments for same, which will be returned. Artists are requested to note carefully that the clause in their contracts relating to rehearsals will in future be strictly enforced. Artists' Scenery, Properties, &c., MUST be fireproofed in accordance with the regulations of the Licensing Authorities.

ARTISTS WILL CLEARLY UNDERSTAND THAT THEIR BUSINESS MUST BE FREE FROM ALL VULGARITY.

No order or contract for goods or services must be accepted for any of the foregoing theatres except upon receipt of an Official Form, issued from the Co-operative Offices, London, and signed by either Mr. Oswald Stoll, Mr. Frank Allen, or the Chief Accountant, otherwise the Company concerned will not be responsible for same, and will refuse payment. In special cases, where goods are required at once, suppliers must look to the individual placing the order, who will be personally liable, unless an official confirmatory order, signed as above, is received within forty-eight hours. Invoices must be sent to the Theatre, but monthly statements should be sent to the Co-operative Offices. The individual Company on whose behalf orders are signed is solely responsible for payment. The Management will not hold themselves responsible in the event of loss of or damage to any MSS., Songs, &c., submitted for consideration.

THIS WEEK'S NOVELTIES.

THE ANTI-IRRITABILITY POWDER.

Code Word, "GLOUTON."

Mrs. Fig, who has a very bad-tempered husband, fills her bellows with a marvellous powder, which she blows at Mr. Fig. This has the desired effect, for he is filled with joy, and embraces his wife. On going out, he blows the powder in the face of every passer-by, to make them share his happiness. This he succeeds in doing. Constables also join in the fun, and a pickpocket takes the opportunity to steal the powder. A gendarme who has not received a dose of the powder marches the joyous man off to the nearest police station.

297ft. The Subject, £4 19s. 0d.

THE FENCING MASTER'S SUSPICIONS.

Code Word, "GLUCOSE."

Wishedfor, a young chemistry student, exchanges sweet messages with his charming neighbour, the fencing master's daughter. Being his only child, her father guards her jealously, and gives her maid strict orders to take care of her when she takes her out. The indulgent servant, however, allows the student to come into the house, and the unexpected arrival of the elder gentleman causes the lover to ask for the hand of his sweetheart, which he is eventually granted.

330ft. The Subject, £5 10s. 0d.

A JEALOUS HUSBAND'S ADVENTURES.

Code Word, "GALET."

Mrs. Smart has one of the fashionable coats, which causes her very jealous husband to imagine that he sees her at every street corner with another man. On her return from her mother's, Mr. Smart examines her critically, and perceiving on her sleeve a tuft of "ginger" hair, he determines to find out the owner. In order to do so, he lifts the hats of the men he meets in the street, and compares their hair with the tuft in his hand. At last he discovers, with some confusion, that the hair belongs to his mother-in-law's little dog.

362ft. The Subject, £6 0s. 8d.

A GOOD COMPANION.

Code Word, "GLISSADE."

While the wood-cutters are felling the trees in the forest, little Eric remains at the camp with Toby, the horse. Being cold, and tired of the solitude, he jumps into the sledge, and drives away over the snow, until he is quite lost. In his despair, he lays down and goes to sleep. Toby, guided by instinct, returns to the camp where the wood-cutters are now searching for the missing boy. Seeing the horse alone, and the sledge empty, they become anxious, but Toby succeeds in making them understand that they must follow him, which they do, to the spot where the child is sleeping. Eric and Toby are now close friends, for the horse has saved the child's life.

396ft. The Subject, £6 12s. 0d. Toning, 12s. 0d.

ROPE-MAKING.

Code Word, "GOUTTIERE."

The hemp becomes cordage after undergoing several processes. A number of strands twisted together form the thick cables, which will be the last link between the ship and "terra-firma."

362ft. The Subject, £6 0s. 8d. Toning, £1 0s. 0d.

HERE I AM, AND HERE I SHALL STAY.

Code Word, "GALERIEN."

Mr. and Mrs. Happy-go-Lucky, who are minding a friend's house, receive notice to quit. The house is let and they must receive the new tenants and make them comfortable. Not having enough money to remove, they contrive a plan in order to extend their stay. After breaking all the windows, and doing all the other damage they can, they receive Mr. and Mrs. Grumpy, and show them round. As the visitors are about to sit down, they find their chairs give way, and land them on the ground. The wind blows in through the windows, the fire smokes, and when they go to bed, the sheets are damp. During the night Mr. and Mrs. Happy-go-Lucky frighten their guests by appearing before them disguised as ghosts, which causes Mr. and Mrs. Grumpy to take a hurried departure, and Mr. and Mrs. Happy-go-Lucky bow them out very amicably, and once more put up the board, "House to let."

445ft. The Subject, £7 8s. 4d.

PAUL GIVES HIS LAST BACHELOR PARTY.

Code Word, "GLANEUR."

Paul Chesnay is giving his last bachelor party, and Jane, his friend wishes to make the occasion memorable to him, and tells him that she will play a trick on him, but will not say what she is going to do. Taking a packet of visiting cards, she puts them into her pocket. While the gang of guests are playing tricks on various people at unknown houses, Jane distributes the cards to the victims, who, when the wedding is to take place on the following morning, besiege Paul, in order to have their revenge. The bride is very good, however, and she forgives him for his prowess, provided, of course, that it does not occur again.

THE

NOTICE.

Gentlemen, — It having come to our hearing that certain members of the Trade, whose special object is to raise the price of hire of films nearly double, are sending their agents round telling people that if they will sign an agreement immediately they will supply at the old price, and that WE shall not be able to supply them if these prices are enforced, let us tell you that, come what may, we shall be able to supply you with the

FINEST PROGRAMMES IT IS POSSIBLE TO OBTAIN, AS WE HAVE DONE IN THE PAST.

Whatever occurs, we are prepared for any emergency. We have been preparing for nearly a year, and have some of the finest programmes on our shelves, ready for use, which, have never yet been heard of. We have told you to sleep easy. We are keeping awake, and when the invasion does really commence you will be surprised the effect the Dreadnought and the first-class ammunition will have on the invaders.
